

Anno 1778.

PHILLIPS ACADEMY

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES LIBRARY

Gift of Lester S. Morse, Jr. in honor of
Thomas T. Lyons

CASES ARGUED AND DECIDED IN THE
SUPREME COURT
OF THE
UNITED STATES

211, 212, 213, 214 U.S.

BOOK 53

LAWYERS EDITION,

COMPLETE WITH HEADLINES, HEADNOTES, STATEMENTS OF CASES, POINTS AND AUTHORITIES OF COUNSEL, FOOTNOTES, AND PARALLEL REFERENCES.

BY

THE PUBLISHERS' EDITORIAL STAFF.

THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, NEW YORK.

Copyright, 1908,

by

THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY.

R
348.73
26/35

v. 211-214

JUSTICES
OF THE
SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

DURING THE TIME OF THESE REPORTS.

CHIEF JUSTICE,

HON. MELVILLE WESTON FULLER.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES,

HON. JOHN MARSHALL HARLAN,

HON. DAVID JOSIAH BREWER,

HON. EDWARD DOUGLASS WHITE,

HON. RUFUS W. PECKHAM,

HON. JOSEPH MCKENNA,

HON. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,

HON. WILLIAM R. DAY,

HON. WILLIAM HENRY MOODY.

ATTORNEY GENERAL,

HON. CHARLES J. BONAPARTE.

HON. GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM.¹

SOLICITOR GENERAL,

HON. HENRY M. HOYT.

HON. LLOYD W. BOWERS.²

CLERK,

JAMES HALL MCKENNEY, Esq.

REPORTER,

HON. CHARLES HENRY BUTLER.

MARSHAL,

JOHN MONTGOMERY WRIGHT, Esq.

¹Commission ordered recorded, March 8, 1909.

²Commission ordered recorded, April 5, 1909.

ALLOTMENT, ETC., OF THE JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

December 24, 1906.

TOGETHER WITH THE DATES OF THEIR COMMISSIONS AND COMMENCEMENT OF SERVICE, RESPECTIVELY.

For Order of Court Making Allotment, see 51 L. ed., Appendix I. p. 1193.

NAMES OF JUSTICES, AND WHENCE APPOINTED.	BY WHOM APPOINTED.	CIRCUITS. 1902-1903.	COMMIS- SIONED.	SWORN IN.
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Massachusetts.	President ROOSEVELT.	FIRST. ME., N. H., MASS., R. I.	1902. (Dec. 4.)	1902. (Dec. 8.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE RUFUS W. PECKHAM, New York.	President CLEVELAND.	SECOND. VERMONT, CONN., NEW YORK.	1895. (Dec. 9.)	1896. (Jan. 6.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WILLIAM H. MOODY, Massachusetts.	President ROOSEVELT.	THIRD. NEW JERSEY, PA., DEL.	1906. (Dec. 12.)	1906. (Dec. 17.)
CHIEF JUSTICE MELVILLE W. FULLER, Illinois.	President CLEVELAND.	FOURTH. MD., VA., N. C., W. VA., S. C.	1882. (July 20.)	1888. (Oct. 8.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE EDWARD D. WHITE, Louisiana.	President CLEVELAND.	FIFTH. GA., ALA., FLA., MISS., LA., TEX.	1894. (Feb. 19.)	1894. (Mar. 12.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOHN M. HARLAN, Kentucky.	President HAYES.	SIXTH. KY., TENN., OHIO, MICH.	1877. (Nov. 29.)	1877. (Dec. 10.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WILLIAM R. DAY, Ohio.	President ROOSEVELT.	SEVENTH. IND., ILL., WIS.	1903. (Feb. 23.)	1903. (Mar. 2.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE DAVID J. BREWER, Kansas.	President HARRISON.	EIGHTH. MINN., IOWA, MO., KAN., ARK., NEB., COLO., N. D., S. D., UTAH, WYO., NEW MEX.,* OKLA.*	1889. (Dec. 18.)	1890. (Jan. 6.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOSEPH MCKENNA, California.	President MCKINLEY.	NINTH. CAL., OR., NEV., MONT., WASH., IDAHO, ALASKA,* ARIZONA,* HAWAII.*	1898. (Jan. 21.)	1898. (Jan. 26.)

*Territories assigned to circuits by order of the Supreme Court.

GENERAL TABLE OF CASES REPORTED IN THIS BOOK.

VOLUMES 211, 212, 213, 214.

A.

Abbott, Scott v. (Mem.)	655	American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States (211 U. S. 155)	129
Abrams v. White (Mem.) (212 U. S. 558)	651	American Surety Co. v. Akron Sav. Bank Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 557)	651
Acosta v. Porto Rico (Mem.) (214 U. S. 531)	1070	Anderson, Standard Oil Co. v.	480
Adams, Morgan v.	362	Ard, Brandon v.	68
Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky (214 U. S. 218)	972	Arizona use of Griffith, English v. ...	1030
v. United States (212 U. S. 521)	635	Arkansas, Hammond Packing Co. v. .. McLean v.	530 315
Ætna Nat. Bank, Converse v. (Mem.)	654	Arts, Coder v.	772
Ainsworth v. Evans (Mem.) (212 U. S. 584)	661	Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Calhoun (213 U. S. 1)	671
Akron Sav. Bank Co., American Surety Co. v. (Mem.)	651	Hurley v.	729
Alabama, Bailey v.	278	v. Sowers (213 U. S. 55)	695
Compton v.	885	Atlantic Coast Line Co., Prentis v.	150
Alabama Nat. Bank v. Massasoit-Pocasset Nat. Bank (Mem.) (212 U. S. 572)	656	Atlantic Trust & D. Co. v. Laurinburg (Mem.) (212 U. S. 573) ..	656
Albany & S. R. Co., Delaware & H. Co. v.	862	Atty. Gen., United States ex rel., v. Central R. Co. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Alfred S. Campbell Art Co., Bong v. ... 979		United States ex rel., v. Delaware & H. Co. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Allen, Texas & P. R. Co. v. (Mem.) .. 1068		United States ex rel. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Allen-Lane Co., Lennox v. (Mem.) 1062		United States ex rel., v. Erie R. Co. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Allison, United States ex rel., Garfield v. (211 U. S. 264)	176	United States ex rel. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Almeda, Alvarez v. (Mem.)	1070	United States ex rel., v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Alton Water Co., Lewis v. (Mem.) 659		Auchincloss v. Constantine & P. S. S. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 573)	656
Alvarez v. Almeda (Mem.) (214 U. S. 530)	1070	v. McLean (Mem.) (212 U. S. 574)	656
American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. (213 U. S. 347)	826
American Bridge Co., Schneider v. (Mem.)	662
American Colonial Bank, Cabrera v. .. 974
American Dredging Co., McCaulley v. (Mem.)	656
American Exp. Co. v. Mullins (212 U. S. 311)	525
v. United States (212 U. S. 521)	635
American Felt Co. v. Scollard (Mem.) (212 U. S. 584)	661
American Graphophone Co., Leeds & C. Co. v. (Mem.)	1067
American Security & T. Co., Turner v. 788

B.

Babcock v. DeMott (Mem.) (212 U. S. 582)	660
Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. (212 U. S. 477)	605
Baglin v. Cusenier Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 532)	1071
Bailey v. Alabama (211 U. S. 452)	278
Baltimore & O. R. Co., Maiorano v.	792

CASES REPORTED.

Baltimore Refrigerating & H. Co. v. Wetzel (Mem.) (212 U. S. 577)	658	Boquillas Land & C. Co. v. Curtis (213 U. S. 339)	822
Bank, Aetna Nat., Converse v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 566)	654	Bourman, Texas & P. R. Co. v.	641
Alabama Nat. v. Massasoit-Pocasset Nat. Bank (Mem.) (212 U. S. 572)	656	Bowers Hydraulic Dredging Co. v. United States (211 U. S. 176)	136
American Colonial, Cabrera v. (214 U. S. 224)	974	Bradford, Expanded Metal Co. v.	1034
Boatman's, Fritzlen v. (212 U. S. 364)	551	v. Morrison (212 U. S. 389)	564
Co., Akron Sav., American Surety Co. v. (Mem.)	651	Brandon v. Ard (211 U. S. 11)	68
Farmers' Deposit Nat., Logan v. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 513) ..	1062	Brooke, District of Columbia v.	941
Farmers' Deposit Nat., Logan v. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 500) ..	1060	Brown, Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. .	682
First Nat., Converse v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 566)	654	Fritchie v.	202
First Nat., v. Hagar (Mem.) (212 U. S. 585)	661	Kretsinger v. (Mem.)	1068
Massasoit-Pocasset Nat., Alabama Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 572)	656	Notley v. (Mem.)	655
Merchants' Nat., v. United States (214 U. S. 33)	899	Spreckels v.	476
National Exchange, United States v.	1006	Brown-Ketcham Iron Works v. Bank of
New York Produce Exchange, v. Houston (Mem.) (214 U. S. 525)	1067	Commerce & T. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 515)	1064
of Commerce & T. Co., Brown-Ketcham Iron Works v. (Mem.)	1064	Bryan v. Ker (Mem.) (212 U. S. 575) ..	657
Third Nat., v. Conaway (Mem.) (214 U. S. 512)	1062	Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. (214 U. S. 279)	997
Union Stockyards, Schlegel v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 573) ..	656	Bryant & B. Co., J. I. Case Plow Works v. (Mem.)	1066
Bean v. Morris (Mem.) (212 U. S. 582) ..	660	Buckley v. Tompkins (Mem.) (212 U. S. 584)	661
Beaumont Timber Co., Lufkin Land & Lumber Co. v. (Mem.)	1066	Bull, New York & P. R. S. S. Co. v. (Mem.)	1068
Beers v. Glynn (211 U. S. 477)	290	Bunker Hill & S. Min. & C. Co., McCarthy v. (Mem.)	660
Berea College v. Kentucky (211 U. S. 45)	81	Burn Line v. United States & A. S. S. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 580) ..	659
Berlinger, B. & M., United States v. (Mem.)	1068	Butler v. Frazee (211 U. S. 459)	281
Berry Bros. v. The St. Quentin (Mem.) (212 U. S. 574)	656	Butler Bros. Shoe Co. v. United States Rubber Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 577)	658
Bidwell, Huff v. (Mem.)	1069
Bierce, Hutchins v.	267	C.
Biggs, United States v.	305	Cabrera v. American Colonial Bank (214 U. S. 224)	974
Bilik v. Strassheim (Mem.) (212 U. S. 551)	649	C. A. Knecht & Son, W. A. Gaines & Co. v. (Mem.)	652
Bingham, New York ex rel. Kopel v.	286	Calhoun, Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v.	671
Boatmen's Bank, Fritzlen v.	551	Camp v. Lake Drummond Canal & Water Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 518)	1065
Boisé Artesian Hot & Cold Water Co. v. Boisé City (213 U. S. 276)	796	Canal Zone, Coulson v. (Mem.)	650
Boisé City, Boisé Artesian Hot & Cold Water Co. v.	796	Canton Roll & Mach. Co., Rolling Mill Co. v. (Mem.)	1071
Bong v. Alfred S. Campbell Art Co. (214 U. S. 236)	979	Carino v. Insular Government of the P. I. (212 U. S. 449)	594
Bonner v. Gorman (213 U. S. 86)	709	Carpenter v. Winn (Mem.) (212 U. S. 582)	660
		Casanovas, Hord v. (Mem.)	662
		Cascaden, Dunbar v. (Mem.)	656
		Ceballos v. United States (214 U. S. 47)	904
		Celis v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 586)	661
		Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Railroad Commission (Mem.) (214 U. S. 521)	1066
		Central R. Co., United States v.	836
		United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v.	836

CASES REPORTED.

Central Stock Yards Co., Louisville & N. R. Co. v.	441	Collins v. San Francisco (214 U. S. 113)	933
Central Trust Co., Metropolitan Trust Co. v. (Mem.)	1064	Colorado & S. R. Co. v. Satterfield (Mem.) (214 U. S. 524) ..	1067
v. Railroad Commission (Mem.) (214 U. S. 522)	1066	Colorado S. & Min. Co., Western L. & Sav. Co. v. (Mem.)	650
Century Mercantile Co. v. John Hoffman Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 531)	1070	Commercial Mut. Acci. Co. v. Davis (213 U. S. 245)	782
Chamberlin, United States v. (Mem.)	657	Compañia General de Tabacos, Tupino v.	992
Chaney, Clevenger v. (Mem.)	652	Compton v. Alabama (214 U. S. 1) ..	885
Charles E. Matthews The Henry Du Bois Sons Co. v.	600	Conant, Kinney v. (Mem.)	1068
Chatfield, Montgomery v. (Mem.)	659	Conaway, Third Nat. Bank v. (Mem.)	1062
Chesapeake & D. Canal Co., Gring v. (Mem.)	655	Consolidated Gas Co., Jackson v.	382
Chesapeake & O. R. Co., Ex parte (Mem.)	650	New York v.	382
v. McCabe (213 U. S. 207)	765	Willcox v.	382
v. McDonald (214 U. S. 191) ..	963	Consolidated Rubber Tire Co., Ex parte (Mem.)	1057
Prentis v.	150	Diamond Rubber Co. v. (Mem.) ..	657
Chesapeake Western Railway, Prentis v.	150	Constantine & P. S. S. Co., Auchincloss v. (Mem.)	656
Chicago, North American Cold Storage Co. v.	195	Continental Wall Paper Co. v. Louis Voight & Sons Co. (212 U. S. 227)	486
Chicago & A. R. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 563) ..	653	Converse v. Aetna Nat. Bank (Mem.) (212 U. S. 566)	654
Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Willard (Mem.) (212 U. S. 578) ..	658	v. First Nat. Bank (Mem.) (212 U. S. 566)	654
v. Williams (Mem.) (214 U. S. 492)	1058	Coram, Ingersoll v.	208
Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Stepp v. (Mem.)	662	Cornell Steamboat Co. v. Hammond (Mem.) (214 U. S. 522) ..	1067
Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 579)	659	Corn Products Ref. Co. v. Harding (Mem.) (214 U. S. 515) ..	1063
Chiles Western U. Teleg. Co. v.	994	v. King (Mem.) (214 U. S. 515)	1063
Church Cooperage Co., Pinkney v. (Mem.)	1068	Cotton v. Hawaii (211 U. S. 162)	131
Cincinnati, Devou v. (Mem.)	658	Coulson, Ex parte (Mem.)	650
Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co., Siler v.	760	v. Canal Zone (Mem.) (212 U. S. 553)	650
Citroen, United States v. (Mem.)	1064	Cowardin, Sand Filtration Corp. v.	833
Clarke v. Harrison (Mem.) (214 U. S. 524)	1067	Crawford v. United States (212 U. S. 183)	465
Clay Center, Clay Center Electric Light & P. Co. v. (Mem.)	653	Crozier v. Fried Krupp Aktiengesellschaft (Mem.) (212 U. S. 582)	660
Clay Center Electric Light & P. Co. v. Clay Center (Mem.) (212 U. S. 564)	653	Culver, Steele v.	74
Clevenger v. Chaney (Mem.) (212 U. S. 562)	652	Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Louisville (Mem.) (212 U. S. 588)	662
v. Lyle (Mem.) (212 U. S. 562) ..	652	Railroad Commission v.	577
v. Nichols (Mem.) (212 U. S. 562)	652	Cunningham, Swenson v. (Mem.)	655
Clough v. Grand Trunk W. R. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 579) ..	659	Curtis, Boquillas Land & C. Co. v.	822
Clyde Commercial Steamships, West India S. S. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1067	Cusenier Co., Baglin v. (Mem.)	1071
Coate, Greenameyer v.	587
Cobb, Lennox v. (Mem.)	1062
Coder v. Arts (213 U. S. 223)	772
Collins v. O'Neil (214 U. S. 113)	933
Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	652

D.

Davenport, Winnisimmet Co. v. (Mem.)	657
Davidson Bros. Marble Co. v. United States ex rel. Gibson (213 U. S. 10)	675
Davis, Commercial Mut. Acci. Co. v.	782
Delaware & H. Co. v. Albany & S. R. Co. (213 U. S. 435)	862
United States v.	836

CASES REPORTED.

Delaware & H. Co. v. United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v.	836
Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., United States v.	836
United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v.	836
Delaware Seamless Tube Co. v. Shelby Steel Tube Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 580)	659
Delk v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 578)	658
DeMott, Babcock v. (Mem.)	660
Deselms, Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v.	453
Des Moines v. Des Moines City R. Co. (214 U. S. 179)	958
Des Moines City R. Co., Des Moines v.	958
Devine, Grank Trunk W. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1062
Devou v. Cincinnati (Mem.) (212 U. S. 577)	658
Dexter, Godines v. (Mem.)	1069
Diamond Rubber Co. v. Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 574)	657
Dickinson, United States v.	711
District of Columbia v. Brooke (214 U. S. 138)	941
Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 575)	657
Donohoe v. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 499) ..	1060
Dowagiac Mfg. Co., Ex parte (Mem.)	655
v. McSherry Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 512)	1062
Dunbar v. Cascaden (Mem.) (212 U. S. 572)	656
Dunlap, Mercer v. (Mem.)	662
Dunn, Re	558
Dupree v. Mansur (214 U. S. 161)	950

E.

Eagle Oil Co. v. Vacuum Oil Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 515) ..	1063
Eastin, Texas & P. R. Co., v.	946
East Side Canal & I. Co., Miller & Lux v.	189
E. C. Atkins & Co. v. Moore (212 U. S. 285)	515
Eckstein, United States v. (Mem.) ..	1067
Eddy v. Eddy (Mem.) (214 U. S. 518)	1065
Edison Elec. Co. v. Pasadena (Mem.) (214 U. S. 528)	1069
Edsell, Tang Tun v. (Mem.)	1067
Ellison, People ex rel. New York Elec. Lines Co. v. (Mem.)	1069
El Paso & S. W. R. Co., Donohoe v. (Mem.)	1060
v. Vizard (211 U. S. 608)	348
Enders v. Friday (Mem.) (212 U. S. 584)	661
English v. Arizona use of Griffith (214 U. S. 359)	1030

Enriquez v. Watson & Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 557)	650
Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown (213 U. S. 25)	682
Erie R. Co., United States v.	836
United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v.	836
Escanaba Timber Land Co., Rusch v. (Mem.)	1069
Eugene F. Moran, The. See EUGENE F. MORAN, THE, v. NEW YORK C. & H. R. R. Co.
Eugene F. Moran, The, v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. (212 U. S. 466)	600
Evans, Ainsworth v. (Mem.)	661
United States v.	803
Expanded Metal Co. v. Bradford (214 U. S. 366)	1034
General Fireproofing Co. v. (Mem.)	658
General Fireproofing Co. v.	1034
Ex parte Chesapeake & O. R. Co., (Mem.) (212 U. S. 554) ..	650
Consolidated Rubber Tire Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 487) ..	1057
Coulson (Mem.) (212 U. S. 553)	650
Dowagiac Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 568)	555
Hardrat (Mem.) (212 U. S. 554)	650
Heller (Mem.) (214 U. S. 501)	1060
Hudson Oil & S. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 487)	1057
Jones (Mem.) (212 U. S. 561)	652
Kristianson (Mem.) (214 U. S. 506)	1061
McWilliams (Mem.) (214 U. S. 487)	1057
Patrick (Mem.) (212 U. S. 555)	650
Pearson (Mem.) (214 U. S. 505)	1061
Riggs (Mem.) (214 U. S. 532)	1071
Tobin (Mem.) (214 U. S. 506)	1061

F.

Faithorn v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 563)	653
Farmers' Deposit Nat. Bank, Logan v. (Mem.)	1062
Logan v. (Mem.)	1060
Fenn v. Louiselle (Mem.) (214 U. S. 517)	1064
Ferguson-McKinney Dry Goods Co., J. A. Scriven Co. v. (Mem.) ..	660
Ferris, Goodrich v.	914
Fidelity & C. Co. v. Southern R. News Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 497)	1060
Finks v. Fleming (Mem.) (214 U. S. 513)	1063
First Nat. Bank, Converse v. (Mem.)	654

CASES REPORTED.

First Nat. Bank v. Hagar (Mem.) (212 U. S. 585)	661	Godines v. Dexter (Mem.) (214 U. S. 529)	1069
Fitchie v. Brown (211 U. S. 321)	202	Goldsby, United States ex rel., Garfield v. (211 U. S. 249)	168
Folmina, The. See JAHN v. THE FOL- MINA.		Goodrich v. Ferris (214 U. S. 71)	914
Fleming, Finks v. (Mem.)	1063	Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. (Mem.)	1062
Flomina, The, Jahn v.	546	Goon Shung v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 566)	654
Forrester, United States v.	245	Gorman, Bonner v.	709
Frasch v. Moore (211 U. S. 1)	65	Graham v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 570) ..	655
Fraze, Butler v.	281	Grand Central Min. Co., Mammoth Min. Co. v.	702
Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co. (212 U. S. 445) ..	591	Grand Trunk W. R. Co., Clough v. (Mem.)	659
Freeman, United States v.	311	v. Devine (Mem.) (214 U. S. 511)	1062
Freshman v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 566)	654	Granite Bituminous Pav. Co. v. Landis (Mem.) (214 U. S. 504) ..	1061
Friday, Enders v. (Mem.)	661	Gray v. Noholoa (214 U. S. 108)	931
Fried Krupp Aktiengesellschaft Cro- zier v. (Mem.)	660	Great Northern R. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 530) ..	1070
Friedman, Snare & T. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1065	Greenameyer v. Coate (212 U. S. 434)	587
Fritzlen v. Boatmen's Bank (212 U. S. 364)	551	Green County v. Quinlan (211 U. S. 582)	335
Fulton, Shackelford v. (Mem.)	659	v. Thomas's Executor (211 U. S. 598)	343
G.		Gresham v. Huntington (Mem.) (212 U. S. 577)	658
Gallagher v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 519)	1065	Griffith, Arizona use of, English v. (214 U. S. 359)	1030
Garfield, Louisiana v.	92	Grigsby v. Russell (Mem.) (214 U. S. 524)	1067
United States ex rel. Allison (211 U. S. 264)	176	Gring v. Chesapeake & D. Canal Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 571) ..	655
v. United States ex rel. Goldsby (211 U. S. 249)	168	H.
v. United States ex rel. Rice (Mem.) (212 U. S. 589) ..	663	Hagar, First Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) ..	661
v. United States ex rel. Spald- ing (Mem.) (212 U. S. 583)	660	Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., Wolf Bros. & Co. v. (Mem.)	1063
v. United States ex rel. Vaughan (Mem.) (212 U. S. 589)	663	Hammond, Cornell Steamboat Co. v. (Mem.)	1067
Garfield Memorial Hospital v. Mac- Farland (Mem.) (214 U. S. 529)	1069	Hammond Packing Co. v. Arkansas (212 U. S. 322)	530
Garrigan, United States v. (Mem.) ...	1063	Hardaway v. National Surety Co. (211 U. S. 552)	321
General Fire Extinguisher Co., Bagley v.	605	Hardesty Mfg. Co., Yesbera v. (Mem.)	1063
General Fireproofing Co. v. Expanded Metal Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 577)	658	Harding, Corn Products Ref. Co. v. (Mem.)	1063
v. Expanded Metal Co. (214 U. S. 366)	1034	Hardrat, Ex parte (Mem.)	650
Gibson, United States ex rel., David- son Bros. Marble Co. v. ..	675	Harlan v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 519)	1065
Gila Bend Reservoir & Irrig. Co. v. Gila Water Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 487)	1057	Harriman, Interstate Commerce Com- mission v.	253
v. Linn (Mem.) (214 U. S. 487)	1057	v. Interstate Commerce Commis- sion (211 U. S. 407)	253
Gila Water Co., Gila Bend Reservoir & Irrig. Co. v. (Mem.)	1057	Harrison, Clarke v. (Mem.)	1067
Gillespie, Pocahontas Coal & C. Co. v. (Mem.)	1065	Hart, Meyerson v. (Mem.)	1064
Glauber, Mueller Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.)	1064	Hartman v. John D. Park & Sons Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 588) ..	662
Glynn, Beers v.	290	Harten v. Löffler (212 U. S. 397)	568
		Hawaii, Cotton v.	131

CASES REPORTED.

Hawaii, Honolulu Rapid Transit & L. Co. v.	186
Miguel v. (Mem.)	1070
Healy v. Sun Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 583)	860
Heckendorn v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 514)	1063
Hein, Westinghouse v. (Mem.)	658
Heller, Ex parte (Mem.)	1060
Hemphill, United States v. (Mem.) ..	649
v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 586)	662
Henrie, Kansas City S. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1057
Henry Dubois Sons Co. v. The Charles E. Matthews (212 U. S. 466)	600
Henry, Keizo v.	125
Hepner v. United States (213 U. S. 103)	720
Herm, The, Tweedie Trading Co. v. (Mem.)	1068
Herr, United States v.	252
United States v.	251
Hesterberg, New York ex rel. Silz v. ...	75
Hill v. Walker (Mem.) (214 U. S. 517)	1064
Hinsdale, S. & Co., Kuffler v. (Mem.) ..	1066
Holy Roman Catholic and Apostolic Church, Santos v.	599
Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles (211 U. S. 264)	176
Honolulu Rapid Transit & L. Co. v. Hawaii (211 U. S. 282) ..	186
v. Wilder (211 U. S. 137)	121
v. Wilder (211 U. S. 144)	124
Hopkins, Toy Toy v.	644
Hord v. Casanovas (Mem.) (212 U. S. 587)	662
Houston, New York Produce Exchange Bank v. (Mem.)	1067
Huachuca Water Co. v. Tombstone (Mem.) (214 U. S. 530) ..	1070
Hudson Oil & S. Co., Ex parte (Mem.)	1057
Huff v. Bidwell (Mem.) (214 U. S. 528)	1069
Huntington, Gresham v. (Mem.)	658
Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (213 U. S. 126)	729
Hutchins v. Bierce (211 U. S. 429) ..	267
Hutchinson, Water, Light, & G. Co. v. (Mem.)	650

I.

Illinois C. R. Co., Siler v.	760
v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 520)	1065
Ingersoll v. Coram (211 U. S. 335) ..	208
Insular Government of the P. I., Carino v.	594
Insurance Co., Williamsburgh City F., v. Willard (Mem.) (212 U. S. 581)	660

Inter-Island Steam Nav. Co., Wilder v.	164
International Mercantile Marine Co. v. Stranahan (214 U. S. 344)	1024
Interstate Commerce Commission, Harriman v.	253
v. Harriman (211 U. S. 407) ..	253
Kahn v.	253

J.

Jackson v. Consolidated Gas Co. (212 U. S. 19)	382
Jahn v. Steamship Folmina (212 U. S. 354)	546
J. A. Scriven Co. v. Ferguson-McKinney Dry Goods Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 583)	660
v. Newcomer (Mem.) (214 U. S. 518)	1065
v. Premium Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 582)	660
v. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 582) ..	660
J. I. Case Plow Works v. Bryant & B. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 521)	1066
J. M. Ceballos & Co. v. United States (214 U. S. 47)	904
John D. Park & Sons Co., Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. (Mem.) ..	657
Hartman v. (Mem.)	662
John Duncan Land & Min. Co., Rusch v.	312
John Hoffman Co., Century Mercantile Co. v. (Mem.)	1070
Murphy v.	327
Johnson v. Mueser (212 U. S. 283) ...	514
v. Tennessee (214 U. S. 485)	1056
Johnston v. Sexton (Mem.) (212 U. S. 576)	657
Jones, Ex parte (Mem.)	652
Rogers v.	965
v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 676)	657
Joseph Wild & Co. v. Provident Life & T. Co. (214 U. S. 292) ..	1003
J. S. Young Co. v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 585)	661
Juragua Iron Co. v. United States (212 U. S. 297)	520

K.

Kahn v. Interstate Commerce Commission (211 U. S. 407)	253
W. A. Gaines & Co. v. (Mem.)	656
Kansas, Missouri v.	706
Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Henrie (Mem.) (214 U. S. 487)	1057
Keerl v. Montana (213 U. S. 135) ..	734
Keitel, United States v.	230
Keizo v. Henry (211 U. S. 146)	125
Keller v. United States (213 U. S. 138)	737

CASES REPORTED.

Kennedy, Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1061	Lecds & C. Co. v. Victor Talking Mach. Co. (213 U. S. 325) ..	816
Kentucky, Adams Exp. Co. v.	972	Lehigh Valley R. Co., United States v. United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v.	836
Berea College v.	81	Lemieux v. Young (211 U. S. 489) ..	295
Selliger v.	761	Lennox v. Allen-Lane Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 512)	1062
Ker, Bryan v. (Mem.)	657	v. Cobb (Mem.) (214 U. S. 512)	1062
King, Corn Products Ref. Co., v. (Mem.)	1063	v. Rosencrantz (Mem.) (214 U. S. 512)	1062
King of Arizona Min. & Mill. Co., Smith v. (Mem.)	1070	Leono v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 589)	663
Kinney v. Conant (Mem.) (214 U. S. 526)	1068	Lewis v. Alton Water Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 581)	659
Kirkpatrick v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 513)	1063	Lightheiser, Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	652
Klumpp v. Thomas (Mem.) (212 U. S. 579)	659	Linn, Gila Bend Reservoir & Irrig. Co., v. (Mem.)	1057
Knop v. Monongahela River Consol. Coal & C. Co. (211 U. S. 485)	294	Lisman v. Milwaukee, L. S. & W. R. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 520)	1065
Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. (212 U. S. 1)	371	Löffler, Harten v.	568
Knoxville Water Co., Knoxville v. ...	371	Logan v. Farmers' Deposit Nat. Bank (Mem.) (214 U. S. 500) ..	1060
Komada & Co. v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 578) ..	658	v. Farmers' Deposit Nat. Bank (Mem.) (214 U. S. 513) ..	1062
Kopel, New York ex rel., v. Bingham (211 U. S. 468)	286	Looney v. Missouri (Mem.) (212 U. S. 585)	681
Kreigh v. Westinghouse, C. K. & Co. (214 U. S. 249)	984	Los Angeles, Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v.	176
Kretsinger v. Brown (Mem.) (214 U. S. 527)	1068	Louiselle, Fenn v. (Mem.)	1064
Kristianson, Ex parte (Mem.)	1061	Louisiana v. Garfield (211 U. S. 70) ..	92
Kuffler v. Hinsdale, S. & Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 520)	1066	Leech v.	956
L		Louisville, Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. (Mem.)	662
La Asociacion De Señoras Damas, Martinez v.	679	Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. (212 U. S. 132)	441
Laborde, Ubarri y Yramategui v.	953	v. Mottley (211 U. S. 149)	126
v. Ubarri (214 U. S. 173)	955	Order of Railroad Telegraphers v. (Mem.)	1069
La Compagnie Generale Transatlanti- que v. Maguire (Mem.) (214 U. S. 516)	1064	Prentis v.	150
Lake Drummond Canal & Water Co., Camp v. (Mem.)	1065	v. Railroad Commission (Mem.) (214 U. S. 522)	1066
Landis, Granite Bituminous Pav. Co. v. (Mem.)	1061	Siler v.	753
Larabee Flour Mills Co., Missouri P. R. Co. v.	352	Louisville & S. I. Traction Co. v. Leaf (Mem.) (214 U. S. 530) ..	1070
Laurel Oil & Gas Co. v. Morrison (212 U. S. 291)	517	Louis Voight & Sons Co., Continental Wall Paper Co. v.	486
Laurinburg, Atlantic Trust & D. Co. v. (Mem.)	656	Lufkin Land & Lumber Co. v. Beau- mont Timber Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 520)	1066
Lawrence Johnson & Co. v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 511)	1062	Lyle, Clevenger v. (Mem.)	652
Leaf, Louisville & S. I. Traction Co. v. (Mem.)	1070	Lynch v. Union Trust Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 523)	1067
Leech v. Louisiana (214 U. S. 175) ..	956	M.
Leeds & C. Co. v. American Grapho- phone Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 524)	1067	MacAndrews & F. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 585)	681
v. Victor Talking Mach. Co. (213 U. S. 301)	805	McCabe, Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. ...	765

CASES REPORTED.

McCandless v. Pratt (211 U. S. 437)	271	Minneapolis, Minnesota ex rel., St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 497) ..	1060
McCarthy v. Bunker Hill & S. Min. & C. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 583)	660	Minnesota ex rel. Minneapolis, St. Paul M. & M. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1060
McCaulley v. American Dredging Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 573) ..	656	Missouri v. Kansas (213 U. S. 78)	706
McCorquodale v. Texas (211 U. S. 432)	269	Looney v. (Mem.)	661
McDaniel v. Traylor (212 U. S. 428) ..	584	Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kennedy (Mem.) (214 U. S. 502) ..	1061
McDonald, Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. MacFadden v. United States (213 U. S. 288)	963	Missouri P. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co. (211 U. S. 612) ..	352
v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 511)	801	Monitor Drill Co., Mercer v. (Mem.) ..	663
MacFarland, Garfield Memorial Hospital v. (Mem.)	1062	Monongahela River Consol. Coal & C. Co., Knop v.	294
McLean v. Arkansas (211 U. S. 539) ..	315	Montana, Keerl v.	734
Auchincloss v. (Mem.)	656	Montgomery v. Chatfield (Mem.) (212 U. S. 580)	659
McSherry Mfg. Co., Dowagiac Mfg. Co. v. (Mem.)	1062	Moore, E. C. Atkins & Co. v.	515
Macveagh, United States ex rel. Parish v.	936	Frasch v.	65
McWilliams, Ex parte (Mem.)	1057	Morgan v. Adams (211 U. S. 627) ..	362
Madison, Spokane Valley L. & W. Co. v. (Mem.)	653	Morris, Bean v. (Mem.)	660
Magon v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 589)	663	v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 527)	1068
Maguire, La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique v. (Mem.) ..	1064	Morrison, Bradford v.	564
Maile, Van Gieson v.	821	Laurel Oil & Gas. Co. v.	517
Maiorano v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (213 U. S. 268)	792	Mottley, Louisville & N. R. Co., v. ..	126
Mammoth Min. Co. v. Grand Central Min. Co. (213 U. S. 71) ..	702	Mountain Copper Co., United States v. (Mem.)	632
Manson v. Williams (213 U. S. 453) ..	869	Moyer v. Peabody (212 U. S. 78) ..	410
Mansur, Depree v.	950	Mueller Mfg. Co. v. Glauber (Mem.) (214 U. S. 517)	1064
Marrs, Treadwell v. (Mem.)	662	Mueser, Johnson v.	514
Martinez v. La Asociacion De Señoras Damas (213 U. S. 20) ..	679	Mullan v. United States (212 U. S. 516)	632
Marvin, United States v.	510	Mullins, American Exp. Co. v.	525
Mason, United States v.	725	Munich, Valdes v. (Mem.)	654
v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 519)	1065	Munson S. S. Line, Steamship Miramar Co. v. (Mem.)	1068
Massasoit-Pocasset Nat. Bank, Alabama Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) ..	656	Murphy v. John Hoffman Co. (211 U. S. 562)	327
Mercer v. Dunlop (Mem.) (212 U. S. 588)	662	Murray v. South Carolina ex rel. Ray (213 U. S. 174)	752
v. Monitor Drill Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 590)	663	v. Wilson Distilling Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 578)	658
Merchants Nat. Bank v. United States (214 U. S. 33)	899	v. Wilson Distilling Co. (213 U. S. 151)	742
Metropolitan Trust Co. v. Central Trust Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 516)	1064	N.
Meyerson v. Hart (Mem.) (214 U. S. 516)	1064
Miguel v. Hawaii (Mem.) (214 U. S. 531)	1070	Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission (Mem.) (214 U. S. 522)	1066
Miller v. New Orleans Acid & F. Co. (211 U. S. 496)	300	Natchez, Thornton v. (Mem.)	651
Miller & Lux v. East Side Canal & I. Co. (211 U. S. 293)	189	National Exchange Bank, United States v.	1066
Milwaukee, L. S. & W. R. Co., Lisman v. (Mem.)	1065	National Exp. Co. v. United States (212 U. S. 521)	635
		National Surety Co., Hardaway v. ..	321
		Newcomer, J. A. Scriven Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1065
		New Jersey, Twining v.	97
		New Orleans Acid & F. Co., Miller v. ..	300
		New York v. Consolidated Gas Co. (212 U. S. 19)	382

CASES REPORTED.

58 L. ed.

CASES REPORTED.

Presidio County v. Noel-Young Bond & Stock Co. (212 U. S. 58)	402
Provident Life & T. Co., Joseph Wild & Co. v.	1003

Q.

Quaintance, United States v. (Mem.)	1068
Queen Anne's R. Co., Scott v. (Mem.)	657
Quinlan, Green County v.	335

R.

Railroad Commission, Central of Georgia R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1066
Central Trust Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1066
v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. (212 U. S. 414)	577
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1066
Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1066
South & N. A. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1066
Western R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1066
Railroad Co., Albany & S., Delaware & H. Co. v. (213 U. S. 435)	862
Baltimore & O., Maiorano v. (213 U. S. 268)	792
Central, United States v. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Delaware, L. & W., United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. (213 U. S. 366)	836
El Paso & S. W., Donohoe v. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 499)	1060
El Paso & S. W., v. Vizard (211 U. S. 608)	348
Erie, United States v. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Erie, United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v.	836
Illinois C., Siler v. (213 U. S. 199)	760
Illinois C., v. United States (Mem.) (214 U. S. 520) ..	1065
Lehigh Valley, United States v. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Lehigh Valley, United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Louisville & N., v. Central Stock Yards Co. (212 U. S. 132)	441
Louisville & N., v. Mottley (211 U. S. 149)	126
Louisville & N., Order of Railroad Telegraphers v. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 529) ..	1069
Louisville & N., Prentis v. (211 U. S. 210)	150
Louisville & N., v. Railroad Commission (Mem.) (214 U. S. 522)	1066

Railroad Co., Louisville & N., Siler v. (213 U. S. 175)	753
New York C. & H. R., The Eugene F. Moran v. (212 U. S. 466)	600
New York C. & H. R., v. United States (212 U. S. 481) ..	613
New York C. & H. R., United States v. (212 U. S. 509)	629
New York C. & H. R., v. United States (212 U. S. 500)	624
New York, N. H. & H., v. Walter Baker & Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 514)	1063
Pennsylvania, United States v. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Pennsylvania, United States v. rel. Atty. Gen. v. (213 U. S. 366)	836
Pennsylvania, Zeiger v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 575) ..	657
Queen Anne's Scott v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 574)	657
St. Louis & S. F., Delk v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 578) ..	658
St. Louis & S. F., Kirkpatrick v. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 513)	1063
South & N. A., v. Railroad Commission (Mem.) (214 U. S. 521)	1066
Railway Co., Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Calhoun (213 U. S. 1) ..	671
Atchison, T. & S. F., Hurley v. (213 U. S. 126)	729
Atchison, T. & S. F., v. Sowers (213 U. S. 55)	695
Central of Georgia, v. Railroad Commission (Mem.) (214 U. S. 521)	1066
Chesapeake & O., v. McCabe (213 U. S. 207)	765
Chesapeake & O., v. McDonald (214 U. S. 191)	963
Chesapeake & O., Prentis v. (211 U. S. 210)	150
Chesapeake Western, Prentis v. (211 U. S. 210)	150
Chicago & A., v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 563) ..	653
Chicago, B. & Q., v. Willard (Mem.) (212 U. S. 578) ..	658
Chicago, B. & Q., v. Williams (214 U. S. 492)	1058
Chicago, R. I. & P., Stepp v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 588)	662
Chicago, St. P. M. & O., v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 579)	659
Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P., Siler v. (213 U. S. 199)	760
Colorado & S., v. Satterfield (Mem.) (214 U. S. 524) ..	1067
Des Moines City, Des Moines v. (214 U. S. 179)	958

Railway Co., Grand Trunk W., Clough		Rakes v. United States (212 U. S. 55)	401
v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 579)	659	Ray, South Carolina ex rel., Murray v.
Grand Trunk W., v. Devine		(213 U. S. 174)	752
(Mem.) (214 U. S. 511) ..	1062	Re Dunn (212 U. S. 374)	558
Great Northern, v. United		Riggs (214 U. S. 9)	887
States (Mem.) (214 U. S.		Winn (213 U. S. 458)	873
530)	1070	Reid v. United States (211 U. S. 529)	313
Kansas City S., v. Henrie		Repide, Strong v.	853
(Mem.) (214 U. S. 487) ..	1057	Rice, United States ex rel., Garfield v.
Milwaukee, L. S. & W., Lisman		(Mem.) (212 U. S. 589) ..	663
v. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 520)	1065	Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., J. A. Scriven
Missouri, K. & T., v. Kennedy		Co. v. (Mem.)	660
(Mem.) (214 U. S. 502)	1061	Riggs, Ex parte (Mem.)	1071
Missouri P., v. Larabee Flour		Re	887
Mills Co. (211 U. S. 612)	352	Rimer, United States v. (Mem.)	1062
Nashville, C. & St. L., v. Rail-		Rogers v. Jones (214 U. S. 196)	965
road Commission (Mem.)		Page v.	332
(214 U. S. 522)	1066	Rolling Mill Co. v. Canton Roll &
Norfolk & W., Norfolk Cold		Mach. Co. (Mem.) (214 U.
Storage & Ice Co. v.		S. 532)	1071
(Mem.) (214 U. S. 526)	1068	Rosencrantz, Lennox v. (Mem.)	1062
Norfolk & W., Prentis v. (211		Ross, Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co.
U. S. 210)	150	v. (Mem.)	652
Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L., v.		Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Goodyear
Collins (Mem.) (213 U. S.		Tire & Rubber Co. (Mem.)
559)	652	(214 U. S. 512)	1062
Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L., v.		Rusch v. Escanaba Timber Land Co.
Lighthaiser (Mem.) (212		(Mem.) (214 U. S. 528) ..	1069
U. S. 559)	652	v. John Duncan Land & Min.
Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L., v.		Co. (211 U. S. 526)	312
Ross (Mem.) (212 U. S.		Rusch & Co., United States v. (Mem.)	1068
559)	652	Russell, Grigsby v. (Mem.)	1067
St. Louis S. W., v. Tyler
(Mem.) (212 U. S. 552) ..	649
St. Paul, M. & M., v. Minnesota
ex rel. Minneapolis (Mem.)
(214 U. S. 497)	1060
Southern, Prentis v. (211 U. S.
210)	150
Southern, v. St. Louis Hay &
Grain Co. (214 U. S. 297)	1004
Southern, Siler v. (213 U. S.
199)	760
Southern, v. Townsend (Mem.)
(212 U. S. 571)	655
South Side Elev., Thomas v.
(Mem.) (214 U. S. 496) ..	1059
Texas & P., v. Allen (Mem.)
(214 U. S. 527)	1068
Texas & P., v. Bourman, (212
U. S. 536)	641
Texas & P., v. Eastin (214 U.
S. 153)	946
Texas & P., v. Tucker (Mem.)
(214 U. S. 532)	1070
Western, v. Railroad Commission (Mem.) (214 U. S.
521)	1066
Rainy Lake River Boom Corp. v. Rainy River Lumber Co. (Mem.)
(212 U. S. 574)	657
Rainy River Lumber Co., Rainy Lake River Boom Corp. v.
(Mem.)	657

S.

St. John, Smithsonian Institution v...	892
St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., Delk v.
(Mem.)	658
Kirkpatrick v. (Mem.)	1063
St. Louis Hay & Grain Co., Southern
R. Co. v.	1004
St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Tyler (Mem.)
(212 U. S. 552)	649
St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Minnesota
ex rel. Minneapolis (Mem.)
(214 U. S. 497)	1060
St. Quentin, The, Berry Bros. v.
(Mem.)	656
Sand Filtration Corp. v. Cowardin
(213 U. S. 360)	833
San Francisco, Collins v.	933
Santa Rita Min. Co. v. Upton (Mem.)
(214 U. S. 528)	1069
Santiago v. Nogueras (214 U. S. 260)	989
Santos v. Holy Roman Catholic and Apostolic Church (212 U.
S. 463)	599
Sass & Crawford v. Thomas (Mem.)
(214 U. S. 487)	1057
Satterfield, Colorado & S. R. Co. v.
(Mem.)	1067
Schlegel v. Union Stockyards Bank
(Mem.) (212 U. S. 573) ..	656

CASES REPORTED.

Schnneider v. American Bridge Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 587) ..	662
Schodde v. Twin Falls Land & W. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 581) ..	659
Scollard, American Felt Co. v. (Mem.)	661
Scott v. Abbott (Mem.) (212 U. S. 571) ..	655
v. Queen Anne's R. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 574) ..	657
Sellinger v. Kentucky (213 U. S. 200)	761
Sexton, Johnston v. (Mem.) ..	657
Shackelford v. Fulton (Mem.) (212 U. S. 581) ..	659
Shaw v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 559) ..	652
Shelby Steel Tube Co., Delaware Seamless Tube Co. v. (Mem.) ..	659
Shepard v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 571) ..	655
Sherman Kirk Contract Co. v. United States (Mem.) (212 U. S. 587) ..	662
Shipp, United States v.	1041
Shorey v. Oregon (Mem.) (212 U. S. 585) ..	661
Siler v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. (213 U. S. 199) ..	760
v. Illinois C. R. Co. (213 U. S. 199) ..	760
v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (213 U. S. 175) ..	753
v. Southern R. Co. (213 U. S. 199) ..	760
Silz, New York ex rel., v. Hesterberg (211 U. S. 31) ..	75
Smith v. King of Arizona Min. & Mill. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 531) ..	1070
Smithsonian Institution v. St. John (214 U. S. 19) ..	892
Snare & T. Co. v. Friedman (Mem.) (214 U. S. 518) ..	1065
South & N. A. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission (Mem.) (214 U. S. 521) ..	1066
South Carolina ex rel. Ray, Murray v. Southern R. Co., Prentiss v.	752
v. St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. (214 U. S. 297) ..	150
Siler v.	1004
v. Townsend (Mem.) (212 U. S. 571) ..	760
Southern Realty Invest. Co. v. Walker (211 U. S. 603) ..	655
Southern R. News Co., Fidelity & C. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	346
South Side Elev. R. Co., Thomas v. (Mem.) ..	1060
Sowers, Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Spalding, United States ex rel., Garfield v. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 583) ..	1059
	695
	660

Spokane Valley L. & W. Co. v. Madison (Mem.) (212 U. S. 565) ..	653
Spreckels v. Brown (212 U. S. 208) ..	476
Standard Oil Co. v. Anderson (212 U. S. 215) ..	480
v. United States v. (Mem.) ..	659
Steamboat Springs v. Steamboat Springs Elec. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 532) ..	1070
Steamboat Springs Elec. Co., Steamboat Springs v. (Mem.) ..	1070
Steamship Miramar Co. v. Munson S. S. Line (Mem.) (214 U. S. 526) ..	1068
Steele v. Culver (211 U. S. 26) ..	74
Stephenson, United States v. (Mem.)	656
Stepp v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 588) ..	662
Stranahan, International Mercantile Marine Co. v.	1024
Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. ..	1013
Strassheim, Bilik v. (Mem.) ..	649
Strong v. Repide (213 U. S. 419) ..	853
Sullenberger, United States v.	311
Sun Co., Healy v. (Mem.) ..	660
Swasey, Welch v.	923
Swenson v. Cunningham (Mem.) (212 U. S. 571) ..	655
Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., Bryant v.	997

T.

Talbott, Pickford v.	146
Tang Tun v. Edsell (Mem.) (214 U. S. 523) ..	1067
Tennessee, Johnson v.	1056
Texas, McCorquodale v.	269
Palmer v.	435
Thomas v.	512
Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v.	431
Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v.	417
Texas & P. R. Co. v. Allen (Mem.) (214 U. S. 527) ..	1068
v. Bourman (212 U. S. 536) ..	641
v. Eastin (214 U. S. 153) ..	946
v. Tucker (Mem.) (214 U. S. 532) ..	1070
Third Nat. Bank v. Conaway (Mem.) (214 U. S. 512) ..	1062
Thomas, Klumpp v. (Mem.) ..	659
Sass & Crawford v. (Mem.) ..	1057
v. South Side Elev. R. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 496) ..	1059
v. Texas (212 U. S. 278) ..	512
Thomas's Executor, Green County v.	343
Thornton v. Natchez (Mem.) (212 U. S. 559) ..	651
Titus Blatter & Co., United States v. (Mem.) ..	1068
Tobin, Ex parte (Mem.) ..	1061
Tombstone, Huachuca Water Co. v. (Mem.) ..	1070

CASES REPORTED.

17

CASES REPORTED.

18

CASES REPORTED.

White, Abrams v. (Mem.)	651
Whitcomb v.	889
Whitney Co., Yadkin River P. Co. v. (Mem.)	1061
Wilder, Honolulu Rapid Transit & L. Co. v.	121
Honolulu Rapid Transit & L. Co. v.	124
v. Inter-Island Steam Nav. Co. (211 U. S. 239)	164
Willard, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	658
Williamsburgh City F. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)	660
Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. (212 U. S. 19)	382
Williams, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	1058
Manson v.	869
Williamsburgh City F. Ins. Co. v. Wil- lard (Mem.) (212 U. S. 581)	660
Wilson, Western U. Teleg. Co. v.	693
Wilson Distilling Co., Murray v. (Mem.)	658
Murray v.	742
Winn, Re	873
Carpenter v. (Mem.)	660
53 L. ed.
Winnisimmet Co. v. Davenport (Mem.) (212 U. S. 576) ..	657
W. M. Laird Co., Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v.	591
Wolf Bros. & Co. v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 514)	1063
Wood, Valdes v. (Mem.)	654
Woodwell v. United States (214 U. S. 82)	919
Y.
Yadkin River P. Co. v. Whitney Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 503)	1061
Yesbera v. Hardesty Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (214 U. S. 513)	1063
Yordy, Ontario Land Co. v.	449
Young, Lemieux v.	295
Yramategui v. Yramategui (Mem.) (212 U. S. 587)	662
Z.
Zeiger v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Mem.) (212 U. S. 575)	657
19

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1908.

“

Vol. 211.

REFERENCE TABLE
 OF SUCH CASES
DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
OCTOBER TERM, 1908,
 AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 211,

 AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. of U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. of U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1-2	Frasch v. Moore	65	108-110	" "	110
2-8	" "	66	110-112	" "	111
8-10	" "	67	112-114	" "	112
10-11	" "	68	114-117	" "	113
11	Brandon v. Ard	68	117-119	" "	114
14-15	" "	69	119-122	" "	115
15-17	" "	70	122-124	" "	116
17-19	" "	71	124-127	" "	117
19-21	" "	72	127-131	Washington v. Oregon	118
22-24	" "	73	131-134	" "	119
24-25	" "	74	134-136	" "	120
26-29	Steele v. Culver	74	137	Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Co. v. Wilder	121
29-30	" "	75	141-143	" "	123
31	New York ex rel. Silz v. Hesterberg	75	143-144	" "	124
35	" "	77	144-145	Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Co. v. Wilder	124
35-38	" "	78	145	" "	125
38-40	" "	79	146-148	Keizo v. Henry	125
41-43	" "	80	148-149	" "	126
43-44	" "	81	149	Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley	126
45-46	Berea College v. Kentucky	81	150-152	" "	127
46	" "	82	152-154	" "	128
53-55	" "	85	154	" "	129
55-58	" "	86	155-158	American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States	129
58-60	" "	87	158-160	" "	130
60-62	" "	88	160-162	" "	131
62-65	" "	89	162	Cotton v. Hawaii	131
65-67	" "	90	166	" "	132
67-70	" "	91	166-169	" "	133
70	Louisiana v. Garfield	92	169-171	" "	134
74	" "	95	171-173	" "	135
74-77	" "	96	173-175	" "	136
77-78	" "	97	176	Bowers Hydraulic Dredging Co. v. United States	136
78-79	Twining v. New Jersey	97	180-181	" "	138
79-82	" "	98	181-184	" "	139
82-83	" "	99	184-187	" "	140
90-91	" "	102	187-188	" "	141
91-93	" "	103	188	Phoenix Bridge Co. v. United States	141
93-96	" "	104	189	" "	142
96-98	" "	105
98-100	" "	106
100-103	" "	107
103-105	" "	108
105-108	" "	109

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 211 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 211 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
189-192	Phoenix Bridge Co. v. United States	143	316-318	North American Cold Storage Co. v. Chicago	200
192-194	" "	144	318-321	" "	201
194-197	" "	145	321	" "	202
197-199	" "	146	321-323	Fitchie v. Brown	202
199	Pickford v. Talbott	146	323-324	" "	203
204-206	" "	148	327-329	" "	205
206-208	" "	149	329-332	" "	206
208-210	" "	150	332-334	" "	207
210	Prentis v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co.	334-335	334-335	" "	208
	Prentis v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co.	335	335	Ingersoll v. Coram	208
	Prentis v. Chesapeake Western R. Co.	336-338	336-338	" "	209
	Prentis v. Louisville & N. R. Co.	338-341	338-341	" "	210
	Prentis v. Norfolk & W. R. R. Co.	341-342	341-342	" "	211
	Prentis v. Southern R. Co.	354	354	" "	223
223	" "	354-356	354-356	" "	224
224-226	" "	356-359	356-359	" "	225
226-228	" "	359-361	359-361	" "	226
228-231	" "	361-364	361-364	" "	227
231-233	" "	364-366	364-366	" "	228
233-236	" "	366-368	366-368	" "	229
236-238	" "	368-370	368-370	" "	230
238-239	" "	370	370	United States v. Keitel	230
239	Wilder v. Inter-Island Steam Nav. Co.	379-380	379-380	" "	237
240-243	" "	380-383	380-383	" "	238
243-245	" "	383-385	383-385	" "	239
245-248	" "	385-388	385-388	" "	240
248-249	" "	388-390	388-390	" "	241
249	Garfield v. United States ex rel. Goldsby	390-393	390-393	" "	242
255-257	" "	393-395	393-395	" "	243
257-259	" "	395-398	395-398	" "	244
259-262	" "	398-399	398-399	" "	245
262-264	" "	399	399	United States v. Forrester	245
264-265	Garfield v. United States ex rel. Allison	400-401	400-401	" "	249
265	Home Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles	401-403	401-403	" "	250
270-271	" "	403-404	403-404	" "	251
271-273	" "	404-405	404-405	United States v. Herr	251
273-275	" "	405	405	" "	252
275-278	" "	406	406	United States v. Herr	252
278-280	" "	406-407	406-407	" "	253
280-281	" "	407	407	Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Commission
282	Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Co. v. Hawaii	413-415	413-415	Kahn v. Interstate Commerce Commission
286-289	" "	415-418	415-418	Interstate Commerce Commission v. Harriman	253
289-291	" "	418-420	418-420	" "	261
291-293	" "	420-422	420-422	" "	262
293	Miller & Lux v. East Side Canal & Irrig. Co.	422-425	422-425	" "	263
296-297	" "	425-427	425-427	" "	264
297-300	" "	427-429	427-429	" "	265
300-302	" "	429	429	Hutchins v. Bierce	266
302-305	" "	430-432	430-432	" "	267
305-306	" "	432-434	432-434	McCorquodale v. Texas	268
306	North American Cold Storage Co. v. Chicago	434-437	434-437	" "	269
307-309	" "	437	437	" "	270
309-310	" "	437	437	McCandless v. Pratt	271
313	" "	440-441	440-441	" "	272
313-316	" "	441-444	441-444	" "	273
		444-445	444-445	" "	274
		446	446	Paddell v. New York	275
		448	448	" "	276
		448-451	448-451	" "	277
		451-452	451-452	" "	278
		452-453	452-453	Bailey v. Alabama	278
		453-455	453-455	" "	279

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 211 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 211 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
455-458	Bailey v. Alabama	280	550-552	McLean v. Arkansas	321
458-459	" "	281	552	Hardaway v. National Surety
459	Butler v. Frazee	281		Co.	321
461-462	" "	282	553-555	" "	324
462-463	" "	283	555-558	" "	325
463-465	" "	284	558-560	" "	326
465-468	" "	285	560-562	" "	327
468	" "	286	562-564	Murphy v. John Hofman Co.	327
468	New York ex rel. Kopel v.		564-565	" "	328
	Bingham	286	565-567	" "	329
471	" "	287	567-570	" "	330
471-474	" "	288	570-572	" "	331
474-476	" "	289	572-574	" "	332
476	" "	290	575	Page v. Rogers	332
477	Beers v. Glynn	290	576-577	" "	333
481-483	" "	292	577-579	" "	334
483-485	" "	293	579-581	" "	335
485	" "	294	582	Green County v. Quinlan	335
485-487	Knop v. Monongahela River		583-584	" "	337
	Consol. Coal & Coke Co.	294	584-586	" "	338
487-488	" "	295	586-589	" "	339
489	Lemieux v. Young	295	589-591	" "	340
491-492	" "	298	591-594	" "	341
492-495	" "	299	594-596	" "	342
495-496	" "	300	596-597	" "	343
496	Miller v. New Orleans Acid		597-598	{ Green County v. Quinlan
	& Fertilizer Co.	300		{ Green County v. Thomas	343
497	" "	301	598	Green County v. Thomas	343
497-500	" "	302	599-600	" "	344
500-502	" "	303	600-602	" "	345
502-504	" "	304	602-603	" "	346
504-507	" "	305	603	Southern Realty Invest. Co.
507	United States v. Biggs	305		v. Walker	346
514	" "	307	604-606	" "	347
514-516	" "	308	606-608	" "	348
516-519	" "	309	608	El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v.
519-521	" "	310		Vizard	348
521-522	" "	311	608	" "	349
522-525	United States v. Sullenberger	311	608	" "	350
525	United States v. Freeman	311	610-611	" "	351
525-526	" "	312	611-612	" "	352
526-527	Rusch v. John Duncan Land		612	Missouri P. R. Co. v. Lara-
	& Min. Co.	312		bee Flour Mills Co.	352
527-529	" "	313	613-615	" "	353
529	Reid v. United States	313	615-616	" "	354
536-537	" "	314	619-620	" "	359
537-539	" "	315	620-622	" "	360
539	McLean v. Arkansas	315	622-625	" "	361
542-543	" "	317	625-627	" "	362
543-545	" "	318	627	Morgan v. Adams	362
545-547	" "	319	628-629	" "	363
547-550	" "	320	629-630	" "	364

THE DECISIONS
OF THE
Supreme Court of the United States

AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1908.

1] *HERMAN FRASCH, Appt. and Plff. in Err.,
v.
EDWARD B. MOORE, Commissioner of Patents.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-11.)

Appeal — final decree — patent cases.

A decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia on an appeal from the Commissioner of Patents, which affirms the latter's decision and directs the clerk of the court to "certify this opinion and proceedings in this court in the premises to the Commissioner of Patents, according to law," is not "final" within the meaning of the act of February 9, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 434, 436, chap. 74, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 573), § 8, defining the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court, since, under U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4914, 4915, decisions on such appeals do not preclude any person interested from contesting the validity of the patent in court, and a remedy by bill in equity is given where a patent is refused.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 20-313, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 14.]

Argued April 23, 24, 1908. Decided October 19, 1908.

†Made party in place of Frederick I. Allen, Commissioner, resigned.

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the courts of the District of Columbia—see note to United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 51 L. ed. U. S. 269.

As to what judgments or decrees are final for purposes of review—see notes to Brush Electric Co. v. Electric Improv. Co. 2 C. C. A. 379; Central Trust Co. v. Madden, 17 C. C. A. 238; Prescott & A. C. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 C. C. A. 482; Gibbons v. Ogden, 5 L. ed. U. S. 302; and Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001.

APPEAL from and in ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decision affirming a decision of the Commissioner of Patents, who had affirmed in part a decision of the examiners in chief on the question of uniting process and apparatus claims in the same application. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 27 App. D. C. 25.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Frasch applied for a patent for an invention of a new and useful improvement in the art of making salt by evaporation of brine. He expressed his alleged invention in six claims, three of which were for the process of removing incrustation of calcium sulphate from brine-heating surfaces, and three of them were for an apparatus for use in the process.

*At the time when the application was [2] filed, rule 41 of the Patent Office did not permit the joinder of claims for process and claims for apparatus in one and the same application. The examiner required division between the process and apparatus claims, and refused to act upon the merits. An appeal was taken to the examiners in chief, but the examiner refused to forward it. A petition was then filed, asking the Commissioner of Patents to direct that the appeal be heard. The Commissioner held that the examiner was right in refusing to forward the appeal. From that decision appeal was taken to the court of appeals of the District, which held that it did not have jurisdiction to entertain it. Frasch then filed a petition in this court for a mandamus, directing the court of appeals to hear and determine the appeal, which petition was dismissed. Ex parte Frasch, 192 U. S. 566, 48 L. ed. 564, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424.

But in United States ex rel. Steinmetz v. Allen, 192 U. S. 543, 48 L. ed. 555, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416, it was held that rule 41, as applied by the Commissioner, was invalid, and that the remedy for his action was by mandamus in the supreme court of the District to compel the Commissioner to act. Accordingly the proceedings in the present case were resumed in the Patent Office, and the applicant asked the Commissioner to direct that the appeal theretofore taken to the examiners in chief be heard by them. The Commissioner granted this petition. The primary examiner furnished the required statement and a supplementary statement of the grounds of his decision requiring division. The examiners in chief affirmed the decision of the primary examiner, "requiring a division of these claims for an art and for an independent machine used to perform the art;" one examiner in chief, dissenting, held that division should not be required. On appeal to the Commissioner, he affirmed the examiners in chief in part only; that is to say, he held that process claim No. 1 must be divided from the other process claims and the apparatus claims, but that process claims Nos. 2 and 3 and the apparatus claims Nos. 4, 5, and 6 might be joined in one application. Rehearing was denied, and an appeal was taken to the court of appeals for the District of Columbia, which affirmed the decision of the Commissioner of Patents, for reasons given at large in an opinion, and directed the clerk of the court to "certify this opinion and proceedings in this court in the premises to the Commissioner of Patents, according to law."

An appeal and a writ of error were allowed, the court stating through Mr. Chief Justice Shepard: "We are inclined to the view that this case is not appealable to the Supreme Court of the United States, but, as the question has never been directly decided, so far as we are advised, we will grant the petition in order that the question of the right to appeal in such a case may be directly presented for the determination of the court of last resort."

The record was filed January 25, 1907, and on February 4 a petition for certiorari was submitted.

Mr. Charles J. Hedrick argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant and plaintiff in error.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee and defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

Section 8 of the act of February 9, 1893

(27 Stat. at L. 434, 436, chap. 74, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 573), provides:

"That any final judgment or decree of the said court of appeals may be re-examined and affirmed, reversed, or modified by the Supreme Court of the United States, upon writ of error or appeal, in all causes in which the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, shall exceed the sum of five thousand dollars, in the same manner and under the same regulations as heretofore provided for in cases of writs of error on judgment or appeals from decrees rendered in the supreme court of the District of Columbia; and also in cases, without regard to the sum or value of the matter in dispute, wherein is involved the validity of any patent or copyright, or in which is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of or an authority exercised under the United States."

The decision of the court of appeals sought to be reviewed in the present case is not final, but merely ended an interlocutory stage of the controversy, and sent the applicant back to the Patent Office to conform to the meaning and effect of the rule on division of claims as construed by the Commissioner of Patents, and to pursue the application in the form required to allowance or rejection.

Section 780 of the Revised Statutes of the District of Columbia reads thus:

"The supreme court, sitting in banc, shall have jurisdiction of and shall hear and determine all appeals from the decisions of the Commissioner of Patents, in accordance with the provisions of sections forty-nine hundred and eleven to section forty-nine hundred and fifteen, inclusive, of chapter one, title 60, of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3391, 3392), 'Patents, Trademarks, and Copyrights.'"

*Section 9 of the "Act to Establish a Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and for Other Purposes," approved February 9, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 434, 436, chap. 74, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3391), is:

"Sec. 9. That the determination of appeals from the decision of the Commissioner of patents, now vested in the general term of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in pursuance of the provisions of section seven hundred and eighty of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to the District of Columbia, shall hereafter be, and the same is hereby, vested in the court of appeals created by this act; and, in addition, any party aggrieved by a decision of the Commissioner of Patents in any interference case may appeal therefrom to said court of appeals."

Thus, the special jurisdiction of the District supreme court in patent appeals was transferred to and vested in the court of appeals, and decisions in interference cases were also made appealable, which had not been previously the case. Rev. Stat. § 4911. The law applicable is § 4914, Revised Statutes, which provides:

"The court, on petition, shall hear and determine such appeal, and revise the decision appealed from in a summary way, on the evidence produced before the Commissioner, at such early and convenient time as the court may appoint; and the revision shall be confined to the points set forth in the reasons of appeal. After hearing the case the court shall return to the Commissioner a certificate of its proceedings and decision, which shall be entered of record in the Patent Office, and shall govern the further proceedings in the case. But no opinion or decision of the court in any such case shall preclude any person interested from the right to contest the validity of such patent in any court wherein the same may be called in question."

By § 4915 a remedy by bill in equity is given where a patent is refused, and reads as follows:

"Sec. 4915. Whenever a patent on application is refused, either by the Commissioner of Patents or by the supreme *court of the District of Columbia upon appeal from the Commissioner, the applicant may have remedy by bill in equity; and the court having cognizance thereof, on notice to adverse parties and other due proceedings had, may adjudge that such applicant is entitled, according to law, to receive a patent for his invention, as specified in his claim, or for any part thereof, as the facts in the case may appear. And such adjudication, if it be in favor of the right of the applicant, shall authorize the Commissioner to issue such patent on the applicant filing in the Patent Office a copy of the adjudication, and otherwise complying with the requirements of law. In all cases where there is no opposing party, a copy of the bill shall be served on the Commissioner; and all the expenses of the proceeding shall be paid by the applicant, whether the final decision is in his favor or not."

The final decision referred to is obviously the judicial decision on the bill in equity, while in interference cases and in all others going up from the Commissioner to the Court of Appeals there is no final judgment in the cause, but one interlocutory in its nature, and binding only upon the Commissioner, "to govern the further proceedings in the case." The opinion or decision of the court, reviewing the Commissioner's decision, is not final, because it does not preclude any person interested from contesting the validity of the patent in court; and, if the decision of the Commissioner grants the patent, that is the end of the matter as between the government and the applicant; and if he refuses it, and the court of appeals sustains him, that is merely a qualified finality, for, as we have seen, the decision of that court may be challenged generally and a refusal of patent may be reviewed and contested by bill as provided.

The appeal given to the court of appeals of the District from the decision of the Commissioner is not, as Mr. Justice Matthews said in Butterworth v. United States, "the exercise of ordinary jurisdiction at law or in equity on the part of that court, but is one step in the statutory proceeding under *the patent laws whereby that tribunal is [10 interposed in aid of the Patent Office, though not subject to it. Its adjudication, though not binding upon any who choose, by litigation in courts of general jurisdiction, to question the validity of any patent thus awarded, is nevertheless conclusive upon the Patent Office itself; for, as the statute declares (Rev. Stat. § 4914), it 'shall govern the further proceedings in the case.'" 112 U. S. 60, 28 L. ed. 659, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

In Rousseau v. Brown, 21 App. D. C. 73, 80, which was an appeal from the Patent Office in the matter of an interference between two applications, the court affirmed the decision of the Commissioner of Patents, ruling against one of the claims on the ground that priority of invention must be awarded to the other claimant, declined to allow a writ of error or appeal, and said, through Chief Justice Alvey:

"There is no final judgment of this court rendered in such cases, nor is there any such judgment required or authorized to be rendered, not even for costs of the appeal. This court is simply required in such cases, after hearing and deciding the points as presented, instead of entering judgment here, to return to the Commissioner of Patents a certificate of the proceedings and decision of this court, to be entered of record in the Patent Office, to govern the further proceedings in the case. But it is declared by the statute that no opinion of this court in any such case shall preclude any person interested from the right to contest the validity of any patent that may be granted by the Commissioner of Patents. D. C. Rev. Stat. § 780, U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4914.

"There is no provision of any statute, within our knowledge, that authorizes a writ of error or an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States in such case as the present. It would seem clear that the case is not within the purview of § 8 of the act of Congress of February 9, 1893, providing for the establishment of this court. That section only applies to cases where final judgments by this court have been entered, and not to decisions to be made and certified to the Patent Office, under the special directions of the statute."

11] *We consider these observations as applicable to the present case, and the result is appealed and writ of error dismissed, and certiorari denied.

Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice McKenna dissent.

Mr. Justice Moody did not sit.

LUCINDA BRANDON, Personally and as Administratrix of the Estate of Alexander Brandon, Deceased, et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

NEWTON L. ARD.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 11-25.)

Public lands — railway land grants — withdrawal from settlement.

1. The withdrawal from sale, pre-emption, or settlement of lands within the indemnity limits of the railway land grant act of March 3, 1863 (12 Stat. at L. 772), which withdrawal was unauthorized, because the road had not then been definitely located, does not prevent a homestead claim or right from attaching to such land before definite location, and such right will be protected as against the subsequent selection of the land by the railway company.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 234-242, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — res judicata — parties.

2. A homestead claimant whose rights attached before any interest in the land was acquired by a railway company under a congressional grant is not concluded by an adjudication against the government in a suit brought by it to cancel certain patents issued to the railway company, including one for the land in question, to which suit he was not made a party, although he may have been an active member of a Settlers' Protective Association, which may have made such representations to, and brought such facts to the attention of, the government, as to induce the government to bring the suit.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 688-851, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 24.]

Submitted April 29, 1908. Decided October 19, 1908.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

As to conclusiveness of judgments generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Municipal Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Allen County, in that state, in favor of defendant in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 74 Kan. 424, 118 Am. St. Rep. 321, 87 Pac. 366.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. T. A. Pollock submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Mr. L. W. Kepingler was on the brief:

The relations between the government and Ard with respect to this land, and Ard's relation to and connection with the suit, were such as to render the decree in the case of United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 358, 35 L. ed. 766, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13, conclusive against Ard as to the equities now claimed by him.

Graham v. Great Falls Water Power & Townsite Co. 30 Mont. 393, 76 Pac. 811; Norton v. Evans, 27 C. C. A. 168, 49 U. S. App. 669, 82 Fed. 804; Kerrison v. Stewart, 93 U. S. 155, 23 L. ed. 843; Manson v. Duncanson, 166 U. S. 533, 41 L. ed. 1105, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 647; Freeman, Judgm. 3d ed. § 147; Black, Judgm. § 85; Hornsby v. City Nat. Bank (Tenn. Ch. App.) 60 S. W. 160; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 737, 738; Hauke v. Cooper, 48 C. C. A. 144, 108 Fed. 924; Theller v. Hershey, 86 Fed. 576; United States v. Beebe, 127 U. S. 338, 32 L. ed. 121, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1083.

Ard could have appealed.

3 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. 6th ed. p. 1461; Sage v. Central R. Co. 93 U. S. 412, 23 L. ed. 933.

The withdrawal of March 19, 1863, withdrew the land in question from the category of public lands.

Northern Lumber Co. v. O'Brien, 134 Fed. 303, 71 C. C. A. 598, 139 Fed. 614, 204 U. S. 190, 51 L. ed. 438, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Wood v. Beach, 156 U. S. 548, 39 L. ed. 528, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Spencer v. McDougal, 159 U. S. 62, 40 L. ed. 76, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1026; Merrill v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 17 C. C. A. 199, 34 U. S. App. 140, 70 Fed. 464; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 2 McCrary, 550, 13 Fed. 106; Wolcott v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 5 Wall. 681, 18 L. ed. 639; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 745, 23 L. ed. 639; Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Fremont County, 9 Wall. 94, 19 L. ed. 564; Nelson v.

Northern P. R. Co. 188 U. S. 108, 47 L. ed. 406, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302.

The withdrawal of March 19, 1863, withdrew the land from the category of "public land" within the meaning of the words as used in the homestead pre-emption acts, and such withdrawal constituted a "reservation" within the meaning of said word as contained in said act.

Ibid.; Patterson v. Tatam, 3 Sawy. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 10,830; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 770, 25 L. ed. 920; Weaver v. Fairchild, 50 Cal. 360; Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Elmore, 46 La. Ann. 1237, 15 So. 701.

The rulings of the Land Department authorizing the decisions of this court sustaining withdrawals such as the one in question, and made prior to the time Brandon made his purchase, constitute a rule of property in his favor. See cases cited in 13 Century Dig. chap. 2163, § 336; and such rule, having been established by Federal authority, it is the legal duty of the government to uphold the title so acquired.

Mr. Oscar Foust submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. Ewing, Gard, & Gard were on the brief:

The judgment against the plaintiff (the United States) and in favor of the railroad company, in the Federal case, is not res judicata as to the issues and parties in the case at bar.

Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 39 L. ed. 524, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Black, Judgm. 540; 1 Freeman, Judgm. 4th ed. 188, 189; Hale v. Finch, 104 U. S. 261, 26 L. ed. 732; Patton v. Caldwell, 1 Dall. 419, 1 L. ed. 204; Litchfield v. Goodnow (Litchfield v. Crane) 123 U. S. 551, 31 L. ed. 201, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. 467, 11 L. ed. 1059; Northern Bank v. Stone, 88 Fed. 413; Australian Knitting Co. v. Gormly, 138 Fed. 92; Wilgus v. Germain, 19 C. C. A. 188, 44 U. S. App. 369, 72 Fed. 773; Pendleton v. Russell, 144 U. S. 640, 36 L. ed. 574, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Central Baptist Church & Soc. v. Manchester, 17 R. I. 492, 33 Am. St. Rep. 893, 23 Atl. 30; Jones v. Vert, 121 Ind. 140, 16 Am. St. Rep. 379, 22 N. E. 882; Cannon River Mfrs. Asso. v. Rogers, 42 Minn. 123, 18 Am. St. Rep. 497, 43 N. W. 792; Park v. Ensign, 66 Kan. 50, 97 Am. St. Rep. 352, 71 Pac. 230; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; Stryker v. Goodnow (Stryker v. Crane) 123 U. S. 527, 31 L. ed. 194, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Brandon v. Ard, 74 Kan. 424, 118 Am. St. Rep. 321, 87 Pac. 366; Wilkie v. Howe, 27 Kan. 518; Keizer v. Remington Paper Co. 71 Kan. 305, 80 Pac. 570.

The letter of withdrawal issued by the Commissioner of the General Land Office March 19, 1863, was without authority of 53 L. ed.

law, and was ineffectual to withdraw the land in controversy from the class of lands subject to homestead, and is ineffectual to make good the legal title of Brandon as against the prior and superior equity of Ard in the land.

Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733-760, 23 L. ed. 634-645; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 24 L. ed. 1095; Ard v. Brandon, supra; Clements v. Warner, 24 How. 394, 16 L. ed. 695; Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. ed. 820, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549; Weeks v. Bridgman, 159 U. S. 541, 40 L. ed. 253, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 358, 35 L. ed. 766, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 28 L. ed. 794, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. ed. 463, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; Nelson v. Northern P. R. Co. 188 U. S. 108, 47 L. ed. 406, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Sjoli v. Dreschel, 199 U. S. 564, 50 L. ed. 311, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Southern P. R. Co. v. Bell, 183 U. S. 675, 46 L. ed. 383, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Holmes v. United States, 55 C. C. A. 489, 118 Fed. 995; Moore v. Carmode, 180 U. S. 167, 45 L. ed. 476, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Northern P. R. Co. v. Miller, 7 Land Dec. 100; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 23 L. ed. 424.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the title to a tract of land in Allen county, Kansas, containing 80 acres. It is described in the record as the northeast quarter of section 11, township 26, range 20, and will hereafter be alluded to as the tract in section 11. Adjoining that tract, in the same township, is another tract of 80 acres which will be hereafter referred to as the tract in section 2. The present writ of error does not involve the title to the tract in section 2, but it will conduce to a clear understanding of the questions raised as to the tract in section 11 if we recall certain acts of Congress, as well as the proceedings in the Land Department and the litigation that arose in the state and Federal courts about both tracts.

By an act of March 3d, 1863, chap. 98, Congress granted to Kansas every alternate odd section of public lands, for 10 sections in width on each side, to aid in the construction of railroads and branches, as follows: First, of a railroad and telegraph line from Leavenworth, Kansas, on a named *route, with a branch to the southern[15 line of the state in the direction of Galveston, Texas; second, of a railroad from Atchison, via Topeka, to the western line of the state, with a branch extending to a named point on the first-named road; one of the roads becoming subsequently known as the Leavenworth road, and the other as the Missouri-Kansas road.

After making the grant in the usual words, the act proceeded: "But in case it shall appear that the United States have, when the limits or routes of said road and branches are definitely fixed, sold any section or any part thereof, granted as aforesaid, or that the right of pre-emption or homestead settlement has attached to the same, or that the same has been reserved by the United States for any purpose whatever, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to cause to be selected, for the purposes aforesaid, from the public lands of the United States nearest to tiers of sections above specified, so much land, in alternate sections or parts of sections, designated by odd numbers, as shall be equal to such lands as the United States have sold, reserved, or otherwise appropriated, or to which the rights of pre-emption or homestead settlements have attached as aforesaid; which lands, thus indicated by odd numbers and selected by direction of the Secretary of the Interior, as aforesaid, shall be held by the state of Kansas for the use and purpose aforesaid: Provided, That the land to be so selected shall, in no case, be located further than twenty miles from the lines of said road and branches. . . ." 12 Stat. at L. 772.

By a statute passed in 1864 Kansas accepted this grant upon the conditions prescribed by Congress, and the Leavenworth and the Missouri-Kansas companies became entitled to claim the benefit of its provisions as to the lands on their respective routes.

A few days after the act of 1863 was passed,—indeed, before the state had formally accepted the benefit of its provisions,—the Senators and Representatives from Kansas requested the General Land Office to [16] withdraw the public lands *along the specified routes of the railroads and branches proposed to be constructed. Pursuant to that request, the Commissioner of the Land Office, on March 19th, 1863,—without having received any map of general route, much less of definite location,—sent to the register and receiver, at Humboldt, Kansas, a diagram showing the probable lines of the roads and their respective branches, as well as the 10-mile or place limits on each side, and directed that officer to "withhold from ordinary private sale or location, and also from pre-emption and homestead . . . all the public lands in your [his] district and lying within the 10-mile limits are [as] designated in said diagram." After referring to the acts of 1853 and 1854 [10 Stat.

at L. 244, 269, chaps. 143, 25] (pre-emption and homestead acts), the Commissioner proceeded: "You will, therefore, understand from the foregoing: 1st. That the odd sections within the limits of said railroads and branches are absolutely withdrawn from sale, pre-emption, or homestead entry, except so far as inceptive rights may have accrued prior to the receipt by you of this order. . . . This order will take effect from the date of its reception at your office, and you will advise this office of the precise time it may be received by you."

The order of withdrawal was approved by the Secretary of the Interior and was received at the local office May 5th, 1863.

After this withdrawal, Congress, by an act approved July 26th, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 289, chap. 270), made a grant of lands to Kansas to aid in the construction of a southern branch of the Union Pacific Railway & Telegraph Company from Fort Riley, Kansas, down the valley of the Neosho river to the southern line of Kansas. This act is referred to in the record, but it does not seem to have any special significance in the present case. Suffice it to say, that it contained provisions substantially like those in the act of 1863, which made it the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to select for the railroad company public lands nearest the place limits, equal to such amount as the United States appeared, at the time of the definite location of the road, to have "sold, reserved, or otherwise *appro-[17] priated, or to which the right of homestead settlement or pre-emption has attached."

Under date of April 30th, 1867, the Land Office transmitted to the local land office at Humboldt, Kansas, a map of the actual location of the railroad for which the grant was made by Congress in the act of 1863. The diagram showed the 10-mile or granted limits of that road, and directed the withholding from sale or location, pre-emption, or homestead entries, all the odd sections within the limits of 20 miles as laid down on that diagram.

After the above withdrawal,—which, as we have stated, was made in 1863 solely at the request of the Kansas Senators and Representatives,—Ard, who was admittedly qualified to take the benefits of the homestead laws, went upon the above two tracts, in June, 1866, intending, in good faith, to perfect a title to them under the homestead laws. He made substantial improvements upon them, and in July, 1866, in the accustomed way, made a homestead application at the local land office for the 160 acres. These two tracts of 80 acres each were so situated that they could have been legally embraced in one homestead entry. Ard's application was denied by the local office upon the ground, among others, that the land was within the place or granted limits of one of the aided roads. At that time the Missouri-Kansas Company—under whom the plaintiffs in error claim—had not filed any map of definite location. No such map was filed until December 6th, 1866. In the spring of 1867 Ard did further work on the land, building a house thereon, and about July 1st of that year he again applied at the local land office, under the homestead laws, for the land. This application was also denied on the same grounds as were assigned in reference to his original application. In 1872 he made a more formal application, but was again repulsed by the Commissioner of the Land Office. Yet he did not abandon his claim, but held steadily to the purpose of obtaining the entire 160 acres under the homestead laws, and remained in open, notorious possession, asserting *his right to the land. And he has continuously occupied the land ever since June, 1866.

It should be stated in this connection that, after the rejection of Ard's original homestead application upon the mistaken ground that the lands were within the place or granted limits of one of the roads, it was ascertained that neither of the tracts was within place limits, but both were within the overlapping indemnity limits of the respective roads. The tract in section 11 was selected as indemnity for lands lost jointly by the two companies, and was patented by the state to the Missouri-Kansas Company on May 19th, 1873. The company knew when it selected the land to supply alleged deficiencies in place limits, as well as when it took the patent from the state, that Ard was in actual possession, claiming the land under the homestead laws. The tract in section 2 was selected by the same company on April 14th, 1873, and on November 3d, 1873, it received a patent for it directly from the United States.

C. H. Pratt having purchased from the Missouri-Kansas Company the tract in section 2, and Brandon having purchased from the same company the tract in section 11, each commenced a separate action of ejectment against Ard in a state court. Judgment went against Ard in each case, and he was also unsuccessful in the supreme court of Kansas. Ard v. Pratt, 43 Kan. 419, 23 Pac. 646; Ard v. Brandon, 43 Kan. 425, 23 Pac. 648.

Ard then brought both cases here, and the judgments were reversed, further proceedings being ordered to be taken in accordance with the opinion of this court. Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 39 L. ed. 524, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406. What this court said bears directly upon the case as now 53 L. ed.

presented. Mr. Justice Brewer, delivering the judgment of the court, referred to the testimony—and the same facts appear in the present record—and observed that, by reason of his occupancy and improvement of the land for the purpose of a homestead, and by his homestead application,—all of which was prior to the withdrawal of the lands by the Land Department,—Ard, who had admittedly the requisite qualifications under the homestead laws, acquired an equitable *right to the land that could not be displaced by the wrongful act of the local land office. After referring to the case of Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 338, 23 L. ed. 424, 427, the court proceeded: "Within the authority of that case we think the defendant has shown an equity prior to all claims of the railway company. He had a right to enter the land as a homestead; he pursued the course of procedure prescribed by the statute; he made out a formal application for the entry, and tendered the requisite fees, and the application and the fees were rejected by the officer charged with the duty of receiving them,—and wrongfully rejected by him. Such wrongful rejection did not operate to deprive defendant of his equitable rights, nor did he forfeit or lose those rights because, after this wrongful rejection, he followed the advice of the register and sought in another way to acquire title to the lands. The law deals tenderly with one who, in good faith, goes upon the public lands, with a view of making a home thereon. If he does all that the statute prescribes as the condition of acquiring rights, the law protects him in those rights, and does not make their continued existence depend alone upon the question whether or no he takes an appeal from an adverse decision of the officers charged with the duty of acting upon his application. 'The policy of the Federal government in favor of settlers upon public lands has been liberal. It recognizes their superior equity to become the purchasers of a limited extent of land, comprehending their improvements, over that of any other person.' Clements v. Warner, 24 How. 394, 397, 16 L. ed. 695, 696. There can be no question as to the good faith of the defendant. He went upon the land with the view of making it his home. He has occupied it ever since. He did all that was in his power in the first instance to secure the land as his homestead. That he failed was not his fault; it came through the wrongful action of one of the officers of the government."

Subsequently, after the return of the above cases to the inferior state court, Pratt, the claimant of the tract in section 2, abandoned his ejectment suit against Ard, and 20]the *United States brought an action in the United States circuit court for Kansas against the Missouri-Kansas Company and other railroad companies to cancel certain patents that had been issued for lands in Allen county, Kansas, including the one issued to the Missouri-Kansas Company for the tract in section 11. United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 358, 35 L. ed. 766, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13. Brandon was made a defendant in that action because he asserted rights in lands covered by some of the patents sought to be canceled. But Ard was not made a party, although some of the evidence in the case had reference to the tract in section 11, as well as to the circumstances under which he occupied it. That action was brought by the Attorney General of the United States at the request of the Secretary of the Interior, who proceeded under the act of Congress of March 3d, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595). That act directed the Secretary "to immediately adjust, in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court, each of the railroad land grants made by Congress to aid in the construction of railroads, and heretofore unadjusted." In that action the government was unsuccessful in both the circuit court and in this court, but not, as we shall presently see, on any question determinative of the issue now presented as between Brandon's heirs and Ard.

Later on, the present case, so far as it involved the title to section 11, as between Brandon and Ard, was again heard upon its merits in the state court, and judgment went in favor of Ard. That judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of Kansas, which had before it the judgments in Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 39 L. ed. 524, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, and in United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. supra.

Subsequently, after the decision in Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 39 L. ed. 524, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, Ard renewed his application, under the homestead laws, for both tracts. Having made the proper proofs, and paid the required fees, his application was approved and a patent issued to him by the United States on October 17th, 1900, under the homestead law of 1862 and the 21]acts supplementary thereto. That patent was put in evidence at the last hearing of this cause in the inferior state court and was part of the record in this case when it was before the supreme court of Kansas, whose judgment is now here for review.

In our opinion the determination of the present case depends upon the conclusions that may be reached on two questions.

1. We cannot give to the withdrawal from sale, pre-emption, or settlement of the lands upon which Ard entered in 1866 the legal effect which the plaintiffs in error insist must be given to it. It is conceded that the lands were not within the place or granted limits of either railroad, but were within indemnity limits. According to the decisions of this court, they were therefore open to settlement under the homestead laws up to the time of their being selected to supply deficiencies in place limits, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, after the filing of a map of definite location. The withdrawal of them from sale or settlement, simply at the request of Senators and Representatives from Kansas, prior to the definite location of the road, and before they were regularly selected to supply deficiencies in place or granted limits, was without authority of law. Such unauthorized withdrawal did not stand in the way of Ard, in virtue of his settlement on them in 1866, under the then-existing homestead laws, from acquiring such an interest in the lands as would be protected against their subsequent selection by the railroad company. The acts of Congress cannot be construed as actually granting lands to which had attached, before the definite location of the road, any claim or right under the homestead laws. A claim or right did attach to these lands in favor of Ard before any map of definite location was made or filed, and before they were selected for the railroad company to supply alleged deficiencies in place limits. What we have said is in conformity with numerous decisions of this court cited in the margin.†

†Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. ed. 463, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; Nelson v. Northern P. R. Co. 188 U. S. 109, 47 L. ed. 406, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; United States v. Northern P. R. Co. 152 U. S. 284, 296, 38 L. ed. 443, 448, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 634, 635, 41 L. ed. 1139, 1144, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Menotti v. Dillon, 167 U. S. 703, 42 L. ed. 333, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945; United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 176 U. S. 28, 42, 44 L. ed. 358, 364, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 5, 35 L. ed. 77, 79, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 723, 28 L. ed. 872, 873, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 501, 24 L. ed. 1095, 1098; Cedar Rapids & M. River R. Co. v. Herring; 110 U. S. 27, 28, 28 L. ed. 56, 57, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Grinnell v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 103 U. S. 739, 26 L. ed. 456; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 28 L. ed. 794, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Wilcox v. Eastern Oregon Land Co. 176 U. S. 51, 44 L. ed. 368, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269.

22] *The cases cited were referred to in a recent case in this court,—Sjoli v. Dreschel, 199 U. S. 565, 50 L. ed. 312, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. It was there held that those cases established, among other propositions, the following: "That the railroad company will not acquire a vested interest in particular lands, within or without place limits, merely by filing a map of general route and having the same approved by the Secretary of the Interior, although, upon the definite location of its line of road and the filing and acceptance of a map thereof in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the lands within primary or place limits, not theretofore reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise disposed of, and free from pre-emption or other claims or rights, become segregated from the public domain, and no rights in such place lands will attach in favor of a settler or occupant who becomes such after definite location; that no rights to lands within indemnity limits will attach in favor of the railroad company until after selections made by it with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior; that up to the time such approval is given, lands within indemnity limits, although embraced by the company's list of selections, are subject to be disposed of by the United States or to be settled upon and occupied under the pre-emption and homestead laws of the United States; and that the Secretary of the Interior has no authority to withdraw from sale or settlement lands that are within indemnity limits, which have not been previously selected, with his approval, to supply deficiencies within the place limits of the company's road."

23] *It is true that the cases above referred to arose under acts of Congress that did not relate in terms to grants of lands to the state of Kansas to aid in the construction of railroads. But they are none the less in point here; for the provisions in them as to homestead rights attaching prior to definite location are, in substance, the same as are found in the above acts of Congress relating to lands granted to Kansas.

2. When we recall what this court (as above quoted) said in Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 39 L. ed. 524, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, about Ard's rights in respect of these identical lands, there is no room to doubt the correctness of the judgment of the supreme court of Kansas in his favor, unless we hold, as plaintiffs contend we should, that Ard is concluded by the decision of the circuit court of the United States in the action brought by the United States to cancel certain patents issued to the Missouri-Kansas Company. But we cannot so hold. As already stated, Ard was not, and was not sought to be, made a party to that action. He had no control of it, and was not entitled of right to be heard or to adduce evidence in it. He was not, in any legal sense, represented in the case, nor can he be regarded as privy to the issue between the United States and those whom it sued. His membership in the Settlers' Protective Association—which association, it is said, induced the United States to bring the action referred to—did not so connect him, in law, with the litigation, as that the judgment therein would bind him or be conclusive evidence against him. It must be assumed that the Attorney General of the United States sued the Missouri-Kansas Company only in the discharge of his official duty, and for the purpose of asserting the rights of the government as against that company. He could not have represented merely private parties in that suit; he represented only the United States. Ard was not, in any legal sense, a privy to the issue of record between the United States and its opponents, although the validity of the patent received by the Missouri-Kansas Company for the land here in question—under which company the present plaintiffs in error claim—*was directly disputed by the government in that case. It is said that Ard was an active member of the Settlers' Protective Association. But that is not a controlling fact. It may be, as alleged, that, in respect of the patents issued to it, the government was induced to proceed against that company by the representations made and the facts brought to its attention by that association. But that circumstance did not so connect the association with the suit as to make the judgment binding upon its individual members in a suit between other parties. In suing the Missouri-Kansas Company the officers of the government acted wholly upon their independent judgment as to the validity of the patents it had issued, and as to what was its duty to those who had previously acquired rights in the particular public lands covered by those patents. The issue in that case was only as to the respective rights of the United States and the Missouri-Kansas Company, as between each other. There was no issue between the company or those claiming under it and Ard, who was in actual possession, claiming equitable rights in the lands in dispute by reason of his occupancy of them under the homestead laws. In United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., above cited, the bill referred to those acts of the land officers which had the effect to prevent settlers from acquiring rights which they were entitled to acquire under the homestead and pre-emption laws. The court, alluding to those allegations, said: "If the facts are as thus alleged, it is clear that the Missouri-Kansas Company holds patents to land both within the place and indemnity limits of the Leavenworth road which equitably belong to bona fide settlers who acquired rights under the homestead and pre-emption laws, which were not lost by reason of the Land Department having, by mistake or an erroneous interpretation of the statutes in question, caused patents to be issued to the company. The case made by the above-admitted averments of the bill is one of sheer spoliation upon the part of the company of the rights of settlers; at least, of those whose rights attached prior 25] to the *withdrawal of 1867; whether of others, it is not necessary, at this time, to determine." And in Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 541, 39 L. ed. 524, 525, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406, the court, referring to the language just quoted, and to the transfer of the legal title by the patent of the United States to the Missouri-Kansas Company, said: "But it is equally clear, under the authority of the last-cited case [United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co.], as well as of many others, that no adjudication against the government in a suit by it to set aside a patent estops an individual not a party thereto from thereafter setting up his equitable rights in the land for which the patent was issued."

It results that, in the present case, involving only the title to the tract of 80 acres in section 11, that, by his rightful occupancy of that tract, under and in conformity with the homestead laws, before any interest therein was legally acquired by the railroad company, Ard's equitable rights, thus accruing and supported at the final hearing by a patent from the United States, must prevail.

For the reasons stated, the judgment of the Supreme Court of Kansas is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer took no part in the decision of this case.

26]*FREDERICK M. STEELE and the Fidelity & Deposit Company of Baltimore, Maryland, Appts.,

v.

WILLIAM CULVER, Lester A. Taber, Thomas J. Cavanaugh, Frank McKeyes, Guardian of the Estate of William Culver, and the South Haven & Eastern Railroad Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 26-30.)

Appeal — from circuit court — frivolousness of jurisdictional question.

A decree of a Federal circuit court, dismissing, for want of the requisite diversity of citizenship, a bill by which, on the ground of fraud, injunctive relief against the collection of a judgment against a railway company and of a subsequent judgment against the surety on its appeal bond is sought by such surety and by the person who is, by contract, ultimately liable to pay the original judgment, is so plainly correct as to require the dismissal of an appeal to the Supreme Court, where such decree is based upon the proposition that such railway company, although insolvent, is an indispensable party, which must be aligned with the plaintiffs for the purpose of determining the question of jurisdiction.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 879-937, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 393.]

Submitted June 1, 1908. Decided October 26, 1908.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a suit to enjoin the collection of certain judgments. On motion to dismiss or affirm, dismissed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Edward Maher, W. J. Barnard, and Ernest Dale Owen submitted the cause for appellants.

Messrs. Thomas J. Cavanaugh and L. A. Tabor submitted the cause for appellees.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity to prohibit the collection of a judgment rendered by a Michigan state court against a railroad company, and also of a judgment against the plaintiff corporation upon a bond given by it as surety when the railroad took the case to the supreme court of the state. See *Culver v. South Haven & E. R. Co. 144 Mich. [29 254, 107 N. W. 908, 109 N. W. 256; Culver v. Fidelity & D. Co. 149 Mich. 630, 113 N. W. 9. The ground is that the original judgment was got by fraud. The plaintiff Steele had contracted with the surety company and also with purchasers of the railroad to pay the judgment against the latter if recovered, and joins as plaintiff on the footing that he is the real party in interest. The railroad company is made a defendant, but it is a Michigan corporation, and, as the other defendants are citizens and residents of Michigan, if it should be aligned with the plaintiffs the necessary diversity of citizenship would not exist. The circuit court dismissed the bill on demurrer for want of jurisdiction, and allowed an appeal with a certificate that the want of the requisite diversity of citizenship and consequently of jurisdiction was the sole ground of the decree. The case is before us upon a motion to dismiss or affirm.

NOTE.—On direct review of decisions of circuit or district courts, see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

The appellants candidly admit that for a decision upon jurisdiction the parties may be arranged according to their real interests, and that, if the railroad company is an indispensable party, the decision below was right. But they urge that it is alleged that the railroad is insolvent, that no relief is asked against it, but it is left free to pay the judgment if it desires to and can, and that the real parties in interest are the plaintiffs, and especially Steele, upon whom, it is said, the burden ultimately must fall. These arguments do not seem to us to need an extended answer. With regard to the alleged insolvency, it is a strange proposition that a defendant is not an indispensable party to an attempt to stop the collection of a judgment against him because, at the moment, his property is not sufficient to pay his debts. The railroad was sole master of the litigation against itself, and we must assume is co-operating with the plaintiff in the present case. It seems to us equally strange to suggest that a contract of a stranger with a stranger can affect the interest of the party immediately concerned. The omission of any prayer for relief against the railroad simply shows that properly it is to be treated as a plaintiff in this case. Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 180, 181, 49 L. ed. 713, 715, 716, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420.

30] *It is suggested that the controversy as to the judgment against the security company is separable, and that relief may be given against that, at least, without the presence of the railroad. But the only ground on which that judgment is complained of is that that against the railroad, upon which it is based, was obtained by perjury and fraud. So long as the judgment against the railroad stands, that against its surety cannot be impeached. By its bond the surety undertook to pay the judgment, if rendered, against its principal, whether right or wrong. If the principal remains liable under that judgment, the surety is bound to pay. Krall v. Libbey, 53 Wis. 292, 10 N. W. 386; Piercy v. Piercy, 36 N. C. (1 Ired. Eq.) 214, 218. But the principal cannot be relieved by a proceeding behind its back.

There is a further allegation in the bill that, pending the proceeding, Culver, the plaintiff in the original suits, was adjudged a spendthrift, and that a guardian was appointed, but was not substituted for Culver in these suits. A hope is expressed that, if the case proceed to oral argument, some reason may occur for attributing more importance to these facts than is disclosed at present. But that is an illusion. The bill, as we have said, is founded solely on allegations of fraud in getting the first judgment, and must be maintained upon them, if upon any. The railroad company is an indispensable party if that issue is to be tried. It is unnecessary to consider other objections to the suit.

This court has jurisdiction to declare the circuit court's denial of its own jurisdiction correct. But we regard the decision of the circuit court as so plainly right that the appeal should be dismissed as frivolous.

Appeal dismissed.

*PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK EX REL. AUGUST SILZ, Plff. in Err.,

v.

HENRY HESTERBERG, Sheriff of the County of Kings.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 31-44.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — police power — game law.

1. The prohibition against the possession of game out of season, which is made by N. Y. Laws 1900, chap. 20, is a proper exercise of the police power, and does not deny the due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., although such game may have been taken in foreign countries during the open season there.

[For other cases, see Game Laws, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — game law.

2. Foreign commerce is not unconstitutionally regulated by the provisions of N. Y. Laws 1900, chap. 20, under which the possession of game within the state during the closed season—except upon giving the bond provided by the statute against its sale—is forbidden, although the game may have been lawfully taken in foreign countries during the open season there.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 189, 190, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 206.]

Argued October 19, 1908. Decided November 2, 1908.

NOTE.—Game laws as affecting imported game.

NEW YORK EX REL. SILZ V. HESTERBERG negatives the suggested invalidity, under the Federal Constitution, of state statutes prescribing a close season for game, and prohibiting its possession during the close season. And this, too, without reference to the so-called Lacey act of Congress of May 25, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 187, chap. 553, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 290), which would seem to put at rest all question as to the

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the County of Kings to review a judgment entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which had reversed the judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Second Department, reversing a judgment of the Supreme Court, quashing a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention for the alleged possession of game within the state during the closed season. Affirmed.

See same case below in Appellate Division, 109 App. Div. 295, 96 N. Y. Supp. 286; in Court of Appeals, 184 N. Y. 126, 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 163, 76 N. E. 1032, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 353.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John Burlinson Coleman and Edward R. Finch argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The possessor of property is entitled to its beneficial use and free enjoyment, and such use and enjoyment of property cannot be directly or indirectly affected except by due process of law.

Forster v. Scott, 136 N. Y. 584, 18 L.R.A. 543, 32 N. E. 976.

Is it a fair, reasonable, and proper exercise of the police power of the state for it to prohibit the possession of a sound, wholesome, and inherently harmless article of food, such as was the imported game in this case, and to make such possession a crime and subject to heavy penalties?

Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 236, 49 L. ed. 169, 175, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 137, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Holden v.

Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 398, 42 L. ed. 780, 793, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 558, 46 L. ed. 679, 689, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1133.

The exclusion of foreign game in no way tends to the preservation of domestic game.

Guyer v. The Queen, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 106; Territory v. Evans, 2 Idaho, 658, 7 L.R.A. 288, 23 Pac. 115; State v. Saunders, 19 Kan. 127, 27 Am. Rep. 98; Com. v. Wilkinson, 139 Pa. 304, 21 Atl. 14; Com. v. Hall, 128 Mass. 410, 35 Am. Rep. 387; People v. O'Neil, 71 Mich. 325, 39 N. W. 1; Re Davenport, 102 Fed. 540; People v. Buffalo Fish Co. 164 N. Y. 93, 52 L.R.A. 803, 79 Am. St. Rep. 622, 58 N. E. 34; Com. v. Paul, 148 Pa. 562, 24 Atl. 78; Allen v. Young, 76 Me. 80; State v. Bucknam, 88 Me. 392, 51 Am. St. Rep. 406, 34 Atl. 170; Dickhaut v. State, 85 Md. 451, 36 L.R.A. 765, 60 Am. St. Rep. 332, 37 Atl. 21; Davis v. McNair (1885; Canada) 7 Crim. L. Mag. 213, 21 Cent. L. J. 480; State v. McGuire, 24 Or. 306, 21 L.R.A. 478, 33 Pac. 666.

The provisions of the forest, fish, and game law are unconstitutional in that they unjustifiably restrict and interfere with foreign commerce.

Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S.

validity of such statutes so far as interference with interstate commerce is concerned.

The authorities are practically unanimous in upholding statutes of this character as against the objections that they deny due process of law, or infringe the commerce clause.

Ex parte Maier, 103 Cal. 476, 42 Am. St. Rep. 129, 37 Pac. 402; Magner v. People, 97 Ill. 320; Merritt v. People, 169 Ill. 218, 48 N. E. 325; Re Schwartz, 119 La. 290, 121 Am. St. Rep. 516, 44 So. 20; People v. Lassen, 142 Mich. 597, 106 N. W. 143; People v. O'Neil, 110 Mich. 324, 33 L.R.A. 696, 68 N. W. 227; People v. Dornbos, 127 Mich. 136, 86 N. W. 529; Stevens v. State, 89 Md. 671, 43 Atl. 929; State v. Shattuck, 96 Minn. 45, 104 N. W. 719, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 934; State v. Randolph, 1 Mo. App. 15; State v. Judy, 7 Mo. App. 524; State v. Farrell, 23 Mo. App. 176; Phelps v. Racey, 60 N. Y. 10, 19 Am. Rep. 140; People v. Bootman, 180 N. Y. 1, 72 N. E. 505, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 226; People v. Gerger, 92 Hun. 554, 36 N. Y. Supp. 720; People v. Waldorf-Astoria Hotel Co. 118 App. Div.

723, 103 N. Y. Supp. 434; Roth v. State, 51 Ohio St. 209, 46 Am. St. Rep. 566, 37 N. E. 259; State v. Schuman, 36 Or. 16, 47 L.R.A. 154, 78 Am. St. Rep. 754, 58 Pac. 661; Re Deininger, 108 Fed. 623. Contra, Re Davenport, 102 Fed. 544.

Of course, no question under the commerce clause could arise under statutes of this character unless construed to apply to game brought in from outside. They are frequently so construed. Javins v. United States, 11 App. D. C. 345; Com. v. Savage, 155 Mass. 278, 29 N. E. 468; People v. Dorbos and People v. Gerber, supra; Whitehead v. Smithers, L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 553.

But some courts have adopted the opposite construction. Dickhaut v. State, 85 Md. 451, 36 L.R.A. 765, 60 Am. St. Rep. 332, 37 Atl. 21; State v. Bucknam, 88 Me. 385, 51 Am. St. Rep. 406, 34 Atl. 170; Com. v. Hall, 128 Mass. 410, 35 Am. Rep. 387; People v. O'Neil, 71 Mich. 325, 39 N. W. 1; Com. v. Wilkinson, 139 Pa. 298, 21 Atl. 14.

See also case note to People ex rel. Hill v. Hesterberg, 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 163.

545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674.

If a statute purporting to have been enacted to protect the public health, public morals, or the public safety has no real or substantial relation to those objects, it is the duty of the court to so adjudge and thereby give effect to the Constitution.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Dobbins v. Los Angeles; Lawton v. Steele; Holden v. Hardy; and Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co.,—supra; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 53, 49 L. ed. 937, 940, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1133; Tiedeman, Pol. Power, p. 4.

The so-called police power which attempts to penalize possession upon arrival of that which it is lawful to import from a foreign country, is, per se, a power of exclusion. Possession is a necessary incident to the right of importation and to the title of the property imported. Possession by the importer is the necessary and intended consequence of the right of importation. It would as effectually destroy the privilege of importation to make the intended consequence thereof unlawful as to prohibit the importation itself.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 442, 6 L. ed. 678, 686.

Is it within the police power of the state to prohibit the introduction within the state of a wholesome article of food merely from the difficulty the state encounters in enforcing a law to prevent the taking of its game out of season?

Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

It is not within the police power of the state to pass a statute wholly excluding a pure, wholesome, and inherently harmless article of food merely from the danger of confusing such an article with an adulterated, harmful article, or from the difficulty of enforcing its inspection laws.

Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 41 L. ed. 632, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527.

Mr. James A. Donnelly argued the cause, and, with Mr. William Schuyler Jackson, filed a brief for defendant in error:

From very early times the property which an individual might acquire in wild animals or game of any description has been qualified by the superior right of the state to restrict its use and possession. The question of individual ownership has always been one of public policy, and not of private right. Thus, in the feudal as well as the ancient law of the continent of Europe, in all countries the right to acquire animals feræ naturæ by possession was recognized as being subject to the governmental authority and under its power, not only as a matter of regulation, but also by absolute control (Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 523, 40 L. ed. 794, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600). In England the ownership of game is vested in the sovereign power, and the right to take certain game may not only be restricted to a particular class of animals or birds, but may be granted to particular persons only as a license (2 Bl. Com. 394, 410; Magner v. People, 97 Ill. 333). In the United States the ownership of game is in the people of the state,—the repository of sovereign authority,—and no person has any private right to be affected. To hunt and kill game is a privilege granted by the state. The ownership of game is held by the sovereign authority in trust for all the people in the state (Magner v. People, supra).

Each state has the right to enact such laws for the protection of its game as to it shall seem best for the accomplishment of that purpose, even though, in attempting to effect that result, the state prohibits its importation.

People v. Bootman, 180 N. Y. 1, 72 N. E. 505, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 226; People v. O'Neil, 110 Mich. 324, 33 L.R.A. 696, 68 N. W. 227; State v. Randolph, 1 Mo. App. 15; State v. Judy, 7 Mo. App. 525; Stevens v. State, 89 Md. 669, 43 Atl. 929; State v. Schuman, 36 Or. 16, 47 L.R.A. 153, 78 Am. St. Rep. 754, 58 Pac. 661; Ex parte Maier, 103 Cal. 479, 42 Am. St. Rep. 129, 37 Pac. 402; Magner v. People, 97 Ill. 331; Merritt v. People, 169 Ill. 218, 48 N. E. 325; Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 40 L. ed. 793, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600.

The English law is based upon principles similar to those enunciated in the foregoing cases.

Whitehead v. Smithers, L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 553.

In the state of New York, legislation of a similar character was upheld years before the passage by Congress of the act known as the Lacey act.

Phelps v. Racey, 60 N. Y. 10, 19 Am. Rep. 140.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes to this court because of the alleged invalidity, under the Constitution of the United States, of certain sections of the game laws of the state of New York. *Section 106 of chapter 20 of the Laws of 1900 of the state of New York provides:

"Grouse and quail shall not be taken from January 1st to October 31st, both inclusive. Woodcock shall not be taken from January 1st to July 31st, both inclusive. Such birds shall not be possessed in their closed season except in the city of New York, where they may be possessed during the open season in the state at large."

Section 25 of the law provides:

"The close season for grouse shall be from December 1st to September 15th, both inclusive." As amended by § 2, chapter 317, Laws of 1902.

Section 140 of the law provides:

"1. 'Grouse' includes ruffed grouse, partridge, and every member of the grouse family."

Section 108 of the law provides:

"Plover, curlew, jacksnipe, Wilsons, commonly known as English snipe, yellow legs, killdeer, willett snipe, dowitcher, short-necks, rail, sandpiper, bay snipe, surf snipe, winter snipe, ringnecks, and oxeys shall not be taken or possessed from January 1st to July 15th, both inclusive." As amended by § 2, chapter 588, Laws 1904.

Section 141 of the law provides:

"Wherever in this act the possession of fish or game, or the flesh of any animal, bird, or fish is prohibited, reference is had equally to such fish, game, or flesh coming from without the state as to that taken within the state: Provided, nevertheless, That, if there be any open season therefor, any dealer therein, if he has given the bond herein provided for, may hold during the close season such part of his stock as he has on hand undisposed of at the opening of such close season. Said bond shall be to the people of the state, conditioned that such dealer will not, during the close season ensuing, sell, use, give away, or otherwise dispose of any fish, game, or the flesh of any animal, bird, or fish which he is permitted to possess during the close season by this 37]section; that he *will not, in any way, during the time said bond is in force, violate any provision of the forest, fish, and game law; the bond may also contain such other provisions as to the inspection of the fish and game possessed as the commission shall require, and shall be subject to the approval of the commission as to amount and form thereof, and the sufficiency of sureties. But no presumption that the possession of fish or game or the flesh of any animal, bird, or fish is lawfully possessed under the provisions of this section shall arise until it affirmatively appears that the provisions thereof have been complied with." Added by chapter 194, Laws of 1902.

Section 119 of the law makes a violation of its provisions a misdemeanor, and subjects the offending parties to a fine.

The relator, a dealer in imported game, was arrested for unlawfully having in his possession, on the 30th of March, 1905, being within the closed season, in the borough of Brooklyn, city of New York, one dead body of a bird known as the golden plover, and one dead body of an imported grouse, known in England as blackcock, and taken in Russia. The relator filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus to be relieved from arrest, and, upon hearing before a justice of the supreme court of the state of New York, the writ was dismissed, and the relator remanded to the custody of the sheriff. Upon appeal to the appellate division of the supreme court of the state of New York this order was reversed and the relator discharged from custody. The judgment of the appellate division was reversed in the court of appeals of the state of New York. 184 N. Y. 126, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 163, 76 N. E. 1032. Upon remittitur to the supreme court of the state of New York from the court of appeals the final order and judgment of the court of appeals was made the final order and judgment of the supreme court, and a writ of error brings the case here for review.

The alleged errors relied upon by the plaintiff in error for reversal of the judgment below are: First, that the provisions of the game law in question are contrary to the 14th *Amendment of the Constitution[38 of the United States, in that they deprive the relator, and others similarly situated, of their liberty and property without due process of law. Second, that the provisions of the law contravene the Constitution of the United States, in that they are an unjustifiable interference with and regulation of interstate and foreign commerce, placed under the exclusive control of Congress by § 8, article 1, of the Federal Constitution. Third, that the court below erred in construing the act of Congress, commonly known as the Lacey act, which relates to the transportation in interstate commerce of game killed in violation of local laws. 31 Stat. at L. chap. 553, p. 187, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 290.

The complaint discloses that the relator, August Silz, a dealer in imported game, had in his possession in the city of New York one imported golden plover, lawfully taken, killed, and captured in England during the open season for such game birds there, and thereafter sold and consigned to Silz in the city of New York by a dealer in game in the city of London. He likewise had in his possession the body of one imported black-cock, a member of the grouse family, which was lawfully taken, killed, and captured in Russia during the open season for such game there, and thereafter sold and consigned to Silz in New York city by the same dealer in London. Such birds were imported by Silz, in accordance with the provisions of the tariff laws and regulations in force, during the open season for grouse and plover in New York. Such imported golden plover and imported blackcock are different varieties of game birds from birds known as plover and grouse in the state of New York; they are different in form, size, color, and markings from the game bird known as plover and grouse in the state of New York, and can be readily distinguished from the plover and grouse found in that state. And this is true when they are cooked and ready for the table. The birds were sound, wholesome, and valuable articles of food, and recognized as articles of commerce in 39]*different countries of Europe and in the United States. These statements of the complaint are the most favorable possible to the relator, and gave rise to the comment in the opinion of the court of appeals that the case was possibly collusive. That court, nevertheless, proceeded to consider the case on the facts submitted, and a similar course will be pursued here. While the birds mentioned, imported from abroad, may be distinguished from native birds, they are nevertheless of the families within the terms of the statute, and possession of which, during the closed season, is prohibited.

As to the first contention, that the laws in question are void within the meaning of the 14th Amendment because they do not constitute due process of law. The acts in question were passed in the exercise of the police power of the state, with a view to protect the game supply for the use of the inhabitants of the state. It is not disputed that this is a well-recognized and often-exerted power of the state, and necessary to the protection of the supply of game which would otherwise be rapidly depleted, and which, in spite of laws passed for its protection, is rapidly disappearing from many portions of the country.

But it is contended that while the protection of the game supply is within the well-settled boundaries of the police power of a state, that the law in question is an unreasonable and arbitrary exercise of that power. That the legislature of the state is not the final judge of the limitations of the police power, and that such enactments are subject to the scrutiny of the courts, and will be set aside when found to be unwarranted and arbitrary interferences with rights protected by the Constitution in carrying on a lawful business or making contracts for the use and enjoyment of property, is well settled by former decisions of this court. Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 236, 49 L. ed. 175, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

It is contended, in this connection, that the protection of the game of the state does not require that a penalty be imposed *for[40 the possession out of season of imported game of the kind held by the relator. It is insisted that a method of inspection can be established which will distinguish the imported game from that of the domestic variety, and prevent confusion in its handling and selling. That such game can be distinguished from domestic game has been disclosed in the record in this case, and it may be that such inspection laws would be all that would be required for the protection of domestic game. But, subject to constitutional limitations, the legislature of the state is authorized to pass measures for the protection of the people of the state in the exercise of the police power, and is itself the judge of the necessity or expediency of the means adopted. In order to protect local game during the closed season it has been found expedient to make possession of all such game during that time, whether taken within or without the state, a misdemeanor. In other states of the Union such laws have been deemed essential, and have been sustained by the courts. Roth v. State, 51 Ohio St. 209, 46 Am. St. Rep. 566, 37 N. E. 259; Ex parte Maier, 103 Cal. 476, 42 Am. St. Rep. 129, 37 Pac. 402; Stevens v. State, 89 Md. 669, 43 Atl. 929; Magner v. People, 97 Ill. 320. It has been provided that the possession of certain kinds of game during the closed season shall be prohibited, owing to the possibility that dealers in game may sell birds of the domestic kind, under the claim that they were taken in another state or country. The object of such laws is not to affect the legality of the taking of game in other states, but to protect the local game, in the interest of the food supply of the people of the state. We cannot say that such purpose, frequently recognized and acted upon, is an abuse of the police power of the state, and, as such, to be declared void because contrary to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution.

It is next contended that the law is an attempt to unlawfully regulate foreign commerce, which, by the Constitution of the United States, is placed wholly within the control of the Federal Congress. That a state may not pass laws directly regulating 41]*foreign, or interstate commerce has frequently been held in the decisions of this court. But, while this is true, it has also been held in repeated instances that laws passed by the states in the exertion of their police power, not in conflict with laws of Congress upon the same subject, and indirectly or remotely affecting interstate commerce, are nevertheless valid laws. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 48 L. ed. 268, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 778, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

In the case of Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 40 L. ed. 793, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600, the plaintiff in error was convicted for having in his possession game birds killed within the state, with the intent to procure transportation of the same beyond the state limits. It was contended that this statute was a direct attempt by the state to regulate commerce between the states. It was held that the game of the state was peculiarly subject to the power of the state, which might control its ownership for the common benefit of the people, and that it was within the power of the state to prohibit the transportation of game killed within its limits beyond the state, such authority being embraced in the right of the state to confine the use of such game to the people of the state. After a discussion of the peculiar nature of such property, and the power of the state over it, Mr. Justice White, who delivered the opinion of the court in that case, said:

"Aside from the authority of the state, derived from the common ownership of game and the trust for the benefit of its people which the state exercises in relation thereto, there is another view of the power of the state in regard to the property in game, which is equally conclusive. The right to preserve game flows from the undoubted existence in the state of a police power to that end, which may be none the less efficiently called into play because by doing so interstate commerce may be remotely and indirectly affected. Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 103, 23 L. ed. 819, 820; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23. Indeed, the source of the police power as to game birds *(like those covered by the statute here called in question) flows from the duty of the state to preserve for its people a valuable food supply. Phelps v. Racey, 60 N. Y. 10, 19 Am. Rep. 140; Ex parte Maier and Magner v. People, ubi supra, and the cases there cited. The exercise by the state of such power therefore comes directly within the principle of Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 473, 39 L. ed. 223, 227, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. The power of a state to protect, by adequate police regulation, its people against the adulteration of articles of food (which was, in that case, maintained), although, in doing so, commerce might be remotely affected, necessarily carries with it the existence of a like power to preserve a food supply which belongs in common to all the people of the state, which can only become the subject of ownership in a qualified way, and which can never be the object of commerce except with the consent of the state, and subject to the conditions which it may deem best to impose for the public good."

In the case of Plumley v. Massachusetts, referred to in the opinion just cited, it was held that a law of the state of Massachusetts which prevented the sale of oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter was a legal exertion of police power on the part of the state, although oleomargarine was a wholesome article of food, transported from another state; and this upon the principle that the Constitution did not intend, in conferring upon Congress an exclusive power to regulate interstate commerce, to take from the states the right to make reasonable laws concerning the health, life, and safety of their citizens, although such legislation might indirectly affect foreign or interstate commerce; and the general statement in Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819, was quoted with approval:

"And it may be said generally, that the legislation of a state, not directed against commerce or any of its regulations, but relating to the rights, duties, and liabilities of citizens, and only indirectly and remotely affecting the operations of commerce, is of obligatory force upon citizens within its territorial jurisdiction, whether on land or water, *or engaged in commerce, foreign[43 or interstate, or in any other pursuit."

It is true that in the case of Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757, it was held that a state law directly prohibiting the introduction in interstate commerce of a healthful commodity for the purpose of thereby preventing the traffic in adulterated and injurious articles within the state was not a legitimate exercise of the police power. But, in that case, there was a direct, and, it was held, unlawful, interference with interstate commerce as such. In the case at bar the interference with foreign commerce is only incidental, and not the direct purpose of the enactment for the protection of the food supply and the domestic game of the state.

It is provided in the New York statutes that game shall be taken only during certain seasons of the year; and to make this provision effectual it is further provided that the prohibited game shall not be possessed within the state during such times; and, owing to the likelihood of fraud and deceit in the handling of such game, the possession of game of the classes named is likewise prohibited, whether it is killed within or without the state. Such game may be legally imported during the open season, and held and possessed within the state of New York. It may be legally held in the closed season upon giving bond, as provided by the statute against its sale. Incidentally, these provisions may affect the right of one importing game to hold and dispose of it in the closed season, but the effect is only incidental. The purpose of the law is not to regulate interstate commerce, but, by laws alike applicable to foreign and domestic game, to protect the people of the state in the right to use and enjoy the game of the state.

The New York court of appeals further held that the so-called Lacey act (31 Stat. at L. 187, chap. 553, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 290) relieved the regulation of the objection in question because of the consent 44] of Congress to *the passage of such laws concerning such commerce, interstate and foreign, within the principles upon which the Wilson act was sustained by this court. Re Rahrer (Wilkinson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865.

In the aspect in which the game law of New York is now before this court we think it was a valid exertion of the police power, independent of any authorization thereof by the Lacey act, and we shall therefore not stop to examine the provisions of that act. For the reasons stated, we think the legislature, in the particulars in which the statute is here complained of, did not exceed the police power of the state, nor run counter to the protection afforded the citizens of the state by the Constitution of the United States.

Judgment affirmed.

45] *BEREA COLLEGE, Plff. in Err.,
v.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 45-70.)

Statutes — invalid in part.

1. The validity of Kentucky Acts 1904, chap. 85, so far as it prohibits domestic corporations from teaching white and negro pupils in the same institution, cannot be deemed affected by its possible invalidity under the Federal Constitution as to individuals, where the highest state court considers the act separable, and, while sustaining it as an entirety, gives an independent reason which applies only to corporations.
53 L. ed.

[For other cases, see Statutes, 61-88, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — separating white and negro pupils.

2. The prohibition against teaching white and negro pupils in the same institution, which is made by Kentucky Acts 1904, chap. 85, does not, when applied to a corporation as to which the state has reserved the power to alter, amend, or repeal its charter, deny due process of law, or otherwise violate the Federal Constitution.

[Exercise of reserved power to alter or repeal charter, see Constitutional Law, 1386-1412, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 12.]

Argued April 10, 13, 1908. Decided November 9, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of a corporation in the Circuit Court of Madison County, in that state, of the offense of teaching white and negro pupils in the same institution. Affirmed.

See same case below, 123 Ky. 209, 94 S. W. 623.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On October 8, 1904, the grand jury of Madison county, Kentucky, presented in the circuit court of that county an indictment charging:

"The said Berea College, being a corporation duly incorporated under the laws of the state of Kentucky, and owning, maintaining, and operating a college, school, and institution of learning, known as 'Berea College,' located in the town of Berea, Madison county, Kentucky, did unlawfully and wilfully permit and receive both the white and negro races as pupils for instruction in said college, school, and institution of learning."

This indictment was found under an act of March 22, 1904 (Ky. Acts 1904, chap. 85, p. 181), whose 1st section reads:

"Sec. 1. That it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation, or association of persons to maintain or operate any college, school, or institution where persons of the white and negro races are both received as pupils for instruction, and any person or corporation who shall operate or maintain any such college, school, or institution shall be fined $1,000, and any person or corporation who may be convicted of violating the provisions of this act shall be fined $100 for each day they may operate said school, college, or institution after such conviction."

NOTE.—On statute part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & Drivers' Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

On constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to constitutional equality of school privileges—see note to Cumming v. County Board of Education, 44 L. ed. U. S. 262.

On a trial the defendant was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000. This judgment was, on June 12, 1906, affirmed by the court of appeals of the state (123 Ky. 209, 94 S. W. 623), and from that court brought here on writ of error.

Messrs. Guy Ward Mallon and John G. Carlisle argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The constitutionality of each and every provision of the act, all being intended to accomplish one purpose, and all having a direct bearing on the rights and interests of the plaintiff in error, must be inquired into by the court; and, if any one of them is unconstitutional, the entire act is invalid.

Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912.

The right of the citizen to choose and follow an innocent occupation is both a personal and a property right.

Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 321, 18 L. ed. 362.

The right to follow any lawful pursuit is one of the inalienable rights of a citizen of the United States.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 591, 41 L. ed. 836, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Schnaier v. Navarre Hotel & Importation Co. 182 N. Y. 83, 70 L.R.A. 722, 108 Am. St. Rep. 790, 74 N. E. 561; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Yick Wo. v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 188, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 52 Am. Rep. 34, 2 N. E. 29; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1133.

The privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States include protection by the government, the enjoyment of life and liberty, with the right to acquire and possess property of every kind, and to pursue and obtain happiness and safety, subject, nevertheless, to such restraints as the government may prescribe for the general good of the whole.

Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 3,230; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 588, 589, 44 L. ed. 600, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494.

Speaking of the restraints which legislatures may constitutionally impose upon the people for the general good, the court said, in the case of Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 661, 31 L. ed. 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273: "It does not at all follow that every statute enacted ostensibly for the promotion of these ends is to be accepted as a legitimate exertion of the police powers of the state. There are, of necessity, limits beyond which legislation cannot rightfully go."

The subject to which the legislation relates may be clearly within the scope of the police power, and yet the enactment may be so unreasonable, unnecessary, or inappropriate for the accomplishment of the purpose ostensibly designed, that the courts, in the discharge of their duty to protect personal and property rights, will be bound to hold it null and void.

Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Eden v. People, 161 Ill. 296, 32 L.R.A. 659, 52 Am. St. Rep. 365, 43 N. E. 1108.

The legislature may not, under the guise of protecting the public interests, arbitrarily interfere with private business, or impose unusual and unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations. In other words, its determination as to what is a proper exercise of its police powers is not final or conclusive, but is subject to the supervision of the courts.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499.

When a health law is challenged in the courts as unconstitutional, on the ground that it arbitrarily interferes with personal liberty and private property without due process of law, the court must be able to see that it has at least in fact some relation to the public health, that the public health is the end actually aimed at, and that it is appropriate and adequate to that end.

Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 115, 50 Am. Rep. 636.

One may be deprived of his liberty in a constitutional sense without putting his person in confinement.

Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 515, 30 Am. Rep. 323.

The constitutional guaranty that no person shall be deprived of his property without due process of law may be violated without the physical taking of property for public or private use.

Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 99, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Cooley, Const. Lim. § 393.

The common business and dealings of life, the ordinary trades and pursuits which are innocuous in themselves, and have been followed in all communities from time immemorial, must therefore be free in this country to all alike, upon the same conditions. The right to pursue them without let or hindrance, except that which is applied to all persons of the same age, sex, and condition, is a distinguishing privilege of citizens of the United States, and an essential element of that freedom which they claim as their birthright.

Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 756, 28 L. ed. 590, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; 1 Smith, Wealth of Nations, chap. 10.

In every case that comes before this court where legislation of this character is concerned and where the protection of the Federal Constitution is sought, the question necessarily arises: Is this a fair, reasonable, and appropriate exercise of the police power of the state, or is it an unreasonable, unnecessary, and arbitrary interference with the right of the individual to his personal liberty or to enter into those contracts in relation to labor which may seem to him appropriate or necessary for the support of himself and his family?

Lochner v. New York, supra.

While the 14th Amendment may not limit the subjects upon which the police power of a state may be exercised, so long as there is no discrimination on account of race or color, yet, in the exercise of that power, the state cannot disregard the limitations which the Amendment imposes.

Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 339, 347, 25 L. ed. 676, 679; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27-31, 28 L. ed. 923-925, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

There is no doubt that the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments to the Constitution of the United States were adopted for the protection of the colored race, or that their primary purpose was to establish absolute civil equality,—that is, to place the colored race, in respect to civil rights, upon the same basis as the white race.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303, 25 L. ed. 664; Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 25 L. ed. 667; Bush v. Kentucky, 107 U. S. 110, 27 L. ed. 354, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

But the effect of the 14th Amendment, as has been repeatedly decided, is not only to secure equal civil rights to the colored race, but to protect the white race also in the unmolested enjoyment of all its rights of person and property.

Education in private schools is not a matter of public or state control.

State ex rel. Clark v. Maryland Institute, 87 Md. 643, 41 Atl. 126.

53 L. ed.

The court below appeared to think the validity of this act might be sustained upon the ground that it was an amendment or repeal of the charter of the college, and referred to Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427. We do not see that the case cited has any bearing upon this question, as the trustees did not acquire the right to maintain the school by any grant from the state. That right constitutes no part of the franchise of this voluntary corporation. It is a right which belongs to every free citizen. The absolute repeal of the charter would not have prevented the trustees, as individuals, from continuing the school. The only franchise the association acquired by the charter was the right to be a corporate body and to conduct its business as such; and the only effect of a repeal would have been to dissolve the corporation, leaving the trustees and those associated with them entirely free to maintain and operate the school as it had been conducted for nearly half a century.

The right of a teacher to earn a livelihood by teaching, and the right of a person to attend school and to obtain an education, are fundamental rights of all citizens, whether citizens of the state in which the school is situated, or of other states.

Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 889; Cooley, Torts, p. 286.

The liberty mentioned in the 14th Amendment means not only the right of the citizen to be free from the mere physical restraint of his person as by incarceration, but the term is deemed to embrace the right of the citizen to be free in the enjoyment of all his faculties; to be free to use them in all lawful ways; to live and work where he will; to earn his livelihood by any lawful calling; to pursue any livelihood or avocation; and, for that purpose, to enter into all contracts which may be proper, necessary, and essential to his carrying out to a successful conclusion the purposes above mentioned.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 579, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746-762, 28 L. ed. 585-588, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678-684, 32 L. ed. 253-256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257.

A college founded by an individual or individuals is a private charity, subject to the government and visitation of the founder, and not to the unlimited control of the government.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 665, 4 L. ed. 666.

Mr. N. B. Hays argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James Breathitt, Thomas B.

McGregor, and Charles H. Morris, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The state has not surrendered its sovereign power of legislation for the general welfare by constitutional guaranties of individual liberty.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 704; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Hart, 40 La. 474, 8 Am. St. Rep. 544, 4 So. 215; Lake View v. Rose Hill Cemetery Co. 70 Ill. 192, 22 Am. Rep. 71; 1 Hare, Am. Const. Law, p. 766; Tiedeman, Pol. Power, p. 212; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 580, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; State v. Holden (Holden v. Hardy) 14 Utah, 71, 37 L.R.A. 103, 46 Pac. 756; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 85; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 937.

Laws prohibiting intermarriage between the two races, in force not only in the commonwealth of Kentucky, but in many of the states, have been held to be a reasonable and valid exercise of the police power of the state, and do not abridge any right or privilege secured by the 14th Amendment to either of the races.

Re Hobbs, 1 Woods, 537, Fed. Cas. No. 6,550; State v. Gibson, 36 Ind. 402, 10 Am. Rep. 42; State v. Jackson, 80 Mo. 177, 50 Am. Rep. 499; State v. Hairston, 63 N. C. 453; Green v. State, 58 Ala. 190, 29 Am. Rep. 742; Brook v. Brook, 9 H. L. Cas. 193; Fraser v. State, 3 Tex. App. 263, 30 Am. Rep. 131; Lonas v. State, 3 Heisk. 302.

Laws of several states, as well as Kentucky, prohibit the two races from attending the same public school, and provide separate public schools for the two races. These laws have been held to be a reasonable and valid exercise of the police power of such states, and not to abridge any right or privilege granted by the 14th Amendment to either of the races.

Lehew v. Brummell, 103 Mo. 551, 11 L.R.A. 828, 23 Am. St. Rep. 895, 15 S. W. 765; Cory v. Carter, 48 Ind. 362, 17 Am. Rep. 738; Martin v. Board of Education, 42 W. Va. 515, 26 S. E. 348; State ex rel. Ganes v. McCann, 21 Ohio St. 210; People ex rel. Ciseo v. School Board, 161 N. Y. 598, 48 L.R.A. 113, 56 N. E. 81; Bertonneau v. City Schools, 3 Woods, 180, Fed. Cas. No. 1,361.

The laws of several states, including Kentucky, require common carriers to provide separate cars or coaches for the white and colored persons who travel over their lines. These laws have been upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States as a reasonable and valid exercise of the police power, and not to abridge any immunity or privilege secured by the 14th Amendment to either of the races.

West Chester & P. R. Co. v. Miles, 55 Pa. 209, 93 Am. Dec. 747; Smith v. State, 100 Tenn. 494, 41 L.R.A. 432, 46 S. W. 566; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 179 U. S. 392, 45 L. ed. 247, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101.

The legislature of Kentucky is vested with a large discretion, and is at liberty to act for the preservation of the public peace and general welfare. The political rights of the two races may be equal without being identical. The conditions of this statute apply equally to both races.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 678, 31 L. ed. 216, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714.

The legislature of Kentucky was and is vested with the power and jurisdiction to say whether or not the association of the white and colored children of the state, and in one and the same school, at the same time, is detrimental to the peace, morals, and welfare of the state.

Neither the Federal Constitution nor the 14th Amendment thereto has taken this right away from the state of Kentucky.

Mugler v. Kansas, supra; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461-479, 39 L. ed. 223-230, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

Classification for the purpose of education is not special legislation.

Lehew v. Brummell; Cory v. Carter; State ex rel. Ganes v. McCann; Re Hobbs; and Brook v. Brook,—supra.

Such a classification was within the power of the state legislature unless it was unreasonably and arbitrarily made.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 290, 42 L. ed. 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

The privileges and immunities belonging to the citizens of the states, as such, rest for their security and protection where they have heretofore rested, with the states themselves.

Cory v. Carter, supra.

Every regulation of a property right has been before the courts of the country in recent years for adjudication. All property in the commonwealth and every property right is held subject to those general regulations which are necessary to promote the common good and general welfare.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 830; Powers

v. Com. 110 Ky. 387, 53 L.R.A. 245, 61 S. W. 735; Dunn v. Com. 105 Ky. 834, 43 L.R.A. 701, 88 Am. St. Rep. 344, 49 S. W. 813; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 41 L. ed. 1065, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. ed. 323, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

There is no dispute as to the facts. That the act does not violate the Constitution of Kentucky is settled by the decision of its highest court, and the single question for our consideration is whether it conflicts with the Federal Constitution. The court of appeals discussed at some length the general power of the state in respect to the separation of the two races. It also ruled that "the right to teach white and negro children in a private school at the same time and place is not a property right. Besides, appellant, as a corporation created by this state, has no natural right to teach at all. Its right to teach is such as the state sees fit to give to it. The state may withhold it altogether, or qualify it. Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427."

Upon this we remark that when a state court decides a case upon two grounds, one Federal and the other non-Federal, this court will not disturb the judgment if the non-Federal ground, fairly construed, sustains the decision. Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 636, 22 L. ed. 429, 444; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146-160, 48 L. ed. 655-658, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359; Allen v. Arguimbau, 198 U. S. 149, 49 L. ed. 990, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.

[54] *Again, the decision by a state court of the extent and limitation of the powers conferred by the state upon one of its own corporations is of a purely local nature. In creating a corporation a state may withhold powers which may be exercised by and cannot be denied to an individual. It is under no obligation to treat both alike. In granting corporate powers the legislature may deem that the best interests of the state would be subserved by some restriction, and the corporation may not plead that, in spite of the restriction, it has more or greater powers because the citizen has. "The granting of such right or privilege [the right or privilege to be a corporation] rests entirely in the discretion of the state, and, of course, when granted, may be accompanied with such conditions as its legislature may judge most befitting to its interests and policy." Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594-600, 33 L. ed. 1025-1029, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593, 595; Perrine v. Chesapeake & D. Canal Co. 9 How. 172-184, 13 L. ed. 92-97; Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305-312, 36 L. ed. 164-167, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403. The act of 1904 forbids "any person, corporation, or association of persons to maintain or operate any college," etc. Such a statute may conflict with the Federal Constitution in denying to individuals powers which they may rightfully exercise, and yet, at the same time, be valid as to a corporation created by the state.

It may be said that the court of appeals sustained the validity of this section of the statute, both against individuals and corporations. It ruled that the legislation was within the power of the state, and that the state might rightfully thus restrain all individuals, corporations, and associations. But it is unnecessary for us to consider anything more than the question of its validity as applied to corporations.

The statute is clearly separable, and may be valid as to one class while invalid as to another. Even if it were conceded that its assertion of power over individuals cannot be sustained, still it must be upheld so far as it restrains corporations.

There is no force in the suggestion that the statute, although *clearly sepa-[55] rable, must stand or fall as an entirety on the ground the legislature would not have enacted one part unless it could reach all. That the legislature of Kentucky desired to separate the teaching of white and colored children may be conceded; but it by no means follows that it would not have enforced the separation so far as it could do so, even though it could not make it effective under all circumstances. In other words, it is not at all unreasonable to believe that the legislature, although advised beforehand of the constitutional question, might have prohibited all organizations and corporations under its control from teaching white and colored children together, and thus made at least uniform official action. The rule of construction in questions of this nature is stated by Chief Justice Shaw in Warren v. Charlestown, 2 Gray, 84, quoted approvingly by this court in Allen v. Louisiana, 103 U. S. 80-84, 26 L. ed. 318, 319:

"But if they are so mutually connected with and dependent on each other, as conditions, considerations, or compensations for each other as to warrant a belief that the legislature intended them as a whole, and that, if all could not be carried into effect, the legislature would not pass the residue independently, and some parts are unconstitutional, all the provisions which are thus dependent, conditional, or connected, must fall with them."

See also Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 490, 45 L. ed. 280, 290, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, 181, in which this court said:

"As one section of a statute may be repugnant to the Constitution without rendering the whole act void, so one provision of a section may be invalid by reason of its not conforming to the Constitution, while all the other provisions may be subject to no constitutional infirmity. One part may stand, while another will fall, unless the two are so connected or dependent on each other in subject-matter, meaning, or purpose, that the good cannot remain without the bad. The point is not whether the parts are contained in the same section, for the distribution into sections is purely artificial; but 56] whether *they are essentially and inseparably connected in substance,—whether the provisions are so interdependent that one cannot operate without the other."

Further, inasmuch as the court of appeals considered the act separable, and, while sustaining it as an entirety, gave an independent reason which applies only to corporations, it is obvious that it recognized the force of the suggestions we have made. And when a state statute is so interpreted, this court should hesitate before it holds that the supreme court of the state did not know what was the thought of the legislature in its enactment. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 586, 43 L. ed. 1093, 1096, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 353, 44 L. ed. 192, 194, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136.

While the terms of the present charter are not given in the record, yet it was admitted on the trial that the defendant was a corporation organized and incorporated under the general statutes of the state of Kentucky, and of course the state courts, as well as this court on appeal, take judicial notice of those statutes. Further, in the brief of counsel for the defendant is given a history of the incorporation proceedings, together with the charters. From that it appears that Berea College was organized under the authority of an act for the incorporation of voluntary associations, approved March 9, 1854 (2 Stanton, Rev. Stat. [Ky.] 553), which act was amended by an act of March 10, 1856 (2 Id. 555), and which in terms reserved to the general assembly "the right to alter or repeal the charter of any associations formed under the provisions of this act, and the act to which this act is an amendment, at any time hereafter." After the Constitution of 1891 was adopted by the state of Kentucky, and on June 10, 1899, the college was reincorporated under the provisions of chap. 32, art. 8, Ky. Stat. (Carroll, Stat. [Ky.] 1903, p. 459), the charter defining its business in these words: "Its object is the education of all persons who may attend its institution of learning at Berea, and, in the language of the original articles, 'to promote the cause of Christ.'" The Constitution of 1891 *provided in § 3[57 of the Bill of Rights that "every grant of a franchise, privilege, or exemption shall remain, subject to revocation, alteration, or amendment." Carroll, Stat. (Ky.) 1903, p. 86. So that the full power of amendment was reserved to the legislature.

It is undoubtedly true that the reserved power to alter or amend is subject to some limitations, and that, under the guise of an amendment, a new contract may not always be enforceable upon the corporation or the stockholders; but it is settled "that a power reserved to the legislature to alter, amend, or repeal a charter authorizes it to make any alteration or amendment of a charter granted subject to it, which will not defeat or substantially impair the object of the grant, or any rights vested under it, and which the legislature may deem necessary to secure either that object or any public right. Inland Fisheries v. Holyoke Water Power Co. 104 Mass. 446, 451, 6 Am. Rep. 247; Holyoke Water Power Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 500, 522, 21 L. ed. 133, 140;" Close v. Glenwood Cemetery, 107 U. S. 466, 476, 27 L. ed. 408, 412, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267, 274.

Construing the statute, the court of appeals held that "if the same school taught the different races at different times, though at the same place, or at different times at the same place, it would not be unlawful." Now, an amendment to the original charter, which does not destroy the power of the college to furnish education to all persons, but which simply separates them by time or place of instruction, cannot be said to "defeat or substantially impair the object of the grant." The language of the statute is not in terms an amendment, yet its effect is an amendment, and it would be resting too much on mere form to hold that a statute which in effect works a change in the terms of the charter is not to be considered as an amendment, because not so designated. The act itself, being separable, is to be read as though it, in one section, prohibited any person, in another section any corporation, and, in a third, any association of persons to do the acts named. Reading the statute as containing a separate prohibition on all corporations, at least, all state corporations, *it substantially declares that any[58 authority given by previous charters to instruct the two races at the same time and in the same place is forbidden, and that prohibition, being a departure from the terms of the original charter in this case, may properly be adjudged an amendment.

Again, it is insisted that the court of appeals did not regard the legislation as making an amendment, because another prosecution instituted against the same corporation under the 4th section of the act, which makes it a misdemeanor to teach pupils of the two races in the same institution, even although one race is taught in one branch and another in another branch, provided the two branches are within 25 miles of each other, was held could not be sustained, the court saying: "This last section, we think, violates the limitations upon the police power: it is unreasonable and oppressive." But, while so ruling, it also held that this section could be ignored and that the remainder of the act was complete notwithstanding. Whether the reasoning of the court concerning the 4th section be satisfactory or not is immaterial, for no question of its validity is presented, and the court of appeals, while striking it down, sustained the balance of the act. We need concern ourselves only with the inquiry whether the 1st section can be upheld as coming within the power of a state over its own corporate creatures.

We are of opinion, for reasons stated, that it does come within that power, and, on this ground, the judgment of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Holmes and Mr. Justice Moody concur in the judgment.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

This prosecution arises under the 1st section of an act of the general assembly of Kentucky, approved March 22d, 1904. *The purpose and scope of the act is clearly indicated by its title. It is "An Act to Prohibit White and Colored Persons from Attending the Same School." Ky. Acts 1904, p. 181.

It is well to give here the entire statute, as follows:

"Sec. 1. That it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation, or association of persons to maintain or operate any college, school, or institution where persons of the white and negro races are both received as pupils for instruction; and any person or corporation who shall operate or maintain any such college, school, or institution shall be fined $1,000, and any person or corporation who may be convicted of violating the provisions of this act shall be fined $100 for each day they may operate said school, college, or institution after such conviction.

"Sec. 2. That any instructor who shall teach in any school, college, or institution where members of said two races are received as pupils for instruction shall be guilty of operating and maintaining same and fined as provided in the 1st section hereof.

"Sec. 3. It shall be unlawful for any white person to attend any school or institution where negroes are received as pupils or receive instruction, and it shall be unlawful for any negro or colored person to attend any school or institution where white persons are received as pupils or receive instruction. Any person so offending shall be fined $50 for each day he attends such institution or school: Provided, That the provisions of this law shall not apply to any penal institution or house of reform.

"Sec. 4. Nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent any private school, college, or institution of learning from maintaining a separate and distinct branch thereof, in a different locality, not less than 25 miles distant, for the education exclusively of one race or color.

"Sec. 5. This act shall not take effect, or be in operation, before the 15th day of July, 1904." Acts 1904, chap. 85, p. 181.

The plaintiff in error, Berea College, is an incorporation, organized under the General Laws of Kentucky in 1859. Its original articles of incorporation set forth that the object of *the founders was to establish and maintain an institution of learning, "in order to promote the cause of Christ." In 1899 new articles were adopted, which provided that the affairs of the corporation should be conducted by twenty-five persons.

In 1904 the college was charged in a Kentucky state court with having unlawfully and wilfully received both white and negro persons as pupils for instruction. A demurrer to the indictment was overruled, and a trial was had which resulted in a verdict of guilty and the imposition of a fine of $1,000 on the college. The trial court refused an instruction asked by the defendant, to the effect that the statute was in violation of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. A motion in arrest of judgment and for a new trial having been overruled, the case was taken to the highest court of Kentucky, where the judgment of conviction was affirmed, one of the members of the court dissenting.

The state court had before it and determined at the same time (delivering one opinion for both cases) another case against Berea College,—which was an indictment based on § 4 of the same statute,—under which the college was convicted of the offense of "maintaining and operating a college, school, and institution of learning where persons of the white and negro races are both received, and within a distance of 25 miles of each other, as pupils for instruction." After observing that there were fundamental limitations upon the police power of the several states which could not be disregarded, the state court held § 4 of the statute to be in violation of those limitations because "unreasonable and oppressive." Treating that particular section as null and void and regarding the other sections as complete in themselves and enforceable, the state court, in the first case (the present case) based on § 1, affirmed, and, in the second case, based on § 4 of the statute, reversed, the judgment. It held it to be entirely competent for the state to adopt the policy of the separation of the races, even in private schools, and concluded its opinion in these words: "The right to teach white and negro children in a private 61]*school at the same time and place is not a property right." The state court (but without any discussion whatever) added, as if merely incidental to or a makeweight in the decision of the pivotal question in this case, these words: "Besides, appellant, as a corporation created by this state, has no natural right to teach at all. Its right to teach is such as the state sees fit to give to it. The state may withhold it altogether or qualify it. Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427." [123 Ky. 228, 94 S. W. 623.] It concluded: "We do not think the act is in conflict with the Federal Constitution."

Upon a review of the judgment below this court says that the statute is "clearly separable, and may be valid as to one class, while invalid as to another;" that "even if it were conceded that its assertion of power over individuals cannot be sustained, still the statute must be upheld so far as it restrains corporations." "It is unnecessary," this court says, "for us to consider anything more than the question of its validity as applied to corporations. . . . We need concern ourselves only with the inquiry whether the 1st section can be upheld as coming within the power of a state over its own oorporate creatures." The judgment of the state court is now affirmed, and thereby left in full force, so far as Kentucky and its courts are concerned, although such judgment rests in part upon the ground that the statute is not, in any particular, in violation of any rights secured by the Federal Constitution. In so ruling, it must necessarily have been assumed by this court that the legislature may have regarded the teaching of white and colored pupils at the same time and in the same school or institution, when maintained by private individuals and associations, as wholly different in its results from such teaching when conducted by the same individuals acting under the authority of or representing a corporation. But, looking at the nature or subject of the legislation, it is inconceivable that the legislature consciously regarded the subject in that light. It is absolutely certain that the legislature had in mind to prohibit the teaching of the two races in the same private institution, *at the same time, by [62 whomsoever that institution was conducted. It is a reflection upon the common sense of legislators to suppose that they might have prohibited a private corporation from teaching by its agents, and yet left individuals and unincorporated associations entirely at liberty, by the same instructors, to teach the two races in the same institution at the same time. It was the teaching of pupils of the two races together, or in the same school, no matter by whom or under whose authority, which the legislature sought to prevent. The manifest purpose was to prevent the association of white and colored persons in the same school. That such was its intention is evident from the title of the act, which, as we have seen, was "to prohibit white and colored persons from attending the same school." Even if the words in the body of the act were doubtful or obscure, the title may be looked to in aid of construction. Smythe v. Fiske, 23 Wall. 374, 23 L. ed. 47.

Undoubtedly, the general rule is that one part of a statute may be stricken down as unconstitutional and another part, distinctly separable and valid, left in force. But that general rule cannot control the decision of this case.

Referring to that rule, this court in Huntington v. Worthen, 120 U. S. 97, 102, 30 L. ed. 588, 590, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469, said that, if one provision of a statute be invalid, the whole act will fall, where "it is evident the legislature would not have enacted one of them without the other."

In Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 94, 95, 30 L. ed. 115-117, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988, 990, the question arose as to the validity of a particular section of the Georgia Code. The supreme court of that state held that so much of a section of that Code as made certain illegal exceptions could be disregarded, leaving the rest of the section to stand; this upon the principle that a distinct, separable, and unconstitutional part of a statute may be rejected and the remainder preserved and enforced. "But," the court took care to say, "the insuperable difficulty with the application of that principle of construction to the present instance is, that by rejecting the exceptions intended by the legislature of Georgia, the statute is made to enact what confessedly the legislature never meant."

63] *In Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 696, 36 L. ed. 294, 311, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495, it was held that certain specified parts of the tariff act of 1890 [26 Stat. at L. 567, chap. 1244] could be adjudged invalid without affecting the validity of another and distinct part, covering a different subject. But that, as the court held, was because "they are entirely separate in their nature, and, in law, are wholly independent of each other."

A case very much in point here is that of Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 565, 46 L. ed. 679, 692, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431, 441. Those were actions upon promissory notes and an open account. The defense was that the notes and the account arose out of business transactions with the Union Sewer Pipe Company, an Ohio corporation doing business in Illinois, and which corporation, it was alleged, was a trust and combination of a class or kind described in the Illinois anti-trust statute. That statute made certain combinations of capital, skill, or acts by two or more persons for certain defined purposes illegal in Illinois. The defense was based in part on that statute, and the question was whether the statute was repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, in that, after prescribing penalties for its violation, it provided by a distinct section (§ 9) that its provisions "shall not apply to agricultural products or live stock while in the hands of the producer or raiser." The transactions out of which the notes and account in suit arose had no connection whatever with agriculture or with the business of raising live stock, and yet the question considered and determined—and which the court did not feel at liberty to pass by—was whether the entire statute was not unconstitutional by reason of the fact that the 9th section excepted from its operation agricultural products and live stock while in the hands of the producer or raiser. This court held that section to be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, in that it made such a discrimination in favor of agriculturists or live-stock dealers as to be a denial to all others of the equal protection of the laws. The question then arose, whether the other provisions of the statute could not be upheld and enforced by eliminating the 9th section. This court held in the negative, 64] saying: "The *principles applicable to such a question are well settled by the adjudications of this court. If different sections of a statute are independent of each other, that which is unconstitutional may be disregarded, and valid sections may stand and be enforced. But, if an obnoxious section is of such import that the other sections, without it, would cause results not contemplated or desired by the legislature, then the entire statute must be held inoperative. . . . Looking, then, at all the sections together, we must hold that the legislature would not have entered upon or continued the policy indicated by the statute unless agriculturalists and live-stock dealers were excluded from its operation and thereby protected from prosecution. The result is that the statute must be regarded as an entirety, and, in that view, it must be adjudged to be unconstitutional as denying the equal protection of the laws to those within its jurisdiction who are not embraced by the 9th section."

The general principle was well stated by Chief Justice Shaw, who, after observing that, if certain parts of a statute are wholly independent of each other, one part may be held void and the other enforced, said, in Warren v. Charlestown, 2 Gray, 84: "But, if they are so mutually connected with and dependent on each other, as conditions, considerations, or compensations for each other, as to warrant a belief that the legislature intended them as a whole, and that, if all could not be carried into effect, the legislature would not pass the residue independently, and some parts are unconstitutional, all the provisions which are thus dependent, conditional, or connected, must fall with them." This statement of the principle was affirmed in Allen v. Louisiana, 103 U. S. 80, 84, 26 L. ed. 318, 319, and again in Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 490, 45 L. ed. 280, 290, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, 181, cited by the court. In the latter case the court said: "One part [of a statute] may stand, while another will fall, unless the two are so connected or dependent on each other in subject-matter, meaning, or purpose that the good cannot remain without the bad. The point is not whether the parts are contained in the same section, for, the distribution into sections *is purely artificial; 65 but whether they are essentially and inseparably connected in substance,—whether the provisions are so interdependent that one cannot operate without the other." All the cases are, without exception, in the same direction.

Now, can it for a moment be doubted that the legislature intended all the sections of the statute in question to be looked at, and that the purpose was to forbid the teaching of pupils of the two races together in the same institution, at the same time, whether the teachers represented natural persons or corporations? Can it be said that the legislature would have prohibited such teaching by corporations, and yet consciously permitted the teaching by private individuals or unincorporated associations? Are we to attribute such folly to legislators? Who can say that the legislature would have enacted one provision without the other? If not, then, in determining the intent of the legislature, the provisions of the statute relating to the teaching of the two races together by corporations cannot be separated in its operation from those in the same section that forbid such teaching by individuals and unincorporated associations. Therefore the court cannot, as I think, properly forbear to consider the validity of the provisions that refer to teachers who do not represent corporations. If those provisions constitute, as, in my judgment, they do, an essential part of the legislative scheme or policy, and are invalid, then, under the authorities cited, the whole act must fall. The provision as to corporations may be valid, and yet the other clauses may be so inseparably connected with that provision and the policy underlying it, that the validity of all the clauses necessary to effectuate the legislative intent must be considered. There is no magic in the fact of incorporation which will so transform the act of teaching the two races in the same school at the same time that such teaching can be deemed lawful when conducted by private individuals, but unlawful when conducted by the representatives of corporations.

There is another line of thought. The state court evidently regarded it as necessary to consider the entire act; for it adjudged [66]*it to be competent for the state to forbid all teaching of the two races together, in the same institution, at the same time, no matter by whom the teaching was done. The reference at the close of its opinion, in the words above quoted, to the fact that the defendant was a corporation, which could be controlled as the state saw fit, was, as already suggested, only incidental to the main question determined by the court as to the extent to which the state could control the teaching of the two races in the same institution. The state court upheld the authority of the state, under its general police power, to forbid the association of the two races in the same institution of learning, although it adjudged that there were limitations upon the exercise of that power, and that, under those limitations, § 4 was invalid, because unreasonable and oppressive. If it had regarded the authority of the state over its own corporations as being, in itself, and without reference to any other view, sufficient to sustain the statute, so far as the defendant corporation is concerned, it need only have said that much, and omitted all consideration of the general power of the state to forbid the teaching of the two races together, by anybody, in the same institution at the same time. It need not, in that view, have made any reference whatever to the 25-mile provision in the 4th section as being "unreasonable and oppressive," whether applied to teaching by individuals or by corporations, or held such provision to be void on that special ground.

Some stress is laid upon the fact that when Berea College was incorporated the state reserved the power to alter, amend, or repeal its charter. If the state had, in terms, and in virtue of the power reserved, repealed outright the charter of the college, the case might present a different question. But the charter was not repealed. The corporation was left in existence. The statute here in question does not purport to amend the charter of any particular corporation, but assumes to establish a certain rule applicable alike to all individuals, associations, or corporations that assume to teach the white and black races *together in [67] the same institution. Besides, it should not be assumed that the state intended, under the guise of impliedly amending the charter of a private corporation, to destroy, or that it could destroy, the substantial, essential purposes for which the corporation was created, and yet leave the corporation in existence. The authorities cited by this court, in its opinion, establish the proposition that, under the reserved power to amend or alter a charter, no amendment or alteration can be made which will "defeat or substantially impair the object of the grant." Holyoke Water Power Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 500, 21 L. ed. 133; Close v. Glenwood Cemetery, 107 U. S. 466, 476, 27 L. ed. 408, 412, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267.

In my judgment the court should directly meet and decide the broad question presented by the statute. It should adjudge whether the statute, as a whole, is or is not unconstitutional, in that it makes it a crime against the state to maintain or operate a private institution of learning where white and black pupils are received, at the same time, for instruction. In the view which I have as to my duty I feel obliged to express my opinion as to the validity of the act as a whole. I am of opinion that, in its essential parts, the statute is an arbitrary invasion of the rights of liberty and property guaranteed by the 14th Amendment against hostile state action, and is, therefore, void.

The capacity to impart instruction to others is given by the Almighty for beneficent purposes; and its use may not be forbidden or interfered with by government,—certainly not, unless such instruction is, in its nature, harmful to the public morals or imperils the public safety. The right to impart instruction, harmless in itself or beneficial to those who receive it, is a substantial right of property,—especially, where the services are rendered for compensation. But even if such right be not strictly a property right, it is, beyond question, part of one's liberty as guaranteed against hostile state action by the Constitution of the United States. This court has more than once said that the liberty guaranteed by the 14th Amendment embraces "the right of the citizen to be free in the enjoyment *of all his faculties," and "to be free to use them in all lawful ways." Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 173, 52 L. ed. 436, 442, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277. If pupils, of whatever race,—certainly, if they be citizens,—choose, with the consent of their parents, or voluntarily, to sit together in a private institution of learning while receiving instruction which is not in its nature harmful or dangerous to the public, no government, whether Federal or state, can legally forbid their coming together, or being together temporarily, for such an innocent purpose. If the commonwealth of Kentucky can make it a crime to teach white and colored children together at the same time, in a private institution of learning, it is difficult to perceive why it may not forbid the assembling of white and colored children in the same Sabbath school, for the purpose of being instructed in the Word of God, although such teaching may be done under the authority of the church to which the school is attached as well as with the consent of the parents of the children. So, if the state court be right, white and colored children may even be forbidden to sit together in a house of worship or at a communion table in the same Christian church. In the cases supposed there would be the same association of white and colored persons as would occur when pupils of the two races sit together in a private institution of learning for the purpose of receiving instruction in purely secular matters. Will it be said that the cases supposed and the case here in hand are different, in that no government, in this country, can lay unholy hands on the religious faith of the people? The answer to this suggestion is that, in the eye of the law, the right to enjoy one's religious belief, unmolested by any human power, is no more sacred nor more fully or distinctly recognized than is the right to impart and receive instruction not harmful to the public. The denial of either right would be an infringement of the liberty inherent in the freedom secured by the fundamental law. Again, if the views of the highest court of Kentucky be sound, that commonwealth may, without infringing the Constitution of the United States, forbid the *association in the same private school of [69 pupils of the Anglo-Saxon and Latin races respectively, or pupils of the Christian and Jewish faiths, respectively. Have we become so inoculated with prejudice of race than an American government, professedly based on the principles of freedom, and charged with the protection of all citizens alike, can make distinctions between such citizens in the matter of their voluntary meeting for innocent purposes, simply because of their respective races? Further, if the lower court be right, then a state may make it a crime for white and colored persons to frequent the same market places at the same time, or appear in an assemblage of citizens convened to consider questions of a public or political nature, in which all citizens, without regard to race, are equally interested. Many other illustrations might be given to show the mischievous, not to say cruel, character of the statute in question, and how inconsistent such legislation is with the great principle of the equality of citizens before the law.

Of course, what I have said has no reference to regulations prescribed for public schools, established at the pleasure of the state and maintained at the public expense. No such question is here presented and it need not be now discussed. My observations have reference to the case before the court, and only to the provision of the statute making it a crime for any person to impart harmless instruction to white and colored pupils together, at the same time, in the same private institution of learning. That provision is, in my opinion, made an essential element in the policy of the statute, and, if regard be had to the object and purpose of this legislation, it cannot be treated as separable nor intended to be separated from the provisions relating to corporations. The whole statute should therefore be held void; otherwise, it will be taken as the law of Kentucky, to be enforced by its courts, that the teaching of white and black pupils, at the same time, even in a private institution, is a crime against that commonwealth, punishable by fine and imprisonment.

*In my opinion the judgment should [70 be reversed upon the ground that the statute is in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. Justice Day also dissents.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Complainant,

v.

JAMES RUDOLPH GARFIELD, Secretary of the Interior of the United States, and Fred Dennett, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 70-78.)

Statutes — repeal by implication — general and special provisions.

1. The Federal Supreme Court will follow the continuous construction of the Land Department that the special provision for Louisiana in the swamp land grant act of March 2, 1849 (9 Stat. at L. 352, chap. 87), that title shall vest in the state on approval of a list of lands by the Secretary of the Interior, was not affected by the general clause of the act of September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84), granting swamp lands to Arkansas, to vest only upon the issuance of a patent, that the provisions of this act be extended to and their benefits be conferred upon each of the other states in which such swamp and overflowed lands may be situated.

[For other cases, see Statutes, 607, 608, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

United States — immunity from suit — suit against officers.

2. The Supreme Court of the United States has no jurisdiction of a bill in equity filed by the state of Louisiana against the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office to establish its title under the swamp land grant act of March 2, 1849, to certain lands which were approved to the state by the Secretary of the Interior upon the manifest mistake of law, that, upon the abandonment of the military reservation of which they formed a part, the lands fell within the terms of the grant, since such suit raises questions of law and fact upon which the United States would have to be heard.

[For other cases, see United States, IV. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 7, Original.]

Argued October 27, 28, 1908. Decided November 9, 1908.

ORIGINAL BILL in equity, filed by the State of Louisiana against the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to establish the title of the state to certain swamp lands, and to enjoin the defendants from disposing of such lands. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On repeal of statutes by implication—see notes to State v. Massey, 4 L.R.A. 309; First Nat. Bank v. Weidenbeck, 38 C. C. A. 136; and United States v. Henderson, 20 L. ed. U. S. 235.

Suit against Federal officers or agents as suit against United States.

The immunity of the United States from suit prevents a state from maintaining, in the Supreme Court of the United States, a suit against the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to restrain them from allotting and patenting in severalty swamp lands within the limits of an Indian reservation. Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 50 L. ed. 935, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568.

A suit to restrain the Secretary of the Interior from carrying out the provisions of the act of June 27, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 400, chap. 1157), controlling the disposition of the pine lands ceded by the Indians of the state of Minnesota under the act of January 14, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 642, chap. 24), to the United States, to be administered for their benefit, and to require him to execute the trust and account.—is in effect a suit against the United States, which the courts have no jurisdiction to entertain. Naganab v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 473, 50 L. ed. 1113, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 667.

A suit by a state to enjoin the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the Land Office from selling school lands in an Indian reservation is a suit against the United States. Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 46 L. ed. 954, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650. Jurisdiction was sustained in this case, however, on the ground that the United States had expressly consented to be sued, and assumed the responsibility for the outcome of the litigation.

An injunction against the infringement of a patent by the use of a caisson gate which is part of a dry dock in a navy yard, put in place by, and the property of, the United States, and used for the public benefit, cannot be granted in an action against officers and agents of the government, as they have no individual interest in the controversy, but the relief is in fact asked against the United States. Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 40 L. ed. 599, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443.

The inability to make the United States a party defeats the right of a patentee for improvements in stamp canceling and post-marking machines, to enjoin the use by a postmaster in a United States postoffice of infringing machines of which the United States is a lessee in possession, for a term which has not expired. International Postal Supply Co. v. Bruce, 194 U. S. 601, 48 L. ed. 1134, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820.

But there is a class of cases which hold that the immunity of the United States from suit cannot successfully be pleaded in favor of officers and agents of the United States when sued by private persons, for property in their possession as such agents.

The leading case on this question is United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240, in which it was held by a vote of five to four that ejectment could be maintained against officers occupying, on behalf of the United States, land used for a military station and for a national cemetery. The majority relied largely on Meigs v. McClung, 9 Cranch, 11,

Messrs. Harvey M. Friend and George H. Lamar argued the cause and filed a brief for complainant:

Executive officers of a state or of the United States may be proceeded against by mandamus when they refuse to execute a ministerial duty imposed upon them by law, wherein no political rights are involved, and wherein they are not vested with any further discretion in the matter at hand; and such officers may be proceeded against by writ of injunction when they are assuming to act under an unconstitutional statute, or are assuming to act without authority of law and in violation of the law, where there is no adequate remedy at law, and where the complainant will suffer irreparable injury thereby, or where an injunction is the only remedy that can be invoked to avoid a multiplicity of suits.

Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Noble v. Union River Logging Co. 147 U. S. 165, 171, 37 L. ed. 123, 125, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271.

The majority of the cases in this court in which an executive officer has been enjoined from executing an unconstitutional statute, or where such officer has been proceeded against on the ground that he is acting or assuming to act beyond the scope of his authority, in derogation of the rights of complainants, guaranteed to them by the law, have been cases against state officials.

Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 220, 21 L. ed. 453; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 23 L. ed. 623; Poin-dexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Allen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 114 U. S. 311, 29 L. ed. 200, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925, 962 (these last two being known as the Virginia Coupon Cases); Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Stanley v. Schwalby, 147 U. S. 508, 37 L. ed. 259, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 204, 42 L. ed. 137, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 107, 41 L. ed. 632, 648, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262, 265; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 47 L. ed. 584, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441.

This case is on all fours with that of 3 L. ed. 639, where an action in ejectment had successfully been maintained against Federal officers to recover land unlawfully occupied and improved for military purposes. Other cases are to the same effect.

Ejectment will lie against a Federal officer who claims possession of the disputed premises on behalf of the United States. Scranton v. Wheeler, 113 Mich. 565, 67 Am. St. Rep. 484, 71 N. W. 1091, affirmed in 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

Ejectment may be maintained against an Army officer in the occupancy of lands as such officer for a military post. McConnell v. Wilcox, 2 Ill. 344, reversed on other grounds in 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264.

Ejectment may be maintained against an Army officer occupying the demanded premises for the purpose of a military camp or fortification, under the direction of the Secretary of War and the President of the United States. Polack v. Mansfield, 44 Cal. 40, 13 Am. Rep. 151.

Ejectment, or its equivalent, lies against officers employed by the United States to carry on the operations of a branch mint, who are in possession of the disputed premises on behalf of the Federal government. King v. La Grange, 61 Cal. 221; Dreux v. Kennedy, 12 Rob. (La.) 489.

The principle extends to other suits for alleged unlawful invasions of property rights by officers of the United States, acting on behalf of the government.

A person claiming to be the owner of timber seized by timber agents as belonging to the United States may bring suit against such agents to obtain an injunction to prevent them from selling the property, 53 L. ed.

and for a determination of his right to it. Wells v. Nickles, 104 U. S. 444, 26 L. ed. 825.

A suit to enjoin an Indian agent from unlawfully obstructing and attempting to eject a complainant when prospecting on lands of an Indian reservation, with a view to making a mineral location thereon, as he was authorized to do by an act of Congress, is not one against the United States, although such agent claims to be acting in his official capacity. Wadsworth v. Boysen, 78 C. C. A. 437, 148 Fed. 771.

A suit by a riparian owner to prevent interference with his rights in a submerged water front by an officer of the United States, in possession of a pier built by the government, is not to be deemed a suit against the United States, of which a state court cannot take jurisdiction without the consent of the United States, although, in determining the question the court may have to consider whether the defendant could constitutionally acquire from the United States authority to obstruct the plaintiff's access to navigable water in front of his land without making or securing compensation to him. Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

There are dicta to the contrary.

Thus, in Carr v. United States, 98 U. S. 433, 25 L. ed. 209, Mr. Justice Bradley said that when the pleadings or the proofs in an action against the officers or agents of the government disclose that its possession is assailed, the jurisdiction of the court ought to cease.

And in People v. Ambrecht, 11 Abb. Pr. 97, the court thought that the United States could not be indirectly sued in the persons

United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

It is difficult to perceive the slightest objection to the jurisdiction of this court in the present case.

United States v. Texas, 143 U. S. 621, 644, 36 L. ed. 285, 292, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 287, 32 L. ed. 239, 242, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 388, 46 L. ed. 954, 963, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 13 How. 518, 560, 14 L. ed. 249, 266; Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. 475, 501, 18 L. ed. 437, 441; Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 719, 19 L. ed. 227, 235; Pennsylvania v. Quicksilver Min. Co. 10 Wall. 553, 556, 19 L. ed. 998, 999; Florida v. Anderson, 91 U. S. 667, 23 L. ed. 290.

The legal title passes as completely by certification if patent is not expressly required by law, as though patent actually issued.

Garriques v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 6 Land Dec. 543; Roberts v. Oregon Cent. Milita v Road Co. 19 Land Dec. 591; Wright v. California, 8 Land Dec. 24; Re Louisiana, 1 Lester. 554; Re Daly, 8 Land Dec. 471; California v. Boddy, 9 Land Dec. 636; Smith v. Portage Lake & L. S. Ship Canal Co. 11 Land Dec. 475.

Patent is the favored and more usual form of conveyance, especially as between the government and individuals, but sometimes an act of Congress will pass the fee.

Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 410, 454, 9 L. ed. 1137, 1154; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 78, 23 L. ed. 807.

The law sometimes makes a certified list of lands operative to transfer title to the grantee.

Frasher v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102, 29 L. ed. 311, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1141.

The acts of March 2, 1849, and September 28, 1850, have been, from the beginning to the present, separately administered in accordance with the provisions of the respective acts.

1 Lester, Land Laws, Regulations, & of its officers or agents by the owner of an estate, for its recovery.

The United States will, of course, not be concluded by the judgment. United States v. Lee, supra.

And a judgment for plaintiffs for an undivided third part of land, and for the possession of the whole jointly with the defendants, who claimed no title therein, but claimed possession as officers and agents of the United States, under its title, is a judgment directly against the United States and against its property, and not merely against its officers, and is beyond the power of a state court to render, where the United Decisions, pp. 549, 554; Re Louisiana, 32 Land. Dec. 270.

Where two acts of grant, one of an earlier and another of later date, are each broad enough in their terms to embrace the same property, under the well-known rule of law, title must be regarded and held to have passed by the first grant, under the principle, prior est tempore, potior est in jure.

9 Ops. Atty. Gen. 254; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488-502, 30 L. ed. 1039-1042, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Rodgers v. United States, 185 U. S. 83, 46 L. ed. 816, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582.

The language used in the certificate approved by Secretary Smith embraced everything requisite to an approval under the act of March 2, 1849. Such additional expressions, not required by that statute to be used, however, may be treated in law as mere surplusage, and may be wholly disregarded in determining the legal effect of the approval under the act of 1849.

Kountze v. Omaha Hotel Co. 107 U. S. 378, 27 L. ed. 609, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 911.

Attorney General Bonaparte and Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause, and, with Mr. Glenn E. Husted, filed a brief for defendants:

The United States, the real party in interest as defendant, has not consented to be sued, and cannot be sued without its consent.

Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 387, 46 L. ed. 954, 962, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 50 L. ed. 935, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Naganab v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 473, 50 L. ed. 1113, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 667; Kansas v. United States, 204 U. S. 331, 51 L. ed. 510, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 388.

Swamp-land grants, like other grants from the United States to states or corporations, to aid in the construction of public works, are to be interpreted most strongly against the grantee, and in favor of the government; and nothing passes but what is clearly and explicitly included within the terms of the grant.

States has not voluntarily submitted to the jurisdiction. Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 40 L. ed. 960, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754.

In United States ex rel. Levey v. Stockslager, 129 U. S. 470, 32 L. ed. 785, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382, it was held that a suit against the United States or public officer for the specific performance of a contract made by the United States could not be maintained in the supreme court of the District of Columbia.

On the immunity of the United States from suit, generally, see note to Beers v. Arkansas, 15 L. ed. U. S. 991.

Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 358, 380, 7 L. ed. 147, 153; United States v. Michigan, 190 U. S. 379, 401, 47 L. ed. 1103, 1111, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742.

These military reservation lands were not intended to be, and were not, covered by the swamp-land grant.

Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 741, 747, 23 L. ed. 634, 637, 640; Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761, 23 L. ed. 769; Northern P. R. Co. v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging, & Mfg. Co. 168 U. S. 604, 609, 42 L. ed. 596, 598, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Scott v. Carew, 196 U. S. 100, 49 L. ed. 403, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Northern Lumber Co. v. O'Brien, 204 U. S. 190, 51 L. ed. 438, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

The swamp-land grant is similar to the railroad grants, and there is no distinction in principle between them upon this point.

Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 499, 30 L. ed. 1039, 1041, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985.

Like the railroad grants, the swamp-land grant takes effect in presenti, the title to lands covered by the grant passing as of the date of the act.

Ibid; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 42 L. ed. 591, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208.

The words used in both railroad and swamp-land grants—"shall be and are hereby granted"—create an immediate interest, and do not indicate a purpose to give in the future.

Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 496, 30 L. ed. 1040, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985.

This court has held that they have no other meaning; and the Land Department, on this interpretation of them, has uniformly administered every previous similar grant.

Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 741, 23 L. ed. 637.

Congress obviously could not have intended to grant to the state any interest as of the date of this swamp-land act in lands then reserved and occupied for military purposes, and the act by which such a grant is made being a law as well as a conveyance, effect must be given to the intent of Congress.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 497, 24 L. ed. 1095, 1097.

Being thus reserved and excepted from such a grant at the date thereof, it is immaterial whether they subsequently become public lands.

Newhall v. Singer, supra; United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 606, 36 L. ed. 1091, 1101, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152.

In construing a congressional grant, the act by which it is made is a law as well as a conveyance, and such effect must be given 53 L. ed.

to it as will carry out the intent of Congress.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. supra.

When there are two acts of Congress on the same subject, the later act embracing the provisions of the former and also new provisions, the later act, without any repealing clause, operates as a repeal of the former.

Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. 429, 14 L. ed. 210; United States v. Tynen, 11 Wall. 88, 20 L. ed. 153; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429.

This is not a case for the application of the rule that a posterior general act does not repeal a prior special provision unless the legislative intent to repeal be apparent, because it does not fall within the reason of the rule.

People v. Jaehne, 103 N. Y. 182, 8 N. E. 374.

If there is a positive and irreconcilable repugnancy between the old law and the new, the new must stand and the old fall, even though the result is reached by implication alone.

Barney v. Dolph, 97 U. S. 652, 24 L. ed. 1063.

The state of Louisiana has several times treated the act of 1850 as applicable to lands within its borders.

United States v. Louisiana, 123 U. S. 32, 31 L. ed. 69, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17; United States v. Louisiana, 127 U. S. 182, 32 L. ed. 66, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

That the court will not interfere with the Land Department of the government in the determination of questions concerning the public lands so long as the legal title remains in the United States is too well settled to require comment.

Kirwan v. Murphy, 189 U. S. 35, 47 L. ed. 698, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Bockfinger v. Foster, 190 U. S. 116, 47 L. ed. 975, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Humbird v. Avery, 195 U. S. 480, 49 L. ed. 286, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 50 L. ed. 935, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568.

The principle that a public officer will not be restrained in the performance of his public trusts, even though the rights of a state may be violated by acts of Congress, should be applied.

Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. ed. 25; Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. 475, 18 L. ed. 437; Georgia v. Stanton, 6 Wall. 50, 18 L. ed. 721; Grant v. Cooke, 7 D. C. 165.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought in this court to establish the title of the state of Louisiana to certain swamp lands which it claims under the statutes of the United States, and to enjoin the defendants against carrying out an order making a different disposition of the lands. The defendants demur on the grounds that this really is a suit against the United States, which has not consented to be sued, that the title never has passed from the United States, and that the remedy, if any, would be at law.

The act of March 2, 1849, chap. 87, 9 Stat. at L. 352, purported to grant to the state of Louisiana the whole of the swamp and overflowed lands therein, and provided that, on approval of a list of such lands by the Secretary of the Treasury (afterwards succeeded by the Secretary of the Interior), the fee simple to the same should vest in the [75]state. Certain lands were excluded, *but those in dispute were not by any express words. They belonged, however, to the Fort Sabine Military Reservation, established by the President on December 20, 1838, and although included in a list submitted under the statute, approval of the inclusion was suspended or denied. On March 25, 1871, the Fort Sabine Military Reservation was abandoned by Executive order, in pursuance of the act of February 24, 1871, chap. 68, 16 Stat. at L. 430, which authorized the Secretary of War to transfer it to the control of the Secretary of the Interior, to be sold for cash. On October 31, 1895, the Secretary of the Interior decided that the land was included in the grant of the act of 1849, subject to the right of the United States to use it for military purposes until abandoned. On December 10, 1895, pursuant to his decision, the Secretary indorsed upon a list of these lands that it was "approved to the state of Louisiana under the act of Congress of March 2, 1849, as supplemented and enlarged by the act of Congress of September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84), subject to any valid adverse rights that may exist." The plaintiff says that thereupon the title passed.

On June 6, 1904, the Secretary of the Interior ordered that his predecessor's approval of the list be vacated, and that the lands should be held for disposition as provided by law, on the ground that they were not within the grant of the act of 1849, because at that time embraced in a military reservation. This decision has been upheld and finally affirmed by the present Secretary, the defendant in this case, and the result is the bringing of this bill.

We will assume, for purposes of decision, that, if the United States clearly had no title to the land in controversy, we should have jurisdiction to entertain this suit, for we are of opinion that, even on that assumption, the bill must be dismissed. But before giving the reasons for our opinion, the course taken by the argument for the United States makes it proper to state a portion of that argument that does not command our assent.

The next year after the act of 1849, another act was passed, *which granted [76] swamp lands to the state of Arkansas. It provided for a list, required the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent for the lands at the request of the governor, and then enacted that, "on that patent," the fee simple to the lands should vest in the state. The 4th section was more general: "That the provisions of this act be extended to, and their benefits be conferred upon, each of the other states of the Union in which such swamp and overflowed lands, known as designated as aforesaid, may be situated." Act of September 28, 1850, chap. 84, 9 Stat. at L. 519. It is argued that this so far repealed the special act of 1849 that thereafter the title would not pass on simple approval, as provided therein, but a patent was necessary. As we understand, the continuous construction of the Department has been to the contrary, and a great number of titles to a very large amount of land would be disturbed if we should accede to this argument. We see no reason for overthrowing the long-continued understanding that the special provisions for Louisiana were not affected by a general clause, evidently intended to extend benefits to states that did not enjoy them at the time, not to change the mode of conveyance previously established in a case where the benefit already had been conferred. We may add that we assume that, if approval was sufficient to pass the title, the form of words used by the Secretary of the Interior on December 10, 1895, had that effect, notwithstanding the reference to the act of 1850, whatever may have been his understanding or intent.

A further argument was presented that, if a patent was not necessary under the act of 1850, then a certificate by the Land Commissioner was made so by the act of August 3, 1854 (10 Stat. at L. 346, chap. 201, Rev. Stat. § 2449, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1516). But that law does not require so extended an application. We shall assume, for purposes of decision, that it is satisfied if confined according to its words to lands to which the act of 1849 did not purport "to convey the fee-simple title."

Leaving the foregoing arguments on one side, we nevertheless *are of opinion that [77] the bill must fail. The land in controversy had been withdrawn from the public domain by reservation at the time when the act of 1849 was passed, and the general words of that act must be read as subject to an implied exception, under the rule laid down in Scott v. Carew, 196 U. S. 100, 109, 49 L. ed. 403, 405, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193, and the earlier cases there cited. The case is not one where the approval proceeded upon a mistake of fact with regard to a matter on which it was necessary that the Secretary should pass. See Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 173, 174, 37 L. ed. 123, 126, 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271. The approval proceeded upon a manifest mistake of law; that upon the abandonment of the military reservation the land fell within the terms of the grant of 1849. Therefore it was void upon its face. The only doubt is raised by the statute limiting suits by the United States to vacate patents to five years. Act of March 3, 1891, chap. 561, § 8, 26 Stat. at L. 1099. It may be that this act applies to approvals when they are given the effect of patents as well as to patents, which alone are named. In United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. 209 U. S. 447, 52 L. ed. 881, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579, it was decided that this act applied to patents even if void because of a previous reservation of the land, and it was said that the statute not merely took away the remedy, but validated the patent. The doubt is whether Louisiana has not now a good title by the lapse of five years since the approval and by the operation of that act.

But that doubt cannot be resolved in this case. It raises questions of law and of fact upon which the United States would have to be heard. The United States fairly might argue that the statute of limitations was confined to patents, or was excluded by the act of 1871. If it yielded those points it still reasonably might maintain that a title could not be acquired under the statute by a mere void approval on paper, if the United States ever since had been in possession, claiming title, as it claimed it earlier by the act of 1871. It might argue that, for equitable relief on the ground of title in the plaintiff, in the teeth of the last-named act, 78] it would be necessary at least to allege that the state took and has held possession under the void grant. The United States might, and undoubtedly would, deny the fact of such possession, and that fact cannot be tried behind its back. It follows that the United States is a necessary party and that we have no jurisdiction of this suit.

Bill dismissed.

ALBERT C. TWINING and David C. Cornell, Pliffs. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 78-127.)

Constitutional law — privileges and immunities—self-incrimination.

1. Exemption from self-incrimination, though secured as against Federal action by U. S. Const., 5th Amend., is not one of the fundamental rights of national citizenship, so as to be included among the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States which the states are forbidden by the 14th Amendment to abridge.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 180a-196, 380-401, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — self-incrimination.

2. Exemption from self-incrimination is not safeguarded as against state action by the provision of U. S. Const. 14th Amend., that no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

[Due process of law in criminal matters, see Constitutional Law, 779-830, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 10.]

Argued March 19, 20, 1908. Decided November 9, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Court of Errors and Appeals of the State of New Jersey to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of that state, affirming a conviction in the Court of Quarter Sessions of the County of Monmouth of having knowingly exhibited a false paper to a bank examiner, with intent to deceive. Affirmed.

See same case below, 73 N. J. L. 683, 64 Atl. 1073, 1135.

Statement by Mr. Justice Moody:

Albert C. Twining and David C. Cornell, the plaintiffs in error, hereafter called the defendants, were indicted by the grand jury of Monmouth county, in the state of New Jersey. The indictment charged that the defendants, being directors of the Monmouth Trust & Safe Deposit Company, knowingly exhibited a false paper to Larue Vreedenberg, an examiner of the state banking department, with intent to deceive him as to the condition of the company. Such an act is made a misdemeanor by a statute of the state (P. L. 1899, p. 450, at 461), which is as follows:

"Every director, officer, agent, or clerk of any trust company who wilfully and knowingly subscribes or makes any false statement of facts or false entries in the books of such trust company, or knowingly subscribes or exhibits any false paper, with intent to deceive any person authorized to examine as to the condition of such trust company, or wilfully or knowingly subscribes to or makes any false report, shall be guilty of a high misdemeanor and punished accordingly."

The defendants were found guilty on March 1, 1904, by the verdict of a jury, and judgment upon the verdict, that the defendants be imprisoned for six and four years, respectively, was affirmed successively by the 80]supreme court and the court *of errors and appeals. There needs to be stated here only such part of what occurred at the trial as will describe the questions on which this court is authorized to pass. It appeared that in February, 1903, the company closed its doors. The bank examiner came at once to the place of business for the purpose of examining the affairs of the company, and found there Twining and Cornell, who were respectively president and treasurer as well as directors. Having soon discovered that, according to a book entry, there had been a recent payment of $44,875, for 381 shares of stock, the examiner inquired of the defendant by what authority this had been done, and was informed that it was done by authority of the board of directors, and the following paper was produced to him as a record of the transaction:

Monmouth Trust & Safe Deposit Company,
Asbury Park, N. J.

A special meeting of the board of directors of this company was held at the office of the company on Monday, Feb. 9th, 1903.

There were present the following directors: George F. Kroehl, S. A. Patterson, G. B. M. Harvey, A. C. Twining, D. C. Cornell.

The minutes of the regular meeting held Jan. 15th, 1903, were read, and on motion duly approved.

All loans taken since the last meeting were gone over carefully, and, upon motion duly seconded, were unanimously approved.

A resolution that this company buy 381 shares of the stock of the First National Bank at $44,875 was adopted.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

This was the paper referred to in the indictment, and it was incumbent on the prosecution to prove that it was false and that it was "knowingly" exhibited by the defendants to the examiner. There was evidence on the part of the prosecution tending to prove both these propositions. The defendants called no witnesses and did not testify themselves, although the law of New Jersey gave them the right to do so if they chose. In his charge to the jury the presiding judge said:

"Now, gentlemen, was this paper false? 81]In the first place, *the paper charged in the indictment, certifies in effect that a special meeting of the board of directors of this company was held at the office of the company on Monday, February 9, 1903. There were present the following directors: George F. Kroehl, S. A. Patterson, G. B. M. Harvey, A. C. Twining, D. C. Cornell.

"Among other things appears a resolution of this company to buy 381 shares of the stock of the First National Bank at $44,875, which was adopted.

"Now, was that meeting held or not?

"That paper says that at this meeting were present, among others, Patterson, Twining, and Cornell.

"Mr. Patterson has gone upon the stand and has testified that there was no such meeting to his knowledge; that he was not present at any such meeting; that he had no notice of any such meeting; and that he never acquiesced, as I understand, in any way, in the passage of a resolution for the purchase of this stock.

"Now, Twining and Cornell, this paper says, were present. They are here in court and have seen this paper offered in evidence, and they know that this paper says that they were the two men, or two of the men, who were present. Neither of them has gone upon the stand to deny that they were present or to show that the meeting was held.

"Now, it is not necessary for these men to prove their innocence. It is not necessary for them to prove that this meeting was held. But the fact that they stay off the stand, having heard testimony which might be prejudicial to them, without availing themselves of the right to go upon the stand and contradict it, is sometimes a matter of significance.

"Now, of course, in this action, I do not see how that can have much weight, because these men deny that they exhibited the paper, and if one of these men exhibited the paper and the other did not, I do not see how you could say that the person who claims he did not exhibit the paper would be under any obligation at all to go upon the stand. Neither is under any *obligation. [82 It is simply a right they have to go upon the stand, and, consequently the fact that they do not go upon the stand to contradict this statement in the minutes, they both denying, through their counsel and through their plea, that they exhibited the paper, I do not see that that can be taken as at all prejudicial to either of them. They simply have the right to go upon the stand, and they have not availed themselves of it, and it may be that there is no necessity for them to go there. I leave that entirely to you."

Further, in that part of the charge relating to the exhibition of the paper to the examiner, the judge said:

"Now, gentlemen, if you believe that that is so; if you believe this testimony, that Cornell did direct this man's attention to it,—Cornell has sat here and heard that testimony and not denied it,—nobody could misunderstand the import of that testimony, it was a direct accusation made against him of his guilt,—if you believe that testimony beyond a reasonable doubt, Cornell is guilty. And yet he has sat here and not gone upon the stand to deny it. He was not called upon to go upon the stand and deny it, but he did not go upon the stand and deny it, and it is for you to take that into consideration.

"Now Twining has also sat here and heard this testimony, but you will observe there is this distinction as to the conduct of these two men in this respect: the accusation against Cornell was specific by Vreedenberg. It is rather inferential, if at all, against Twining, and he might say,—it is for you to say whether he might say,—'Well, I don't think the accusation against me is made with such a degree of certainty as to require me to deny it, and I shall not; nobody will think it strange if I do not go upon the stand to deny it, because Vreedenberg is uncertain as to whether I was there; he won't swear that I was there.' So consequently the fact that Twining did not go upon the stand can have no significance at all.

"You may say that the fact that Cornell did not go upon the stand has no significance. You may say so, because the circumstances may be such that there should be 83]no inference *drawn of guilt or anything of that kind from the fact that he did not go upon the stand. Because a man does not go upon the stand you are not necessarily justified in drawing an inference of guilt. But you have a right to consider the fact that he does not go upon the stand where a direct accusation is made against him."

The question duly brought here by writ of error is whether the parts of the charge set forth, affirmed, as they were, by the court of last resort of the state, are in violation of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. John G. Johnson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William W. Gooch, Herbert C. Smyth, and Frederic C. Scofield, filed a brief for plaintiff in error Albert C. Twining:

In each case the primary inquiry must be as to what is the system of law of the particular state, and whether, according to that law, as adjudged by its courts, the procedure in question is "due process;" and the 53 L. ed.

secondary inquiry must be whether, in that process of law, if followed, there is any violation of the fundamental rights secured by the Federal Constitution.

Guthrie, 14th Amend. p. 72; Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480, 481, 23 L. ed. 478, 479; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 698, 34 L. ed. 816, 818, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 469, 35 L. ed. 225, 227, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579; McNulty v. California, 149 U. S. 645, 647, 37 L. ed. 882, 883, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 959.

When a statute, harmless on its face, is systematically enforced in violation of fundamental rights, the procedure is not due process of law, and may be declared void and set aside by the courts under the jurisdiction conferred by the 14th Amendment.

Guthrie, 14th Amend. p. 73.

In New Jersey no person can be compelled to be a witness against himself.

State v. Zdanowicz, 69 N. J. L. 619, 55 Atl. 744.

The state of New Jersey stands out alone, among all the states and territories of the Union, in permitting comment upon the failure of the accused to testify, and bases its action solely upon the absence of any restriction in the qualifying statute, holding that the accused is thus placed in the same position as any party to a civil suit.

Parker v. State, 61 N. J. L. 308, 39 Atl. 651; State v. Wines, 65 N. J. L. 31, 46 Atl. 702; State v. Banusik (N. J.) 64 Atl. 994.

Comment upon the failure of the accused to testify is a violation of his fundamental right to remain silent.

People v. Tyler, 36 Cal. 522; Price v. Com. 77 Va. 393; State v. Howard, 35 S. C. 202, 14 S. E. 481; Bird v. Georgia, 50 Ga. 585; 1 Wigmore, Ev. § 488; 3 Wigmore, Ev. § 2272, note 2; Wilson v. United States, 149 U. S. 60, 37 L. ed. 650, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 765; McKnight v. United States, 54 C. C. A. 358, 115 Fed. 982; Cooper v. State, 86 Ala. 610, 4 L.R.A. 766, 11 Am. St. Rep. 84, 6 So. 110; People v. Cuff, 122 Cal. 589, 55 Pac. 407; Petite v. People, 8 Colo. 518, 9 Pac. 622; Wharton, Crim. Ev. 9th ed. § 435; Quinn v. People, 123 Ill. 345, 15 N. E. 46; Baker v. People, 105 Ill. 452; Austin v. People, 102 Ill. 261; Angelo v. People, 96 Ill. 209, 36 Am. Rep. 132; Miller v. People, 216 Ill. 309, 74 N. E. 743; State v. Banks, 78 Me. 492, 7 Atl. 269; Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 444; Ruloff v. People, 45 N. Y. 213; People v. Courtney, 94 N. Y. 492; State v. Hull, 18 R. I. 211, 20 L.R.A. 609, 26 Atl. 191; State v. Beswick, 13 R. I. 211, 43 Am. Rep. 26; State v. Williams, 11 S. D. 64, 75 N. W. 815; State v. Cameron, 40 Vt. 555; Guthrie, 14th Amend. p. 67.

Where a fundamental right guaranteed by the earlier amendments is involved, then this court has jurisdiction because of the guaranty in the 14th Amendment that no state shall abridge those privileges or immunities, or deny due process of law.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 104, 24 L. ed. 619; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Barrington v. Missouri, 205 U. S. 486, 51 L. ed. 894, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582.

This question has been twice brought to the attention of this court, and is still open and undecided.

Consolidated Rendering Co. v. Vermont, 207 U. S. 553, 52 L. ed. 335, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Adams v. New York, 192 U. S. 585, 48 L. ed. 575, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372.

The power of the states to abridge these great rights of citizens can never be conceded until the court shall expressly so decide in a case involving the exact question and adequately argued.

Guthrie, 14th Amend. p. 62.

In determining whether or not this privilege is a fundamental right, the history of the provision is significant.

Bram v. United States, 168 U. S. 543, 42 L. ed. 573, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183; 1 Stephen, History of Crim. Law, Eng. p. 440; Story, Const. 5th ed. pp. 1782, 1788.

In all the states the accused is entitled to a speedy and public trial by an impartial tribunal; to have the presence, advice, and assistance of counsel in his defense; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; and is not to be compelled to give evidence against himself. However much the forms of proceeding or the nature of the tribunal may be changed, due process of law must necessarily include each and all of these requisites.

2 Story, Const. 5th ed. p. 697.

It is an ancient principle of the law of evidence that a witness shall not be compelled in any proceeding to make disclosures or to give testimony which will tend to criminate him or subject him to fines, penalties, or forfeitures.

Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 563, 35 L. ed. 1114, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

Any compulsory discovery is contrary to the principles of a free government. It is abhorrent to the instincts of an Englishman; it is abhorrent to the instincts of an American. It may suit the purposes of despotic power, but it cannot abide the pure atmosphere of political liberty and personal freedom.

Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524.

The common-law rule upon this subject was established in England, and thus it existed and was the law of that realm when the American colonies were organized and when this government was formed. Under the shelter of judicial decision the subject became secure and could not be compelled to accuse himself; and, with the adoption of the 4th and 5th Amendments, principles established at common law became reaffirmed in the Constitution.

United States v. 3 Tons of Coal, 6 Biss. 386, Fed. Cas. No. 16,515.

The principle is well established that this constitutional provision, which has long been regarded as one of the safeguards of civil liberty, should be applied in a broad spirit, to secure to the citizen immunity from every kind of self-accusation.

Re Nachman, 114 Fed. 996.

By analogy the case at bar is in the same class with Boyd v. United States, supra, where a statute making the failure of a witness to attend and produce evidence against himself a confession of guilt was held unconstitutional.

The laws of a state come under the prohibition of the 14th Amendment when they infringe fundamental rights.

Ballard v. Hunter, 204 U. S. 262, 51 L. ed. 474, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261.

The state has full control over the procedure in its courts both in civil and criminal cases, subject only to the qualification that such procedure must not work a denial of fundamental rights, or conflict with specific and applicable provisions of the Federal Constitution.

Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 175, 44 L. ed. 120, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 263, 48 L. ed. 970, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

Where fundamental rights specially secured by the Federal Constitution are invaded, the Federal courts will interfere with a state in the administration of its law for the prosecution of crime.

Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 50 L. ed. 256, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Gibson v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 565, 40 L. ed. 1075, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 904.

Due process implies, at least, conformity to natural and inherent principles of justice.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

In the 14th Amendment, by parity of reasoning, it refers to that law of the land in each state which derives its authority from the inherent and reserved powers of the state, exercised within the limits of those fundamental principles of liberty and justice which lie at the base of all our civil and political institutions, and the greatest security for which resides in the right of the people to make their own laws and alter them at their pleasure.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292.

The purpose of the 14th Amendment is to extend to the citizens and residents of the states the same protection against arbitrary state legislation affecting life, liberty, and property as is afforded by the 5th Amendment against similar legislation by Congress.

Tonawanda v. Lyon, 181 U. S. 392, 45 L. ed. 911, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Guthrie, 14th Amend. pp. 2, 3.

There are certain immutable principles of justice which inhere in the very idea of free government which no member of the Union may disregard, and these principles recognize the inherent rights of the individual, and are embodied and intended to be protected and secured by the fundamental law, and the 14th Amendment imposes upon the courts the duty to protect every individual or corporation from arbitrary denial or abridgment of those rights by the states.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 389, 42 L. ed. 780, 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

Since the adoption of the 14th Amendment no one of the fundamental rights of life, liberty, or property, recognized and guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, can be denied or abridged by a state in respect to any person within its jurisdiction.

These rights are principally enumerated in the earlier amendments of the Constitution. They were deemed so vital to the safety and security of the people that the absence from the Constitution adopted by the Convention of 1787 of express guaranties of them came very near defeating the acceptance of that instrument by the requisite number of states.

O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 370, 36 L. ed. 450, 469, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693.

Mr. Marshall Van Winkle argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error David C. Cornell:

The plaintiff in error, Cornell, was denied a fundamental right guaranteed by the common law.

Bird v. Georgia, 50 Ga. 585; 3 Wigmore, Ev. § 2250, pp. 3069, 3103, 3105, 3122; State v. Zdanowicz, 69 N. J. L. 619, 55 Atl. 744; United States v. 3 Tons of Coal, 6 Biss. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 16,515.

A constitutional right and immunity of plaintiffs in error were violated.

Guthrie, 14th Amend. (1898) § 1.

The cases which hold that the 14th Amendment has not extended the provisions of the 5th Amendment to the states do not apply to all the provisions of the 5th Amendment.

Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Maxwell v. 53 L. ed.

Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

In the construction of the language of the Constitution here relied upon, as, indeed, in all other instances where construction becomes necessary, we are to place ourselves as nearly as possible in the condition of the men who framed that instrument.

Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 12, 30 L. ed. 849, 853, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781.

The intention of the framers of the Amendment, and the design of the Amendment itself, was to change the existing condition, and to thus forever disable the states from passing laws trenching upon those fundamental rights and privileges which pertain to citizens of the United States.

Congressional Globe, p. 2764, May 23, 1866, 1st Session 39th Congress, pt. 3.

The genesis of the first section of the 14th Amendment is instructive as showing that it was constructed out of a demand for protection to all "citizens" of a state as well as of the United States, and to all "persons."

House Res. 1, 39th Congress, 1st Session; Congressional Globe, pp. 14, 18, 566, 645, 39th Congress, 1st Session; House Journal, pp. 267, 333, 796.

The effect of the 14th Amendment was that "the position of the United States is changed from that of a passive noninfringer of individual liberty to that of an active defender of the same against the states."

1 Burgess, Political Science & Comparative Const. Law, p. 185.

While it is true that a state has full control over the procedure in its courts, both in civil and criminal cases, that is so subject to the qualification that such procedure must not work a denial of fundamental rights or conflict with specific and applicable provisions of the Federal Constitution.

Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 175, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Messrs. Robert H. McCarter and H. M. Nevius argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The rights of a citizen of the United States may be those of a citizen of any of the states, by virtue of the two citizenships existing conjointly in any one person, but they are not necessarily coincident; and the rights of a citizen of the United States are not necessarily those of a citizen of any of the individual states.

Story, Const. 5th ed. ¶ 1936; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 448, 34 L. ed. 524, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 382, 38 L. ed. 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Wadleigh v. Newhall, 136 Fed. 946.

The 5th Amendment of the Federal Constitution is binding only on the Federal government and its agencies, and is not a limitation upon any of the states composing the Federal Union. The rights or immunities which it creates, therefore, are rights and immunities against Federal, but not against state, interference or abridgment.

Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243, 8 L. ed. 672; Twitchell v. Pennsylvania, 7 Wall. 321, 19 L. ed. 223; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678; Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 314, 36 L. ed. 986, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78, 26 L. ed. 658; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Davis v. Texas, 139 U. S. 651, 35 L. ed. 300, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 675; Scott v. Toledo, 1 L.R.A. 688, 36 Fed. 385; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394.

The 14th Amendment created no new civil rights. It merely extended the operation of existing rights, and furnished additional protection to such rights.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; United States v. Sanges, 48 Fed. 78; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 171, 22 L. ed. 629; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588.

The 14th Amendment does not profess to secure to all persons in the United States the benefit of the same laws and the same remedies. Great diversities in these respects may exist in two states separated only by an imaginary line. On one side of this line there may be a right of trial by jury, and on the other side no such right. Each state prescribes its own modes of judicial proceedings.

Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 321, 36 L. ed. 990, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 10 L. U. S. 31, 32, 25 L. ed. 992, 993.

Due process of law (referring to the 5th Amendment) refers to that law of the land which derives its authority from the legislative powers conferred upon Congress by the Constitution of the United States, exercised within the limits therein prescribed, and interpreted according to the principles of the common law. In the 14th Amendment, by parity of reason, it refers to the law of the land in each state, which derives its authority from the inherent and reserved powers of the state, exerted within the limits of those fundamental principles of liberty and justice which lie at the base of all our civil and political institutions, and the greatest security for which resides in the right of the people to make their own laws and alter them at their pleasure.

Ibid. To the same effect are Holden v.
102

Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 389, 42 L. ed. 780, 790, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 535, 28 L. ed. 238, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 92, 23 L. ed. 679.

The 14th Amendment legitimately operates to extend to the citizens and residents of the states the same protection against arbitrary state legislation affecting life, liberty, and property as is offered by the 5th Amendment against similar legislation by Congress. But the Federal courts ought not to interfere when what is complained of amounts to the enforcement of the laws of a state, applicable to all persons in like circumstances and conditions; and the Federal courts should not interfere unless there is some abuse of law amounting to confiscation of property or deprivation of personal rights.

1 Fed. Stat. Anno: p. 427.

Messrs. Nelson B. Gaskill and Robert H. McCarter also filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Moody, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

In the view we take of the case we do not deem it necessary to consider whether, with respect to the Federal question, there is any difference in the situation of the two defendants. It is assumed, in respect of each, that the jury were instructed that they might draw an unfavorable inference against him from his failure to testify, where it was within his power, in denial of the evidence which tended to incriminate him. The law of the state, as declared in the case at bar, which accords with other decisions (Parker v. State, 61 N. J. L. 308, 39 Atl. 651; State v. Wines, 65 N. J. L. 31, 46 Atl. 702; State v. Zdanowicz, 69 N. J. L. 619, 55 Atl. 743; State v. Banusik (N. J.) 64 Atl. 994), permitted such an inference to be drawn. The judicial act of the highest court of the *state, in authoritatively con- [91] struing and enforcing its laws, is the act of the state. Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581. The general question, therefore, is, whether such a law violates the 14th Amendment, either by abridging the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, or by depriving persons of their life, liberty, or property without due process of law. In order to bring themselves within the protection of the Constitution it is incumbent on the defendants to prove two propositions: First, that the exemption from compulsory self-incrimination is guaranteed by the Federal Constitution against impairment by the states; and, second, if it be so guaranteed, that the exemption was in fact impaired in the case at bar. The first proposition naturally presents itself for earlier consideration. If the right here asserted is not a Federal right, that is the end of the case. We have no authority to go further and determine whether the state court has erred in the interpretation and enforcement of its own laws.

The exemption from testimonial compulsion, that is, from disclosure as a witness of evidence against oneself, forced by any form of legal process, is universal in American law, though there may be differences as to its exact scope and limits. At the time of the formation of the Union the principle that no person could be compelled to be a witness against himself had become embodied in the common law and distinguished it from all other systems of jurisprudence. It was generally regarded then, as now, as a privilege of great value, a protection to the innocent, though a shelter to the guilty, and a safeguard against heedless, unfounded, or tyrannical prosecutions. Five of the original thirteen states (North Carolina, 1776; Pennsylvania, 1776; Virginia, 1776; Massachusetts, 1780; New Hampshire, 1784) had then guarded the principle from legislative or judicial change by including it in Constitutions or Bills of Right; Maryland had provided in her Constitution (1776) that "no man ought to be compelled to 92] give evidence against *himself, in a common court of law, or in any other court, but in such cases as have been usually practised in this state or may hereafter be directed by the legislature;" and in the remainder of those states there seems to be no doubt that it was recognized by the courts. The privilege was not included in the Federal Constitution as originally adopted, but was placed in one of the ten amendments which were recommended to the states by the first Congress, and by them adopted. Since then all the states of the Union have, from time to time, with varying form, but uniform meaning, included the privilege in their Constitutions, except the states of New Jersey and Iowa, and in those states it is held to be part of the existing law. State v. Zdanowicz, supra; State v. Height, 117 Iowa, 650, 59 L.R.A. 437, 94 Am. St. Rep. 323, 91 N. W. 935. It is obvious from this short statement that it has been supposed by the states that, so far as the state courts are concerned, the privilege had its origin in the Constitutions and laws of the states, and that persons appealing to it must look to the state for their protection. Indeed, since, by the unvarying decisions of this court, the first ten Amendments of the Federal Constitution are restrictive only of national action, there was nowhere else to look up to the time of the adoption of the 14th Amendment, and the state, at least until then, might give, modify, or withhold the privilege at its will. The 14th Amendment withdrew from the states powers theretofore enjoyed by them to an extent not yet fully ascertained, or rather, to speak more accurately, limited those powers and restrained their exercise. There is no doubt of the duty of this court to enforce the limitations and restraints whenever they exist, and there has been no hesitation in the performance of the duty. But, whenever a new limitation or restriction is declared, it is a matter of grave import, since, to that extent, it diminishes the authority of the state, so necessary to the perpetuity of our dual form of government, and changes its relation to its people and to the Union. The question in the case at bar has been twice before us, and been left undecided, as the cases were disposed of on other grounds. Adams v. New York, [93 192 U. S. 585, 48 L. ed. 575, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Consolidated Rendering Co. v. Vermont, 207 U. S. 541, 52 L. ed. 327, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178. The defendants contend, in the first place, that the exemption from self-incrimination is one of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States which the 14th Amendment forbids the states to abridge. It is not argued that the defendants are protected by that part of the 5th Amendment which provides that "no person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself," for it is recognized by counsel that, by a long line of decisions, the first ten Amendments are not operative on the states. Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243, 8 L. ed. 672; Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21, 22; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Barrington v. Missouri, 205 U. S. 483, 51 L. ed. 890, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582. But it is argued that this privilege is one of the fundamental rights of national citizenship, placed under national protection by the 14th Amendment, and it is specifically argued that the "privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States," protected against state action by that Amendment, include those fundamental personal rights which were protected against national action by the first eight Amendments; that this was the intention of the framers of the 14th Amendment, and that this part of it would otherwise have little or no meaning and effect. These arguments are not new to this court and the answer to them is found in its decisions. The meaning of the phrase "privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States," as used in the 14th Amendment, came under early consideration in the Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394. A statute of Louisiana created a corporation and conferred upon it the exclusive privilege, for a term of years, of establishing and maintaining within a fixed division of the city of New Orleans stock yards and slaughterhouses. The act provided that others might use these facilities for a prescribed price, forbade the landing for slaughter or the slaughtering of animals elsewhere or otherwise, and established a system of inspection. Those persons who were driven out of independent business by this law denied its validity in suits which [94] came to this *court by writs of error to the supreme court of the state, which had sustained the act. It was argued, inter alia, that the statute abridged the privileges and immunities of the plaintiffs in error as citizens of the United States, and the particular privilege which was alleged to be violated was that of pursuing freely their chosen trade, business, or calling. The majority of the court were not content with expressing the opinion that the act did not in fact deprive the plaintiffs in error of their right to exercise their trade (a proposition vigorously disputed by four dissenting justices), which would have disposed of the case, but preferred to rest the decision upon the broad ground that the right asserted in the case was not a privilege or immunity belonging to persons by virtue of their national citizenship, but, if existing at all, belonging to them only by virtue of their state citizenship. The 14th Amendment, it is observed by Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court, removed the doubt whether there could be a citizenship of the United States independent of citizenship of the state, by recognizing or creating and defining the former. "It is quite clear, then," he proceeds to say (p. 74), "that there is a citizenship of the United States and a citizenship of a state, which are distinct from each other and which depend upon different characteristics or circumstances in the individual." The description of the privileges and immunities of state citizenship, given by Mr. Justice Washington in Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 3,230, is then quoted, approved, and said to include "those rights which are fundamental," to embrace "nearly every civil right for the establishment and protection of which organized government is instituted," and "to be the class of rights which the state governments were created to establish and secure." This part of the opinion then concludes with the holding that the rights relied upon in the case are those which belong to the citizens of states, as such, and are under the sole care and protection of the state governments. The conclusion is preceded by the important declaration that the civil rights theretofore appertaining to citizenship of the states *and under the protection of the states were not given the security of national protection by this clause of the 14th Amendment. The exact scope and the momentous consequence of this decision are brought into clear light by the dissenting opinions. The view of Mr. Justice Field, concurred in by Chief Justice Chase and Justices Swayne and Bradley, was that the fundamental rights of citizenship, which, by the opinion of the court, were held to be rights of state citizenship, protected only by the state government, became, as the result of the 14th Amendment, rights of national citizenship, protected by the national Constitution. Said Mr. Justice Field (p. 95):

"The fundamental rights, privileges, and immunities which belong to him as a free man and a free citizen, now belong to him as a citizen of the United States, and are not dependent upon his citizenship of any state. . . . The Amendment does not attempt to confer any new privileges or immunities upon citizens, or to enumerate or define those already existing. It assumes that there are such privileges and immunities, which belong of right to citizens as such, and ordains that they shall not be abridged by state legislation. If this inhibition has no reference to privileges and immunities of this character, but only refers, as held by the majority of the court in their opinion, to such privileges and immunities as were, before its adoption, specially designated in the Constitution, or necessarily implied as belonging to citizens of the United States, it was a vain and idle enactment, which accomplished nothing, and most unnecessarily excited Congress and the people on its passage. With privileges and immunities thus designated or implied no state could ever have interfered by its laws, and no new constitutional provision was required to inhibit such interference. The supremacy of the Constitution and the laws of the United States always controlled any state legislation of that character. But, if the Amendment refers to the natural and inalienable rights which belong to all citizens, the inhibition has a profound significance and consequence."

*In accordance with these principles it [96] is said by the learned justice that the privileges and immunities of state citizenship, described by Mr. Justice Washington, and held by the majority of the court still to pertain exclusively to state citizenship, and to be protected solely by the state government, have been guaranteed by the 14th Amendment as privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States. And see the concurring opinions of Mr. Justice Field and Mr. Justice Bradley in Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 21 L. ed. 929; and in Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652. There can be no doubt, so far as the decision in the Slaughter-House Cases has determined the question, that the civil rights sometimes described as fundamental and inalienable, which, before the War Amendments, were enjoyed by state citizenship and protected by state government, were left untouched by this clause of the 14th Amendment. Criticism of this case has never entirely ceased, nor has it ever received universal assent by members of this court. Undoubtedly, it gave much less effect to the 14th Amendment than some of the public men active in framing it intended, and disappointed many others. On the other hand, if the views of the minority had prevailed, it is easy to see how far the authority and independence of the states would have been diminished, by subjecting all their legislative and judicial acts to correction by the legislative and review by the judicial branch of the national government. But we need not now inquire into the merits of the original dispute. This part, at least, of the Slaughter-House Cases, has been steadily adhered to by this court, so that it was said of it, in a case where the same clause of the Amendment was under consideration (Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 591, 44 L. ed. 597, 601, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494): "The opinion upon the matters actually involved and maintained by the judgment in the case has never been doubted or overruled by any judgment of this court." The distinction between national and state citizenship and their respective privileges there drawn has come to be firmly established. And so it was held that the right of 97] peaceable assembly *for a lawful purpose (it not appearing that the purpose had any reference to the national government) was not a right secured by the Constitution of the United States, although it was said that the right existed before the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, and that "it is and always has been one of the attributes of citizenship under a free government." United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 551, 23 L. ed. 588, 591. And see Hodges v. United States, 203 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 65, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6. In each case the Slaughter-House Cases were cited by the court, and in the latter case the rights described by Mr. Justice Washington were again treated as rights of state citizenship under state protection. If, then, it be assumed, without deciding the point, that an exemption from compulsory self-incrimination is what is described as a fundamental right belonging to all who live under a free government, and incapable of impairment by legislation or judicial decision, it is, so far as the states are concerned, a fundamental right inherent in state citizenship, and is a privilege or immunity of that citizenship only. Privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, on the other hand, are only such as arise out of the nature and essential character of the national government, or are specifically granted or secured to all citizens or persons by the Constitution of the United States. Slaughter-House Cases, supra, p. 79; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 448, 34 L. ed. 519, 524, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 382, 38 L. ed. 485, 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.

Thus, among the rights and privileges of national citizenship recognized by this court are the right to pass freely from state to state (Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. ed. 745); the right to petition Congress for a redress of grievances (United States v. Cruikshank, supra); the right to vote for national officers (Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Wiley v. Sinkler, 179 U. S. 58, 45 L. ed. 84, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17); the right to enter the public lands (United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 28 L. ed. 673, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35); the right to be protected against violence while in the lawful custody of a United States marshal (Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 429, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617); and the right to inform the United States authorities of violation of its laws (Re Quarles, 158 U. S. 532, 39 L. ed. 1080, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 959). *Most of these cases were indictments[98 against individuals for conspiracies to deprive persons of rights secured by the Constitution of the United States, and met with a different fate in this court from the indictments in United States v. Cruikshank and Hodges v. United States, because the rights in the latter cases were rights of state, and not of national, citizenship. But assuming it to be true that the exemption from self-incrimination is not, as a fundamental right of national citizenship, included in the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, counsel insist that, as a right specifically granted or secured by the Federal Constitution, it is included in them. This view is based upon the contention which must now be examined, that the safeguards of personal rights which are enumerated in the first eight articles of amendment to the Federal Constitution, sometimes called the Federal Bill of Rights, though they were by those Amendments originally secured only against national action, are among the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, which this clause of the 14th Amendment protects against state action. This view has been, at different times, expressed by justices of this court (Mr. Justice Field in O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 361, 36 L. ed. 450, 466, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Mr. Justice Harlan in the same case, 370, and in Maxwell v. Dow, supra, 606, 617), and was undoubtedly that entertained by some of those who framed the Amendment. It is, however, not profitable to examine the weighty arguments in its favor, for the question is no longer open in this court. The right of trial by jury in civil cases, guaranteed by the 7th Amendment (Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678), and the right to bear arms, guaranteed by the 2d Amendment (Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252, 29 L. ed. 615, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580), have been distinctly held not to be privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, guaranteed by the 14th Amendment against abridgment by the states, and in effect the same decision was made in respect of the guaranty against prosecution, except by indictment of a grand jury, contained in the 5th Amendment (Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292), *and in respect of the right to be confronted with witnesses, contained in the 6th Amendment (West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 48 L. ed. 965, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650). In Maxwell v. Dow, supra, where the plaintiff in error had been convicted in a state court of a felony upon an information, and by a jury of eight persons, it was held that the indictment, made indispensable by the 5th Amendment, and the trial by jury, guaranteed by the 6th Amendment, were not privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, as those words were used in the 14th Amendment. The discussion in that case ought not to be repeated. All the arguments for the other view were considered and answered, the authorities were examined and analyzed, and the decision rested upon the ground that this clause of the 14th Amendment did not forbid the states to abridge the personal rights enumerated in the first eight Amendments, because those rights were not within the meaning of the clause "privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States." If it be possible to render the principle which governed the decision more clear, it is done so by the dissent of Mr. Justice Harlan. We conclude, therefore, that the exemption from compulsory self-incrimination is not a privilege or immunity of national citizenship guaranteed by this clause of the 14th Amendment against abridgment by the states.

The defendants, however, do not stop here. They appeal to another clause of the 14th Amendment, and insist that the self-incrimination which they allege the instruction to the jury compelled was a denial of due process of law. This contention requires separate consideration, for it is possible that some of the personal rights safeguarded by the first eight Amendments against national action may also be safeguarded against state action, because a denial of them would be a denial of due process of law. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581. If this is so, it is not because those rights are enumerated in the first eight Amendments, but because they are of such a nature that they are included in the conception of due process of law. Few *phrases of the law are so[100] elusive of exact apprehension as this. Doubtless the difficulties of ascertaining its connotation have been increased in American jurisprudence, where it has been embodied in constitutions and put to new uses as a limit on legislative power. This court has always declined to give a comprehensive definition of it, and has preferred that its full meaning should be gradually ascertained by the process of inclusion and exclusion in the course of the decisions of cases as they arise. There are certain general principles, well settled, however, which narrow the field of discussion, and may serve as helps to correct conclusions. These principles grow out of the proposition universally accepted by American courts on the authority of Coke, that the words "due process of law" are equivalent in meaning to the words "law of the land," contained in that chapter of Magna Charta which provides that "no freeman shall be taken, or imprisoned, or disseised, or outlawed, or exiled, or any wise destroyed; nor shall we go upon him, nor send upon him, but by the lawful judgment of his peers or by the law of the land." Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Jones v. Robbins, 8 Gray, 329; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 500; McGehee, Due Process of Law, 16. From the consideration of the meaning of the words in the light of their historical origin this court has drawn the following conclusions:

First. What is due process of law may be ascertained by an examination of those settled usages and modes of proceedings existing in the common and statute law of England before the emigration of our ancestors, and shown not to have been unsuited to their civil and political condition by having been acted on by them after the settlement of this country. This test was adopted by the court, speaking through Mr. Justice Curtis, in Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 280, 15 L. ed. 372, 376 (approved in Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 314, 320, 36 L. ed. 986, 989, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 390, 42 L. ed. 780, 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; but see Lowe v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 81, 85, 41 L. ed. 78, 79, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031). Of course, the part of 101]the Constitution then *before the court was the 5th Amendment. If any different meaning of the same words, as they are used in the 14th Amendment, can be conceived, none has yet appeared in judicial decision. "A process of law," said Mr. Justice Matthews, commenting on this statement of Mr. Justice Curtis, "which is not otherwise forbidden, must be taken to be due process of law, if it can show the sanction of settled usage both in England and in this country." Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 528, 28 L. ed. 232, 236, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 117, 292.

Second. It does not follow, however, that a procedure, settled in English law at the time of the emigration, and brought to this country and practised by our ancestors, is an essential element of due process of law. If that were so, the procedure of the first half of the seventeenth century would be fastened upon the American jurisprudence like a straight jacket, only to be unloosed by constitutional amendment. That, said Mr. Justice Matthews, in the same case, p. 529, "would be to deny every quality of the law but its age, and to render it incapable of progress or improvement." Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 388, 42 L. ed. 780, 789, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 175, 44 L. ed. 119, 120, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Third. But, consistently with the requirements of due process, no change in ancient procedure can be made which disregards those fundamental principles, to be ascertained from time to time by judicial action, which have relation to process of law, and protect the citizen in his private right, and guard him against the arbitrary action of government. This idea has been many times expressed in differing words by this court, and it seems well to cite some expressions of it. The words "due process of law" "were intended to secure the individual from the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government, unrestrained by the established principles of private rights and distributive justice." Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 4 Wheat. 235, 244, 4 L. ed. 559, 561 (approved in Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 527, 28 L. ed. 232, 235, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 468, 35 L. ed. 225, 227, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53 L. ed.

577; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 45, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108). "This court has never attempted to define *with precision the words 'due process[102 of law.' . . . It is sufficient to say that there are certain immutable principles of justice which inhere in the very idea of free government which no member of the Union may disregard." Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 389, 42 L. ed. 780, 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383, 387. "The same words refer to that law of the land in each state, which derives its authority from the inherent and reserved powers of the state, exerted within the limits of those fundamental principles of liberty and justice which lie at the base of all our civil and political institutions." Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 448, 34 L. ed. 519, 524, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930, 934. "The limit of the full control which the state has in the proceedings of its courts, both in civil and criminal cases, is subject only to the qualification that such procedure must not work a denial of fundamental rights or conflict with specific and applicable provisions of the Federal Constitution." West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 263, 48 L. ed. 965, 969, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650, 652.

The question under consideration may first be tested by the application of these settled doctrines of this court. If the statement of Mr. Justice Curtis, as elucidated in Hurtado v. California, is to be taken literally, that alone might almost be decisive. For nothing is more certain, in point of historical fact, than that the practice of compulsory self-incrimination in the courts and elsewhere existed for four hundred years after the granting of Magna Charta, continued throughout the reign of Charles I. (though then beginning to be seriously questioned), gained at least some foothold among the early colonists of this country, and was not entirely omitted at trials in England until the eighteenth century. Wigmore, Ev. § 2250 (see for the Colonies, note 108); Hallam's Constitutional History of England, chapter 8. Widdleton's American ed. vol. 2, p. 37 (describing the criminal jurisdiction of the court of star chamber); Bentham's Rationale of Judicial Evidence, book 9, chap. 3, § 4.

Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, in his studies of the reports of English trials for crime, has thrown much light on the existence of the practice of questioning persons accused of *crime, and its gradual decay. He[103 considers, first, a group of trials which occurred between 1554 and 1637. Speaking of the trial before the jury, he says:

"The prisoner, in nearly every instance, asked, as a favor, that he might not be overpowered by the eloquence of counsel denouncing him in a set speech, but, in consideration of the weakness of his memory, might be allowed to answer separately to the different matters which might be alleged against him. This was usually granted, and the result was that the trial became a series of excited altercations between the prisoner and the different counsel opposed to him. Every statement of counsel operated as a question to the prisoner, and indeed they were constantly thrown into the form of questions, the prisoner either admitting or denying or explaining what was alleged against him. The result was that, during the period in question, the examination of the prisoner, which is at present scrupulously and I think even pedantically avoided, was the very essence of the trial, and his answers regulated the production of the evidence; the whole trial, in fact, was a long argument between the prisoner and counsel for the Crown, in which they questioned each other and grappled with each other's arguments with the utmost eagerness and closeness of reasoning." Stephen, History of the Crim. Law, 325.

This description of the questioning of the accused and the meeting of contending arguments finds curious confirmation in the report of the trial, in 1637, of Ann Hutchinson (which resulted in banishment) for holding and encouraging certain theological views which were not approved by the majority of the early Massachusetts rulers. 1 Hart's American History Told by Contemporaries, 382. The trial was presided over and the examination very largely conducted by Governor Winthrop, who had been, for some years before his emigration, an active lawyer and admitted to the Inner Temple. An examination of the report of this trial will show that he was not aware of any privilege against self-incrimination or [104] conscious of *any duty to respect it. Stephen says of the trials between 1640 and 1660 (Id. 358): "In some cases the prisoner was questioned, but never to any greater extent than that which it is practically impossible to avoid when a man has to defend himself without counsel. When so questioned the prisoners usually refused to answer." He further says (Id. 440): "Soon after the Revolution of 1688 the practice of questioning the prisoner died out." But committing magistrates were authorized to take the examination of persons suspected, which, if not under oath, was admissible against him on his trial, until by the 11 & 12 Viet. chap. 2, the prisoner was given the option whether he would speak, and warned that what he said might be used against him. But even now there seems to be a very well-recognized and important exception in English law to the rule that no person can be compelled to furnish evidence against himself.

A practice in bankruptcy has existed from ancient times, and still exists, which would not be constitutionally possible under our national bankruptcy law or under the insolvency law of any state whose Constitution contains the customary prohibition of compulsory self-incrimination. The bankruptcy act of 1 James I., chap. 15, § 7 (1603), authorized the commissioners of bankruptcy to compel, by commitment, if necessary, the bankrupt to submit to an examination touching his estate and dealings. The provision was continued in the subsequent acts, and in 1820, in Ex parte Cossens, Buck, Bankr. Cas. 531, 540, Lord Eldon, in the course of a discussion of the right to examine a bankrupt, held that he could be compelled to disclose his violations of law in respect of his trade and estate, and, while recognizing the general principle of English law, that no one could be compelled to incriminate himself, said: "I have always understood the proposition to admit of a qualification with respect to the jurisdiction in bankruptcy." The act of 6 Geo. IV., chap. 16, § 36 (1825), authorized the compulsory examination of the bankrupt "touching all matters relating either to his trade, dealings, or estate, or which may tend to disclose any *secret [105 grant, conveyance, or concealment of his lands." The act of 12 & 13 Viet. chap. 106, § 117 (1849), contained the same provision. Construing these acts, it was held that the bankrupt must answer, though his answer might furnish evidence of his crime, and even if an indictment were pending against him; and that the evidence thus compelled was admissible on his trial for crime. Re Heath, 2 Deacon & C. 214; Re Smith, 2 Deacon & C. 230, 235; Reg. v. Scott, Dears. & B. C. C. 47; Reg. v. Cross, 7 Cox, C. C. 226; Queen v. Widdop, L. R. 2 C. C. 3. The act of 46 & 47 Viet. chap. 52, § 17 (1883), which we understand to be (with some amendment, not material here) the present law, passed after the decisions cited, expressly provided that the examination shall be taken in writing and signed by the debtor, "and may thereafter be used in evidence against him." It has since been held that other evidence of his testimony than that written and signed by him may be used. Queen v. Erdheim [1896] 2 Q. B. 260, and see King v. Pike [1902] 1 K. B. 552.† It is to be observed that not until 1883 did Parliament, which has an unlimited legislative power, expressly provide that the evidence compelled from the bankrupt could be used in proof of an indictment against him. The rule had been previously firmly established by judicial decisions upon statutes simply authorizing a compulsory examination. If the rule had been thought to be in conflict with "the law of the land" of Magna Charta, "a sacred text, the nearest approach to an irrevocable 'fundamental statute' that England has ever had" (1 Pollock & M. History of English Law, 152), it is inconceivable that such a consideration would not have received some attention from counsel and judges. We think it is manifest, from this review of the origin, growth, extent, and limits of the exemption from compulsory self-incrimination in the English law, that it is not regarded as a part of the law of the land of Magna Charta or the due process of law, which *has been deemed an equivalent expression, but, on the contrary, is regarded as separate from and independent of due process. It came into existence not as an essential part of due process, but as a wise and beneficent rule of evidence developed in the course of judicial decision. This is a potent argument when it is remembered that the phrase was borrowed from English law, and that to that law we must look at least for its primary meaning.

†In certain offenses, which may be generally described as embezzlements, the evidence compelled from a bankrupt cannot be used against him. 24 & 25 Viet. chap. 96, § 85; 53 & 54 Viet. chap. 71, § 27.

But, without repudiating or questioning the test proposed by Mr. Justice Curtis for the court, or rejecting the inference drawn from English law, we prefer to rest our decision on broader grounds, and inquire whether the exemption from self-incrimination is of such a nature that it must be included in the conception of due process. Is it a fundamental principle of liberty and justice which inheres in the very idea of free government and is the inalienable right of a citizen of such a government? If it is, and if it is of a nature that pertains to process of law, this court has declared it to be essential to due process of law. In approaching such a question it must not be forgotten that in a free representative government nothing is more fundamental than the right of the people, through their appointed servants, to govern themselves in accordance with their own will, except so far as they have restrained themselves by constitutional limits specifically established, and that, in our peculiar dual form of government, nothing is more fundamental than the full power of the state to order its own affairs and govern its own people, except so far as the Federal Constitution, expressly or by fair implication, has withdrawn that power. The power of the people of the states to make and alter their laws at pleasure is the greatest security for liberty and justice, this court has said in Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 527, 28 L. ed. 232, 235, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292. We are not invested with the jurisdiction to pass upon the expediency, wisdom, or justice of the laws of the states as declared by their courts, but only to determine their conformity with the Federal Constitution and the paramount laws enacted pursuant to it. Under the guise of interpreting the Constitution we must *take care that we do not import into the discussion our own personal views of what would be wise, just, and fitting rules of government to be adopted by a free people, and confound them with constitutional limitations. The question before us is the meaning of a constitutional provision which forbids the states to deny to any person due process of law. In the decision of this question we have the authority to take into account only those fundamental rights which are expressed in that provision; not the rights fundamental in citizenship, state or national, for they are secured otherwise; but the rights fundamental in due process, and therefore an essential part of it. We have to consider whether the right is so fundamental in due process that a refusal of the right is a denial of due process. One aid to the solution of the question is to inquire how the right was rated during the time when the meaning of due process was in a formative state, and before it was incorporated in American constitutional law. Did those who then were formulating and insisting upon the rights of the people entertain the view that the right was so fundamental that there could be no due process without it? It has already appeared that, prior to the formation of the American Constitutions, in which the exemption from compulsory self-incrimination was specifically secured, separately, independently, and side by side with the requirement of due process, the doctrine was formed, as other doctrines of the law of evidence have been formed, by the course of decision in the courts, covering a long period of time. Searching further, we find nothing to show that it was then thought to be other than a just and useful principle of law. None of the great instruments in which we are accustomed to look for the declaration of the fundamental rights made reference to it. The privilege was not dreamed of for hundreds of years after Magna Charta (1215), and could not have been implied in the "law of the land" there secured. The Petition of Right (1629), though it insists upon the right secured by Magna Charta to be condemned only by the law of the land, and sets forth, by way of grievance, divers violations of *it, is silent upon the practice of compulsory self-incrimination, though it was then a matter of common occurrence in all the courts of the realm. The Bill of Rights of the first year of the reign of William and Mary (1689) is likewise silent, though the practice of questioning the prisoner at his trial had not then ceased. The negative argument which arises out of the omission of all reference to any exemption from compulsory self-incrimination in these three great declarations of English liberty (though it is not supposed to amount to a demonstration) is supported by the positive argument that the English courts and Parliaments, as we have seen, have dealt with the exemption as they would have dealt with any other rule of evidence, apparently without a thought that the question was affected by the law of the land of Magna Charta, or the due process of law which is its equivalent.

We pass by the meager records of the early colonial time, so far as they have come to our attention, as affording light too uncertain for guidance. See Wigmore; Ev. § 2250, note 108; 2 Hening's Stat. at L. 422 (1676) Va.; 1 Winthrop's History of New England, 47, provincial act, 4 Wm. & Mary, Ancient Charters, Massachusetts, 214. Though it is worthy of note that neither the declaration of rights of the Stamp Act Congress (1765) nor the declaration of rights of the Continental Congress (1774) nor the ordinance for the government of the Northwestern territory included the privilege in their enumeration of fundamental rights.

But the history of the incorporation of the privilege in an amendment to the national Constitution is full of significance in this connection. Five states—Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, and Connecticut—ratified the Constitution without proposing amendments. Massachusetts then followed with a ratification, accompanied by a recommendation of nine amendments, none of which referred to the privilege; Maryland with a ratification without proposing amendments; South Carolina with a ratification accompanied by a recommendation of four amendments, none of which [109]referred to the privilege, *and New Hampshire with a ratification accompanied by a recommendation of twelve amendments, none of which referred to the privilege. The nine states requisite to put the Constitution in operation ratified it without a suggestion of incorporating this privilege. Virginia was the tenth state to ratify, proposing, by separate resolution, an elaborate bill of rights under twenty heads, and, in addition, twenty amendments to the body of the Constitution. Among the rights enumerated as "essential and inalienable" is that no man "can be compelled to give evidence against himself," and "no freeman ought to be deprived of his life, liberty, or property but by the law of the land." New York ratified with a proposal of numerous amendments and a declaration of rights which the convention declared could not be violated and were consistent with the Constitution. One of these rights was that "no person ought to be taken, imprisoned or deprived of his freehold, or be exiled or deprived of his privileges, franchises, life, liberty, or property but by due process of law;" and another was that, "in all criminal prosecutions, the accused . . . should not be compelled to give evidence against himself." North Carolina and Rhode Island were the last to ratify, each proposing a large number of amendments, including the provision that no man "can be compelled to give evidence against himself;" and North Carolina, that "no freeman ought to be . . . deprived of his life, liberty, or property but by the law of the land;" and Rhode Island, that "no freeman ought to be . . . deprived of his life, liberty, or property but by the trial by jury, or by the law of the land."

Thus it appears that four only of the thirteen original states insisted upon incorporating the privilege in the Constitution, and they separately and simultaneously with the requirement of due process of law, and that three states proposing amendments were silent upon this subject. It is worthy of note that two of these four states did not incorporate the privilege in their own Constitutions, where it would have had a much wider field of usefulness, until many years after. New York *in [110 1821 and Rhode Island in 1842 (its first Constitution). This survey does not tend to show that it was then in this country the universal or even general belief that the privilege ranked among the fundamental and inalienable rights of mankind; and what is more important here, it affirmatively shows that the privilege was not conceived to be inherent in due process of law, but, on the other hand, a right separate, independent, and outside of due process. Congress, in submitting the Amendments to the several states, treated the two rights as exclusive of each other. Such also has been the view of the states in framing their own Constitutions, for in every case, except in New Jersey and Iowa, where the due process clause or its equivalent is included, it has been thought necessary to include separately the privilege clause. Nor have we been referred to any decision of a state court save one (State v. Height, 117 Iowa, 650, 59 L.R.A. 437, 94 Am. St. Rep. 323, 91 N. W. 935), where the exemption has been held to be required by due process of law. The inference is irresistible that it has been the opinion of constitution makers that the privilege, if fundamental in any sense, is not fundamental in due process of law, nor an essential part of it. We believe that this opinion is proved to have been correct by every historical test by which the meaning of the phrase can be tried.

The decisions of this court, though they are silent on the precise question before us, ought to be searched to discover if they present any analogies which are helpful in its decision. The essential elements of due process of law, already established by them, are singularly few, though of wide application and deep significance. We are not here concerned with the effect of due process in restraining substantive laws, as, for example, that which forbids the taking of private property for public use without compensation. We need notice now only those cases which deal with the principles which must be observed in the trial of criminal and civil causes. Due process requires that the court which assumes to determine the rights of parties shall have jurisdiction (Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 733, 24 L. ed. 565, 572; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Old Wayne Mut. 111] Life Asso. v. McDonough, 204 U. S. 8, 51 L. ed. 345, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236), and that there shall be notice and opportunity for hearing given the parties. (Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 42 L. ed. 215, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; and see Londoner v. Denver, 210 U. S. 373, 52 L. ed. 1103, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708). Subject to these two fundamental conditions, which seem to be universally prescribed in all systems of law established by civilized countries, this court has, up to this time, sustained all state laws, statutory or judicially declared, regulating procedure, evidence, and methods of trial, and held them to be consistent with due process of law. Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678; Re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 34 L. ed. 796, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 34 L. ed. 816, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 314, 36 L. ed. 986, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; McNulty v. California, 149 U. S. 645, 37 L. ed. 882, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 959; McKane v. Durston, 153 U. S. 684, 38 L. ed. 867, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 913; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Lowe v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 81, 41 L. ed. 78, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 41 L. ed. 949, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Hodgson v. Vermont, 168 U. S. 262, 42 L. ed. 461, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; 53 L. ed.

Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 48 L. ed. 965, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 50 L. ed. 157, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; Rogers v. Peck, 199 U. S. 425, 50 L. ed. 256, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Howard v. Kentucky, 200 U. S. 164, 50 L. ed. 421, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189; Rawlins v. Georgia, 201 U. S. 638, 50 L. ed. 899, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 50 L. ed. 689, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366.

Among the most notable of these decisions are those sustaining the denial of jury trial both in civil and criminal cases, the substitution of informations for indictments by a grand jury, the enactment that the possession of policy slips raises a presumption of illegality, and the admission of the deposition of an absent witness in a criminal case. The cases proceed upon the theory that, given a court of justice which has jurisdiction, and acts, not arbitrarily, but in conformity with a general law, upon evidence, and after inquiry made with notice to the parties affected and opportunity to be heard, then all the requirements of due process, so far as it relates to procedure in court and methods of trial and character and effect of evidence, are complied with. Thus it was said in Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, supra, p. 393: "But it is clear that the 14th Amendment in no way undertakes to control the *power of a[112] state to determine by what process legal rights may be asserted or legal obligations be enforced, provided the method of procedure adopted for these purposes gives reasonable notice and accords fair opportunity to be heard before the issues are decided;" and in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 236, 44 L. ed. 750, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622: "It is no longer open to contention that the due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States does not control mere forms of procedure in state courts or regulate practice therein. All its requirements are complied with, provided in the proceedings which are claimed not to have been due process of law the person condemned has had sufficient notice, and adequate opportunity has been afforded him to defend;" and in Hooker v. Los Angeles, 188 U. S. 314, 318, 47 L. ed. 487, 491, 63 L.R.A. 471, 479, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 395, 397: "The 14th Amendment does not control the power of a state to determine the form of procedure by which legal rights may be ascertained, if the method adopted gives reasonable notice and affords a fair opportunity to be heard;" and in Rogers v. Peck, supra, p. 435: "Due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment does not require the state to adopt a particular form of procedure, so long as it appears that the accused has had sufficient notice of the accusation and an adequate opportunity to defend himself in the prosecution." It is impossible to reconcile the reasoning of these cases and the rule which governed their decision with the theory that an exemption from compulsory self-incrimination is included in the conception of due process of law. Indeed, the reasoning for including indictment by a grand jury and trial by a petit jury in that conception, which has been rejected by this court in Hurtado v. California and Maxwell v. Dow, was historically and in principle much stronger. Clearly appreciating this, Mr. Justice Harlan, in his dissent in each of these cases, pointed out that the inexorable logic of the reasoning of the court was to allow the states, so far as the Federal Constitution was concerned, to compel any person to be a witness against himself. In Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 113 [1898], Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for the whole court, said, in effect, that the 14th Amendment would not prevent a state from adopting or continuing the Civil Law instead of the common law. This dictum has been approved and made an essential part of the reasoning of the decision in Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 387, 389, 42 L. ed. 789, 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383, and Maxwell v. Dow, supra, 598. The statement excludes the possibility that the privilege is essential to due process, for it hardly need be said that the interrogation of the accused at his trial is the practice in the Civil Law.

Even if the historical meaning of due process of law and the decisions of this court did not exclude the privilege from it, it would be going far to rate it as an immutable principle of justice which is the inalienable possession of every citizen of a free government. Salutory as the principle may seem to the great majority, it cannot be ranked with the right to hearing before condemnation, the immunity from arbitrary power not acting by general laws, and the inviolability of private property. The wisdom of the exemption has never been universally assented to since the days of Bentham, many doubt it to-day, and it is best defended not as an unchangeable principle of universal justice, but as a law proved by experience to be expedient. See Wigmore, Ev. § 2251. It has no place in the jurisprudence of civilized and free countries outside the domain of the common law, and it is nowhere observed among our own people in the search for truth outside the administration of the law. It should, must, and will be rigidly observed where it is secured by specific constitutional safeguards, but there is nothing in it which gives it a sanctity above and before constitutions themselves. Much might be said in favor of the view that the privilege was guaranteed against state impairment as a privilege and immunity of national citizenship, but, as has been shown, the decisions of this court have foreclosed that view. There seems to be no reason whatever, however, for straining the meaning of due process of law to include this privilege within it, because, perhaps, we may think it of great value. The states had guarded the privilege to the satisfaction of their own people up to the adoption of the 14th Amendment. No reason is perceived why they cannot continue to do so. The power of their people ought not to be fettered, their sense of responsibility lessened, and their capacity for sober and restrained self-government weakened, by forced construction of the Federal Constitution. If the people of New Jersey are not content with the law as declared in repeated decisions of their courts, the remedy is in their own hands. They may, if they choose, alter it by legislation, as the people of Maine did when the courts of that state made the same ruling. State v. Bartlett, 55 Me. 200; State v. Lawrence, 57 Me. 574; State v. Cleaves, 59 Me. 298, 8 Am. Rep. 422; State v. Banks, 78 Me. 492, 7 Atl. 269; Rev. Stat. chap. 135, § 19.

We have assumed only for the purpose of discussion that what was done in the case at bar was an infringement of the privilege against self-incrimination. We do not intend, however, to lend any countenance to the truth of that assumption. The courts of New Jersey, in adopting the rule of law which is complained of here, have deemed it consistent with the privilege itself, and not a denial of it. The reasoning by which this view is supported will be found in the cases cited from New Jersey and Maine, and see Queen v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77; Ex parte Kops [1894] A. C. 650. The authorities upon the question are in conflict. We do not pass upon the conflict, because, for the reasons given, we think that the exemption from compulsory self-incrimination in the courts of the states is not secured by any part of the Federal Constitution.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

I feel constrained by a sense of duty to express my nonconcurrence in the action of the court in this case.

Twining and Cornell were indicted for a criminal offense in a New Jersey court, and, having been found guilty by a jury, were sentenced, respectively, to imprisonment for 115]six and *four years. The judgment of conviction was affirmed, first in the supreme court of the state, afterwards in the court of errors and appeals. The case was brought here for review, and the accused assigned for error that the mode of proceeding during the trial was such as to deny them a right secured by the Constitution of the United States,—namely, the right of an accused not to be compelled to testify against himself.

Upon this point the court, in the opinion just delivered, says: "We have assumed, only for the purpose of discussion, that what was done in the case at bar was an infringement of the privilege against self-incrimination." But the court takes care to add immediately: "We do not intend, however, to lend any countenance to the truth of that assumption. The courts of New Jersey, in adopting the rule of law which is complained of here, have deemed it consistent with the privilege itself."

It seems to me that the first inquiry on this writ of error should have been whether, upon the record before us, that which was actually done in the trial court amounted, in law, to a violation of that privilege. If the court was not prepared to hold, upon the record before it, that the privilege of immunity from self-incrimination had been actually violated, then, I submit, it ought not to have gone further and held it to be competent for a state, despite the granting of immunity from self-incrimination by the Federal Constitution, to compel one accused of crime to be a witness against himself. Whether a state is forbidden by the Constitution of the United States to violate the principle of immunity from self-incrimination is a question which it is clearly unnecessary to decide now, unless what was, in fact, done at the trial, was inconsistent with that immunity. But, although expressly declaring that it will not lend any countenance to the truth of the assumption that the proceedings below were in disregard of the maxim, Nemo tenetur seipsum accusare, and without saying whether there was, in fact, any substantial violation of the 116]privilege *of immunity from self-incrimination, the court, for the purpose only of discussion, has entered upon the academic inquiry whether a state may, without violating the Constitution of the United States, compel one accused of crime to be a witness against himself,—a question of vast moment, one of such transcendent importance that a court ought not to decide it unless the record before it requires that course to be adopted. It is entirely consistent with the opinion just delivered that the court thinks that what is complained of as having been done at the trial of the accused was not, in law, an infringement of the privilege of immunity from self-incrimination. Yet, as stated, the court, in its wisdom, has forborne to say whether, in its judgment, that privilege was, in fact, violated in the state court, but simply, for the purpose of discussion, has proceeded on the assumption that the privilege was disregarded at the trial.

As a reason why it takes up first the question of the power of a state, so far as the Federal Constitution is concerned, to compel self-incrimination, the court says that if the right here asserted is not a Federal right that is an end of the case, and it must not go further. It would, I submit, have been more appropriate to say that, if no ground whatever existed, under the facts disclosed by the record, to contend that a Federal right had been violated, this court would be without authority to go further and express its opinion on an abstract question relating to the powers of the states under the Constitution.

What I have suggested as to the proper course of procedure in this court is supported by our action in Shoener v. Pennsylvania, 207 U. S. 188, 195, 52 L. ed. 163, 166, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110. That was a criminal case, brought here from the supreme court of Pennsylvania,—the accused, who was convicted, insisting that the proceeding against him in the state court was in violation of the clause of the Federal Constitution declaring that no person shall be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb. Upon looking into the record of that case we found that the accused had not been, previously, put in legal jeopardy for *the same offense. We went no further, [117 but dismissed the writ of error, declining to consider the grave constitutional question pressed upon our attention, namely, whether the jeopardy clause of the Federal Constitution operated as a restraint upon the states in the execution of their criminal laws. But as a different course has been pursued in this case, I must of necessity consider the sufficiency of the grounds upon which the court bases its present judgment of affirmance.

The court, in its consideration of the relative rights of the United States and of the several states, holds, in this case, that, without violating the Constitution of the United States, a state can compel a person accused of crime to testify against himself. In my judgment, immunity from self-incrimination is protected against hostile state action, not only by that clause in the 14th Amendment declaring that "no state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States," but by the clause, in the same Amendment, "nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." No argument is needed to support the proposition that, whether manifested by statute or by the final judgment of a court, state action, if liable to the objection that it abridges the privileges or immunities of national citizenship, must also be regarded as wanting in the due process of law enjoined by the 14th Amendment, when such state action substantially affects life, liberty, or property.

At the time of the adoption of the 14th Amendment immunity from self-incrimination was one of the privileges or immunities belonging to citizens, for the reason that the 5th Amendment, speaking in the name of the people of the United States, had declared, in terms, that no person "shall be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." That Amendment, it was long ago decided, operated as a restriction on the exercise of powers by the United States or by Federal tribunals and agencies, but ¹¹⁸*did not impose any restraint upon a state or upon a state tribunal or agency. The original Amendments of the Constitution had their origin, as all know, in the belief of many patriotic statesmen in the states then composing the Union, that, under the Constitution, as originally submitted to the people for adoption or rejection, the national government might disregard the fundamental principles of Anglo-American liberty, for the maintenance of which our fathers took up arms against the mother country.

What, let me inquire, must then have been regarded as principles that were fundamental in the liberty of the citizen? Every student of English history will agree that, long before the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, certain principles affecting the life and liberty of the subject had become firmly established in the jurisprudence of England, and were deemed vital to the safety of freemen, and that among those principles was the one that no person accused of crime could be compelled to be a witness against himself. It is true that at one time in England the practice of "questioning the prisoner" was enforced in star chamber proceedings. But we have the authority of Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, in his History of the Criminal Law of England, for saying that, soon after the Revolution of 1688, the practice of questioning the prisoner died out. Vol. 1, p. 440. The liberties of the English people had then been placed on a firmer foundation. Personal liberty was thenceforward jealously guarded. Certain it is, that when the present government of the United States was established it was the belief of all liberty-loving men in America that real, genuine freedom could not exist in any country that recognized the power of government to compel persons accused of crime to be witnesses against themselves. And it is not too much to say that the wise men who laid the foundations of our constitutional government would have stood aghast at the suggestion that immunity from self-incrimination was not among the essential, fundamental principles of English law. An able writer on English and American Constitutional ¹¹⁹*law has recently well said: "When [the first Continental Congress of 1774 claimed to be entitled to the benefit, not only of the common law of England, but of such of the English statutes as existed at the time of the colonization, and which they had by experience found to be applicable to their several local and other circumstances, they simply declared the basic principle of English law that English subjects, going to a new and uninhabited country, carry with them, as their birthright, the laws of England existing when the colonization takes place. . . . English law, public and private, continued in force in all the states that became sovereign in 1776, each state declaring for itself the date from which it would recognize it." Taylor, Science of Jurisprudence, 436, 437. It is indisputably established that, despite differences in forms of government, the people in the colonies were a unit as to certain leading principles, among which was the principle that the people were entitled to "enjoy the rights and privileges of British-born subjects and the benefit of the common laws of England" (1 Story, Const. § 163), and that (to use the words of the Continental Congress of 1774) "by immigration to the colonies, the people by no means forfeited, surrendered, or lost any of those rights, but that they were then, and their descendants are now, entitled to the exercise and enjoyment of them as their local and other circumstances enable them to exercise and enjoy."

Can there be any doubt that, at the opening of the War of Independence, the people of the colonies claimed as one of their birthrights the privilege of immunity from self-incrimination? This question can be answered in but one way. If, at the beginning of the Revolutionary War, any lawyer had claimed that one accused of crime could lawfully be compelled to testify against himself, he would have been laughed at by his brethren of the bar, both in England and America. In accordance with this universal view as to the rights of freemen, Virginia, in its convention of May, 1776,—in advance, be it observed, of the Declaration of Independence,—made a *declaration (drawn entirely by the celebrated George Mason) which set forth certain rights as pertaining to the people of that state and to their posterity “as the basis and foundation of government.” Among those rights (that famous declaration distinctly announced) was the right of a person not to be compelled to give evidence against himself. Precisely the same declaration was made in Pennsylvania by its convention assembled at Philadelphia on the 15th of July, 1776. Vermont, by its convention of 1777, said “Nor can he [a man accused of crime] be compelled to give evidence against himself.” Maryland, in 1776, declared that “no man ought to be compelled to give evidence against himself, in a court of criminal law.” Massachusetts, in its Constitution of 1780, provided that “no subject shall be . . . compelled to accuse, or to furnish evidence against, himself.” The same provision was made by New Hampshire in its Constitution of 1784. And North Carolina as early as 1776 recognized the privilege of immunity from self-incrimination by declaring, in its Constitution, that a man “shall not be compelled to give evidence against himself.” These explicit declarations in the Constitutions of leading colonies, before the submission of the national Constitution to the people for adoption or rejection, caused patriotic men, whose fidelity to American liberty no one doubted, to protest that that instrument was defective, in that it furnished no express guaranty against the violation by the national government of the personal rights that inhered in liberty. Nothing is made clearer by the history of our country than that the Constitution would not have been accepted by the requisite number of states, but for the understanding, on all sides, that it should be promptly amended so as to meet this objection. So, when the first Congress met, there was entire unanimity among statesmen of that day as to the necessity and wisdom of having a national Bill of Rights which would, beyond all question, secure against Federal encroachment all the rights, privileges, and immunities which, everywhere and by everybody in America, [121] were then recognized as *fundamental in Anglo-American liberty. Hence the prompt incorporation into the supreme law of the land of the original Amendments. By the 5th Amendment, as already stated, it was expressly declared that no one should be compelled, in a criminal case, to be a witness against himself. Those Amendments being adopted by the nation, the people no longer feared that the United States or any Federal agency could exert power that was inconsistent with the fundamental rights recognized in those Amendments. It is to be observed that the Amendments introduced no principle not already familiar to liberty-loving people. They only put in the form of constitutional sanction, as barriers against oppression, the principles which the people of the colonies, with entire unanimity, deemed vital to their safety and freedom.

Still more. At the close of the late Civil War, which had seriously disturbed the foundations of our governmental system, the question arose whether provision should not be made by constitutional Amendments to secure against attack by the states the rights, privileges, and immunities which, by the original Amendments, had been placed beyond the power of the United States or any Federal agency to impair or destroy. Those rights, privileges, and immunities had not then, in terms, been guarded by the national Constitution against impairment or destruction by the states, although, before the adoption of the 14th Amendment, every state, without, perhaps, an exception, had, in some form, recognized, as part of its fundamental law, most, if not all, the rights and immunities mentioned in the original Amendments, among them immunity from self-incrimination. This is made clear by the opinion of the court in the present case. The court says: “The exemption from testimonial compulsion, that is, from disclosure as a witness of evidence against one's self, forced by any form of legal process, is universal in American law, though there may be a difference as to its exact scope and limits. At the time of the formation of the Union, the principle that no person could be compelled to be a witness against himself *had become embodied in the common [122] law and distinguished it from all other systems of jurisprudence. It was generally regarded then, as now, as a privilege of great value, a protection to the innocent, though a shelter to the guilty, and a safeguard against heedless, unfounded, or tyrannical prosecutions.” Such was the situation, the court concedes, at the time the 14th Amendment was prepared and adopted. That Amendment declared that all persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction are citizens of the United States, “and of the state wherein they reside.” Momentous as this declaration was, in its political consequences, it was not deemed sufficient for the complete protection of the essential rights of national citizenship and personal liberty. Although the nation was restrained by existing constitutional provisions from encroaching upon those rights, yet, so far as the Federal Constitution was concerned, the states could, at that time, have dealt with those rights upon the basis entirely of their own Constitution and laws. It was therefore deemed necessary that the 14th Amendment should, in the name of the United States, forbid, as it expressly does, any state from making or enforcing a law that will abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, or deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. The privileges and immunities mentioned in the original Amendments, and universally regarded as our heritage of liberty from the common law, were thus secured to every citizen of the United States, and placed beyond assault by any government, Federal or state; and due process of law, in all public proceedings affecting life, liberty, or property, was enjoined equally upon the nation and the states.

What, then, were the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States which the 14th Amendment guarded against encroachment by the states? Whatever they were, that Amendment placed them beyond the power of any state to abridge. And what were the rights of life and liberty which the Amendment protected? Whatever they were, that Amendment 123 guarded them against any hostile state action that was wanting in due process of law.

I will not attempt to enumerate all the privileges and immunities which at that time belonged to citizens of the United States. But I confidently assert that among such privileges was the privilege of immunity from self-incrimination which the people of the United States, by adopting the 5th Amendment, had placed beyond Federal encroachment. Can such a view be deemed unreasonable in the face of the fact, frankly conceded in the opinion of the court, that, at common law, as well at the time of the formation of the Union and when the 14th Amendment was adopted, immunity from self-incrimination was a privilege "universal in American law," was everywhere deemed "of great value, a protection to the innocent, though a shelter to the guilty, and a safeguard against heedless, unfounded, or tyrannical prosecutions?" Is it conceivable that a privilege or immunity of such a priceless character, one expressly recognized in the supreme law of the land, one thoroughly interwoven with the history of Anglo-American liberty, was not in the mind of the country when it declared, in the 14th Amendment, that no state shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States? The 14th Amendment would have been disapproved by every state in the Union if it had saved or recognized the right of a state to compel one accused of crime, in its courts, to be a witness against himself. We state the matter in this way because it is common knowledge that the compelling of a person to criminate himself shocks or ought to shock the sense of right and justice to everyone who loves liberty. Indeed, this court has not hesitated thus to characterize the star chamber method of compelling an accused to be a witness against himself. In Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 631, 633, 29 L. ed. 746, 751, 752, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524, 533, 534, will be found some weighty observations by Mr. Justice Bradley, delivering the judgment of the court, as to the scope and meaning of the 4th and 5th Amendments. The court, speaking by that eminent jurist, said: *"124 it is elementary knowledge, that one cardinal rule of the court of chancery is never to decree a discovery which might tend to convict the party of a crime, or to forfeit his property. And any compulsory discovery by extorting the party's oath, or compelling the production of his private books and papers, to convict him of crime, or to forfeit his property, is contrary to the principles of a free government. It is abhorrent to the instincts of an Englishman; it is abhorrent to the instincts of an American. It may suit the purposes of despotic power, but it cannot abide the pure atmosphere of political liberty and personal freedom." Again: "We have already noticed the intimate relation between the two Amendments. They throw great light on each other. For the 'unreasonable searches and seizures' condemned in the 4th Amendment are almost always made for the purpose of compelling a man to give evidence against himself, which, in criminal cases, is condemned in the 5th Amendment; and compelling a man 'in a criminal case to be a witness against himself,' which is condemned in the 5th Amendment, throws light on the question as to what is an 'unreasonable search and seizure' within the meaning of the 4th Amendment. And we have been unable to perceive that the seizure of a man's private books and papers, to be used in evidence against him,' is substantially different from compelling him to be a witness against himself." These observations were referred to approvingly in Counselman v. Hitchcock, 142 U. S. 547, 580, 581, 35 L. ed. 1110, 1120, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 816, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

I am of opinion that, as immunity from self-incrimination was recognized in the 5th Amendment of the Constitution, and placed beyond violation by any Federal agency, it should be deemed one of the immunities of citizens of the United States which the 14th Amendment, in express terms, forbids any state from abridging,—as much so, for instance, as the right of free speech (1st Amend.) or the exemption from cruel or unusual punishments (8th Amend.), or the exemption from being put twice in jeopardy of life or limb for the same offense (5th Amend.), or the exemption from 125]unreasonable searches *and seizures of one's person, house, papers, or effects (4th Amend.). Even if I were anxious or willing to cripple the operation of the 14th Amendment by strained or narrow interpretations, I should feel obliged to hold that, when that Amendment was adopted, all these last-mentioned exemptions were among the immunities belonging to citizens of the United States, which, after the adoption of the 14th Amendment, no state could impair or destroy. But, as I read the opinion of the court, it will follow from the general principles underlying it, or from the reasoning pursued therein, that the 14th Amendment would be no obstacle whatever in the way of a state law or practice under which, for instance, cruel or unusual punishments (such as the thumbscrew, or the rack, or burning at the stake) might be inflicted. So of a state law which infringed the right of free speech, or authorized unreasonable searches or seizures of persons, their houses, papers, or effects, or a state law under which one accused of crime could be put in jeopardy twice or oftener, at the pleasure of the prosecution, for the same offense.

It is my opinion, also, that the right to immunity from self-incrimination cannot be taken away by any state consistently with the clause of the 14th Amendment that relates to the deprivation by the state of life or liberty without due process of law. This view is supported by what Mr. Justice Miller said for the court in Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 101, 102, 24 L. ed. 616, 618, 619. That great judge, delivering the opinion in that case said: "The prohibition against depriving the citizen or subject of his life, liberty, or property without due process of law, is not new in the constitutional history of the English race. It is not new in the constitutional history of this country, and it was not new in the Constitution of the United States when it became a part of the 14th Amendment, in the year 1866." After observing that the equivalent of the phrase "due process of law," according to Lord Coke, is found in the words, "law of the land," in the Great Charter, in connection with the guaranties of the 126]rights of the subject *against the oppression of the Crown, the court said: "In the series of amendments to the Constitution of the United States, proposed and adopted immediately after the organization of the government, which were dictated by the jealousy of the states as further limitations upon the power of the Federal government, it is found in the fifth, in connection with other guaranties of personal rights of the same character." Among these guaranties this court distinctly said was protection against being twice tried for the same offense, and protection "against the accused being compelled, in a criminal case, to testify against himself." Again, said the court: "It is easy to see that when the great barons of England wrung from King John, at the point of the sword, the concession that neither their lives nor their property should be disposed of by the Crown, except as provided by the law of the land, they meant by 'law of the land' the ancient and customary laws of the English people, or laws enacted by the Parliament, of which those barons were a controlling element. It was not in their minds, therefore, to protect themselves against the enactment of laws by the Parliament of England. But when, in the year of grace 1866, there is placed in the Constitution of the United States a declaration that 'no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law,' can a state make anything due process of law which, by its own legislation, it chooses to declare such? To affirm this is to hold that the prohibition to the states is of no avail or has no application where the invasion of private rights is affected under the forms of state legislation."

I cannot support any judgment declaring that immunity from self-incrimination is not one of the privileges or immunities of national citizenship, nor a part of the liberty guaranteed by the 14th Amendment against hostile state action. The declaration of the court, in the opinion just delivered that immunity from self-incrimination is of great value, a protection to the innocent, and a safeguard against unfounded and tyrannical prosecutions, meets my cordial *ap-[127 proval. And the court having heretofore, upon the fullest consideration, declared that the compelling of a citizen of the United States, charged with crime, to be a witness against himself, was a rule abhorrent to the instincts of Americans, was in violation of universal American law, was contrary to the principles of free government, and a weapon of despotic power which could not abide the pure atmosphere of political liberty and personal freedom, I cannot agree that a state may make that rule a part of its law and binding on citizens, despite the Constitution of the United States. No former decision of this court requires that we should now so interpret the Constitution.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, Complainant,
v.

STATE OF OREGON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 127-136.)

Boundary — between states.

The middle of the north ship channel of the Columbia river, described as the boundary between Oregon and Washington in the act of February 14, 1859 (11 Stat. at L. 383, chap. 33), admitting Oregon into the Union, remains the boundary, subject to the changes in it which come by accretion and is not moved to the other channel because the latter, in the course of years, becomes the more important and is properly called the main channel of the river.

[For other cases, see Boundaries, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 3, Original.]

Argued January 8, 9, 1908. Decided November 16, 1908.

ORIGINAL BILL in equity filed by the State of Washington against the State of Oregon to determine the boundary line between those states. Boundary adjudged to be the center of the north channel of the Columbia river, changed only as it may be from time to time by accretions.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This is an original suit, commenced in [128] this court on February 26, 1906, *by the state of Washington against the state of Oregon, to determine their boundary line. Pleadings were filed, testimony taken before a commissioner by consent of the parties, and on these pleadings and proofs the case has been argued and submitted. The maps or charts accompanying this opinion have been prepared from exhibits filed by the parties, and will aid to an understanding of the case.

A brief chronological statement is that on August 14, 1848, the territory of Oregon was established (9 Stat. at L. 323, chap. 177), and on March 2, 1853, the territory of Washington, including all that portion of Oregon territory lying north of the middle of the main channel of the Columbia river (10 Stat. at L. 172, chap. 90). On February 14, 1859, Oregon was admitted into the Union. The boundary, so far as is important in this controversy, is as follows (11 Stat. at L. 383, chap. 33):

"Beginning one marine league at sea due west from the point where the forty-second parallel of north latitude intersects the same; thence northerly, at the same distance from the line of the coast, lying west and opposite the state, including all islands within the jurisdiction of the United States, to a point due west and opposite the middle of the north ship channel of the Columbia river; thence easterly, to and up the middle channel of said river, and where it is divided by islands, up the middle of the widest channel thereof, to a point near Fort Walla-Walla."

On February 22, 1889, an act was passed providing for the admission of Washington. 25 Stat. at L. 676, chap. 180. On November 11, 1889, the President, as authorized by § 8 of the statute last referred to, issued his proclamation, declaring Washington duly admitted into the Union. 26 Stat. at L. 1552. The material part of the boundary described in the Constitution of that state is—

"Beginning at a point in the Pacific ocean one marine league due west of and opposite the middle of the mouth of the north ship channel of the Columbia river, thence running easterly to and up the middle channel of said river, and where *it is divided [129 by islands up the middle of the widest channel thereof to where the forty-sixth parallel of north latitude crosses said river, near the mouth of the Walla Walla river." Art. 24, § 1; 2 Hill's Anno. Statutes & Codes (Wash.) p. 851.

Mr. E. C. Macdonald argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John D. Atkinson, Samuel H. Piles, A. J. Falknor, and J. B. Alexander, filed a brief for complainant.

Mr. A. M. Crawford argued the cause, and, with Messrs. I. H. Van Winkle, Harrison Allen, C. W. Fulton, and A. M. Smith, filed a brief for defendant.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The northern boundary of the state of Oregon was established *prior to that [131 of the state of Washington, and it is not within the power of the national government to change that boundary without the consent of Oregon. Nor, indeed, was there any attempt to change it. The same description is found in both the act admitting Oregon and in the Constitution of Washington, under which that state was admitted. It will be perceived that the starting point in the line running up the Columbia river is a point "due west and opposite the middle of the north ship channel of the Columbia river." This language implies that there was more than one channel, and the middle of the north channel was named. There were at that time two channels, and the northerly one ran to the north of what is called "Sand island." This is shown by abundant testimony, and is admitted by counsel for complainant. At that time the north channel was perhaps the better one,—at least, one quite generally used by vessels passing in and out of the river, although the quantity and direction of the wind was an important factor. It is true there has been no little variation in the channels at and near the entrance, as might be expected considering the great width of the mouth and the sandy character of the soil underneath a large part of the river. The earliest known chart is a sketch made in 1792 by Admiral Vancouver, which does not show Sand island, but discloses two inside channels uniting and crossing the bar into the ocean with a depth of 27 feet. Chart "A," made by the United States authorities in 1851, shows the condition of the mouth of the river as it then existed. The two channels are plainly disclosed. The brown color indicates land above low-water mark; the yellow, water of 18 feet in depth or less, and the white, water over 18 feet in depth. See notation at the upper left-hand corner. The existence of the two channels clearly opened the way for a selection of one as the boundary, and the north one was adopted. Sand island appears as a small body of land surrounded by shoal water. Another chart was prepared in 1854, which of all the charts and maps is the nearest in point of time to 132]the admission of *Oregon. On this, as in Chart "A," Sand island is shown, and the two channels, one north and the other south of the island. It is called an island, but it was little more than a sand bar. By the action of the waters it had been gradually moving northward, but the general configuration of the mouth of the river was unchanged. Since then the movement of Sand 133]*island has continued, the north channel has been growing more shallow, and the southern channel has become the one most used. The movements of Sand island and the changes in the entrance are shown in chart "B."

NOTE.—On rivers and lakes as state boundaries—see note to Buck v. Ellenbolt, 15 L.R.A. 187.

On judicial settlement of state boundary—see note to Nebraska v. Iowa, 36 L. ed. U. S. 798.

Looking only at the description of the boundary in the act, one might think that there were three channels, north, south, and middle; but it is quite apparent from the testimony that there were but the two. The meaning would be more clear if the language was "easterly to and up the middle of said channel," and that that was the intent of Congress is, we think, obvious; first, because there were only two channels; second, to locate a starting point on the west line in the ocean, opposite the middle of one channel, and thence run the boundary up the middle of another channel, would hardly be expected. If the middle of the northern channel was intended to be the dividing line between Oregon and the territory north, it would be natural to fix the point of starting in the ocean west of the center of that channel. Further, that the channel north of Sand island was the one intended as the boundary between Oregon and the territory north of it is made more clear by this fact:

On October 21, 1864, Oregon passed an act granting to the United States—

"all right and interest of the state of Oregon, in and to the land in front of Fort Stevens and Point Adams, situate in this state, and subject to overflow between high and low tide, and also to Sand island, situate at the mouth of the Columbia river in this state; the said island being subject to overflow between high and low tide.

"Sec. 2. The governor of this state shall cause two copies of this act to be prepared and certified under the seal of this state, and forward one of such copies to the Secretary of War of the United States, and the other of such copies to the commanding officer of this district of the military department of the Pacific coast." Special Laws of Oregon, 1864, p. 72.

Now this act was passed shortly after the admission of Oregon, and indicates the understanding both of the state of Oregon and the United States, that the bound-134]ary was through the channel north of Sand island. It is a recognition of Oregon's title to that island and an acceptance by the United States of a grant from that state.

While all this is not in terms admitted by counsel for complainant, yet the burden of their principal contention impliedly does so, for they say:

"The proof will disclose the fact that there have been various channels in the Columbia river which have gradually, imperceptibly, and continuously changed and shifted. There has been at no time such a change as to come within the definition of avulsion. The contention of the complainant is that the true boundary line is the varying center or middle of that channel of the river which is best constituted and ordinarily used for the purposes of navigation. . . . The line claimed by the defendant commences at a point which is alleged to have been the middle of the north ship channel of the river as it existed in 1859 (the year in which Oregon was admitted into the Union), and follows certain channels supposed to exist in that year throughout the portion of the river in controversy."

In support of their contention counsel refer to: Nebraska v. Iowa, 143 U. S. 359, 36 L. ed. 186, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Iowa v. Illinois, 147 U. S. 1, 37 L. ed. 55, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 239; Louisiana v. Mississippi, 202 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 913, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408, 571. To these may be added Missouri

v. Nebraska, 196 U. S. 23, 35, 49 L. ed. 372, 374, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

But in these cases the boundary named was "the middle of the main channel of the river," or "the middle of the river," and it was upon such a description that it was held that, in the absence of avulsion, the boundary was the varying center of the channel. But there is no fixed rule making that the boundary between states bordering on a river. Thus, the grant of Virginia, all right, title, and claim which the said commonwealth had to the territory northwest of the river Ohio, was held to place the boundary on the north bank of the river. Handly v. Anthony, 5 Wheat. 374, 5 L. ed. 113, in which the subject is discussed by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall. See also Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. 381, 14 L. ed. 189. Now, if Congress, in establishing [135] the boundary *between Washington and Oregon, had simply named the middle of the river, or the center of the channel, doubtless it would be ruled that the center of the main channel, varying, as it might, from year to year through the processes of accretion, was the boundary between the two states. That Congress had the propriety of such a boundary in mind is suggested by the terms of the act establishing the territorial government of Washington, passed March 2, 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 172, 90), in which "the middle of the main channel of the Columbia river" was named as the boundary. However, as we have seen, when Congress came to provide for the admission of Oregon (doubtless from being more accurately advised as to the condition of the channels of the Columbia river), it provided that the boundary should be the middle of the north channel. The courts have no power to change the boundary thus prescribed and establish it at the middle of some other channel. That remains the boundary, although some other channel may, in the course of time, become so far superior as to be practically the only channel for vessels going in and out of the river. It is true the middle of the north ship channel may vary through the processes of accretion. It may narrow in width, may become more shallow, and yet the middle of that channel will remain the boundary. This is but enforcing the idea which controlled the decisions in the prior cases referred to, the difference springing out of the fact that here there were two instead of but one substantial channel. Aside from the fact that any other rule would be ignoring the action of the government in prescribing the boundary,—the intention in respect to which was in effect confirmed by the conveyance from Oregon to the United States of Sand island and adjoining lands,—there would be this practical difficulty: At the time of the admission of Oregon both the north and south channels were freely used. The depth of water in each was nearly the same, and the use of either channel depended largely upon the prevailing wind, so that it would be hard to say which was the most important, so surpassing in importance the other as to be properly called the main channel. *Con-[136] cede that to-day, owing to the gradual changes through accretion, the north channel has become much less important, and seldom, if ever, used by vessels of the largest size, yet, when did the condition of the two channels change so far as to justify transferring the boundary to the south channel? When and upon what conditions could it be said that grants of land or of fishery rights made by the one state ceased to be valid because they had passed within the jurisdiction of the other? Has the United States lost title to Sand island by reason of the change in the main channel? And if by accretion the north should again become the main channel, would the boundary revert to the center of that channel? In other words, does the boundary move from one channel to the other, according to which is, for the time being, the most important, the one most generally used?

These considerations lead to the conclusion that when, in a great river like the Columbia, there are two substantial channels, and the proper authorities have named the center of one channel as the boundary between the states bordering on that river, the boundary, as thus prescribed, remains the boundary, subject to the changes in it which come by accretion, and is not moved to the other channel, although the latter, in the course of years, becomes the most important and properly called the main channel of the river.

The testimony fails to show anything calling for consideration in respect to the last clause in the quotation from the boundary of Oregon. The channel is not divided by islands.

Our conclusion, therefore, is in favor of the state of Oregon, and that the boundary between the two states is the center of the north channel, changed only as it may be from time to time through the processes of accretion.

This is one of those cases in which the parties to the suit are alike interested, and, according to the usual rule, the costs will be divided equally between them.

137]*HONOLULU RAPID TRANSIT & LAND COMPANY Appt.,

v.

CHARLES T. WILDER, Assessor.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 137-144.)

Taxes — Federal agencies.

1. Franchises granted by the Hawaiian government between July 7, 1898, and September 28, 1899, were not made acts of Congress by adoption, so as to be exempt from territorial taxation, by the provision of the organic act of April 30, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 141, 154, chap. 339), § 73, ratifying and affirming such franchises.

[Taxation of Federal agencies, see Taxes, I. c. 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes — exemption.

2. An intention to exempt from a franchise tax cannot be gathered from the provisions of a railway charter that its income is lawfully chargeable with certain specified expenses and with "every other cost and charge properly or necessarily connected with the maintenance and operation of said railway," with dividends and with a sinking fund, and that the excess of income shall be divided equally between the government and the stockholders, where a subsequent provision exempts the property from taxation while under construction, "provided that, as fast as completed and equipped, the completed and equipped portion shall become liable to such taxation," although, when the charter was granted, real and personal property were, under Haw. Rev. Laws 1905, § 1216, assessed for taxation "separately as to each item thereof for its full value."

[For other cases, see Taxes, 419-435, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 23.]

Argued October 28, 29, 1908. Decided November 16, 1908.

A PPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a judgment which affirmed a decision of the Tax Appeal Court of the First Judicial Circuit of that territory, imposing a franchise tax. Affirmed.

See same case below, 18 Haw. 15.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. David L. Withington and Aldis B. Browne argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander Britton and William R. Castle, filed a brief for appellant:

Although the word "franchise" is to be found in Hawaii Rev. Laws 1905, § 1215, which describes the character of personal property to be taxed, it had long been held †Substituted as a party in place of James L. Holt.

NOTE.—On taxation of corporate franchises—see note to Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Com. 57 L.R.A. 34.

That exemption from taxation, whether a contract or not, is not implied—see note to Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 L. ed. U. S. 805.

53 L. ed.

to be the policy of Hawaii to tax only tangible property.

McBryde v. Kala, 6 Haw. 529; Brewer v. Luce, 6 Haw. 554.

Where the property itself is taxed which comprises the enterprise, to tax the right to share is double taxation.

Kekaha Sugar Co. v. Hawaiian Government, 8 Haw. 293; Alexander v. Fornander, 6 Haw. 322; Haiku Sugar Co. v. Fornander, 6 How. 532; Castle v. Luce, 4 Haw. 63.

Where a price has been paid or agreed to be paid for a franchise, this becomes a fixed consideration for the granting of the franchise, which cannot be changed by the legislature alone.

Gordon v. Appeal Tax Court, 3 How. 133, 145, 11 L. ed. 529, 535.

And where this language is said to have been qualified and limited in subsequent decisions, it stands unreversed and approved on the proposition that, while the exemption from taxation must be plainly and unmistakably granted, since in grants from the public nothing passes by implication, the exemption need not be in any particular words, is not implied, but is expressed, if, from all the language of the grant, there is no doubt of the contract.

New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 65, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 381; Piqua Branch of State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 14 L. ed. 977; New York v. Tax & A. Comrs. 4 Wall. 244, 18 L. ed. 344; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 17 L. ed. 173; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 24 L. ed. 558; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Memphis Gaslight Co. v. Taxing District, 109 U. S. 398, 27 L. ed. 976, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; New Orleans City & Lake R. Co. v. New Orleans, 143 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 121, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406.

In cases where it was sought to tax one party to the contract, who was a nonresident, by providing that the other party, who was a resident, should retain something on account of the contract to pay taxes, this was beyond the power of the taxing authority,—a law which interfered with the contract between the parties.

New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 153 U. S. 628, 38 L. ed. 846, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179.

The line of distinction between those cases in this court which have sustained the tax and those denying the right is to be found by determining the question whether there is a contract between the parties, fixing their pecuniary rights, which the imposition of the tax would alter. In every such case it is necessary that the reservation of the power to alter by taxation should be expressed; for that surrender is expressed by a contract, with the terms of which the particular form of taxation is inconsistent.

New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. supra; New York ex rel. Brooklyn City R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 48, 50 L. ed. 79, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; Citizens' Bank v. Parker, 192 U. S. 73, 48 L. ed. 346, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181.

It has been said by this court more than once that the power of amendment of charters may be exercised where it will not defeat or substantially impair the object of the grant or any rights which have vested under it.

Holyoke Water-Power Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 500, 21 L. ed. 133; Fair Haven & W. R. Co. v. New Haven, 203 U. S. 379, 51 L. ed. 237, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74.

But, as was said in the latter case, quoting from Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 319, 24 L. ed. 357, the "alterations must be reasonable; they must be made in good faith, and be consistent with the scope and object of the act of incorporation."

Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 124 Cal. 368, 57 Pac. 210, 571; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 61 Cal. 65; Stein v. Mobile, 49 Ala. 362, 20 Am. Rep. 283.

The franchise of the company, granted by the republic of Hawaii July 7, 1898, ratified by Congress and approved by the President, is not assessable.

California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 150, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Thomson v. Union P. R. Co. 9 Wall. 579, 19 L. ed. 792; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. ed. 903, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Southern P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 167, 40 L. ed. 929, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Atty. Gen. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. ed. 628, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Missouri, 190 U. S. 412, 47 L. ed. 1116, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; San Francisco v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 Cal. 140, 17 L.R.A. 301, 31 Pac. 10.

Mr. Charles R. Hemenway argued the cause, and, with Mr. Mason F. Prosser, filed a brief for appellee:

The supreme court of Hawaii did not err in holding the franchise of appellant subject to taxation as a part of the combined property of appellant.

(a) It is not a Federal franchise, and, even if it were, it would be subject to local taxation.

Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 12 How. 1, 13 L. ed. 867; Lyons v. Woods, 153 U. S. 661, 38 L. ed. 858, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 959; United States v. Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. 5 Utah, 373, 15 Pac. 479; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Lesueur, 2 Ariz. 428, 1 L.R.A. 244, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 189, 19 Pac. 157.

(b) The terms of the franchise itself grant no immunity from taxation, nor is it exempt under the general laws of Hawaii.

Chicago Theological Seminary v. Illinois, 188 U. S. 662, 47 L. ed. 641, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 386; New Orleans City & Lake R. Co. v. New Orleans, 143 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 121, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Memphis Gaslight Co. v. Taxing District, 109 U. S. 398, 27 L. ed. 976, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Chicago, B. & K. C. R. Co. v. Guffey (Chicago, B. & K. C. R. Co. v. Missouri) 120 U. S. 569, 30 L. ed. 732, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Lesueur, supra; Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 665-668, 29 L. ed. 770, 771, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Bank of Commerce v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 134-146, 40 L. ed. 645-649, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Ford v. Delta & P. Land Co. 164 U. S. 662-666, 41 L. ed. 590-592, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230; Hoge v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 99 U. S. 348-355, 25 L. ed. 303-305.

As a general rule, the franchise, capital stock, business, and profits of all corporations are liable to taxation in the place where they do business and by the state which creates them, and any exemption from such taxation must be given in clear terms.

Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 91-126, 40 L. ed. 903-915, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575-603, 23 L. ed. 663-670; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. ed. 146; Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. 607, 18 L. ed. 902; Thomson v. Union P. R. Co. 9 Wall. 579-590, 19 L. ed. 792-798; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 953, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Lesueur, supra.

Under the provisions of the act to provide a government for the territory of Hawaii (31 Stat. at L. 141, chap. 339), as is also the case under the other organic acts of the other territories, the power of taxation is general and restricted only by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Peacock v. Pratt, 58 C. C. A. 48, 121 Fed. 776; Talbott v. Silver Bow County, 139 U. S. 438, 35 L. ed. 210, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Lesueur, supra; Silver Bow County v. Davis, 6 Mont. 306, 12 Pac. 688.

(c) The tax assessed and in controversy here is not upon the franchise of appellant as such, but upon the combined property of appellant as an enterprise for profit.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a judgment affirming a decision of the tax appeal court and sustaining a tax upon the appellant. The appellant objected to the tax on the grounds that its franchise was derived from an act of Congress, and therefore was exempt from taxation, and that its charter also exempted it in terms. These objections, taken below, were argued at length before us.

The charter was granted by the Republic of Hawaii on July 7, 1898, the day on which Congress passed the resolution of annexation [30 Stat. at L. 750], and doubts having been felt as to the right of the Hawaiian legislature to grant a charter at that time (see 22 Ops. Atty. Gen. 574; Id. 627), the organic act declared that "subject to the approval of the President . . . all franchises granted by the Hawaiian government in conformity with the laws of Hawaii, between 142] the seventh day of July, *eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and the twenty-eighth day of September, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, are hereby ratified and confirmed." Act of April 30, 1900, chap. 339, § 73, 31 Stat. at L. 141, 154. It is contended that the effect of this section was to make the charter an act of Congress by adoption. In our opinion this is a mistake. There is no doubt that local legislation under the authority of Congress previously granted is treated as emanating from its immediate, not from its remote, source, in determining rights and liabilities. Kawanakoa v. Polyblank, 205 U. S. 349, 353, 354, 51 L. ed. 834, 836, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526. See Re Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 104, 51 L. ed. 105, 108, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25. A general ratification like that of existing laws in § 6 would have no greater effect. We discover nothing in the words just quoted from § 73 to indicate that Congress had this particular franchise in view, or meant to adopt it and give it a superior source, or to do anything more than to supply the power that by accident might have been wanting. See Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 12 How. 1, 8, 13 L. ed. 867, 870; Murphy v. Utter, 186 U. S. 95, 106, 46 L. ed. 1070, 1077, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 776. We need not pursue further 53 L. ed.

this part of the objection to the tax, except to remark that, in view of obvious purpose, it properly was admitted that July 7 was not excluded from the ratification by the word "between." See Taylor v. Brown, 147 U. S. 640, 37 L. ed. 313, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549. For it also was admitted at the argument before us that, if there was no exemption in the charter, the appellant had no case, and we are of opinion that there was none.

The tax in question is a property tax, and the effect of the decision is to uphold a valuation of the whole property as a going concern, and as more than a mere congeries of items; or, in other words, an addition of half a million dollars to the appellant's valuation, for the franchise of the company. The appellant says that this was contrary to § 17 of its charter, construed in the light of the scheme disclosed. That section provides that "the following charges shall be lawful upon the income of said railway: 1st. The expense of operating, repairs, renewals, extensions, interest, and every other cost and charge properly or necessarily connected with the maintenance and *operation [143 of said railway. 2d. Dividends may be paid to the stockholders not to exceed 8 per cent on the par value of the stock issued. 3d. A sinking fund may be created for the redemption of any bond which may be issued, or other record debt, and the capital upon the expiration of the franchise. Provided [that the amount is limited as set forth]. 4th. The excess of income shall be divided equally between the government of the Republic of Hawaii and the stockholders of said corporation." It is said that here is a complete plan for the division of the income, declaring what charges shall be lawful, and that only such taxes are allowed as fall under the words, "other charge properly connected with the maintenance and operation of the road."

The taxes authorized as such charges are thought to be limited to a license tax not to exceed $10 on each passenger car used, imposed by § 31, and to the provisions of § 30. The latter section exempts from duty material produced in and imported from the United States, and goes on to say that "the property of said association and others shall not be liable to internal taxation while said railway is under construction, provided that, as fast as completed and equipped, the completed and equipped portion shall become liable to such taxation." It is said that, when the charter was granted, real and personal property were assessed for taxation "separately as to each item thereof for its full cash value," with provisos deemed not to be material (Rev. Laws, Hawaii, 1905, § 1216); that § 30 contemplates a taxation of this kind, and that a taxation of the franchise would be double taxation, and was excluded. It is true that one of the provisos in § 1216 taxes going concerns as wholes, but § 30 is thought to show a choice of the other method. It is contended that the charter, by fair implication, contracts against any other charges, especially in view of the ultimate division of the excess of income, after the payment of 8 per cent dividend. If the dividends do not exceed 8 per cent, the tax will fall wholly on the stockholders, contrary to the fair understanding of what the charter holds out. 144] *The argument, of which we have given a summary outline, is far from establishing such a clear renunciation of the right to tax as the cases require. New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 65, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705. It appears to us very questionable whether the phrase, "charges properly or necessarily connected with the maintenance and operation of the road," has any reference to taxes. It points in an other direction. Taxes are left unmentioned in § 17, and the liability to them is assumed. The language of § 30 does not import the imposition of a tax that otherwise would be excluded. It takes the liability for granted, and relieves the company from the burden for a certain time. The drift of the section cannot be made clearer by lengthy restatement. It starts with exoneration and merely saves the right to tax the portions completed by a proviso which, in this case, fulfils the proper function of that much-abused term. If any doubt were raised by § 17, which does not seem to us to be the case, it would be relieved by this further section of the same act. Nothing else seems to us to need mention in the present posture of the case.

Judgment affirmed.

HONOLULU RAPID TRANSIT & LAND COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES T. WILDER, Assessor.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 144, 145.)

Error to Hawaiian supreme court — jurisdictional amount.

1. A writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to the Hawaiian supreme court, to review a judgment sustaining an assessment for taxation, will not lie under the act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 1035, chap. 1465), § 3, where the amount of the tax assessed is less than the jurisdictional amount prescribed by that section.

†Substituted as a party in place of James L. Holt.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 488, 489, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to Hawaiian supreme court — Federal question.

2. The failure of the record to show that any Federal question was raised or suggested before the assignment of error in the Federal Supreme Court precludes the maintenance of a writ of error from that court under the act of April 30, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 141, chap. 339), § 86, to review a judgment of the Hawaiian supreme court. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1044, 1045, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 22.]

Argued October 28, 29, 1908. Decided November 16, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a judgment which affirmed a decision of the Tax Appeal Court of the First Judicial Circuit of that territory, sustaining an income tax, Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 18 Haw. 15.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. David L. Withington argued the cause, and, with Mr. William R. Castle, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Aldis B. Browne also argued the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Charles R. Hemenway argued the cause, and, with Mr. Mason F. Prosser, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is intended to bring up a question of deductions from gross income in assessing the income tax of the appellant, as well as that of the liability of the plaintiff in error to the tax. The liability to taxes not mentioned in the charter has been disposed of by the preceding case. As to the former question, the plaintiff in error says that it has no net income liable to taxation. But the whole tax assessed was $588.20, and therefore the case cannot be brought here under the act of March 3, 1905, chap. 1465, § 3, 33 Stat. at L. 1035. On the other hand, the record does not show that any Federal question was raised or suggested before the assignment of error in this court, and therefore the plaintiff in error has no standing under the act of April 30, 1900, chap. 339, § 86, 31 Stat. at L. 141. It is true that, in the decision of the tax appeal court, it is said that the appellant claims, under § 17 of its charter, a right to charge certain amounts against income. But it does not appear there or elsewhere that the appellant set up that the charter was a statute of the United States, or that it relied upon article 1, § 10, or any other clause of the Constitution of the United States.

NOTE.—On Federal questions as sustaining the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over territorial supreme courts—see note to New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 51 L. ed. U. S. 254.

Writ dismissed.

146] *MORITA KEIZO, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WILLIAM HENRY, High Sheriff of the Territory of Hawaii.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 146-149.)

Habeas corpus — scope — questions reviewable.

Questions respecting the qualifications of the grand jurors, open to the accused in the original case, cannot, after conviction, be raised collaterally by habeas corpus, which may not, in this manner, usurp the functions of a writ of error.

[For other cases, see Habeas Corpus, 52, 164-168, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 27.]

Argued October 29, 1908. Decided November 16, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a judgment discharging a writ of habeas corpus. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Duane E. Fox and Arthur S. Browne argued the cause, and with Mr. A. S. Humphreys, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Charles R. Hemenway argued the cause, and, with Mr. M. F. Prosser filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error directed to a judgment of the supreme court of the territory of Hawaii, discharging a writ of habeas corpus and remanding the petitioner to the custody of the sheriff. The plaintiff in error was indicted for murder by a grand jury at a term of a circuit court of the territory, held in August, 1905. The grand jury was composed of sixteen members. A plea in abatement was seasonably filed, alleging that *eight of the grand jurors were[147 not citizens of the United States or of the territory,—a qualification prescribed by the laws of the territory. The territory joined issue on this plea. The parties then agreed upon the facts upon which it was based; namely, that the eight grand jurors questioned were citizens only by virtue of judgments of naturalization in a circuit court of the territory. The plea, with the agreed facts, raised the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court of the territory to naturalize aliens. Under a statute of the territory that question was certified to the supreme court, and that court held that the circuit courts of the territory had jurisdiction to naturalize, and that the grand jury possessed the necessary qualifications. Thereupon the trial judge overruled the plea in abatement, and an exception was taken. After due proceedings, plaintiff in error was found guilty as charged, and, on March 22, 1906, sentenced to death. Thereupon he prosecuted a writ of error to the supreme court of the territory, assigning, among other errors, the overruling of the plea in abatement. The judgment of the lower court was affirmed by the supreme court on October 23, 1906, and a death warrant thereupon was issued by the governor of the territory, commanding the high sheriff to execute the sentence of death on January 22, 1907. No writ of error was sued out on the foregoing judgments of the supreme court. The plaintiff in error, however, six days before the date fixed for his execution, filed a petition for habeas corpus in the supreme court of the territory, basing his claim for discharge from custody upon the same facts set forth in the plea of abatement and in the agreed statement of facts. The petition alleged that, for the reason of the disqualification of eight members of the grand jury, the indictment was void, and that the trial court was without jurisdiction to proceed against him under it. The writ of habeas corpus was discharged and the petition remanded to the custody of the sheriff, and to this judgment the present writ of error is directed.

The principal question argued before us by counsel is, whether the eight members of the grand jury, whose qualifications were *questioned, were naturalized by courts[148 having the authority to naturalize aliens. But we find no occasion to decide or consider this question. If the plaintiff in error desired the judgment of this court upon it, he should have brought a writ of error to the judgment of the supreme court of the territory which passed upon it in affirming the judgment of conviction in the trial court. He may not lie by, as he did in this case, until the time for the execution of the judgment comes near, and then seek to raise collaterally, by habeas corpus, questions not affecting the jurisdiction of the court which convicted him, which were open to him in the original case, and, if properly presented then, could ultimately have come to this court upon writ of error. Unquestionably, if the trial court had exceeded its jurisdiction, a prisoner held under its judgment might be discharged from custody upon a writ of habeas corpus by another court having the authority to entertain the writ (Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 29 L. ed. 89, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935), though even in a case of this kind a court will sometimes refrain from releasing a prisoner upon writ of habeas corpus, and will remit him to his remedy by writ of error (Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 50 L. ed. 303, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Urquhart v. Brown, 205 U. S. 179, 51 L. ed. 760, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459). But no court may properly release a prisoner under conviction and sentence of another court, unless for want of jurisdiction of the cause of person, or for some other matter rendering its proceedings void. Where a court has jurisdiction, mere errors which have been committed in the course of the proceedings cannot be corrected upon a writ of habeas corpus, which may not, in this manner, usurp the functions of a writ of error. Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. ed. 787; Ex parte Siebold, supra, 375; Ex parte Yarbrough, supra, 651, 653; Ex parte Wilson, supra, 421; Re Delgado, 140 U. S. 586, 35 L. ed. 578, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; United States v. Pridgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 59, 63, 38 L. ed. 631, 635, 637, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 276, 39 L. ed. 422, 423, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Riggins v. United States, supra; Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 50 L. ed. 689, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366; Valentina v. Mercer, 201 U. S. 131, 50 L. ed. 693, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368.

NOTE.—As to questions reviewable by habeas corpus—see notes to State v. Jackson, 1 L.R.A. 373; Bion's Appeal, 11 L.R.A. 694; United States v. Hamilton, 1 L. ed. U. S. 490; Ex parte Carll, 27 L. ed. U. S. 288; Oteiza y Cortes v. Jacobus, 34 L. ed. U. S. 464; Pearce v. Texas, 39 L. ed. U. S. 164; and Glass v. The Betsey, 1 L. ed. U. S. 489.

53 L. ed.,

149] *These well-settled principles are decisive of the case before us. Disqualifications of grand jurors do not destroy the jurisdiction of the court in which an indictment is returned, if the court has jurisdiction of the cause and of the person, as the trial court had in this case. Ex parte Harding, 120 U. S. 782, 30 L. ed. 824, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Re Wood, 140 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 505, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738; Re Wilson, 140 U. S. 575, 35 L. ed. 513, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870. See Re Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 104, 51 L. ed. 105, 108, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25. The indictment, though voidable, if the objection is seasonably taken, as it was in this case, is not void. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. ed. 857, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1. The objection may be waived, if it is not made at all or delayed too long. This is but another form of saying that the indictment is a sufficient foundation for the jurisdiction of the court in which it is returned, if jurisdiction otherwise exists. That court has the authority to decide all questions concerning the constitution, organization, and qualification of the grand jury, and, if there are errors in dealing with these questions, like all other errors of law committed in the course of the proceedings, they can only be corrected by writ of error.

Judgment affirmed.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

ERASMUS L. MOTTLEY and Annie E. Mottley, His Wife.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 149-154.)

Courts — jurisdiction — Federal question — anticipated defense.

A suit to compel the specific performance by a carrier of its agreement to issue free passes annually to the complainants is not brought within the original jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court as one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, within the meaning of the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 434, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 509), by allegations in the bill that the refusal to comply with the contract is based upon the provision of the act of Congress of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 892), and that such act does not prohibit the giving of passes under the circumstances of the case, and, if construed as having such effect, violates U. S. Const., 5th Amend., by denying due process of law.

[For other cases, see Courts, 506-508, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 37.]

Submitted October 13, 1908. Decided November 16, 1908.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a decree overruling a demurrer to and granting the relief prayed for in a bill to compel specific performance. Reversed and remanded with instructions to dismiss the suit for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 150 Fed. 406.

NOTE.—As to Federal question as concerning jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7; and Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308.

Statement by Mr. Justice Moody:

The appellees (husband and wife), being residents and citizens of Kentucky, brought this suit in equity in the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Kentucky against the appellant, a railroad company and a citizen of the same state. The object of the suit was to compel the specific performance of the following contract:

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 2d, 1871.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, in consideration that E. L. Mottley and wife, Annie E. Mottley, have this day released company from all damages or claims for damages for injuries received by them on the 7th of September, 1871, in consequence of a collision of trains on the railroad of said company at Randolph's Station, Jefferson County, Kentucky, hereby agrees to issue free passes on said railroad and branches now existing or to exist, to said E. L. & Annie E. Mottley for the remainder of the present year, and thereafter to renew said passes annually during the lives of said Mottley and wife or either of them.

The bill alleged that in September, 1871, plaintiffs, while passengers upon the defendant railroad, were injured by the defendant's negligence, and released their respective claims for damages in consideration of the agreement for transportation during their lives, expressed in the contract. It is alleged that the contract was performed by the defendant up to January 1, 1907, when the defendant declined to renew the passes. The bill then alleges that the refusal 151]to comply with the contract*was based solely upon that part of the act of Congress of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 892), which forbids the giving of free passes or free transportation. The bill further alleges: First, that the act of Congress referred to does not prohibit the giving of passes under the circumstances of this case; and, second, that, if the law is to be construed as prohibiting such passes, it is in conflict with the 5th Amendment of the Constitution, because it deprives the plaintiffs of their property without due process of law. The defendant demurred to the bill. The judge of the circuit court overruled the demurrer, entered a decree for the relief prayed for, and the defendant appealed directly to this court.

Mr. Henry Lane Stone submitted the cause for appellant.

Mr. Lewis McQuown submitted the cause for appellees. Mr. Clarence U. McElroy was on the brief.
53 L. ed.

Mr. L. A. Shaver, as amicus curiæ, filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Justice Moody, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Two questions of law were raised by the demurrer to the bill, were brought here by appeal, and have been argued before us. They are, first, whether that part of the act of Congress of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 892), which forbids the giving of free passes or the collection of any different compensation for transportation of passengers than that specified in the tariff filed, makes it unlawful to perform a contract for transportation of persons who, in good faith, before the passage of the act, had accepted such contract in satisfaction of a valid cause of action against the railroad; and, second, whether the statute, if it should be construed to render such a contract unlawful is in *violation of the 5th Amendment of [152] the Constitution of the United States. We do not deem it necessary, however, to consider either of these questions, because, in our opinion, the court below was without jurisdiction of the cause. Neither party has questioned that jurisdiction, but it is the duty of this court to see to it that the jurisdiction of the circuit court, which is defined and limited by statute, is not exceeded. This duty we have frequently performed of our own motion. Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 382, 28 L. ed. 462, 463, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; King Iron Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. Otoe County, 120 U. S. 225, 30 L. ed. 623, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Blacklock v. Small, 127 U. S. 96, 105, 32 L. ed. 70, 73, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Cameron v. Hodges, 127 U. S. 322, 326, 32 L. ed. 132, 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1154; Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 587, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Continental Nat. Bank v. Buford, 191 U. S. 120, 48 L. ed. 119, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54.

There was no diversity of citizenship, and it is not and cannot be suggested that there was any ground of jurisdiction, except that the case was a "suit . . . arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States." 25 Stat. at L. 434, chap. 866, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 509. It is the settled interpretation of these words, as used in this statute, conferring jurisdiction, that a suit arises under the Constitution and laws of the United States only when the plaintiff's statement of his own cause of action shows that it is based upon those laws or that Constitution. It is not enough that the plaintiff alleges some anticipated defense to his cause of action, and asserts that the defense is invalidated by some provision of the Constitution of the United States. Although such allegations show that very likely, in the course of the litigation, a question under the Constitution would arise, they do not show that the suit, that is, the plaintiff's original cause of action, arises under the Constitution. In Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 38 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654, the plaintiff, the state of Tennessee, brought suit in the circuit court of the United States to recover from the defendant certain taxes alleged to be due under the laws of the state. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant claimed an immunity from the taxation by virtue of its charter, and that therefore the tax was void, because in violation of the provision of the Constitution of the United States, which forbids any state from passing a law impairing the obligation of contracts. The cause was held to be beyond the jurisdiction of the circuit court, the court saying, by Mr. Justice Gray (p. 464): "A suggestion of one party, that the other will or may set up a claim under the Constitution or laws of the United States, does not make the suit one arising under that Constitution or those laws." Again, in Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. 188 U. S. 632, 47 L. ed. 626, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434, the plaintiff brought suit in the circuit court of the United States for the conversion of copper ore and for an injunction against its continuance. The plaintiff then alleged, for the purpose of showing jurisdiction, in substance, that the defendant would set up in defense certain laws of the United States. The cause was held to be beyond the jurisdiction of the circuit court, the court saying, by Mr. Justice Peckham (pp. 638, 639):

"It would be wholly unnecessary and improper, in order to prove complainant's cause of action, to go into any matters of defense which the defendants might possibly set up, and then attempt to reply to such defense, and thus, if possible, to show that a Federal question might or probably would arise in the course of the trial of the case. To allege such defense and then make an answer to it before the defendant has the opportunity to itself plead or prove its own defense is inconsistent with any known rule of pleading, so far as we are aware, and is improper.

"The rule is a reasonable and just one that the complainant in the first instance shall be confined to a statement of its cause of action, leaving to the defendant to set up in his answer what his defense is, and, if anything more than a denial of complainant's cause of action, imposing upon the defendant the burden of proving such defense.

"Conforming itself to that rule, the complainant would not, in the assertion or proof of its cause of action, bring up a single Federal question. The presentation of its cause of action would not show that it was one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States.

"*The only way in which it might be claimed that a Federal question was presented would be in the complainant's statement of what the defense of defendants would be, and complainant's answer to such defense. Under these circumstances the case is brought within the rule laid down in Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, supra. That case has been cited and approved many times since."

The interpretation of the act which we have stated was first announced in Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 586, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173, and has since been repeated and applied in Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co. v. Turek, 150 U. S. 138, 142, 37 L. ed. 1030, 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35; Tennessee v. Union & Planters' Bank, 152 U. S. 454, 459, 38 L. ed. 511, 513, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Chappell v. Waterworth, 155 U. S. 102, 107, 39 L. ed. 85, 87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. United States (Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Alabama) 155 U. S. 482, 487, 39 L. ed. 231, 232, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Skottowe, 162 U. S. 490, 494, 40 L. ed. 1048, 1049, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869; Walker v. Collins, 167 U. S. 57, 59, 42 L. ed. 76, 77, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738; Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 430, 436, 42 L. ed. 531, 533, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 170 U. S. 226, 236, 42 L. ed. 1017, 1020, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Third Street & Suburban R. Co. v. Lewis, 173 U. S. 457, 460, 43 L. ed. 766, 767, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 451; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 327, 44 L. ed. 486, 489, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 78, 44 L. ed. 673, 680, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545; Arkansas v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 183 U. S. 185, 188, 46 L. ed. 144, 146, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 68, 46 L. ed. 808, 809, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. 188 U. S. 632, 639, 47 L. ed. 626, 631, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48, 63, 48 L. ed. 870, 877, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Joy v. St. Louis, 201 U. S. 332, 340, 50 L. ed. 776, 780, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 334, 50 L. ed. 1046, 1053, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652. The application of this rule to the case at bar is decisive against the jurisdiction of the circuit court.

It is ordered that the judgment be reversed and the case remitted to the circuit court with instructions to dismiss the suit for want of jurisdiction.

155]*AMERICAN SUGAR REFINING COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 155-162.)

Direct appeal from circuit court — case involving Federal Constitution.

A contention by importers that the Treasury regulations respecting the polariscopic test for sugar assumed to add something to the dutiable standard prescribed by the tariff act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 168, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1647), par. 209, and that the Secretary of the Treasury thus exercised legislative power confided by the Constitution solely to Congress, does not constitute a real and substantial dispute or controversy concerning the construction or application of the Federal Constitution within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 5, so as to sustain a direct appeal from a Federal circuit court to the Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 3.]

Argued November 11, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment which affirmed a decision of the Board of General Appraisers, overruling protests of importers against the classification of certain imported sugars. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John G. Johnson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry B. Closson and John E. Parsons, filed a brief for appellant:

Where the validity of Treasury regulations is attacked as an illegal exercise of power lodged with another branch of the government, a Federal question is presented to this court for review.

Boske v. Comingore, 177 U. S. 459, 44 L. ed. 846, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 701; United States ex rel. Steinmetz v. Allen, 192 U. S. 543, 48 L. ed. 555, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416.

NOTE.—On direct review of decisions of district and circuit courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

53 L. ed.

Mr. James C. McReynolds argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

A mere allegation that some constitutional question is involved does not suffice to give jurisdiction; the record must show a real, substantial dispute or controversy concerning the construction or application of the Constitution, upon which the result depends.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 243, 44 L. ed. 1052, 1054, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 45 L. ed. 527, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 281, 45 L. ed. 859, 861, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646.

The admitted duty of the Secretary of the Treasury was to construe as best he could the paragraph relating to collection of duty upon sugars, and to promulgate regulations for carrying it into effect. This, and this alone, he did. The only real, substantial point involved is whether or not he properly construed the statute; and that gives this court no jurisdiction upon direct appeal.

Sloan v. United States, 193 U. S. 614, 620, 48 L. ed. 814, 817, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Beavers v. Haubert, 198 U. S. 77, 85, 49 L. ed. 950, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573.

It may not be doubted that Congress, without violating any constitutional provision, could have, in terms, directed exactly what was prescribed by the Treasury regulations. If, attempting to act under the statute, executive officers have imposed an unauthorized burden upon appellant, no constitutional rights have been violated; there has been, at most, a misconstruction of the law.

South Carolina v. Seymour (United States ex rel. South Carolina v. Seymour) 153 U. S. 353, 358, 38 L. ed. 742, 744, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871; Linford v. Ellison, 155 U. S. 503, 508, 39 L. ed. 239, 241, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 179; Rawlins v. Georgia, 201 U. S. 638, 50 L. ed. 899, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560, 5 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 783; Re Moran, 203 U. S. 96, 104, 51 L. ed. 105, 108, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The tariff act of July 24, 1897, provides:

*"209. Sugars not above number six-[158 teen Dutch standard in color, tank bottoms, syrups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above seventy-five degrees, ninety-five one-hundredths of one cent per pound, and for every additional degree shown by the polariscopic test, thirty-five one thousandths of one cent per pound additional, and fractions of a degree in proportion; and on sugar above number sixteen Dutch standard in color, and on all sugar which has gone through a process of refining, one cent and ninety-five one-hundredths of one cent per pound; molasses testing above forty degrees and not above fifty-six degrees, three cents per gallon; testing fifty-six degrees and above, six cents per gallon; sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscopic test." [30 Stat. at L. 168, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1647.]

In October, 1897, the Treasury Department issued general regulations (subsequently modified in particulars not material here) governing sampling and classification of sugars under the above-quoted paragraph, which, among other things, declared:

"The expression 'testing . . . degrees by the polariscope,' occurring in the act, is construed to mean the percentage of pure sucrose contained in the sugar as ascertained by polarimetric estimation."

It was further stated that changes of temperature affect the indications of a polariscope, and to determine by means of it true sucrose contents apparent readings must be corrected as shown by a table accompanying each instrument and embodying the results of careful experiments therewith; when the thermometer is above 17.5° centigrade, the point of standardization, additions must be made; when below, corresponding subtractions.

159] *The interpretation of the statute and validity of the regulations were at once challenged by importers, who claimed that the reading of a polariscope is not affected by change in temperature; and, further, that the term "polariscopic test" in the tariff act of 1897, according to its well-settled commercial use, as well as by the language itself, requires testing only in the way theretofore observed by merchants, and forbids any correction of the result observed by the eye. These contentions were denied by the collector.

The importers appealed to the board of general appraisers, and in March, 1899, their protest was overruled in a considered opinion. G. A. 4386.

Under the titles Bartram Bros. v. United States, Howell v. United States, and American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States, appeal was taken to the circuit court, southern district of New York, which was decided May 4, 1903. 123 Fed. 327. That court reversed the judgment of the general appraisers, holding that the term, "testing by the polariscope," had a well-settled commercial meaning prior to 1897, and must be interpreted according thereto. It declared, however, the preponderance of proof sustained the contention "that there is a variation in the reading of the polariscope, according to variations in temperature at the place where the sugar is tested, and that the corrections and additions provided for by the regulations merely consist in an addition of .3 per cent for each 10 degrees centigrade of temperature above that at which the polariscope is standardized, and that in this way the actual amount of pure sucrose in each sample is more accurately determined than was the case under the old eye test."

The circuit court of appeals (65 C. C. A. 557, 131 Fed. 833) reversed the circuit court and sustained the general appraisers. It held Congress intended there should be a scientific determination, by means of the polariscope, of sucrose contents, and that the method prescribed by the Treasury regulations was proper in order to secure the desired result.

*The rulings are correctly stated in [160 the headnotes thus:

"In construing the provision in paragraph 209, tariff act July 24, 1897, chap. 11, § 1, schedule E, 30 Stat. at L. 168, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1647, regulating duty on sugars according to the polariscopic test, held that the expressions therein, 'testing by the polariscope' and 'shown by the polariscopic test,' are not used with any special trade meaning that would confine them to a particular method of conducting such test, but import an intention on the part of Congress that the method adopted should be the one best calculated to make a scientific determination.

"Under the general power of the Secretary of the Treasury to make customs regulations not inconsistent with law, granted by § 251, U. S. Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 138, it is competent for that officer to prescribe the method of 'testing by the polariscope' the sugars dutiable according to such test under paragraph 209, tariff act July 24, 1897, chap. 11, § 1, schedule E, 30 Stat. at L. 168, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1647; and so long as he acts in good faith, and it does not appear that his regulations operate to make the polariscopic test less accurate than when Congress adopted it, the courts should not interfere with the administrative details confided to him.

"Where, for a period of years covering the operation of several tariff acts, the Secretary of the Treasury has made regulations for carrying out certain provisions in those acts, it is to be presumed that subsequent legislation by Congress was enacted with reference to such regulations."

At October term, 1904, a petition for a writ of certiorari to bring up these cases for review was presented to this court, and denied. 195 U. S. 635, 49 L. ed. 354, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792.

In the present cause counsel stipulated:

"It is agreed that the sugars in question were tested and classified in accordance with the Treasury regulations of October 27, 1897, and of February 17, 1899, and that the questions raised are the same as those in the cases of Bartram Bros. v. United States, 161]Howell v. United States*, and American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States, reported in 123 Fed. 327, and in 65 C. C. A. 557, 131 Fed. 833, and it is agreed that the evidence and exhibits in those cases contained on pages 33 to 364, inclusive, and pages 373 to 734, inclusive, of the transcript of record in those cases prepared for the Supreme Court of the United States and contained in the volume filed herewith . . . are to be treated as duly taken and introduced as evidence in this cause."

By § 6 of the act of 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549], the judgments or decrees of the circuit courts of appeals are made final in all cases arising under the revenue law, and can only be carried to the Supreme Court by certificate, or on a certiorari. In the aforementioned cases there was no certificate for instruction on any question or proposition of law, and the application for certiorari was denied. The present direct appeal to this court is a mere attempt to obtain a reconsideration of questions arising under the revenue laws and already determined by the circuit court of appeals in due course. Such direct appeals, under § 5 of the act of 1891, cannot be entertained unless the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States is involved.

This is conceded, and counsel for appellant attempt to sustain the jurisdiction on the ground that the regulations assumed to add something to the dutiable standard prescribed by the tariff act, and that, in doing so, the Secretary exercised legislative power confided by the Constitution solely to Congress. But this does not constitute a real and substantial dispute or controversy concerning the construction or application of the Constitution upon which the result depends.

The admitted duty of the Secretary of the Treasury was to construe as best he could the paragraph relating to collection of duty upon sugars, and to promulgate regulations for carrying it into effect. Rev. Stat. § 251. This and this alone he did. The only real, substantial point involved is whether or not he misconstrued the statute, and that gives this court no jurisdiction 162]*upon direct appeal. Sloan v. United States, 193 U. S. 614, 620, 48 L. ed. 814, 817, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570, and cases cited; 53 L. ed.

United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 203 U. S. 461, 51 L. ed. 269, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

Undoubtedly Congress, without violating any constitutional provision, could have in terms directed exactly what was prescribed by the Treasury regulations; and prior decisions have held that the statute was properly construed by the Secretary.

We concur with counsel for the government that, if the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States, within the meaning of § 5, act of 1891, is involved in every case where one claims that, according to his interpretation of a statute, excessive duty or tax has been demanded by executive officers, the provisions of that act making decisions of the circuit court of appeals in revenue cases final are of very limited value, and this court must entertain direct appeals from the circuit courts in most tariff and tax controversies, which we regard as out of the question.

Appeal dismissed.

E. J. COTTON, C. E. Cotton, and James B. Agassiz, Copartners, Doing Business under the Firm Name of Cotton Brothers & Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

TERRITORY OF HAWAII, by C. S. Hollo-way, Superintendent of Public Works.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 162-175.)

Appeal — finality of judgment.

1. The mere entry upon the minutes by the clerk of the supreme court of the territory of a decision overruling exceptions taken under Haw. Rev. Laws 1905, § 1862 et seq., which did not bring up the whole case, and called upon the reviewing court merely to pass upon specific questions raised by the bill, does not make such decision a final judgment, so as to be subject to review in the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — hearing and determination — order not appealed from.

2. The order of a territorial supreme court, reversing the order of the court below, granting a new trial, cannot be reviewed by the Federal Supreme Court on a writ of error directed alone to a later decision in the same case, overruling exceptions, the record of which cannot be regarded as embracing the proceedings had below in respect to the matter of a new trial.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. h, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 7.]

Argued October 27, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

NOTE—As to what entry or record is necessary to complete a judgment or order—see note to Re Weber, 28 L.R.A. 621.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a judgment overruling exceptions from the Circuit Court of the First Judicial Circuit of that territory, and to review a previous order of the Supreme Court of the territory, reversing the order of the court below, granting a new trial. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 17 Haw. 618.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles A. Kelgwin argued the cause, and, with Mr. William B. Matthews, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The question, What amounts to a judgment? is, of course, one of local practice. If, by accepted usage in Hawaii, or in the supreme court of the territory, such a minute entry as appears in this record is regarded as a judgment, then that entry, however meager or technically irregular, may, and should, be accepted as a judgment of that court.

Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. v. Wheeling Bridge Co. 138 U. S. 287, 34 L. ed. 967, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301; Tippecanoe County v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108, 23 L. ed. 822.

It is immaterial whether or not the judgment is ever spread out upon the formal minutes. The neglect of the clerk to mold the original notation into the conventional form of judgments, and to clothe it with the language generally used for that purpose, is the neglect of a purely ministerial duty, which does not at all impair the validity of the judgment minuted.

Freeman, Judgm. 4th ed. §§ 38, 40; Casement v. Ringgold, 28 Cal. 335; McMillan v. Richards, 12 Cal. 467.

In some of the states no record is ever made up; that is to say, the original minute entries are not drawn out into formal orders and judgments. Such is, or at one time was, the usage in Maryland and Pennsylvania, and it was so formerly in the District of Columbia. In such jurisdictions the files and journal entries stand in place of the record, and memoranda indicating the rendition of judgments are treated as judgments.

Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. v. Sickles, 24 How. 340, 16 L. ed. 652; Cromwell v. Bank of Pittsburgh, 2 Wall. Jr. 569, Fed. Cas. No. 3,409; Boteler v. State, 8 Gill & J. 381; Ruggles v. Alexander, 2 Rawle, 232; Freeman, Judgm. § 86.

It has long been agreed that while the entries and memoranda gave data from which a record as technical and prolix as any ever drawn in the court of King's bench could be readily constructed, they ought to be regarded as competent and satisfactory evidence of the judgment, and of such other judicial proceedings as were necessary to support it.

Freeman, Judgm. § 86.

Orders granting or denying new trials, while generally not the subjects of error, may be reviewed and reversed in error when they are void as being beyond the jurisdiction of the court assuming to make them.

Hume v. Bowie, 148 U. S. 245, 37 L. ed. 438, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582; Coughlin v. District of Columbia, 106 U. S. 7, 27 L. ed. 74, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37.

And such an order may be revised in error when it appears that the lower court, in acting upon the motion for a new trial, proceeded upon an erroneous theory of its powers and duties in the matter, or upon incorrect principles of evidence and practice.

Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 121 U. S. 558, 30 L. ed. 1022, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1334; Mattox v. United States, 146 U. S. 140, 36 L. ed. 917, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

Mr. Charles R. Hemenway argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The practice in Hawaii as to exceptions is similar to that in Massachusetts and the other states, where bills of exceptions bring up to the appellate court for review certain specific rulings only, and do not bring up the entire case, including the final judgment rendered. In such states writs of error from this court have run to the court where the final judgment was entered.

Atherton v. Fowler, 91 U. S. 143, 23 L. ed. 265; Wurts v. Hoagland, 105 U. S. 702, 26 L. ed. 1110; Polleys v. Black River Improv. Co. 113 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 938, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 269, 40 L. ed. 960, 965, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754; McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 311, 45 L. ed. 542, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 46 L. ed. 573, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391.

It is the settled rule that a judgment, to be final within the meaning of the acts of Congress giving this court jurisdiction on writs of error over such judgments, must terminate the litigation between the parties on the merits of the case, so that, if this court affirms such judgment, the court below will have nothing to do but to carry it into effect.

Bostwick v. Brinkerhoff, 106 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 73, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15; Macfarland v. Brown, 187 U. S. 239, 47 L. ed. 159, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The errors assigned are directed to the action of the court below on two subjects. Jurisdiction to consider them is challenged by the defendant in error. To understand the question as to jurisdiction and the issues which it will be necessary to consider, if it be that we have power to decide the merits, requires us to state briefly proceedings which are referred to by both parties and which are embraced in the printed transcript, without determining at this moment how far all the proceedings thus to be referred to may be considered as properly embraced in the record in the legal sense.

167] *On May 27, 1904, as the result of a trial before a jury of an action brought by the territory of Hawaii to recover damages for the loss of a dredge boat belonging to the territory, through the negligence of the defendants (who are now plaintiffs in error), there was a verdict in favor of the territory for the sum of $25,000. On May 31, 1904, the defendants filed a motion for a new trial, and gave notice that it would be called for a hearing on June 3. On that date the motion was continued to June 7. On June 7 the territory objected to the court entertaining the motion because the defendants had not complied with § 1805, Revised Laws of Hawaii, requiring that the party against whom a verdict or judgment had been rendered should, as a prerequisite to moving for a new trial, "file within ten days after rendition of verdict or judgment" a bond securing the payment of costs, and conditioned against the removal or disposition of any property within the jurisdiction, subject to execution. The defendants thereupon asked further time to file the bond. On the same day the court entered a formal judgment on the verdict, and also granted, over the exception of the plaintiff, the request of the defendants for further time to make and file the bond. The court was of the opinion that the statutory period commenced to run only from the date of the entry of judgment on the verdict. The bond was filed on June 7, the motion for a new trial was renewed on the same day, and was ultimately taken under advisement. The plaintiff, reserving the benefit of its exception as to the power of the court to consider the motion, agreed that the motion might be passed upon in vacation. Meanwhile the defendants presented and filed a summary bill of exceptions relating to certain errors which it was alleged had been committed by the court during the trial. In February following, the judge who presided at the trial, and who was detained in San Francisco by sickness, telegraphed the clerk of the court that he granted the motion for a new trial, and had forwarded his grounds for doing so by mail. This telegram was filed 168] by the clerk. The terms *of office of the 53 L. ed.

judge expired on March 2, 1905. A few days thereafter, viz., on March 4, 1905, the clerk received by mail the opinion of the judge, stating his reasons for granting a new trial, which opinion was also filed. In the following April the defendants moved the court, then presided over by the successor in office of the judge who had tried the cause, to make a formal entry of the granting of the new trial, and this was done over the objection and exception of the plaintiff, who thereupon prosecuted a writ of error to the supreme court of Hawaii. The supreme court, after overruling a motion to quash the writ, based on the ground that the action of the court in granting a new trial was not reviewable (17 Haw. 374), on March 8, 1906, reversed the order granting a new trial. Putting out of view all other questions, in substance, it was held that the filing of the bond within ten days, as required by the statute, was essential to give the court jurisdiction to entertain a motion for a new trial, and that the court had mistakenly decided that the ten days began to run only from the date of formal entry of the judgment. 17 Haw. 445.

The formal judgment entered in the supreme court was simply one reversing the order for a new trial. Thereupon, in the trial court, the defendants moved to be allowed to make the summary bill of exceptions which they had previously taken more specific. Over the objection of the plaintiff this was allowed to be done, and the defendants thereupon filed an amended bill of exceptions, which was allowed, and upon this bill, conformably to the Hawaiian practice, the exceptions were taken by the defendants to the supreme court of Hawaii. In that court a motion was made to quash the bill of exceptions, on the ground that, as amended, it embraced matters not legally included within the bill as originally filed, and which were, in consequence, not cognizable. This motion was overruled, on the ground that, although nothing was open for review on the amended bill but such questions as were legally incorporated in the original bill, the bill as amended could *not be quashed, [169 as it undoubtedly presented matters which were embraced in the first or summary bill. 17 Haw. 645. Thereafter, on the hearing of the exceptions, the court—excluding from consideration such matters as it held were not contained in the original bill, although incorporated in the amended bill—decided that the exceptions were without merit. 17 Haw. 618. Conformably to the opinion an order was entered in the minutes on September 27, 1906, overruling the exceptions. Thereupon the present writ of error was allowed by the chief justice of the supreme court of the territory.

The two subjects to which, as, at the outset, we stated, all the assignments of error relate, involve the correctness of the action of the supreme court on September 27, 1906, in refusing to consider certain of the exceptions because deemed not to have been embodied in the summary bill previously filed and its decision on the exceptions which were passed upon, and the correctness of the action of the same court, taken nearly six months previously, reversing the order of the trial court, granting a new trial. Have we jurisdiction to pass upon these issues, in the first question for decision.

Our authority to review the judgments of the supreme court of the territory of Hawaii is derived from the act of April 30, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 158, chap. 339, § 86), and the amendatory act of March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. at L. 1035, chap. 1465, § 3). In the first act jurisdiction is conferred over judgments or decrees of the supreme court of the territory only in cases like unto those where we would be empowered to review the judgments or decrees of the courts of the several states, conferred by § 709, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). By the amendatory act our jurisdiction was extended so as to embrace, in addition, all cases, irrespective of the nature of the questions presented, where the amount involved, exclusive of costs, exceeds the sum or value of $5,000. In other words, whilst the first act conferred the power only in cases where it would exist if the decree or judgment had been rendered in [170] a state court, the *second, adopting the principle and necessarily therefore carrying with it the rules generally prevailing as to the review of judgments or decrees of the supreme court of the incorporated territories of the United States, gives an additional right to review, depending solely upon the amount involved. Bierce v. Hutchins, 205 U. S. 340, 344, 51 L. ed. 828, 832, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524. As jurisdiction, if it exists in this cause, depends not upon the existence of questions under Rev. Stat. § 709, but entirely upon the amount involved, the authority conferred by the act of 1900 may be at once put out of view. It is elementary, however, that the power to review, both under § 709, Revised Statutes, and under the laws governing the right to review the judgments or decrees of the supreme courts of the incorporated territories generally, extends only to final judgments or decrees. It is apparent, therefore, that we have no jurisdiction to review the several rulings of the supreme court of the territory, the last one in September, 1906, overruling the exceptions, and the prior one in April, 1906, reversing the order granting a new trial, unless those rulings, independently considered, are final in the full sense of the term. Let us test their finality separately.

On its face the proceeding by which the exceptions of the defendants were taken to the court of last resort in Hawaii for review did not purport to present to that court a consideration of the whole record in the cause, but only submitted the particular rulings embraced in the exceptions. The order which the court entered when it disposed of the exceptions was neither in substance nor did it purport in form to be a final judgment, conclusively disposing of the cause. As our power to review depends upon the acts of Congress, which it is beyond the authority of a territory, by forms of legal procedure, to modify or change, it results that, whatever may be the forms of procedure prevailing in the territory for the review of judgments or decrees, nothing in the territorial laws or procedure can have the effect of conferring upon this court the power to consider causes coming from the territory by *piecemeal; that is, to re-[171] view judgments or decrees which, in their essential nature, are not final within the intentment of the legislation of Congress,—in other words, extend our jurisdiction to judgments which do not completely dispose of the controversy. But the application of this latter principle is not now required, since it will appear from a review of the territorial legislation that the decision of the supreme court overruling the exceptions was not, under the territorial laws, in any sense a final judgment. The relevant Hawaiian statutes are copied in the margin†

†Revised Laws of Hawaii for 1905, pp. 732 et seq.

"Exceptions.

"Sec. 1862. Questions Reserved by Court.—Whenever any question of law shall arise in any trial or other proceeding before a circuit court, the presiding judge may reserve the same for the consideration of the supreme court; and in such case shall report the cause, or so much thereof as may be necessary to a full understanding of the questions, to the supreme court. (Laws 1892, chap. 57, § 72; C. L. § 1436.)

"Sec. 1863. Reserved on Motion.—Any question may be reserved in like manner upon the motion of either party, on account of any opinion, direction, instruction, ruling, or order of the judge in any matter of law. (Laws 1892, chap. 57, § 73; C. L. § 1437.)"

Following a paragraph prescribing the method of settling exceptions, it is provided in § 1864 as follows:

"Bills of exceptions upon like terms as to filing bond and payment of costs may be certified to the supreme court from decisions

It is clear that, under these statutes, the 172]supreme court may *review the action of the trial courts by two separate forms of procedure,—either by writ of error or appeal, which brings up the judgment or decree with the entire record, and the other by exceptions, which does not bring up the whole record, and calls upon the reviewing court merely to pass upon specific questions raised by the bill. The statutes, it will be observed, confer no express power upon the supreme court of the territory to enter a final judgment in a cause upon the overruling of exceptions, and, indeed, that the supreme court of the territory does not construe the territorial statutes as giving it such authority, and, therefore, that the court could not have intended to exert such power in this case, so conclusively appears from recent decisions of the supreme court of Hawaii as to leave the question not open to controversy.

Meheula v. Pioneer Mill Co. 17 Haw. 91, was brought *to the appellate court on ex-[173 ceptions. The exceptions were overruled. Thereupon counsel for the unsuccessful party, in order that the record might be in such form as to permit an appeal to this court, moved in the appellate court that a final judgment be entered, affirming the judgment of the trial court, and remanding the cause, with directions to carry the judgment into execution. The motion was denied. The court rendered a lengthy opinion, in the course of which it was said (17 Haw. 93):

"If the exceptions are overruled, nothing further is required but to notify the circuit court, in the form of a remittitur. . . . A bill of exceptions, unlike a writ of error overruling demurrers or from other interlocutory orders, decisions, or judgments, whenever the judge, in his discretion, may think the same advisable for a more speedy termination of the case. The refusal of the judge to certify an interlocutory bill of exceptions to the supreme court shall not be reviewable by any other court. (Laws 1892, chap. 57, § 74; C. L. § 1438; Amended Laws 1898, chap. 40, § 2; Amended Laws 1903, chap. 32, § 18.)

"Sec. 1865. Bond.—Upon the allowance of such bill of exceptions and the deposit of $25, or a bond of the same amount, by the party excepting, with the clerk of such court, for costs to accrue in the supreme court, the questions arising thereon shall be considered by the supreme court; but judgment may be entered and may be enforced or arrested pending such exceptions, as provided in § 1861 in the case of an appeal, mutatis mutandis. (Laws 1892, chap. 57, § 75; C. L. § 1439; Amended Laws 1903, chap. 32, § 19.)

"Sec. 1866. Exceptions, Frivolous, Immaterial.—When, upon the hearing of a cause brought before the supreme court upon exceptions, it shall appear that the exceptions are frivolous or immaterial, or were intended for delay, the court may award against the party taking the exceptions double costs from the time when the same were alleged; and also interest, from the same time, at the rate of 9 per cent per annum on the sum, if any, found due for debt or damages; or may award any part of such additional costs and interest as it may deem proper. (Laws 1892, chap. 57, § 76; C. L. § 1440.)

"Sec. 1867. Vacating Judgment by Supreme Court.—When judgment has been entered in any cause in which exceptions have been allowed, the judgment may be vacated by the supreme court without any writ of error in like manner as if it had been entered by mistake; and thereupon such further proceedings shall be had in the cause as to law and justice shall appertain. (Laws 1892, chap. 57, § 77; C. L. § 1441.)

53 L. ed.

"Sec. 1868. Jury Trial Not Delayed.—No trial by jury shall be prevented or delayed by the alleging, filing, or allowance of such exceptions; but the verdict shall be received and such further proceedings shall be had in the cause as the court may order, in pursuance of the foregoing provisions. (Laws 1892, chap. 57, § 78; C. L. § 1442.)

"Writs of Error.

"Sec. 1869. Had When.—A writ of error may be had by any party deeming himself aggrieved by the decision of any justice, judge, or magistrate, or by the decision of any court except in the supreme court, or by the verdict of a jury, at any time before execution thereon is fully satisfied, within six months from the rendition of judgment. (Laws 1892, chap. 95, § 1; C. L. § 1443.)

"Sec. 1870. In Jury-Waived Cases.—Writs of error shall lie to any decision or ruling by a judge in any case in which jury has been waived. (Laws 1892, chap. 95, § 2; C. L. § 1444.)

"Sec. 1871. To Correct What.—A writ of error may be had to correct any error appearing on the record, either of law or fact, or for any cause which might be assigned as error at common law; provided, however, that no writ of error shall issue for any defect of form merely in any declaration, nor for any matter held for the benefit of the plaintiff in error. (Laws 1892, chap. 95, § 3; C. L. § 1445.)

"Sec. 1872. No Reversal When.—There shall be no reversal on error of any finding depending on the credibility of witnesses or the weight of evidence. (Laws 1892, chap. 95, § 5; C. L. § 447.)

"Sec. 1873. Record.—For all purposes of §§ 1869-1883, the record shall be deemed to include all pleadings, motions, notes, or bills of exceptions, exhibits, clerk's or magistrate's notes or proceedings, and, if so desired by the plaintiffs in error, a transcript of the evidence in the case. (Laws 1892, chap. 95, § 4; C. L. § 1446.)" or an appeal, does not bring the entire case or its record to this court. We have merely to decide whether the exceptions are good or bad. If they are overruled, that is the end of the functions of this court relating thereto, nothing remaining but the order, notice, or remittitur, on receipt of which 174] the *judgment in the circuit court, if it had been entered, but suspended pending the exceptions, by the provisions of §§ 1861 and 1865, Rev. Laws, remains in full force, requiring no affirmance or other recognition from this court. If no judgment was entered on the verdict, it is entered by the circuit court upon notice of the overruling of the exceptions. This result follows as a matter of law, and not in consequence of any direction of this court."

In the same case the court also took occasion to condemn the practice stated to be sometimes followed, of sending to the appellate court, with a bill of exceptions, "the records of the case and all papers filed in the circuit court."

So, also, as also said by the territorial court in this case, in passing upon the motion of the territory to quash or dismiss the exceptions (17 Haw. 379):

"Exceptions and error are inherently proceedings of different character. On exceptions, various specific rulings, whether interlocutory or final, whether brought up immediately or only after final judgment, are made direct and independent subjects for review; only so much of the record is brought up as is necessary for passing upon the specific exceptions; the decision usually is that the exceptions be sustained or overruled and that such further proceedings be had as the rulings on the exceptions call for. On error the final judgment alone is brought up, and specific rulings, whether excepted to or not, are considered only incidentally in passing upon the correctness of the final judgment; the entire record is brought up, and the judgment of the appellate court is such as the facts and law warrant, as shown by the entire case."

Applying the construction thus given by the supreme court of Hawaii to the statutes of the territory, there being no reason to doubt their correctness, it clearly follows that the mere entry by the clerk, on the minutes, of the decision of the court overruling the exceptions, did not constitute a final judgment, subject to review by this court. Of course, our decision is confined to the case before us. We must not, therefore, 175]*be considered as holding that if, on a case before it on exceptions, the supreme court of the territory, in sustaining exceptions, considered that the effect of its ruling was such as to justify the entry of a judgment finally disposing of the cause, under the discretionary power conferred by § 1867 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii, previously cited in the margin, that such a judgment, depending upon the circumstances of the case, might not be a final judgment, within our competency to review.

Coming, then, to test whether we have jurisdiction to review the action of the supreme court of the territory reversing the order granting a new trial, it is apparent that our power must rest either upon the proposition that the order overruling the granting of a new trial was a final judgment in an independent proceeding, or was but an interlocutory step in the cause, which would be subject to our review because of jurisdiction to revise the action of the territorial court in ruling on the exceptions, under the assumption that such ruling was a final judgment. The latter is disposed of by what we have previously said. As to the former, if the premise upon which the proposition rests be assumed, it would follow that we are without power to review the judgment, for the reason that this writ is directed alone to the so-called judgment of September 27, 1906, and the record of that judgment cannot be regarded as embracing the proceedings had below in respect to the matter of a new trial.

Writ of error dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

*BOWERS HYDRAULIC DREDGING[176 COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 176-188.)

Custom — trade meaning — effect on unambiguous contract.

1. Payment for removing the earth which may slide into the channel from the sides or slopes during excavation is so clearly excluded by a dredging contract as to prevent giving the words "measured in place" a trade meaning which demands a different construction, where the specifications provide for payment by the cubic yard, measured in place, determined by surveys made before dredging is commenced and after completion, require that the work shall be plainly located by stakes and ranges, which shall be kept continually in place, and preclude extra allowance for excavating material different from that therein described, or payment for work outside the designated lines of excavation or below the specified depth, and state that any material deposited otherwise than specified and agreed upon must be removed by the contractor at his own expense, that no guaranty is given as to the nature of the bottom, and that no claim will be made for any excess or deficiency in the estimate of quantity.

NOTE.—On the effect of custom or usage on construction of contract—see notes to Newhall v. Appleton, 3 L.R.A. 860; Smith v. Clews, 4 L.R.A. 392; MacCulsky v. Klosterman, 10 L.R.A. 785; and Adams v. Otterback, 14 L. ed. U. S. 805.

On the practical construction of contracts by parties—see note to Davis v. Alpha Portland Cement Co. 73 C. C. A. 392.

[For other cases, see Custom and Usage, 21-27, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contracts — construction by parties — supplemental contract.

2. A contractor for a public improvement, who, pending a dispute with the government as to his right to compensation for certain work, enters into a supplemental contract with the same terms and specifications as the original, with full knowledge of the meaning affixed by the government to the terms of such original contract, which had been insisted upon by it in carrying on previous operations, is precluded from claiming compensation under the new contract for any work of that character.

[For other cases, see Contracts, 258-263, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 9.]

Argued November 11, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment denying the claim of a dredging company of a right to compensation for removing the earth which fell into the excavation from the sides or slopes during the dredging of a channel. Affirmed.

See same case below, 41 Ct. Cl. 214.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. L. T. Michener argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. W. Dudley and P. G. Michener, filed a brief for appellant:

A dredging operation is the reverse of making an embankment on dry land; it is, in its essential features as to measurement, like making a cut or tunnel in earth or rock. To ascertain the amount of material taken from a cut or tunnel made in earth or rock, measurements and surveys of the entire cut or tunnel would have to be made. That would be measurement in place. To ascertain the amount of material used in making an embankment, a measurement of the entire embankment would have to be made.

Collins v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 307.

That would be like measurement in place in such a case as this.

When, as in the case at bar, the contract provides that the engineer shall determine the amount of work, it does not give him the exclusive determination of the manner in which it shall be done according to contract. It does not give him the interpretation of the contract.

Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Henry, 65 Tex. 685; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Johnson, 74 Tex. 256, 11 S. W. 1113; Williams v. Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. 112 Mo. 463, 34 Am. St. Rep. 403, 20 S. W. 631.

The contractor may show that the engineer misconstrued the contract in his classifications of the work, and did not measure the work according to the contract, and he may show these things by evidence without alleging fraud.

Collins v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 294; Beckwith v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 294; Williams v. Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. supra; Lewis v. Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. 49 Fed. 708; Summers v. Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. 49 Fed. 714; King Iron Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. St. Louis, 10 L.R.A. 826, 43 Fed. 768.

The provision in the contract that his decision as to the amount of material excavated and removed should be final "refers only to his measurement in point of fact, and not to the principle of law on which it is made."

Lyons v. United States, 30 Ct. Cl. 352.

The case of Beckwith v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 295, is squarely in point here.

See also Seymour v. Long Dock Co. 20 N. J. Eq. 396; Pucci v. Barney, 2 Misc. 354, 21 N. Y. Supp. 1101; Clark v. United States, 6 Wall. 543, 18 L. ed. 916; San Francisco Bridge Co. v. United States, 40 Ct. Cl. 139.

Courts will take judicial notice of natural laws, the well-known qualities and properties of matter, and that which will happen according to the invariable course of nature.

1 Elliott, Ev. §§ 69, 70.

There seems to be no reason why there should not be applied to the contract and the specifications here the principle so often applied to statutes by this court,—that, if Congress had desired to grant a given power, right, or authority, "it would have been easy to have said so in express terms; and, because it did not say so, we are led irresistibly to the conclusion that it did not intend to give any such power."

Tillson v. United States, 100 U. S. 46, 25 L. ed. 543; Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 669, 29 L. ed. 771, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; United States v. Chase, 135 U. S. 259, 34 L. ed. 119, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756.

The principles of interpretation are very similar, whether applied to contracts, to deeds, or to statutes.

2 Parsons, Contr. *494.

The court of claims should have found the technical or trade meaning of the words "measured in place" in connection with the other language of the specifications; and evidence as to the meaning of those words and specifications was admissible and should have been considered by the court.

2 Parsons, Contr. 7th ed.  499, 555, 556; 1 Greenl. Ev. 14th ed. § 280; 1 Elliott, Ev. § 605; 4 Wigmore, Ev. §§ 2458-2467; 1 Starkie, Ev.  653, 701; Jones, Constr. of Com. & Trade Contr. §§ 62, 204; Garrison v. Memphis Ins. Co. 19 How. 312, 313, 15 L. ed. 656; Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. Goddard, 14 How. 446, 454, 14 L. ed. 493, 496; Moran v. Prather, 23 Wall. 492, 499, 23 L. ed. 121, 122; 17 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 685-687; Webster Loom Co. v. Higgins, 105 U. S. 580, 586, 26 L. ed. 1177, 1179; Cadwalader v. Zeh, 151 U. S. 171, 176, 38 L. ed. 115, 117, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; Gregory v. United States, 33 Ct. Cl. 434; Elgin v. Joslyn, 136 Ill. 525, 26 N. E. 1090; Brennenman v. Bush (Tex. Civ. App.) 30 S. W. 699; St. Martin v. Thrasher, 40 Vt. 461; Highton v. Dessau, 46 N. Y. S. R. 922, 19 N. Y. Supp. 395; Cassidy v. Fontham, 38 N. Y. S. R. 177, 14 N. Y. Supp. 151; Myers v. Tibbals, 72 Cal. 278, 13 Pac. 695; Atlanta v. Schmeltzer, 83 Ga. 609, 10 S. E. 543; Destrehan v. Louisiana Cypress Lumber Co. 45 La. Ann. 920, 40 Am. St. Rep. 265, 13 So. 230; McKenzie v. Wimberly, 86 Ala. 195, 5 So. 468.

Where technical or trade language is used, or common words in a technical or trade sense, their meaning may be proven by persons who possess the peculiar knowledge and skill requisite.

2 Parsons, Contr.  555, 556; Texas & St. L. R. Co. v. Rust, 19 Fed. 239; Reed v. Hobbs, 3 Ill. 297; Skelton v. Fenton Electric Light & P. Co. 100 Mich. 90, 58 N. W. 609.

Assistant Attorney General John Q. Thompson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Philip M. Ashford, filed a brief for appellee:

The construction or interpretation of a contract has been defined to be the ascertainment of the intention of the parties, as expressed therein.

17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 2; Jones, Constr. of Com. and Trade Contr. p. 1; Anderson's Law Dict. p. 240.

The very idea and purpose of construction implies a previous uncertainty as to the meaning of the contract; for where this is clear and unambiguous there is no room for construction and nothing for construction to do.

2 Parsons, Contr. 9th ed. p. 655; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 4; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 1109, 1110; Jones, Constr. of Com. & Trade Contr. pp. 31, 111, 237, 267; Moran v. Prather, 23 Wall. 492, 500, 23 L. ed. 121, 123; Culver v. Wilkinson, 145 U. S. 205, 212, 36 L. ed. 676, 680, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 832;
138

South Bend Iron Works v. Cottrell, 31 Fed. 256.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant, the dredge company, sued to recover $28,321.76. The relief sought was based on the averment that, under a contract for dredging a channel in the Christiana river and in or about the harbor of Wilmington, Delaware, made in 1899, and a supplementary contract made in June, 1901, the dredge company had excavated 260,430 cubic yards *of earth, for which, at [181 the contract price, it should have been paid the sum sued for, but that the United States, in making settlement under the contract, despite the protest of the dredge company, had declined to pay, upon the ground that excavating and removing the earth referred to was not within the contract. The pertinent facts found by the court below are these:

Prior to September, 1899, the United States was engaged in excavating a channel in the Christiana river and about the harbor of Wilmington, Delaware. The work, in September, 1899, was in process of execution, under a contract between the United States and the New York Dredging Company. In the office of the United States engineer in charge of the work there existed maps or drawings showing the condition of the river prior to any work being done by the New York Dredging Company, the location of the channel in which the work was being done, and the specifications controlling the contract, as well as the progress made in the work. Of these facts the dredge company had knowledge. On September 18, 1899, the United States engineer office at Wilmington, through William F. Smith, United States agent, advertised for proposals for the dredging and removing of about 900,000 cubic yards of material in connection with the work then being done, as previously stated. In the advertisement inviting the proposals it was stated that specifications, blank forms for proposals, and all available information would be furnished on application to the engineer office. The specifications for the work in question recited:

"The project, for the completion of which contracts are authorized in the law above quoted, requires the dredging of the Christiana river to a depth of 21 feet at mean low water from the 21-foot curve in the Delaware river to the upper line of the pulp works; thence to the draw pier of the Shellpot branch, No. 4, of the P., W. & B. R. R., so as to give a depth which gradually diminishes to 10 feet at mean low water at the latter-named place and the removal of 182] shoals having less *than seven (7) feet of water over them; thence to Newport,—the width to be 250 feet to the mouth of the Brandywine, 200 feet thence to the upper line of the pulp works, and 100 feet above. Work is now in progress under contracts for dredging to a depth of 18 feet up to the pulp works, the width to be made being 200 feet, and for all above-described dredging above the pulp works. The work required under these specifications is the dredging that remains to complete the project, additional to that done or to be done under the contracts above referred to until their termination or completion. It is estimated that about 900,000 cubic yards will have to be removed."

The character of the work required, the method of carrying on the same, and the steps to be taken to fix the amount to become due under the contract when fully performed, were stated in the specifications as follows:

"The amount of material removed will be paid for by the cubic yard, measured in place, and shall be determined by surveys made before dredging is commenced and after it is completed. All surveys and measurements are to be made under the direction of the engineer in charge, by persons employed by him for that purpose. The decision of the engineer in charge as to the amount of material excavated and removed, as well as to its location and deposit, shall be final and without appeal on the part of the contractor.

"The location of the work shall be plainly located by stakes and ranges. The level of mean low water, as established by the engineer in charge, shall not be changed during the progress of the work. The contractor shall be required to supply the lumber for the necessary stakes and ranges, and shall at all times, when called upon, furnish men and boats to set them and keep them set under the direction of the inspector, the expense thereof to be included in the contract price for the dredging.

"No guaranty is given as to the nature of the bottom, but, as far as it is known, it is sand, mud, clay, and gravel. Bidders 183]*are requested to satisfy themselves upon this point and to examine all other local conditions, as it will be assumed that their bids are based upon personal information. No extra allowance will be made for excavating material differing from that herein described.

"It is understood and agreed that the quantities given are approximate only, and it must be understood that no claim will be made against the United States on account of any excess or deficiency, absolute or relative, in the same. Bidders are expected to examine the drawings, and are invited to make the estimate of quantities for themselves. It is not expected that the actual quantities will vary more than 10 per centum from the estimates.

"Payments will be allowed for actual dredging to twenty-one (21) feet below mean low-water level. Work done outside of the designated lines of excavation or below the specified depth will not be paid for, and any material deposited otherwise than specified and agreed upon must be removed by the contractor at his own expense."

On November 20, 1899, the claimant (dredge company), whose proposal had been accepted, entered into a contract with the United States through General William F. Smith, United States agent, for the performance of the additional dredging, in conformity with the advertisements and specifications referred to in the preceding findings. It was provided in the contract that "the said Bowers Hydraulic Dredging Company shall furnish all labor, machinery, and appliances necessary or proper for the faithful execution of the contract, and shall do the work called for, and in all respects carry out and comply with the said specifications for dredging." The sum to be paid was fixed by the contract at 10 $\frac{7}{8}$ cents for each and every cubic yard of material dredged, "measured in place," the said price including removal and redeposit.

Presumably, in consequence of knowledge on the part of the dredge company of a refusal by the government to pay the New York Dredging Company for the work being done by *it for the removal of any earth[184 from the excavated channel, derived from the sliding from slopes of the same, the dredging company, before commencing work, addressed a letter to General Smith, engineer in charge, requesting to know whether its contract would be construed as excluding payment for removing such earth. General Smith replied "that payment will be made for the quantity of material removed within the designated lines of excavation as determined by measurement before and after the dredging, and that such measurement does not include material which comes in from the sides during the progress of dredging." The letter stated: "I deem it proper to add that this is in conformity with the instructions received from the chief of engineers on the subject." The dredge company thereupon replied, protesting against this construction, declaring that it was not bound thereby, and that its performance of the work must not be construed as an acceptance of the correctness of such interpretation.

The work was commenced. Whenever a payment was made under the contract, the dredge company, in receiving the same, asserted that it was entitled to be paid for removing any earth which had fallen into the excavation from the slopes and which had been removed by it, and, on payment for such work being refused, it protested. On June 21, 1901, while the work on the contract was proceeding, the dredge company made a supplementary contract, increasing the amount to be by it excavated, in accordance with the terms and specifications of the prior contract, from 900,000 to 1,300,000 cubic yards. As the work thereafter progressed under both contracts payments were continued to be made by the government and received by the dredge company under protest, as before stated, until the work under the contracts was finally completed.

The court below found:

"The amount of material that fell or slid from the sides or slopes of the vertical walls in front of the dredge and that was removed thereby along with the excavated material [185] within the *designated lines for dredging as provided by the contract was more than 30,000 cubic yards, which, at the contract price of 10 $\frac{7}{8}$ cents per cubic yard, would amount to over \$3,000."

In the opinion delivered by the court below it was said:

"We are therefore of the opinion that the specifications, which are made part of the contract, are plain and unambiguous, and that they not only furnish the basis of measurement in place of the material to be excavated, but that the measurements made by the engineer in charge were in strict accord therewith. This being so, any other method of measurement in place, even though customary, is excluded by the terms of the contract, and therefore expert testimony is not admissible to explain language that needs no explanation." [41 Ct. Cl. 229.]

And for these reasons the right of the dredge company to recover was denied. A new trial was asked, among others, on the ground that error had been committed in not finding the trade meaning of the words, "measured in place," and because the amount of cubic yards of earth which had slid in from the sides or slopes of the excavation while the contract was being performed, and which had been removed by the company, had not been fixed at 260,430 instead of "as above 30,000," as stated in the findings. In addition a request was made that the findings be amended so as to qualify the finding that the price paid should be 10 $\frac{7}{8}$ cents for each and every cubic yard of material dredged, measured in place, by adding the words, "the same being the trade meaning or understanding of the words 'measured in place.'" In addition it was asked that the finding as to the amount of cubic yards removed of matter that fell from the sides or slopes be increased from above 30,000 to 260,430. The motion for a new trial and the motion to amend the findings were overruled. The court, in its reasons for denying the motion, while stating that certain expert testimony had been offered as to the meaning of the words "measured in place," further stated that it had declined to consider the same and make a finding thereon, *as it concluded, as said in its previous [186] opinion, that the import of the words "measured in place," as used in the contract, was so free from ambiguity that it did not consider the testimony relevant. This was based upon the opinion that, whatever might be the commercial signification of the words, that meaning could not be imported into the contract for the purpose of destroying its plain and obvious intendment when the terms of the entire contract and the specifications forming part of the same were given their proper weight.

The errors complained of are all embraced under the following headings:

a. The refusal of the court to receive and consider testimony offered as to the trade meaning of the words "measured in place" and its refusal to make a finding on the subject. It being contended that the action of the court in refusing to amend its findings and the statement, in its opinion, that it declined to consider such testimony, adequately preserves the question for review.

b. The refusal of the court to find the precise amount removed of earth which slid in from the sides or slopes, thus leaving the finding uncertain on that subject.

c. The attributing of conclusive efficacy to the action of the officer in charge.

And finally,

d. The construction given by the court to the contract.

It is apparent that the question of construction last stated lies at the foundation of all the assignments, and therefore first commands consideration. We say this because, if it be that the court below was correct in its conclusion that the contract gave to the words "measured in place," as therein used, a plain and unambiguous signification, it is obvious that the abstract or commercial meaning of those words, upon the hypothesis that they have such meaning, was rightly held to be irrelevant. And it is equally plain that, if the court below rightly construed the contract in the particular mentioned, it will be unnecessary to consider the effect which was given *to the [187] action of the officer in charge, since that action was in accordance with the meaning which the court gave to the contract.

Coming to consider the contract, we are of opinion that the court below correctly enforced its self-evident meaning. The requirement that the amount of material removed should be paid for by the cubic yard, measured in place, and shall be determined by surveys made before dredging is commenced and after its completion, clearly in and of itself established a method for fixing the amount of material which might be excavated, and which was to be paid for, absolutely incompatible with the contention that the contract contemplated that payment should be made for excavated earth which might slide into the channel from the slopes of the same during the progress of the work. And this is fortified by the requirement as to the location of the stakes and the keeping of them continually in place during the performance of the work under the contract. It is, moreover, additionally sustained by the provision, "that no extra allowance will be made for excavating material different from that herein prescribed," and by the stipulations, "that work done outside of the designated lines of excavations or below the specified depth will not be paid for," and "that any material deposited other than that specified and agreed upon must be removed by the contractor at his own expense." When these provisions are read in connection with the specification stating that "no guaranty is given as to the nature of the bottom, but, as far as it is known, it is sand, mud, clay, and gravel; bidders are requested to satisfy themselves as to this point, and to examine all other local conditions, as it will be assumed that their bids are based upon personal information," in connection with the statement of the approximate quantity, and the further condition that "no claim will be made against the United States on account of any excess or deficiency, absolute or relative in the same," we think the conclusion is beyond reasonable controversy that the contract, by its express terms and without ambiguity, excludes the possibility of holding that earth which might slide from the slopes during the excavation was to be paid for by the United States. To separate the words "measured in place" from all the other provisions of the contract, in order to give them an assumed or proven abstract trade meaning, repugnant to their significance in the contract, would be to destroy, and not to sustain and enforce, the contract requirements. Lest our silence upon the subject may give rise to misconception, we deem it well to observe that even if the original contract was susceptible of a different construction from that which we hold arises from its plain import, such result could have no possible influence on the asserted claim of the dredge company, in so far as that claim is based upon excavation done under the supplementary contract. We say this because that contract was made with the full knowledge of the meaning affixed by the United States to the terms of the contract, and which had been insisted upon in the carrying on of the previous dredging operations.

Affirmed.

PHŒNIX BRIDGE COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 188-199.)

Contracts — extra work — public improvement.

The erection, pursuant to the direction of the government officer in charge, of a temporary liftspan, which was the most feasible and least expensive substitute which could be employed after an accident during the performance of a contract to reconstruct and remodel a government bridge over the Mississippi river had carried away a substantial part of the unfinished drawspan, together with the false work supporting the old structure, was contemplated by the contract, so as to preclude extra compensation therefor, where the immediate opening of navigation, which would have been seriously interrupted by the restoration of the false work, was imminent, and the contract, although containing many minute stipulations looking to uninterrupted railway service across the bridge, with no express requirement as to the navigability of the river, had fixed a date for the completion of the drawspan sufficiently early ordinarily to insure noninterruption of navigation.

[For other cases, see Contracts, 608-610, 686-690, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 26.]

Argued November 12, 13, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment rejecting a claim of a public contractor to compensation for extra work. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 492.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John Spalding Flannery and Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

If a party by his contract charge himself with an obligation possible to be performed, he must make it good unless his performance is rendered impossible by the act of God, the law, or the other party.

NOTE. — On the right to recover for extra work—see notes to Gibson County v. Cincinnati Steam Heating Co. 12 L.R.A. 502, and Ingle v. Jones, 17 L. ed. U. S. 762.

United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 588, 602, 44 L. ed. 284, 289, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228; Dermott v. Jones (Ingle v. Jones) 2 Wall. 1, 17 L. ed. 762.

In reconstructing this bridge the company was acting as the agent of the United States, which was clothed with the most ample, if not the sole, authority to make such an improvement. The United States was performing a duty with respect to one great highway of interstate commerce,—the railroad connecting two great sections of the country,—and in so doing had the fullest power to temporarily obstruct and burden another highway of interstate commerce,—the navigable channel of the Mississippi river. Any private inconvenience which might have arisen from such a work of internal and public improvement would have given no cause of action against the United States or against anyone duly authorized to act for it in such an undertaking.

Rhea v. Newport News & M. Valley R. Co. 50 Fed. 23; Leovy v. United States, 177 U. S. 621, 44 L. ed. 914, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 629, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Bedford v. United States, 192 U. S. 217, 48 L. ed. 414, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Cardwell v. American River Bridge Co. 113 U. S. 205, 28 L. ed. 959, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Cooke, Commerce Clause of Fed. Constitution, § 52, p. 106.

A fortiori, no right of action could have been predicated upon an obstruction of navigation caused by an act of God.

United States v. Gleason, supra.

There is an implied contract to pay for extra and additional material and work not called for by the original contract.

Grants' Case, 5 Ct. Cl. 72; Wood v. Ft. Wayne, 119 U. S. 312, 30 L. ed. 416, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219.

Where the alterations in or additions to a contract were ordered by an officer clothed with responsibility and authority to contract, a contract will be implied to the extent of the benefit which the defendants have received, and the claimants will be entitled to recover in a quantum meruit.

Hawkins v. United States, 96 U. S. 689, 24 L. ed. 607; Barlow v. United States, 35 Ct. Cl. 514.

Where a parol contract has been wholly or partly executed on one side, the party performing will be entitled to recover the fair value of his property or services as upon an implied contract for a quantum meruit.

Clark v. United States, 95 U. S. 539, 24 L. ed. 518.

The receipt given by the company for the final payment under its contract was not a release of its claim for additional work and material furnished for the erection of the lift span.

3 Addison, Contr. 1221, 1223; Lee v. Lancashire & Y. R. Co. L. R. 6 Ch. 537; Oelrichs v. Spain (Oelrichs v. Williams) 15 Wall. 211, 21 L. ed. 43.

Assistant Attorney General John Q. Thompson argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. C. Campbell, filed a brief for appellee: The decision of Colonel Buffington is final and conclusive.

Hawkins v. United States, 96 U. S. 689, 696, 24 L. ed. 607, 609.

Appellant could not legally obstruct the navigable capacity of the river, even with the consent of the government, without the consent of the state or states that own the bed of the river where it was proposed to place the obstruction.

Cummings v. Chicago, 188 U. S. 410, 47 L. ed. 525, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Montgomery v. Portland, 190 U. S. 89, 47 L. ed. 965, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Kansas v. Colorado, 206 U. S. 46-93, 51 L. ed. 956-973, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; United States v. Chandler-Dunbar Water Power Co. 209 U. S. 447, 52 L. ed. 881, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal is prosecuted to obtain the reversal of a judgment rejecting a claim of the Phoenix Bridge Company for $6,958.14. The bridge company based its right to recover upon the averment that, during the performance of a contract entered into by it with the United States for the partial reconstruction and remodeling a bridge belonging to the United States, spanning the Mississippi river between Davenport, Iowa, and Rock Island, Illinois, the company had, under the orders of the United States officer in charge of the work, expended the amount claimed for work not specified in the contract, and for the value of which therefore the United States came under an obligation to respond. Not following the precise order in which the court below recited the facts by it found, we reproduce from such findings the statements made therein of such facts as are in anywise pertinent to the questions which we think the controversy involves.

In July, 1895, the government of the United States issued a circular advertisement, signed by A. R. Buffington, Colonel of Ordnance, U. S. Army, inviting proposals for the construction of a new superstructure and making alterations in the abutments and piers of the government bridge over the Mississippi river connecting Davenport, Iowa, and Rock Island, Illinois. The bridge company, in answer to this advertisement, submitted a formal proposition, and, in addition, addressed a letter to Colonel Buffington, dated August 10, 1895, which, among other things, contained the following:

190] *Col. A. R. Buffington, Col. Ord., Commanding Rock Island Arsenal, Rock Island, Illinois.

Dear Sir:—

Appreciating the importance of finishing the proposed new bridge at Rock Island at the earliest possible date, we have been making a very careful study of the best method of removing the present structure and erecting the new spans, and have finally decided upon a plan which will enable us to work on the structure regardless of floods and ice in the river, and thereby give you the work at least five or six months before the time mentioned in your letter of July 27th. Our plan of erection is shown in detail on prints 1 and 2 sent herewith.

The erection of the drawspan of course must be done during the closing of navigation, between the 20th of November and the 15th of March of the following year, and this span will be removed in the ordinary manner, by placing false work in the river to support temporarily the old structure and the railway traffic during the removal of the present span, and for supporting the new work during erection, the various parts being put in position by the ordinary overhead traveler shown on plan 2. This particular part of the erection does not need any special explanation. As we have made a specialty of drawspan work and have every facility in our shops for building such a span, we have named a date of completion for the new drawspan of March 1st, 1896. The first small span, "E," we will erect in advance of the drawspan, and will have the same in position on February 1st, 1896. We erect this small span in advance of the draw, that we may bring these two spans up to the new grade together.

In August, 1895, the bridge company was notified of the acceptance of its proposition, such notification stating, however, that decision upon the character of the stone to be used and the form of the solid steel railroad floor was reserved. On October 2, 1895, the contract for the performance of the work was executed.

At the Rock Island end of the bridge there 191] was a stationary *span, and next to that there was a drawspan, and beyond that there were several more stationary spans, extending to the Iowa end of the bridge.

53 L. ed.

The plan adopted for the erection of the bridge contemplated the substitution of new material for the old superstructure without interruption to the railroad traffic over the bridge, and the scheme adopted was to carry such traffic upon false work, consisting of timbers extending from the bed of the stream to the old superstructure, for the purpose of supporting the tracks for such traffic. This false work under the drawspan made a barrier across that portion of the stream, which would have rendered navigation impossible in case such false work was not removed prior to the opening of navigation.

The drawspan was intended for the convenience of navigation upon the river, and said draw was the only means that vessels and other craft on the river had of going from one side of the bridge to the other.

The specifications, as originally prepared, called for the erection of the drawspan by January 1, 1896, and the completion of the bridge on November 1, 1896. Subsequently the specifications were modified so as to fix March 1, 1896, as the date for the erection of the drawspan, and September 15, 1896, for the final completion of the whole bridge.

The object of fixing March 1, 1896, for the completion of the drawspan, was that navigation, which was likely to open at that place in the middle of March, should not be interrupted by the work of construction upon the bridge. This object was well understood by both parties to the contract.

The specifications, forming a part of the contract, provided that the dates given above were of the essence of the contract, and that no payment would be made for any work or material, as provided by the specifications and the contract, to be made with the contractor, while he was in arrears in delivery or erection; and in case of the failure of the contractor to have the work completed by November 1, 1896, *he[192 would be required to pay two hundred dollars ($200) per day as liquidated damages in consequence of such delay.

The specifications besides contained full details as to the method of doing the work and the supervision thereof by the government officer in charge. They provided that the contractor would be required to remove old superstructure without disturbing trains, and contained many express exactions looking to the execution of the work so as to enable the bridge to be continuously operated for the passage of trains during the progress of the contract. The contract contained the following clause:

"5th. If any default shall be made by the party of the first part in delivering all or any of the work mentioned in this contract, of the quality and at the times and places herein specified, then in that case the said party of the second part may supply the deficiency by purchase in open market or otherwise (the articles so procured to be of the kind herein specified as near as practicable), and the said party of the first part shall be charged with the expense resulting from such failure. Nothing contained in this stipulation shall be construed to prevent the chief of ordnance, at his option, upon the happening of any such default, from declaring this contract to be thereafter null and void, without affecting the right of the United States to recover for defaults which may have occurred; but, in case of overwhelming and unforeseen accident, by fire or otherwise, the circumstances shall be taken into equitable consideration by the United States before claiming forfeiture for nondelivery at the time specified."

No provision was made for payment as such for any of the false work by which it was stipulated the whole bridge, including the drawspan, should be supported during the work of reconstruction, nor for the cost of removal of the same. The compensation stipulated was a given price per pound for the material to be placed in the new superstructure, and a fixed price per cubic yard for 193]alterations in the old masonry *work, and for excavations for additional foundations in the new masonry work required.

"The claimant proceeded to fulfil the obligations of its contract, and erected the necessary false work, including that for the drawspan, and was proceeding with the erection of the drawspan itself on February 25, 1896, when, as a result of a rise in temperature, the ice in the river at that point moved, taking with it the false work and a substantial portion of the drawspan then in place. In the condition in which the work was at that time nothing could have been done to prevent the destruction of the work. In case the accident had not happened, the drawspan would have been completed by March 15, 1896, to such an extent that it could have been swung so as not to impede navigation. The claimant did not proceed with the erection of the drawspan as expeditiously as it might have done, particularly in that it did not procure the necessary material in the order necessary for the erection of the drawspan. Said span might have been completed a considerable time before February 25, 1896, although the claimant was not bound to have it completed until March 1, 1896, by its contract. The United States was in no way responsible for any delays in the fulfilment of said contract, and was in no wise in default.

"After said accident Col. A. R. Buffington, United States ordnance officer in charge of the construction, together with several of his assistants, had a conference with the representatives of the claimant at the site of the bridge, and it was determined that the most feasible way of repairing the damage and going on with the construction of the drawspan was to erect said span upon the pivot pier running up and down the river, so that the erection of said drawspan should not interfere with navigation, which was likely to open at any time after March 1. It was further determined that the most feasible way of providing for railroad traffic during the erection of said drawspan was to put in place a temporary liftspan, which could be so operated as to allow the passage of vessels. Thereupon *Colonel Buf-[194 fington ordered the claimant to erect such liftspan, which the claimant did, at the expense of $6,683.59.

"Colonel Buffington's order was intended to meet an exigency caused by the imminence of an immediate opening of navigation, and to avoid the consequent large damage which would have been done to the shipping of the river and the property interests employed therein by the obstruction which would have been caused by work under the contract if navigation had opened about March 1, as might have been apprehended upon February 26.

"At the time of the conference . . . representatives of the claimant demurred to the erection of such liftspan. They claimed that the bridge company could proceed to repair the damage done by the accident and erect the drawspan on false work across the channel of the river prior to the opening of navigation. Colonel Buffington and his assistants maintained that this could not be done.

"Navigation opened in the season of 1896, on March 27. At the time of the accident it could not have been foreseen that navigation would not open several weeks prior to that date. Navigation on the river at this point is heavy and continuous from the opening of navigation. In case navigation had been interrupted up to the date when the drawspan could have been ready to swing, the damage to persons engaged in such navigation would have been greater than the expense of the erection and operation of such liftspan.

"The erection of the liftspan was necessary in order to provide for railroad traffic and the navigation on the river, and was the most feasible and the least expensive method of so doing.

"After the accident on February 25, 1896, the claimant proceeded to erect the drawspan, in accordance with the contract, and said drawspan was ready to swing June 1, 1896."

After the completion of the work, a voucher was drawn for the final payment under the contract. This voucher recited the total sum agreed to be paid by the contract, 195]deducted the *previous payments made to the bridge company, and stated the balance, it being explained that this balance constituted the full and final payment to the contractor. The amount thus stated to be the sum finally due under the contract was received by the company and a receipt was signed on December 11, 1896, declaring that the amount received was "acknowledged as the final and full payment for all the material furnished, and for all the work performed under the said contract, and in full for all charges, claims, adjustments, differences, or other alleged indebtedness incident to the work, or related to it in any manner whatever."

"At the time of signing this paper the claimant made no protest and understood that it covered all claims it had against the United States growing out of the erection of the said bridge. The final completion of the work provided for in the contract was several months later than the time limited in said contract, and, at the time said instrument was presented to plaintiff's agent for his signature, he objected to signing it. Buffington then informed him if he did not so sign it as a final release of all claims, his instructions were to refer the whole matter, including claims for delay in the completion of the work, to the Department. Claimant's agent then advised directly with his principal, after which he signed the instrument and received the final payment, at the same time, in reply to an inquiry by Colonel Buffington whether he signed without reservation, replied, 'You have our signature to the release as you handed it to me.' Before that time there had been dispute between the parties, both as to the liability of defendant for the liftspan and the plaintiff for delay in the completion of the work. No damages for delay were afterwards claimed or sought to be enforced against the claimant."

Upon these findings it is insisted that the court below erred in holding that the bridge company was not entitled to recover the amount by it expended for the erection of the temporary liftspan, because that work, done by the direction of the officer representing the United States, was not within the 196]contemplation *of the contract, and no duty rested upon the bridge company to do such work. In other words, the contention is that, as the contract provided for supporting the old structure across its entire length, including the drawspan, by false work which was to hold the old structure until the new was completed, when the false work should be removed, that the bridge company, when the damage caused by the melting of the ice took place, was entitled to continue the use of the false work for supporting the drawspan, although in so doing the navigation of the river would be entirely obstructed. And, upon the assumption that such is the true interpretation of the contract, it is urged the final receipt which was given did not constitute accord and satisfaction for the expenditure made concerning the liftspan. In logical order the question of accord and satisfaction resulting from the giving of the receipt when the final payment was made would first arise for solution. As, however, the contention that accord and satisfaction did not result from the giving of the receipt rests upon the assumption that the work done in the temporary erection of the liftspan was not within the contract, and therefore was not embraced by the receipt, it follows that we must, in order to dispose of the controversy as to accord and satisfaction, consider and determine the nature and character of the obligations which the contract imposed concerning the work done as to the liftspan. For this reason, to avoid repetition, we come at once to the fundamental question, that is, the interpretation of the contract, for the purposes of ascertaining whether the work referred to was within the purview of the contract; for if it was, that will dispose of the whole controversy, including the claim of accord and satisfaction.

The argument by which it is sought to support the contention that the bridge company was entitled, after the accident, to continue the construction of the drawspan by the erection of false work which would entirely bar the navigable channel, insists that, as the contract alone provided for the method of construction by means of false work as a support *for the old struct-[197 ure during the performance of the contract, the contract must be construed as having authorized the bridge company to continue the use of the false work after the accident, even across the navigable channel, despite the injurious consequences to navigation which would have resulted. And from this right to use the false work to the destruction of navigation it is contended that there was no authority to direct the erection of the liftspan, and consequently an implied and contract liability on the part of the United States to pay the cost of the same when the span was erected under the order of the officer of the United States in charge. But we are of opinion that the interpretation of the contract upon which this proposition must rest is unsound, because it is not supported by the text of the instrument, and is not consonant with the intention of the parties as manifested by the text, and as established as a necessary result of the findings below made.

In considering the text of the contract attention is at once attracted to the important stipulations as to the period in which the work should be carried on and completed, and to the difference between the time fixed for the completion of the work as to the drawspan and that as to the remaining spans. When the fact that the bridge spanned a great navigable river, and the duty of the government to protect that navigability, is borne in mind, moreover, when the facts found by the court below as to the period when navigation would be suspended as the result of natural causes is also considered in connection with the obligation which the contract imposed of completing the drawspan within such non-navigable period, we are of opinion that the contract must be interpreted as exacting that the means employed in constructing the drawspan should be such as would not operate to impede navigation. We think, therefore, that the contract must be held to have empowered the bridge company to use and retain the false work in the navigable channel only during the time expressly stipulated in the contract, and therefore to 198] have imposed *the duty after that period, if the exigencies of the situation required it, to perform the work on the drawspan in some other suitable manner consistent with the noninterruption of the navigation of the river.

This interpretation, which we think the contract requires, as we have said, is directly in accordance with the finding below, that the object of fixing March 1, 1896, for the completion of the drawspan, was that navigation, which was likely to open at that place in the middle of March, should not be interrupted by the work of construction upon the bridge, and that this object was well understood by both parties to the contract.

The argument that, because the contract and its specifications contained many minute stipulations looking to prevent the interruption of railroad traffic across the bridge, and no express requirement as to the preservation of the navigability of the river, therefore, under the rule that the inclusion of one is the exclusion of the other, it should be interpreted as not having contemplated the necessity for preservation of navigability, when the terms of the contract are accurately considered, is self-destructive. We say this because, if the provision of the contract as to the time for completing the drawspan be given its necessary significance as elucidated by the intention of the parties as expressly established by the findings below, it must result that the insertion of the requirement as to the construction of the drawspan within the period fixed, which was safely within the time when, by the operation of nature, there would be no navigation on the river, excludes the conception that the minds of the parties could have deemed it necessary to expressly provide for the contingency of the interruption of navigation by the execution of the work, when such interruption was impossible to arise if the duties which the contract imposed were executed according to their express requirements.

As the findings, beyond peradventure, established that the liftspan was the most feasible and least expensive substitute *for[199 the false work which could have been employed after the accident, and, as they also established that the objection of the bridge company to pursuing that method was alone based upon the assumed right to complete the work by the use of false work in the navigable channel after the period stipulated in the contract,—a right which we hold the bridge company did not enjoy,—we think no express or implied obligation rested upon the United States to pay for the cost of the temporary liftspan, and that the court below was correct in so holding.

Disposing of the case, as we do, upon the interpretation of the contract heretofore made, it is unnecessary to consider whether, even assuming that there could be a different interpretation, the bridge company would be entitled to recover, in view of the facts found below as to the state of the work on the drawspan at the time the accident occurred, that is, the backwardness of such work, which it was expressly found was due solely to the negligence of the bridge company.

Affirmed.

THOMAS H. PICKFORD and John H. Walter, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

HENRY M. TALBOTT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 199-210.)

Evidence — admissibility under pleadings — cross-examination.

1. Evidence that a prosecuting attorney neglected to investigate the character of NOTE. — On the scope of cross-examination—see notes to Hobart v. Young, 12 L.R.A. 693, and Rea v. Missouri, 21 L. ed. U. S. 707.

As to when requested instructions may be refused—see note to International & G. N. R. Co. v. Keenan, 9 L.R.A. 703.

the prosecuting witness is inadmissible on the cross-examination of that officer under a plea of the general issue, as tending to rebut the allegation in the declaration in an action for libel in charging him with using his office to procure an indictment as part of a conspiracy to blackmail, that he was upright, honest, just, and faithful in the performance of his official duties.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 2688-2712; Witnesses, V. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — requested instructions.

2. A requested instruction is properly refused where the instructions given and not objected to embodied everything contained in the instruction refused that was adapted to the testimony and to the consideration which the jury might give to its various phases.

[For other cases, see Trial, 796-818, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 13.]

Argued October 26, 27, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District in favor of plaintiff in an action for libel. Affirmed.

See same case below, 28 App. D. C. 498.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry E. Davis argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Samuel Maddox and H. Prescott Gatley, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The line of inquiry was being pursued during cross-examination, where the rule is different from that which governs tenders of original or direct evidence.

Wigmore, Ev. § 981; Oxier v. United States, 1 Ind. Terr. 85, 38 S. W. 331; People v. Jackson, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 395; Eames v. Kaiser, 142 U. S. 491, 35 L. ed. 1091, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; Sonnentheil v. Texas Guaranty & T. Co. 10 Tex. Civ. App. 287, 30 S. W. 945; Griffin v. Henderson, 117 Ga. 383, 43 S. E. 712.

In actions of libel and slander very wide latitude is given defendant, under a plea of not guilty, and in mitigation of damages, to prove that the character of the plaintiff is not so good as claimed by him. If material to the issues, specific acts of wrongdoing may be shown.

Townshend, Slander & Libel, p. 669, § 406; Newell, Defamation, p. 290, § 39; Leicester v. Walter, 2 Campb. 251; Wetherbee v. Marsh, 20 N. H. 563, 51 Am. Dec. 244; Wilson v. Noonan, 27 Wis. 598; Conroe v. Conroe, 47 Pa. 198; B— v. I—, 22 Wis. 372, 94 Am. Dec. 604; Jones v. Townsend, 21 Fla. 447; Williams v. Miner, 18 Conn. 477; Odgers, Libel & Slander, Bigelow's Notes, §§ 304, 305; Treat v. Browning, 4 Conn. 409.

The greatest latitude is and should be allowed on cross-examination, especially of a party to the suit, for the purpose of sifting the conscience of the witness touching his accuracy of statements, veracity, and credibility; and even specific, extraneous offenses and other matters material to the issues may be inquired into, if they have any bearing thereon.

1 Greenl. Ev. § 446; 3 Jones, Ev. § 826; Taylor, Ev. 8th ed. § 1459; Kirschner v. State, 9 Wis. 140; Eames v. Kaiser, supra; Hitchcock v. Moore, 70 Mich. 112, 14 Am. St. Rep. 474, 37 N. E. 914; Hay v. Reid, 85 Mich. 307, 48 N. W. 507; State v. Merriman, 34 S. C. 39, 12 S. E. 619; Kolb v. Union R. Co. 23 R. I. 74, 54 L.R.A. 646, 91 Am. St. Rep. 614, 49 Atl. 392.

The trial court was seemingly frightened by the bogey arising from the rule laid down in Underwood v. Parks, 2 Strange, 1200, that "the truth of words cannot be given in evidence on not guilty."

The interpretation of this rule and the extent of its application have given rise to the greatest possible diversity in the judgments of the courts; at least, in those states where it had not been abolished by statute.

Bush v. Prosser, 11 N. Y. 362; Van Derveer v. Sutphin, 5 Ohio St. 302; Huson v. Dale, 19 Mich. 30, 2 Am. Rep. 66.

The trial court erred in respect of instructing the jury as to the responsibility of the plaintiffs in error for the alleged libel.

Fox v. Vanderbeek, 5 Cow. 513; Olmstead v. Miller, 1 Wend. 506; Whiting v. Smith, 13 Pick. 371; Stanfield v. Boyer, 6 Harr. & J. 248; Winter v. Donovan, 8 Gill, 376; Smith v. Hollister, 32 Vt. 695; Barnett v. State, 35 Tex. Crim. Rep. 281, 33 S. W. 340; Conlee v. State, 14 Tex. App. 222; Frisby v. State, 26 Tex. App. 180, 9 S. W. 463; Riddle v. State, 30 Tex. App. 425, 17 S. W. 1073; State v. Fitzgerald, 20 Mo. App. 408; Atteberry v. Powell, 29 Mo. 429, 77 Am. Dec. 579; Enos v. Enos, 135 N. Y. 609, 32 N. E. 123; Ranson v. McCurley, 140 Ill. 626, 31 N. E. 121; Barrows v. Carpenter, 11 Cush. 456; Howland v. George F. Blake Mfg. Co. 156 Mass. 543, 31 N. E. 656.

Messrs. Andrew Lipscomb and John Ridout argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The "English rule" allowed practically a cross-examination of a witness on the whole case; but it is by the "American rule" equally well settled in a large majority of states and all the Federal courts that it is limited to matters brought out by the direct.

Houghton v. Jones, 1 Wall. 702, 17 L. ed. 503; Philadelphia & T. R. Co. v. Stimpson, 14 Pet. 461, 10 L. ed. 542; Jones, Ev. §§ 820, 821, 837; Northern P. R. Co. v. Umlin, 158 U. S. 271, 39 L. ed. 977, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840.

"The truth" or "justification" must be specially pleaded, and with sufficient precision and particularity to enable the plaintiff to know precisely what is the charge he is to meet.

Newell, Defamation, §§ 68-76; Richardson v. State, 66 Md. 205, 7 Atl. 43; Smith v. Tribune Co. 4 Biss. 477, Fed. Cas. No. 13,118; Woodruff v. Richardson, 20 Conn. 238; Knight v. Foster, 39 N. H. 576; Smart v. Blanchard, 42 N. H. 137.

The trial judge is something more than the moderator of a town meeting, and he has affirmative duties to perform in ruling upon questions of evidence.

Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 660, 45 L. ed. 361, 363, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

In libel, if the language is clear and unambiguous, it is the province of the court to determine its construction and whether it is actionable per se.

Negley v. Farrow, 60 Md. 158, 45 Am. Rep. 715.

All the essential elements to which, under any view of the law, plaintiffs in error were entitled, were given to the jury by the general charge of the court; and it is thoroughly well settled that the trial court is not bound to charge in any case as prayed, if the law be plainly and correctly given in the general charge.

District of Columbia v. Dietrich, 23 App. D. C. 577; Ryan v. Washington & G. R. Co. 8 App. D. C. 542; District of Columbia v. Wilcox, 4 App. D. C. 90; District of Columbia v. Haller, 4 App. D. C. 405; Robinson v. Parker, 11 App. D. C. 132; De Forest v. United States, 11 App. D. C. 458.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for libel, brought in the supreme court of the District of Columbia. The plaintiff in the action, defendant in error here, secured a verdict for $8,500, upon which judgment was entered. It was affirmed by the court of appeals. 28 App. D. C. 498.

205] *The facts are set out at some length in the opinion of the court of appeals, and need not be repeated. It is enough to say that defendant in error, Talbott, was, at the time of the publication of the libel, state's attorney for the county of Montgomery, in the state of Maryland. During his incumbency of that office an indictment was found upon the testimony of one Hudson, charging plaintiffs in error with the crime of arson, for having set fire, it was charged, to a building owned by them in Montgomery county. The building was insured for $30,000, of which, after controversy, there was paid $21,000. The libelous article was published in a paper published in the city of Washington, called the Sunday Globe, and copies circulated in the county of Montgomery, Maryland. The article was entitled, "History of a Crime in which District Attorney Talbott, of Maryland, Enacts a Leading Role." It accused Talbott of entering into a "criminal scheme" with Hudson and a man by the name of Hopp, to blackmail Pickford and Walter, plaintiffs in error, which "culminated" in the "nefarious indictment;" and, in order that the actors in it might be "unmasked," the facts were said to be stated as they were learned "after a thorough investigation." Certain facts and instances were detailed, among others the association of Hudson and Hopp, an attempt by the latter to obtain money from Pickford to stop the prosecution of the indictment, the payment of Pickford to Hopp of certain marked bills, the arrest of Hopp, the advancement of money by Talbott to Hudson, the demand of Pickford's attorney for trial of the indictment, and motions to continue the same by Talbott, and the final dismissal of the same by him when the court peremptorily ordered him to proceed. The article concluded with these words: "The district attorney [Talbott] thereupon, by leave of the court, entered a nol. pros. and the great conspiracy thus came to an inglorious end."

It appeared from the evidence that the predecessor in office of Talbott (Alexander Kilgour) had refused to prosecute plaintiffs in error, and to him, plaintiff in error Pickford, in his *testimony, attributed [206 the declaration that the "whole thing" was a "blackmailing scheme." Kilgour, in his testimony, stated that he did not recall using the word "blackmailing," but said that in all probability he had done so, and "that it was an effort on the part of the insurance companies to use his office for the purpose of collecting their money."

The declaration contained four counts, the first of which was taken from the jury. In all of them, however, Talbott alleged his incumbency of the office of state's attorney for the county of Montgomery, and that, as "such officer, he was always reputed amongst the citizens of said county" and of the United States, "and deservedly so reputed, to be upright, honest, just, and faithful in the performance of the public duties imposed upon him by his oath of office and the laws of the state of Maryland." Injury to his good name and credit was alleged. The defendants pleaded the general issue.

At the trial, Talbott, being on the stand, testified that he had investigated the crime for which Pickford and Walter were indicted, and that it had been brought to his attention by a man by the name of Thompson, "in a vague and indefinite letter," which was followed by another letter, in which it was stated the crime was arson. He testified that Thompson was a newspaper man, whom he had never seen before, and on whom he called in response to the second letter. He also testified that Thompson told him that Hudson would be a witness, but did not tell him who Hudson was, but that he (Hudson) was thoroughly in touch with the situation. Subsequently he went with Thompson to see Hudson, taking a stenographer with him. He further testified that he did not know whether he asked Thompson if the matter had been brought to the attention of Mr. Kilgour. And further testified that the fire occurred during Kilgour's incumbency, and that he had not inquired of Kilgour about it. He also testified that the fire occurred in September, 1897, two years and four months before he qualified. He testified further that both Thompson and Hudson were strangers to 207]him. At this point *the court interrupted the examination, and the following occurred:

The Court. On what line are you pursuing this inquiry?

Mr. Maddox. I am going to show, if I can, the absence of good faith in this indictment on the part of the district attorney.

Thereupon, after discussion and explanation on the part of counsel for defendants, the following occurred:

The Court. I think I have heard enough to know what your proposition is. I cannot see but that it is an attempt to prove the truth without pleading it. . . . You may prove anything Pickford heard the witness say, before the article was published.

Mr. Maddox. I want to prove by this witness, first by his own testimony in connection with the transaction complained of in this article, that he is not a man of good character, which he says he is.

Mr. Lipscomb. I do not object by our [to your] asking him that, Mr. Maddox.

Secondly. I want to show that Mr. Pickford, from what he heard the plaintiff say, had reasonable grounds to believe that he was mixed up in some way with this conspiracy.

The Court. You may prove anything Pickford heard the witness say before the article was published.

Mr. Maddox. I understand the court will not let me go into the inquiry as to whether or not the plaintiff knew the man Hudson before he made this presentment to the grand jury, and whether he investigated the character of the man.

Under your statement that you propose by that line of testimony to prove that the district attorney acted in bad faith, I will not hear it, because I do not think it is relevant for that purpose.

This ruling is assigned as error here, as it was in the court of appeals, and it is attacked on the ground that "the 'good faith' of the defendant in error in procuring the Rockville indictment went to the very heart of the action." And counsel *supplement[208 this by saying that, "if it could have been made to appear by the admission of the witness, testifying in his own behalf, that, while state's attorney, he was in league with the man Hudson and the insurance companies in a scheme which his predecessor denominated 'blackmailing,' the jury would have made short work of the case when they retired to consider their verdict; and it was impossible to do this except by probing the conscience of the witness through the medium of cross-examination." It is obvious, by "good faith," counsel mean the truth of the charge. But, in the subsequent discussion, they seem to make it equivalent to good character, and contend that the examination was in rebuttal of the allegation of the declaration that defendant in error "was upright, honest, and just" in the performance of his official duties.

For the right to show the character of the witness, counsel adduce many cases, and assert, besides, the freedom that may be exercised in cross-examination. But the counsel who tried the case marked a distinction between the character of the witness and his good faith, and on that distinction the court made its ruling. It will not do now to identify them and claim a right that was not denied. The attorney for defendants (plaintiffs in error) was careful to say that he made no objections to questions directed to character, and the final purpose, as declared, had no reference to that. But what is the testimony and what is the argument built upon it? Counsel who conducted the defense said: "I understand the court will not let me go into the inquiry as to whether or not the plaintiff knew the man Hudson before he made this presentment to the grand jury, and whether he investigated the character of the man." It is now argued that this was an inquiry of a specific fact affecting the character of Talbott, showing that he exhibited a "reckless disregard of the rights of others," and this, taken in connection with certain facts mentioned, "shows," it is said, "a readiness on the part of the defendant in error to smirch the character of plaintiffs in error amounting to recklessness such that, if the defendant in error were at *bar for his conduct in the premises, would be held to show malice of the degree calling for punitive damages." And it is urged, after considerable discussion, that "the interrupted attempt was to show that the defendant in error, by reason of his conduct in the very matter in controversy, was not entitled to and did not have the peculiar character in respect to which he claimed to have been injured; namely, a character for probity in office."

We are not able to concur in the conclusion. A charge of using an office to procure an indictment as part of a conspiracy to blackmail could not be justified or in any degree excused by the facts offered to be proved. One might be a careful and zealous officer and not stop to investigate the characters of prosecuting witnesses. Besides, the charge was not of careless credence of an accusation of crime against innocent men, but of a scheme deliberately planned, through a "nefarious indictment," to use the words of the libel, to extort money from innocent men. We think, therefore, that the trial court was right in rejecting the proffered evidence as irrelevant. We could not hold otherwise, unless we should hold that crime and credulity are one and the same thing, and we repeat that the mere neglect to investigate the character of witnesses is not equivalent to such disregard of the rights of others as to be tantamount to deliberate design, certainly not a deliberate design to blackmail. We say "mere neglect," because this was all the offer amounted to. It was already in evidence for what it was worth that Hudson was a stranger to Talbott.

The second assignment of error is based upon the contention that the court erroneously instructed the jury in regard to the responsibility of the plaintiffs in error for the libel.

It is not necessary to give the testimony. We will assume that it might have been contended plaintiffs in error were not connected with either the printing or publishing of the first article or the second (there were two), or with either. The instruction asked and the instructions given by the 210]court *are too long to be copied and difficult to summarize. They are set out in the opinion of the court of appeals, and it will be seen from them that those given by the court, which were not objected to, embodied all, as the court of appeals held, that was contained in the instruction refused, adapted to the testimony and the consideration which the jury might give to its various phases.

Judgment affirmed.

ROBERT R. PRENTIS, Henry C. Stuart, and Joseph E. Willard, Individually and as Constituting the State Corporation Commission of Virginia, and R. T. Wilson, Clerk of the State Corporation Commission of Virginia, Appts.,

v.

ATLANTIC COAST LINE COMPANY.
[No. 270.]

SAME, Appts.,

v.

CHESAPEAKE & OHIO RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 271.]

SAME, Appts.,

v.

CHESAPEAKE WESTERN RAILWAY.
[No. 272.]

SAME, Appts.,

v.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 273.]

SAME, Appts.,

v.

NORFOLK & WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 274.]

SAME, Appts.,

v.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.
[No. 275.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 210-239.)

Courts — enjoining proceedings in state court — establishment of railway rates.

1. Injunctive relief against railway passenger rates as fixed by the Virginia State Corporation Commission may be granted by a Federal court if such rates are confiscatory, although, for some purposes, the commission is a court, since proceedings to establish rates are legislative, and therefore are not comprehended by the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581, forbidding Federal courts from enjoining proceedings in state courts, which provision looks to the NOTE. — On enjoining proceedings in Federal courts—see notes to Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 16 C. C. A. 90; Central Trust Co. v. Grantham, 27 C. C. A. 575; and Copeland v. Bruning, 63 C. C. A. 437.

On conclusiveness of judgments generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

As to conclusiveness and effect of judgments as between Federal and state courts—character of the proceedings, not the character of the body.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1495-1498, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgments — res judicata — establishment of railway rates by state commission.

2. The establishment of railway passenger rates by the Virginia State Corporation Commission is not res judicata in a suit which seeks injunctive relief on the ground that the rates are confiscatory, although such commission, for some purposes, is a court, and acted only after hearing and investigation, since proceedings to establish rates are legislative, and not judicial, in their nature.

[Judgments of what tribunals are conclusive, see Judgment, III. g, h, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — enjoining railway rates — exhausting remedy in state courts.

3. A Federal circuit court, on principles of comity, should not entertain a suit by which injunctive relief is sought against railway passenger rates as fixed by the Virginia State Corporation Commission, in advance of the appeal to the highest state court from the order fixing the rates, which is given by the state Constitution as of right to any aggrieved party.

[For other cases, see Courts, VI. d, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

States — immunity from suit — enjoining state officers.

4. A bill filed in a Federal court against a state commission to restrain its members from enforcing railway passenger rates established by such commission, on the ground that such rates are confiscatory, is not bad as an attempt to enjoin legislation or as a suit against the state.

[For other cases, see States, IX. c, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 270-275.]

Argued October 16, 19, 20, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

A PPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia to review decrees enjoining the enforcement of railway passenger rates as fixed by the Virginia State Corporation Commission, on the ground that such rates are confiscatory. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

see notes to, Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Morgan, 21 C. C. A. 478, and Union & Planters' Bank v. Memphis, 49 C. C. A. 468.

On premature commencement of action generally—see note to American Bonding & T. Co. v. Gibson County, 76 C. C. A. 159.

On suits against a state—see notes to Murdoek Parlor Grate Co. v. Com. 8 L.R.A. 399; Carr v. State, 11 L.R.A. 370; Beers v. Arkansas, 15 L. ed. U. S. 991; Hans v. Louisiana, 33 L. ed. U. S. 842; and Tindall v. Wesley, 13 C. C. A. 165.

On suits against state officers as suits against state—see notes to Sanders v. Saxton, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 727; Ex parte Young, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932; and Beers v. Arkansas, 15 L. ed. U. S. 991.

53 L. ed.

Mr. William A. Anderson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The definitions of a court, as given by law writers and lexicographers, are various; but it will be found that the tribunal whose orders the plaintiffs in these suits seek to nullify satisfies all of the essential requisites of a court of justice as given by these authorities.

See Webster's Dict., Century Dict., Standard Dict., 3 Bl. Com. pp. 24, 25. See also Fuller v. Colfax County, 4 McCrary, 537, 14 Fed. 177.

The great object of these suits is to enjoin and stop litigation in the state courts, and to bring all the litigated questions before the United States circuit court. This is one of the things the Federal courts are expressly prohibited from doing.

United States v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co. 176 U. S. 317, 44 L. ed. 485, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Haines v. Carpenter, 91 U. S. 254-257, 23 L. ed. 345, 346.

These are really suits against a state.

Re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 31 L. ed. 216, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 27 L. ed. 448, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 27 L. ed. 468, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91; Cunningham v. Macon & B. R. Co. 109 U. S. 446, 27 L. ed. 992, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292, 609; Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52, 29 L. ed. 805, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. ed. 535, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Smith v. Reeves, 178 U. S. 440, 44 L. ed. 1143, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 919; Minnesota v. Hiteheock, 185 U. S. 386, 46 L. ed. 962, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

The Virginia tribunal, in its origin and constitution, differs essentially from the railroad commissions passed upon in the Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191, and from the Minnesota Railroad Commission considered in Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702, and from the Texas Railroad Commission discussed in Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 388-413, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1020-1028, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

If there is a reasonable doubt as to the constitutional validity of the organic and statutory enactments of Virginia which are attempted to be impeached by the appellees, that doubt must be solved in favor of the validity of those laws.

Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 718, 25 L. ed. 501; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 684, 32 L. ed. 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 393, 40 L. ed. 194, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.

If there is any reasonable doubt as to whether the United States circuit court had jurisdiction of these cases, it was error for the court to take jurisdiction of them.

1 Desty, Fed. Proc. p. 340; Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 278-284, 27 L. ed. 932-935, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Peper v. Fordyce, 119 U. S. 469, 30 L. ed. 435, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Turner v. Bank of North America, 4 Dall. 8, 1 L. ed. 718.

Mr. John W. Daniel also argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The state corporation commission fulfils every definition and description of a judicial court ever given by any judicial expounder of, or any intelligent commentator on, the jurisprudence of the English-speaking peoples.

Co. Litt. 58a; 3 Bl. Com. 23, 25; People ex rel. Garling v. Van Allen, 55 N. Y. 31; White County v. Gwin, 136 Ind. 562, 22 L.R.A. 402, 36 N. E. 237; 11 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 653, 654.

No court of the United States can enjoin proceedings in a state court, with the single statutory exception made by the national bankrupt law when such law is in operation; and the further exception, taken from equity principles in the case of concurrent jurisdiction, that the Federal court had assumed prior jurisdiction.

Diggs v. Wolcott, 4 Cranch, 179, 2 L. ed. 587; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612-625, 12 L. ed. 841-846; Slaughter-house Cases, 10 Wall. 298, 19 L. ed. 922; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L. ed. 666; Haines v. Carpenter, 91 U. S. 257, 23 L. ed. 346; Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation (Louisiana ex rel. Citizens' Bank v. Board of Liquidation) 98 U. S. 140, 25 L. ed. 114; Williams v. Oliver, 12 How. 125, 13 L. ed. 921; Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635; French v. Hay (French v. Stewart) 22 Wall. 253, 22 L. ed. 858; Bolling v. Lersner, 91 U. S. 595, 23 L. ed. 367; United States v. Collins, 4 Blatchf. 156, Fed. Cas. No. 14,834; Fisk v. Union P. R. Co. 6 Blatchf. 362, Fed. Cas. No. 4,827; Fisk v. Union P. R. Co. 10 Blatchf. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 4,830; Cropper v. Coburn, 2 Curt. C. C. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 3,416; Hamilton v. Walsh, 23 Fed. 420; Chaffin v. St. Louis, 4 Dill. 24, Fed. Cas. No. 2,573; McWhirter v. Halsted, 24 Fed. 828; Hale v. Bugg, 82 Fed. 33; United States v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co. 176 U. S. 317, 44 L. ed. 485, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 154-165, 43 L. ed. 401-405, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Spear, Federal Judiciary, 321; McKim v. Voorhies, 7 Cranch, 279, 3 L. ed. 342; Simpkin's, Suit in Equity in Federal Courts, p. 337; 1 Rose, Code of Federal Procedure, pp. 166, 167-170, § 720; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 31-35

This prohibition necessarily includes all steps taken by the court or its officers under its process, from the institution of the suit until the close of the final process of execution.

United States v. Collins, supra.

If the nature of an administrative question involve the exercise of the judicial faculties for its solution, it may be made a judicial question, and referred by law to the jurisdiction of the courts.

Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372; United States v. Halleck, 1 Wall. 439, 17 L. ed. 664; United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 316, 47 L. ed. 1074, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698.

Where a court has the power to refer a question of rate making to a court under the law of a state, it is competent for that court to hear and adjudicate it.

Re Janvrin, 174 Mass. 514, 47 L.R.A. 319, 55 N. E. 381.

Mr. A. Caperton Braxton also argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

There are certain functions which are so interwoven and blended as to make it somewhat a matter of opinion and viewpoint, if not of mere taste or fancy, as to how they should be classified. Rate making might, in some aspects, be regarded as one of these hybrid functions.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 354, 28 L. ed. 176, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 874; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 196, 40 L. ed. 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 397, 38 L. ed. 1023, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 216, 40 L. ed. 946, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 499, 505, 42 L. ed. 253, 255, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 495, 46 L. ed. 295, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Hibben v. Smith, 191 U. S. 321, 48 L. ed. 199, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88.

Attention is invited to the very striking analogy between the principles involved in the prescribing of rates by the Virginia commission, and the action of the Federal courts in prescribing future rules for the distribution, without discrimination, of coal cars, and commanding the observance of such rules by the carrier.

United States ex rel. Kingwood Coal Co. v. West Virginia Northern R. Co. 125 Fed. 252.

Federal courts cannot enjoin proceedings in state courts.

Dillon v. Kansas City Suburban Belt R. Co. 43 Fed. 109; Hemsley v. Myers, 45 Fed. 289; Whitney v. Wilder, 4 C. C. A. 510, 13 U. S. App. 180, 54 Fed. 554; Reinach v. Atlantic & G. W. R. Co. 58 Fed. 44; Riggs v. Johnson County (United States ex rel. Riggs v. Johnson County) 6 Wall. 195, 18 L. ed. 776; Orton v. Smith, 18 How. 265, 15 L. ed. 394; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 624, 12 L. ed. 846; Haines v. Carpenter, 91 U. S. 257, 23 L. ed. 346; Dial v. Reynolds, 96 U. S. 341, 24 L. ed. 659; Chaffin v. St. Louis, 4 Dill. 19, Fed. Cas. No. 2,572.

Even in a case originally brought in a state court, and afterwards removed to the Federal court, the latter court cannot enjoin proceedings in another case still pending in a state court, although such injunction might have been granted by the state court in which the removal suit was originally brought.

Diggs v. Wolcott, 4 Cranch, 179, 2 L. ed. 587.

It is immaterial that the state court has already rendered its judgment, and that the injunction is merely against the enforcement, or carrying out, or giving effect to, such judgment.

Murray v. Overstoltz, 1 McCrary, 606, 8 Fed. 110; Rensselaer & S. R. Co. v. Bennington & R. R. Co. 18 Fed. 617; Dillon v. Kansas City Suburban Belt R. Co. supra.

Where a Federal right has been ignored or misconstrued or abused by a state court which has originally had rightful jurisdiction of the controversy, the party must seek his remedy by appeal, first, to the highest state tribunal having jurisdiction, and then to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 219, 31 L. ed. 408, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. ed. 535, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Hemsley v. Myers; Riggs v. Johnson County; and Peck v. Jenness,—supra.

An appeal is not a new case, but, ex vi termini, imports the pre-existence of the same case in the tribunal appealed from, the appeal being necessarily a mere continuation of the original suit.

Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 409, 5 L. ed. 292; Nations v. Johnson, 24 How. 204, 205, 16 L. ed. 631, 632.

There can surely be no question as to the supreme court of appeals of the state being a judicial court of record in the strictest and fullest sense. When an appeal is actually pending in that court from a ruling of the commission prescribing rates of charge, as was the case in Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Com. 102 Va. 599, 46 S. E. 911, an appeal from an order of the commission prescribing demurrage rates; and in Norfolk &

P. Belt Line R. Co. v. Com. 103 Va. 289, 49 S. E. 39, an appeal from an order of the commission prescribing car-weighting rates,—when such an appeal is actually pending in the supreme court of appeals, no one can question its being, in the strictest sense, a judicial case, in a judicial court, the proceedings in which the Federal circuit courts are prohibited by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581, from enjoining.

If, therefore, the proceeding is a judicial cause when it gets into the supreme court of appeals after appeal, then, ex necessitate, it must have been equally a judicial cause while before the commission, before the appeal. This is but another demonstration of the fact that the commission is, in truth and in fact, a court.

The highest court of the state itself has repeatedly held the Virginia state corporation commission to be a court, and expressly in the exercise of its rate-making functions.

Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Tidewater R. Co. 105 Va. 131, 52 S. E. 852; Newport News Light & Water Co. v. Peninsular Pure Water Co. 107 Va. 700, 59 S. E. 1099; Com. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 106 Va. 61, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1086, 117 Am. St. Rep. 983, 55 S. E. 572, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1124.

The following cases are sufficiently analogous to those involved in these appeals to serve as pertinent illustrations of the practical application of the rule laid down in § 720 of the Revised Statutes, forbidding Federal circuit courts to enjoin proceedings in a state court, even though the function being exercised in such proceedings might properly be classified as legislative rather than judicial:

Rensselaer & S. R. Co. v. Bennington & R. R. Co.; Re Sawyer; and Fitts v. McGhee,—supra.

For the lower court to have enjoined the Virginia commission in June, from taking any proceedings towards the enforcement of its own order entered in April, in a proceeding still pending before the commission, and from which order an appeal of right lay to the supreme court of appeals of the state, with absolute right of supersedeas, on substantially the same terms as those upon which the injunction was asked for and granted, was a palpable violation of the inhibition of § 720 of the Revised Statutes. Such an error is jurisdictional.

Diggs v. Wolcott, supra; M'Kim v. Voorhies, 7 Cranch, 279, 3 L. ed. 342; Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 350, 29 L. ed. 413, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78.

All of the matters and things involved in these suits are res judicata, and can be reopened only by the supreme court of appeals of Virginia, or the Supreme Court of the United States, on appeal.

Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. 337, 11 L. ed. 290; Sargeant v. State Bank, 12 How. 384, 385, 13 L. ed. 1033, 1034; Marsteller v. Marsteller, 132 Pa. 517, 19 Am. St. Rep. 604, 19 Atl. 344.

The doctrine is not, by any means, limited to what is technically called, or commonly referred to as, a "court." It extends as well to boards, commissioners and other officers who are required to exercise even quasi-judicial functions.

Southern R. Co. v. Washington, A. & M. V. R. Co. 102 Va. 491, 46 S. E. 784; Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 683, 25 L. ed. 406; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 723; Mercein v. People, 25 Wend. 64, 35 Am. Dec. 662; Culross v. Gibbons, 130 N. Y. 447, 29 N. E. 841; People ex rel. Myers v. Barnes, 114 N. Y. 317, 20 N. E. 609, 21 N. E. 739; Brooks v. Morgan, 36 Ind. App. 672, 76 N. E. 333; Holliston v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 195 Mass. 299, 81 N. E. 205; State v. Corron, 73 N. H. 434, 62 Atl. 1050, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 486. See also Cooper v. Hunt, 103 Mo. App. 9, 77 S. W. 483; Close v. Huntington, 66 Kan. 354, 71 Pac. 812; Longinette v. Shelton (Tenn. Ch. App.) 52 S. W. 1084.

Even if the rate order was a legislative act, the Federal circuit court was without jurisdiction to enjoin it.

McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 494, 46 L. ed. 293, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

Mr. Alfred P. Thom argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander Hamilton, William B. McIlwaine, H. T. Wickham, George H. Taylor, Henry Taylor, Jr., S. S. P. Patteson, Henry L. Stone, Joseph I. Doran, Lucian H. Cocke, and John K. Graves, filed a brief for appellees:

The bills of the six appellees show in each case a right to equitable relief in the court below against the threatened invasion of a right or rights secured by the Constitution of the United States.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441.

No individual interest of any of the defendant members of the state corporation commission of Virginia is necessary to give jurisdiction.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. ed. 535, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 544, 47 L. ed. 587, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 389, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1020, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Ex parte Young, supra.

The rule that recourse to equity is for-bidden when there is an adequate remedy at law applies only where the remedy at law is as practical and as efficient as the remedy afforded by equity.

Boyce v. Grundy, 3 Pet. 210, 215, 7 L. ed. 655, 657; Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 349, 33 L. ed. 909, 914, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 514, 32 L. ed. 1008, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 12, 43 L. ed. 346, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; McConihay v. Wright, 121 U. S. 206, 30 L. ed. 933, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940.

The proper and the only mode of judicial relief against a tariff of rates established by or enforceable by a commission is by a bill in chancery, asserting its unreasonable character and its conflict with the Constitution of the United States. Only a court of equity is competent to meet such an emergency and determine once for all, and without a multiplicity of suits, matters that affect not simply individuals, but the interests of the entire community.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 460, 33 L. ed. 982, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 397, 38 L. ed. 1023, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 518, 42 L. ed. 839, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 381, 46 L. ed. 605, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Haverhill Gaslight Co. v. Barker, 109 Fed. 694; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 180, 44 L. ed. 423, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Ex parte Young, supra.

The equity jurisdiction of the Federal courts cannot be impaired or diminished by the statutes of the several states regulating the practice of their own courts, even though a remedy is created by such statute which may be the full equivalent of the jurisdiction of the Federal chancery.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 395, 38 L. ed. 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260; McConihay v. Wright, 121 U. S. 201, 30 L. ed. 932, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Sheffield Furnace Co. v. Witherow, 149 U. S. 574, 37 L. ed. 853, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 936; Mississippi Mills v. Cohn, 150 U. S. 202, 37 L. ed. 1052, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75; Eyre v. Everett, 2 Russ. Ch. 381.

The doctrine of res judicata has no application where a rate has been fixed by the legislature of a state or by some rate-making agency of a state.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Chicago, 211 U. S.

M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Becker, 35 Fed. 883; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Com. 102 Va. 599, 46 S. E. 911.

These suits are not in violation of the 11th Amendment, because they are not suits against the state of Virginia.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 518, 42 L. ed. 839, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. ed. 535, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362-390, 38 L. ed. 1014-1021, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Missouri R. & Warehouse Comrs. (Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Hickman) 183 U. S. 53, 46 L. ed. 78, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

This court, in Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676, distinctly recognized the distinction between judicial and ministerial powers vested in a regular court of justice, and held that whether the act done by a court is a judicial act or not is to be determined, not by the description or character of the court or tribunal, but by the character of the act.

The point is decided by Upshur County v. Rich, 135 U. S. 467, 34 L. ed. 196, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651, that a court of West Virginia, on which was imposed the duty of assessing taxes on appeal from an assessment, did not act as a court when it assessed taxes, but lost its judicial function, and, therefore, such a proceeding was not a suit, and was not removable to the circuit court of the United States.

This principle is also a familiar one in the law of Virginia, the court of appeals in that state having differentiated the functions of the county court justices, and held that, in the exercise of their functions as "commissioners of police," they were subject to mandamus.

Brander v. Chesterfield Justices, 5 Call (Va.) 551, 2 Am. Dec. 606; Dinwiddie Justices v. Chesterfield Justices, 5 Call (Va.) 556.

The nature of the act sought to be enjoined may be examined by the Federal courts in order to determine whether that act is a "proceeding in a court of a state."

Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 236; Busch v. Webb, 122 Fed. 655; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Southern R. Co. v. Greensboro Ice & Coal Co. 134 Fed. 94.

Where the power to establish rates is delegated to administrative officials, such as a railroad commission, the functions of the commission in considering what rates shall be prescribed by it to control in the future are legislative in character.
53 L. ed.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 364, 38 L. ed. 1015, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866; Northern P. R. Co. v. Keyes, 91 Fed. 47; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 754, 43 L. ed. 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Jones, 149 Ill. 377, 24 L.R.A. 141, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 683, 41 Am. St. Rep. 278, 37 N. E. 247; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 499, 42 L. ed. 253, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 761, 25 L. ed. 516; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 199, 8 Am. Dec. 52; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt, 98 Fed. 345; Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. State, 55 Neb. 627, 45 L.R.A. 113, 76 N. W. 171; Norfolk & P. Belt Line R. Co. v. Com. 103 Va. 294, 49 S. E. 39; Winchester & S. R. Co. v. Com. 106 Va. 264, 55 S. E. 692.

After such rates have been determined upon, the action of the state corporation commission, looking to their enforcement, is ministerial or administrative in character, is no longer legislative in character, and is not judicial in character, and is not the enforcement of any judicial judgment or decree of a court.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 459, 33 L. ed. 970, 982, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 397, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1023, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. supra; McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 483, 46 L. ed. 289, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brown, 123 Fed. 946.

The publication or announcement that a railroad rate has been established by a state legislature or a state railroad commission is not part of the act of legislation, but is an administrative act, and may be enjoined when the rate itself is unconstitutional.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs.; and Northern P. R. Co. v. Keyes,—supra; Minneapolis Street R. Co. v. Minneapolis, 155 Fed. 992; Wolfe v. McCaull, 76 Va. 876; Wise v. Bigger, 79 Va. 269.

A court taking jurisdiction by anticipation over a nonexistent suit concerning a nonexistent law would be a court taking jurisdiction over illusory or fictitious suits, and not a court proceeding according to the course of the common law and the course of equity.

McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 483, 502, 46 L. ed. 289, 297, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

Even the exercise by a regularly constituted court of justice of a state, of administrative or ministerial power, or powers of a legislative character, vested in it by state authority, does not make such an administrative or ministerial proceeding a suit within the meaning of § 720 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581).

Re County Levy, 5 Call (Va.) 139; Brander v. Chesterfield Justices, 5 Call (Va.) 548; Dinwiddie Justices v. Chesterfield Justices, supra; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. ed. 841.

The foundation of § 720 being in "comity" and "necessity," there is no basis for so applying § 720 as to render a state court immune from Federal injunction with respect to its nonjudicial functions.

Re Chicago, 64 Fed. 899.

Another test whether or not the state corporation commission of Virginia is a court within the meaning of § 720 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and whether the proceeding commenced before it to fix a rate was in the nature of a suit, is whether or not such proceeding before the state corporation commission was a suit which could have been removed to the circuit court of the United States if the citizenship of the parties had been diverse.

Upshur County v. Rich, 135 U. S. 467, 34 L. ed. 196, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

The Virginia commission is authorized to institute and prosecute its own proceedings before itself; and such proceedings are to be heard, decided, and its determination therein is authorized to be enforced by itself. Such a tribunal, from its very nature, is not a court, and such a tribunal cannot be made a court or the members thereof judges by the declaration or enactment of a state in its Constitution or laws to that effect.

Taylor v. Place, 4 R. I. 324; Auditor v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 6 Kan. 506, 7 Am. Rep. 575; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt, 98 Fed. 335; State ex rel. Godard v. Johnson, 61 Kan. 803, 49 L.R.A. 662, 60 Pac. 1068; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Southern R. Co. v. Greensboro Ice & Coal Co. 134 Fed. 94.

To hold such an administrative agency of a state—a body that at the same time is the prosecutor and arbiter of its own cause, and enforces its decision in its own cause—to be a regularly constituted court of justice of a state would be contrary to the fundamental principles of the common law and of constitutional liberty.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 592, 594; 3 Bl. Com. 24, 25; Todd v. United States 158 U. S. 278, 39 L. ed. 982, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Bonham's Case, 8 Coke, 112; Year Book, 8 Hen. VI., fol. 18, pl. 7 [1431]; London v. Wood, 12 Mod. 669; Derby's Case, 12 Coke, 114.

A statute styling a rate-making and rate-administering body a court does not create a state court within the prohibition of § 720 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt and State ex rel. Godard v. Johnson, supra; Re Ziebold, 23 Fed. 791; Re School-Law Manual, 63 N. H. 574, 4 Atl. 878; Norwalk Street R. Co.'s Appeal, 69 Conn. 576, 39 L.R.A. 794, 37 Atl. 1080, 38 Atl. 708; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 26 L. ed. 377; 1 Bl. Com. chap. 2; Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. State, 55 Neb. 627, 45 L.R.A. 113, 76 N. W. 171; Violet v. Alexandria, 92 Va. 567, 31 L.R.A. 382, 53 Am. St. Rep. 825, 23 S. F. 909.

The bills were not prematurely filed.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 168, 44 L. ed. 418, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Becker, 35 Fed. 883; Northern P. R. Co. v. Keyes, 91 Fed. 47; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt and McNeill v. Southern R. Co. supra.

The supreme court of appeals of Virginia has expressly determined that, in making such a rule or regulation for future conduct as a rate (for a rule or regulation in respect to demurrage stands on the same basis as an order prescribing a rate under the Virginia Constitution, so far as the question of whether or not it has the force of a judicial judgment is concerned), the commission is exercising legislative, and not judicial, functions.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Com. 102 Va. 621, 46 S. E. 911; Southern R. Co. v. Com. 107 Va. 771, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 364, 60 S. E. 70.

Whether or not a Federal circuit court has power to enjoin an unconstitutional invasion of property rights attempted by state officers depends on the character of the act sought to be enjoined, and not on the title of the officers or tribunals attempting to perform it.

Weil v. Calhoun, 25 Fed. 870; Busch v.

Webb, 122 Fed. 665; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brown, 123 Fed. 948; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt, 98 Fed. 341; Ex parte Candee, 48 Ala. 399; Robey v. Princee George's County, 92 Md. 163, 48 Atl. 48; Upshur County v. Rich, supra; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. and Southern R. Co. v. Greensboro Ice & Coal Co. supra.

If an act is in essence legislative in character, the fact of a notice and a hearing does not constitute the body performing it a judicial body, and does not make the act a judicial act. If it would be a legislative act without notice and a hearing, it is still a legislative act with notice and a hearing. The claim of the appellants that the notice and hearing before the act is performed and as part of the process of performing the act is "anticipatory litigation" and judicial in character is fundamentally unsound.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. supra; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Com. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 106 Va. 61, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1086, 117 Am. St. Rep. 983, 55 S. E. 572, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1124; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 460, 33 L. ed. 982, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 259; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 499, 42 L. ed. 253, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, supra; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Smith, 110 Fed. 473; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brown; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Becker; and Northern P. R. Co. v. Keyes, —supra; Metropolitan Trust Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 90 Fed. 683; Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 106 Fed. 353; Wallace v. Arkansas C. R. Co. 55 C. C. A. 192, 118 Fed. 422; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Storey, 149 Fed. 499; Perkins v. Northern P. R. Co. 155 Fed. 445; Railroad Commission v. Texas & P. R. Co. 75 C. C. A. 226, 144 Fed. 68; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90.

The jurisdiction of the Federal courts in equity is neither impaired nor diminished by the appeal provided for in the Virginia state law from the action of the Virginia commission prescribing rates.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 474, 42 L. ed. 437, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Mississippi Mills v. Cohn, 150 U. S. 202, 204, 37 L. ed. 1052, 1053, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 391, 38 L. ed. 53 L. ed.

1021, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

The contention of counsel for the appellants, insisted on in their pleadings, that the act sought to be enjoined is part of a legislative act, and hence cannot be enjoined by a court, is unsound.

Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 246; State ex rel. Morris v. Mason, 43 La. Ann. 590, 9 So. 776; Wolfe v. McCaull, 76 Va. 876; Wise v. Bigger, 79 Va. 269; Reed v. Woodelliff (N. J. L.) 60 Atl. 1128; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866; Northern P. R. Co. v. Keyes, 91 Fed. 47; Minneapolis Street R. Co. v. Minneapolis, 155 Fed. 992; McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 483, 497, 46 L. ed. 289, 295, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Mississippi v. Johnson, 4 Wall. 475, 498, 18 L. ed. 437, 441; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 159, 52 L. ed. 728, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441.

It is only the discretion of the legislative body which is beyond the reach of the process of the court.

Alpers v. San Francisco, 32 Fed. 503; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans, 164 U. S. 481, 482, 41 L. ed. 523, 524, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

These are bills in equity brought in the circuit court to enjoin the members and clerk of the Virginia State Corporation Commission from publishing or taking any other steps to enforce a certain order fixing passenger rates. The bills allege, with some elaboration of the facts, that the rates in question are confiscatory, and other matters not necessary to mention, and set up the 14th Amendment, etc. The defendants appeared specially, and by demurrer and plea respectively put forward that the proceedings before the commission are proceedings in a court of the state, which the courts of the United States are forbidden to enjoin (Rev. Stat. § 720, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581), and that the decision of the commission makes the legality of the rates res judicata. On these pleadings final decrees were entered for the plaintiffs, and the defendants appealed to this court. Therefore, as the case is presented, it is to be assumed that the order confiscates the plaintiffs' property and infringes the 14th Amendment if the matter is open to inquiry. The question principally argued, and the main question to be discussed, is whether the order is one which, in spite of its constitutional invalidity, the courts of the United States are not at liberty to impugn.

224] *The State Corporation Commission is established and its powers are defined at length by the Constitution of the state. There is no need to rehearse the provisions that give it dignity and importance or that add judicial to its other functions, because we shall assume that, for some purposes, it is a court within the meaning of Rev. Stat. § 720, and in the commonly accepted sense of that word. Among its duties it exercises the authority of the state to supervise, regulate, and control public service corporations, and to that end, as is said by the supreme court of Virginia and repeated by counsel at the bar, it has been clothed with legislative, judicial, and executive powers. Norfolk & P. Belt Line R. Co. v. Com. 103 Va. 289, 294, 49 S. E. 39.

The state Constitution provides that the commission, in the performance of the duty just mentioned, shall, from time to time, prescribe and enforce such rates, charges, classification of traffic, and rules and regulations for transportation and transmission companies doing business in the state, and shall require them to establish and maintain all such public service facilities and conveniences as may be reasonable and just. Before prescribing or fixing any rate or charge, etc., it is to give notice (in case of a general order not directed against any specific company by name, by four weeks' publication in a newspaper) of the substance of the contemplated action and of a time and place when the commission will hear objections and evidence against it. If an order is passed, the order again is to be published as above before it shall go into effect. An appeal to the supreme court of appeals is given of right to any party aggrieved, upon conditions not necessary to be stated, and that court, if it reverses what has been done, is to substitute such order as, in its opinion, the commission should have made. The commission is to certify the facts upon which its action was based and such evidence as may be required, but no new evidence is to be received, and how far the findings of the commission can be revised perhaps is not quite plain. No other court of the state can review, reverse, correct, or 225] annul *the action of the commission, and, in collateral proceedings, the validity of the rates established by it cannot be called in doubt.

When a rate has been fixed, the commission has power to enforce compliance with its order by adjudging and enforcing, by its own appropriate process, against the offending company, the fines and penalties established by law. But a hearing is required, and the validity and reasonableness of the order may be attacked again in this proceeding, and all defenses seem to be open to the party charged with a breach.

On July 31, 1906, under the provisions outlined, the commission published in a newspaper notice to the several steam railroad companies doing business in Virginia, and all persons interested, that, at a certain time and place, it would hear objections to an order prescribing a maximum rate of 2 cents a mile for the transportation of passengers, with details not needing to be stated. A hearing was had, and the complainants (appellees) severally appeared and urged objections similar to those set up in the bills. On April 27, 1907, the commission passed an order prescribing the rates, but in more specific form. For certain railroads named, including all of the complainants except as we shall state, the rate was to be 2 cents; for certain excepted branches of the Southern Railway Company, 2½; for others, including the Chesapeake Western Railway, 3; and for others 3½ cents a mile, with a minimum charge of 10 cents. Publication of the order was directed, and at that stage these bills were brought.

In order to decide the cases it is not necessary to discuss all the questions that were raised or touched upon in argument, and some we shall lay on one side. We shall assume that when, as here, a state Constitution sees fit to unite legislative and judicial powers in a single hand, there is nothing to hinder, so far as the Constitution of the United States is concerned. Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71, 83, 84, 47 L. ed. 79, 85, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Winchester & S. R. Co. v. Com. 106 Va. 264, 268, 55 S. E. 692. We shall assume, as we have said, that some of the powers of the commission *are [226 judicial, and we shall assume, without deciding, that, if it was proceeding against the appellees to enforce this order and to punish them for a breach, it then would be sitting as a court and would be protected from interference on the part of courts of the United States.

But we think it equally plain that the proceedings drawn in question here are legislative in their nature, and none the less so that they have taken place with a body which, at another moment, or in its principal or dominant aspect, is a court such as is meant by § 720. A judicial inquiry investigates, declares, and enforces liabilities as they stand on present or past facts and under laws supposed already to exist. That is its purpose and end. Legislation, on the other hand, looks to the future and changes existing conditions by making a new rule, to be applied thereafter to all or some part of those subject to its power. The establishment of a rate is the making of a rule for the future, and therefore is an act legislative, not judicial, in kind, as seems to be fully recognized by the supreme court of appeals (Com. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 106 Va. 61, 64, 7 L.R.A.[N.S.] 1086, 117 Am. St. Rep. 983, 55 S. E. 572), and especially by its learned president in his pointed remarks in Winchester & S. R. Co. v. Com. 106 Va. 264, 281, 55 S. E. 692. See, further, Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 499, 500, 505, 42 L. ed. 243, 253, 255, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 440, 47 L. ed. 892, 893, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

Proceedings legislative in nature are not proceedings in a court, within the meaning of Rev. Stat. § 720, no matter what may be the general or dominant character of the body in which they may take place. Southern R. Co. v. Greensboro Ice & Coal Co. 134 Fed. 82, 94, Affirmed in 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722. That question depends not upon the character of the body, but upon the character of the proceedings. Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 348, 25 L. ed. 676, 680. They are not a suit in which a writ of error would lie under Rev. Stat. § 709, and act of February 18, 1875, chap. 80, 18 Stat. at L. 318, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575. See Upshur County v. Rich, 135 U. S. 467, 34 L. ed. 196, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Wallace v. Adams, 227 U. S. 415, 423, 51 L. ed. 547, 551, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363. The decision upon them cannot be res judicata when a suit is brought. See Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047. And it does not matter what inquiries may have been made as a preliminary to the legislative act. Most legislation is preceded by hearings and investigations. But the effect of the inquiry, and of the decision upon it, is determined by the nature of the act to which the inquiry and decision lead up. A judge sitting with a jury is not competent to decide issues of fact; but matters of fact that are merely premises to a rule of law he may decide. He may find out for himself, in whatever way seems best, whether a supposed statute ever really was passed. In Pickering v. Barkley, Style, 132, merchants were asked by the court to state their understanding as an aid to the decision of a demurrer. The nature of the final act determines the nature of the previous inquiry. As the judge is bound to declare the law, he must know or discover the facts that establish the law. So, when the final act is legislative, the decision which induces it cannot be judicial in the practical sense, although the questions considered might be the same that would arise in the trial of a case. If a state Constitution should provide for a hearing before any law should be passed, and should declare that it should be a judicial proceeding in rem and the decision binding upon all the world, it hardly is to be supposed that the simple device could make the constitutionality of the law res judicata, if it subsequently should be drawn in question before a court of the United States. And all that we have said would be equally true if an appeal had been taken to the supreme court of appeals and it had confirmed the rate. Its action in doing so would not have been judicial, although the questions debated by it might have been the same that might come before it as a court, and would have been discussed and passed upon by it in the same way that it would deal with them if they arose afterwards in a case properly so called. We gather that these are the views of the supreme court of appeals itself. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Com. 102 Va. 599, 621, 46 S. E. 911. They are implied *in many cases in this and [228 other United States courts in which the enforcement of rates has been enjoined, notwithstanding notice and hearing, and what counsel in this case call "litigation" in advance. Legislation cannot bolster itself up in that way. Litigation cannot arise until the moment of legislation is past. See Southern R. Co. v. Com. 107 Va. 771, 772, 60 S. E. 70.

It appears to us that the most plausible objection to these bills is not the one most dwelt upon in argument, but that they were brought too soon. Our doubt is a narrow one and its limits should be understood. It seems to us clear that the appellees were not bound to wait for proceedings brought to enforce the rate and to punish them for departing from it. Those, we have assumed in favor of the appellants would be proceedings in court, and could not be enjoined; while to confine the railroads to them for the assertion of their rights would be to deprive them of a part of those rights. If the railroads were required to take no active steps until they could bring a writ of error from this court to the supreme court of appeals after a final judgment, they would come here with the facts already found against them. But the determination as to their rights turns almost wholly upon the facts to be found. Whether their property was taken unconstitutionally depends upon the valuation of the property, the income to be derived from the proposed rate, and the proportion between the two,—pure matters of fact. When those are settled the law is tolerably plain. All their constitutional rights, we repeat, depend upon what the facts are found to be. They are not to be forbidden to try those facts before a court of their own choosing, if otherwise competent. "A state cannot tie up a citizen of another state, having property within its territory invaded by unauthorized acts of its own officers, to suits for redress, in its own courts." Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 391, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1021, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 517, 42 L. ed. 819, 838, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418. See McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 165, 52 L. ed. 714, 731, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441. Other cases further illustrating 229]*this point are Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866; Northern P. R. Co. v. Keyes, 91 Fed. 47; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Myatt, 98 Fed. 335.

Our hesitation has been on the narrower question whether the railroads, before they resorted to the circuit court, should not have taken the appeal allowed to them by the Virginia Constitution at the legislative stage, so as to make it absolutely certain that the officials of the state would try to establish and enforce an unconstitutional rule. Considerations of comity and convenience have led this court ordinarily to decline to interfere by habeas corpus where the petitioner had open to him a writ of error to a higher court of a state, in cases where there was no merely logical reason for refusing the writ. The question is whether somewhat similar considerations ought not to have some weight here.

We admit at once that they have not the same weight in this case. The question to be decided, we repeat, is legislative, whether a certain rule shall be made. Although the appeal is given as a right, it is not a remedy, properly so called. At that time no case exists. We should hesitate to say, as a general rule, that a right to resort to the courts could be made always to depend upon keeping a previous watch upon the bodies that make laws, and using every effort and all the machinery available to prevent unconstitutional laws from being passed. It might be said that a citizen has a right to assume that the Constitution will be respected, and that the very meaning of our system in giving the last word upon constitutional questions to the courts is that he may rest upon that assumption, and is not bound to be continually on the alert against covert or open attacks upon his rights in bodies that cannot finally take them away. It is a novel ground for denying a man a resort to the courts that he has not used due diligence to prevent a law from being passed.

But this case hardly can be disposed of on purely general principles. The question that we are considering may be termed a question of equitable fitness or propriety, and must *be answered on the particular[230 facts. The establishment of railroad rates is not like a law that affects private persons, who may never have heard of it till it was passed. It is a matter of great interest, both to the railroads and to the public, and is watched by both with scrutinizing care. The railroads went into evidence before the commission. They very well might have taken the matter before the supreme court of appeals. No new evidence and no great additional expense would have been involved.

The state of Virginia has endeavored to impose the highest safeguards possible upon the exercise of the great power given to the State Corporation Commission, not only by the character of the members of that commission, but by making its decisions dependent upon the assent of the same historic body that is intrusted with the preservation of the most valued constitutional rights, if the railroads see fit to appeal. It seems to us only a just recognition of the solicitude with which their rights have been guarded, that they should make sure that the state, in its final legislative action, would not respect what they think their rights to be, before resorting to the courts of the United States.

If the rate should be affirmed by the supreme court of appeals and the railroads still should regard it as confiscatory, it will be understood from what we have said that they will be at liberty then to renew their application to the circuit court, without fear of being met by a plea of res judicata. It will not be necessary to wait for a prosecution by the commission. We may add that, when the rate is fixed, a bill against the commission to restrain the members from enforcing it will not be bad as an attempt to enjoin legislation or as a suit against a state, and will be the proper form of remedy. Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Hanley v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 187 U. S. 617, 47 L. ed. 333, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. supra; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois *C. R. Co. 203[231 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441.

It is proper before closing to mention one decision that was relied upon by the appellees, and one or two other matters peculiar to the cases before the court. In McNeill v.

Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732, the same moment was selected for bringing suit as in these cases, while an examination of the laws of North Carolina discloses that there were statutory provisions for appeal somewhat similar to those in the Virginia Constitution to which we now are referring. But, apart from other differences, in that case the ground of the decree was that the state commission was dealing with a subject-matter beyond its power; no regulation would have been valid (202 U. S. 561), and the considerations to which we now are giving weight naturally were not urged. But this decision suggests that in three of the present cases an equally potent constitutional bar is alleged against the proceedings of the commission. The Chesapeake & Ohio, the Norfolk & Western, and the Southern Railway Companies all set up general laws, alleged to be incorporated in their charters and to constitute contracts, providing that their tolls should not be diminished except under conditions of fact alleged not to exist.

If the state has bound itself by contract not to cut down the rates as contemplated, there would seem to be no reason why the suit should not be entertained now. See Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 393, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1947. But it would be premature and is unnecessary to decide whether the state has done so or not. No rate is irrevocably fixed by the state until the matter has been laid before the body having the last word. It may be that that body will adhere to the old rate, or will establish one that will not be open to the charge of violating the contracts alleged. The contracts alleged do not prohibit a certain reduction if the profits heretofore realized have exceeded a certain amount. On the question of contract as on that of confiscation, it is reasonable and 232]proper *that the evidence should be laid, in the first instance, before the body having the last legislative word. //

There is yet another difficulty in applying to these cases the comity which it is desirable if possible to apply. The Virginia statute of April 15, 1903, enacted to carry into effect the provision of the Constitution, requires, by § 34, certain, if not all, appeals to be taken and perfected within six months from the date of the order. Pollard's Code (Va.) 714. It may be that when an appeal is taken to the supreme court of appeals this section will be held to apply and the appeal be declared too late. We express no opinion upon the matter, which is for the state tribunals to decide, but simply notice a possibility. If the present bills should be dismissed, and then that possible conclusion reached, injustice might be done. As our decision does not go upon a denial of power to entertain the bills at the present stage, but upon our views as to what is the most proper and orderly course in cases of this sort when practicable, it seems to us that the bills should be retained for the present to await the result of the appeals if the companies see fit to take them. If the appeals are dismissed, as brought too late, the companies will be entitled to decrees. If they are entertained and the orders of the commission affirmed, the bills may be dismissed without prejudice and filed again.

Decrees reversed.

Mr. Justice Brewer is of the opinion that the decrees should be affirmed.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, concurring in reversing the decrees, dissents from the opinion:

I preface what I have to say with a sketch of the record in these cases, abbreviated from the brief of counsel.

The Virginia State Corporation Commission was created and its functions, powers, duties, and the essentials of its procedure *were prescribed in detail by the Con-[233]stitution of the state as well as by statute. It was made primarily a judicial court of record of limited jurisdiction, possessing also certain special legislative and executive powers. When it proposed to make a change in a rate of a public service corporation, or otherwise to prescribe a new regulation therefor, the commission was required, sitting as a court, to issue its process, in the nature of a rule, against the corporation concerned, requiring it to appear before the commission at a certain time and place and show cause, if any it could, why the proposed rate should not be prescribed. The judicial question involved on the return to such rule was whether or not the contemplated rate was confiscatory, or otherwise unjust or unreasonable, and in the hearing and disposition of this question the proceedings of the commission, as prescribed by law, were, in every respect, the same as those of any other judicial court of record. It issued, executed, and enforced its own writs and processes; it could issue and enforce writs of mandamus and injunction; it punished for contempt, and kept a complete record and docket of its proceedings; it summoned witnesses and compelled their attendance and the production of documents; it ruled upon the admissibility of evidence; it certified any exception to its rulings; and its judgments, decrees, and orders had the same force and effect as those of any other court of record in the state, and were enforced by its own proper processes. It was not subject to restraint by any other state court, and from any and every ruling or decision by it an appeal lay to the supreme court of appeals of the state, and was heard upon the record made for and certified by the commission, exactly as in the case of appeals from any other court; and, pending the decision of such appeal, the order appealed from might, by a supersedeas, be suspended in its operation.

Not only do the Constitution and laws of Virginia make the commission a judicial court of record by clothing it with all the attributes of such a tribunal, but they expressly declare it a court, and require it to [234] proceed only by due process of law *and inquire into and determine every judicial question coming before it. It has repeatedly held itself to be a court and subject to all the obligations thereof, and the supreme court of appeals, the highest state judicial tribunal, has formally and expressly so held.

When this court shall have, in the manner above indicated, fully heard all parties interested, and, proceeding by due process of law as to them, has judicially determined that the proposed rate or regulation is not confiscatory, nor otherwise unjust or unreasonable, then, but not until then, it is authorized by the Constitution and laws of Virginia to enter an order prescribing such rate or regulation, from which order an appeal lies to the supreme court of appeals, with, as has been said, the right of suspension by supersedeas pending the appeal. Assuming that the prescribing of the rate after it has been judicially determined to be reasonable is necessarily a legislative act, then the Constitution of the state expressly confers upon this commission the legislative power of prescribing a rate after it has judicially ascertained and decided it to be not below the limit of "reasonable."

On July 31, 1906, the State Corporation Commission issued and caused to be served a notice to the "steam railroad companies doing business in Virginia and all persons interested," that, at 12 o'clock noon, on November 1, 1906, at Richmond, the commission would "hear and consider any objections which may be urged against a rule, regulation, order, or requirement of the commission fixing and prescribing a maximum rate of charge of 2 cents per mile for the transportation of passengers over the line of any railroad company in this state, operated by steam, between points within the state of Virginia."

Accordingly, on November 1, 1906, the appellee companies appeared before the commission, and filed their answers in writing, setting forth why, in their opinion, the proposed 2-cent rate would be less than reasonable.

The commission thereupon entered into a most thorough *hearing of this ques-[235] tion of the reasonableness of the proposed rate, in which hearing the appellee companies were represented by counsel and introduced elaborate evidence.

No evidence was taken or considered, save publicly, in the open sessions of the commission, when appellees were given the fullest opportunity (of which they availed themselves) to be present, to introduce their own testimony, by witnesses and documents, to cross-examine opposing witnesses, to object to the introduction of witnesses or documents, and to except of record to any ruling whatever of the commission.

No evidence was rejected which any railroad company offered. The hearing was continued for several months, and the case was not closed until the companies involved had formally announced, in open court, that they had nothing more to offer.

On April 27, 1907, practically six months after the hearing began, the commission entered its order (which is the basis of appellees' complaint in this cause), accompanied with an elaborate written opinion, giving the grounds therefor.

By this order certain passenger rates—in no case less than 2 cents per mile—were prescribed for the defendant railroad companies, to go into effect on July 1, 1907, the commission being of opinion, and so deciding, that the rates therein fixed were not confiscatory nor otherwise unjust or unreasonable to said companies.

The appellee companies refused either to obey the order of the commission, or to appeal therefrom, and publication of the order was directed; but, before it had been accomplished, and on May 15, 1907, appellees filed bills in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Virginia, to enjoin the commission from enforcing its order of April 27, 1907, or taking any other steps therein, and a restraining order was entered, enjoining the members of the commission and their clerk from further proceeding in the matter until a motion for an injunction pendente lite could be heard, and requiring them to appear before the circuit judge in Asheville, North Carolina, *on June 27, 1907, to show cause why [236] such injunction should not be granted. Appellants entered a special and limited appearance, and filed their joint and separate answers to the rule, in which they denied the jurisdiction of the court.

The cause having been heard on the rule and answers thereto, the circuit judge, on July 10, 1907, overruled the objection to the court's jurisdiction, and granted injunctions pendente lite, as prayed for. Thereupon the defendant Prentis filed his demurrer, based on substantially the same grounds as those assigned in the answer to the rule, and the three other defendants filed their joint and separate plea, setting up specifically that the commission is a court within the purview of § 720 of the United States Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581), and on September 10, 1907, by leave of court, all four of the defendants filed their joint and separate plea of res judicata.

December 26, 1907, the court overruled the demurrer and both pleas, and the defendants declining to answer further, a final decree was, on that day, entered in each case, taking the bills pro confesso, and perpetuating the injunctions, with costs. Thereupon appeals were allowed and prosecuted from said final decrees.

In my opinion, a preliminary objection is fatal to the maintenance of these bills. It appears on their face that the appellees did not avail themselves of the right of appeal to the court of appeals of Virginia, which was absolutely vested in them by the Constitution and laws of that commonwealth. Such an appeal would have brought up the question of the alleged unreasonableness of the designated rate, and appellees cannot assume that the decision of the commission would necessarily have been affirmed. If reversed or changed to meet appellees' views, the whole ground of equity interposition would disappear. In such circumstances it is the settled rule that courts of equity will not interfere. The transaction must be complete, and jurisdiction cannot be rested on hypothesis. A fortiori this must be so where Federal courts are asked to interfere with the legislative, executive, or judicial acts of a state, unless some exceptional and imperative necessity is shown to exist, which cannot be asserted here.

Moreover, this is demanded by comity, and what comity requires is as much required in courts of justice as in anything else.

"Comity," said Mr. Justice Gray in the leading case of Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 163, 40 L. ed. 108, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 143, "in the legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation, on the one hand, nor of mere courtesy and good will, upon the other. But it is the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws."

And, as applied to Federal interference with state acts, the observance of this rule of comity should be regarded as an obligation. It is recognized as such by § 720 of the Revised Statutes.

By the Constitution of Virginia the commission is vested with legislative as well as judicial powers, and the validity of that union of powers has been repeatedly upheld by the highest judicial tribunal of that commonwealth,—the matter being committed to the determination of the state. It seems equally true, that whether an adjudication by the commission, on notice and hearing, that proposed rates are reasonable, and not confiscatory, may lawfully be had prior to the legislative act of imposing the rates, is also a matter for state determination, and, at all events, that question should, in the first instance, be decided on appeal by the court of appeals. I cannot see why the reasonableness and justness of a rate may not be judicially inquired into and judicially determined at the time of the fixing of the rate, as well as afterwards; but that and kindred questions should be tested as provided by this Constitution and these laws before the controversy is precipitated into a circuit court of the United States. Power grows by what it feeds on, and to hold that state railroad companies can take their chances for the fixing of rates in accordance with their views in a tribunal provided for that purpose by state Constitution and laws, and then, if dissatisfied with the result, decline to seek a review in the highest court of the state, though possessed of the absolute right to do so, and invoke the power of the Federal courts to put a stop to such proceedings, is, in my opinion, utterly inadmissible and of palpably dangerous tendency.

Mr. Justice Harlan, also concurring in the reversal of the decree, but dissenting from the opinion of the court:

I concur in the general observations of the Chief Justice, and, with him, dissent from the opinion of the court. But I go somewhat further than he has done. I hold that the circuit court was entirely without authority, by injunction, to stay the proceedings of the State Corporation Commission. By § 720 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581), it is provided that "the writ of injunction shall not be granted by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any court of a state, except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy." Such has been the law since 1793. In my judgment, the Virginia State Corporation Commission is, in every substantial sense, a court. It is conclusively shown to be such by the provisions of the Constitution and laws of Virginia, as interpreted by the highest court of Virginia and as summarized in the opinion of the Chief Justice. If the commission is a court, within the meaning of § 720, then the circuit court of the United States was wholly without authority to stay the proceedings of that tribunal by the writ of injunction. The circuit court could not grant the writ of injunction in face of the act of Congress expressly forbidding such action. No one will question the authority of Congress to prescribe the limits of the jurisdiction of the courts created by it.

It is suggested that, under this view, there is danger that rights granted or secured by the Constitution may be violated 239]*by the judgment of the commission or by the judgment of the court of appeals of Virginia. A conclusive answer to this suggestion is that, if the final action of the commission, in any case of rate-making, amounts to confiscation of the property of the corporation whose rates are regulated, and therefore is to be held wanting in due process of law as taking private property for public use without just compensation, and if such action be sustained by the highest court of Virginia, then the way is plainly open to bring that question to this court upon writ of error. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575. In this way any Federal right, specially set up and denied by the state tribunals, can be adequately protected by the final judgment of this court.

In my opinion, the decree should be reversed, with direction to dismiss the original suit brought in the Federal court.

CHARLES T. WILDER,† Tax Assessor and Collector of the First Taxation Division of the Territory of Hawaii, Plff. in Err.,
v.

INTER-ISLAND STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 239-249.)

Execution — exemption — seamen's wages — attachment after judgment — supplementary proceedings.

Seamen's wages are protected from seizure after judgment by attachment or proceedings in aid of execution by the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4536, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3082, that no wages due or accruing to any seaman shall be subject to attachment or arrestment from any court, and declaring that payment of wages to seamen shall be valid notwithstanding any previous sale or assignment or any attachment, encumbrance, or arrestment, and that no assignment or sale of wages, made prior to the accruing thereof, shall be binding, except certain authorized advance securities, when construed in the light of other provisions of the same title, enacted to secure to the seaman his remedy in admiralty for the recovery of his wages by condemnation of the ship.

†Substituted as a party in place of James L. Holt.

NOTE. — On exemption of wages from attachment or garnishment—see note to Todd v. Kentucky Union R. Co. 18 L.R.A. 309.

[For other cases, see Execution, II. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 30.]

Submitted October 22, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the District Court of Honolulu, Oahu County, in that territory, attaching seamen's wages after judgment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 17 Haw. 416.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles R. Hemenway and Mason F. Prosser submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

"Arrestment" is the order of a judge, by which he who is debtor in a movable obligation to the arrestor's debtor is prohibited to make payment or delivery till the debt due to the arrestor be paid or secured.

1 Bouvier's Law Diet. p. 169; Erskine, Inst. 3, 6, 1; 1, 2, 12.

Where arrestment proceeds on a depending action it may be loosed by the common debtor's giving security to the arrestor for his debt, in the event it shall be found due.

Erskine, Inst. 3, 6, 7.

This would be held to include attachment and necessarily garnishment. There is a clear distinction, however, between attachment and execution.

Thompson v. Baltimore & S. Steam Co. 33 Md. 312; Johnson v. Foran, 58 Md. 148.

It has been held in the United States courts that the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4536, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3082, does not apply to cases where judgment has been recovered against the defendant in a court of competent jurisdiction. It is only intended to prevent snap judgment against defendants who, by reason of the fact that they are seamen, and not properly versed in business methods, would be only too apt to allow claims against them to go by default.

Telles v. Lynde, 47 Fed. 912; The Queen, 93 Fed. 835. See also Eddy v. O'Hara, 132 Mass. 56; White v. Dunn, 134 Mass. 271; Ayer v. Brown, 77 Me. 195.

Mr. A. Lewis, Jr., submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. Smith & Lewis were on the brief.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is one of a number of similar 241]cases arising within *the territory of Hawaii, and is brought here for the purpose of settling the liability of seamen's wages to seizure after judgment by attachment or proceedings in aid of execution. The Inter-Island Steam Navigation Company, defendant in error, was directed by order and judgment of the district magistrate of Honolulu to pay into court, on account of a judgment rendered in favor of plaintiff in error, against one A. Tullet, the sum of $65. Tullet is a seaman, being master of the steamer Keauhou, plying between ports within the territory. The sum of $65 was due to Tullet from the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Company for wages for the months of January and February, 1906. The judgment was recovered against Tullet on September 5, 1905, for the sum of $120.38 and costs. An execution was issued thereon and returned unsatisfied. Upon affidavit being filed an order was issued attaching the sum of $65, due in manner aforesaid from the navigation company to Tullet. The navigation company filed an answer setting forth that Tullet was an American seaman in the employ of the company, and that the money attached was due to Tullet as wages, and, under § 4536 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3082), the same were not subject to arrestment nor attachment, and that the territorial court had no jurisdiction in the premises. The lower court held that the wages could be attached in this manner. This judgment was reversed in the supreme court of Hawaii.

The laws of Hawaii regulating attachments in cases such as are now under consideration authorize proceedings supplementary to execution, as follows:

"Sec. 2118. Attachment of debts, order.— It shall be lawful for a judge of any court upon the ex parte application of such judgment creditor, either before or after such oral examination, and upon affidavit by the judgment creditor or his attorney, stating that judgment has been recovered, and that it is still unsatisfied, and to what amount, and that any other person is indebted to the judgment debtor and is within the jurisdiction, to order that all debts owing or accruing from such third person *(hereinafter called the 'garnishee') to the judgment debtor shall be attached to answer the judgment debt; and by the same or any subsequent order it may be ordered that the garnishee shall appear before the judge to show cause why he should not pay the judgment creditor the debt due from him to the judgment debtor, or so much thereof as 53 L. ed.

may be sufficient to satisfy the judgment debt; provided that the judge may, in his discretion, refuse to interfere when, from the smallness of the amount to be recovered, or of the debt sought to be attached, or otherwise, the remedy sought would be worthless or vexatious."

It was under this section of the Hawaiian statute that the order was made for the payment of the judgment out of the wages due to Tullet, and the question for decision in this case is: Can such an order be made consistently with the maritime law as declared in the Revised Statutes of the United States? The section of the statute construed in the supreme court of Hawaii is 4536, which provides:

"No wages due or accruing to any seaman or apprentice shall be subject to attachment or arrestment from any court; and every payment of wages to a seaman or apprentice shall be valid in law, notwithstanding any previous sale or assignment of wages, or of any attachment, encumbrance, or arrestment thereon; and no assignment or sale of wages, or salvage, made prior to the accruing thereof, shall bind the party making the same, except such advance securities as are authorized by this title."

This section was first enacted into the statutes of the United States in 1872, and was § 61 of the act of June 7, 1872, entitled "An Act to Authorize the Appointment of Shipping Commissioners by the Several Circuit Courts of the United States, to Superintend the Shipping and Discharge of Seamen Engaged in Merchant Ships Belonging to the United States, and for the Further Protection of Seamen." 17 Stat. at L. 262, 276, chap. 322, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3082. It afterwards became, in the revision of 1874, § 4536 of the Revised Statutes. This section appears to have been copied from § 233 of 17 and 18 Victoria, chap. 104, which act provides:

"No wages due or accruing to any [243 seaman or apprentice shall be subject to attachment or arrestment from any court; and every payment of wages to a seaman or apprentice shall be valid in law, notwithstanding any previous sale or assignment of such wages, or of any attachment, encumbrance, or arrestment thereon; and no assignment or sale of such wages, or of salvage, made prior to the accruing thereof, shall bind the party making the same, and no power of attorney or authority for the receipt of any such wages or salvage shall be irrevocable."

We have been unable to discover any English case construing this statute, and none has been called to our attention. In Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping, 4th ed., 231, that author states the effect of the statute to be to except seaman's wages from liability to attachment by a judgment creditor, as payment of such wages is valid, notwithstanding any previous sale or assignment thereof, or any attachment, encumbrance, or arrestment thereon. In this country the cases, state and Federal, in which this statute has been under consideration, are not in accord. In Telles v. Lynde, 47 Fed. 912, and The Queen, 93 Fed. 834, the district court in the ninth circuit reached the conclusion that the statute did not prevent the seizure of seamen's wages after judgment upon proceedings in aid of execution, although the seamen's wages were not liable to attachment in advance of judgment.

The question was very fully considered by Judge Benedict in the case of McCarty v. The City of New Bedford, 4 Fed. 818. In that case Judge Benedict held the view that the statute of Victoria 17 and 18, above cited, was but declaratory of the law of England as it theretofore existed, and that, in view of the remedies given in the United States courts in admiralty, and the provisions of the Federal statutes enacted in reference to the recovery and protection of the wages of seamen, there was no jurisdiction in the state courts to garnishee the wages of seamen at the instance of a creditor.

244] *With Judge Benedict's opinion before him, Mr. Justice Gray, then of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in the case of Eddy v. O'Hara, 132 Mass. 56, said that the court, although recognizing the elaborate and forcible argument of Judge Benedict, had not been able to satisfy itself that such an exemption from attachment had even been recognized, except as created or limited by express statutes or ordinances. The learned justice conceded that a determination of that question was not necessary to the decision then made, because the court held that the trustee in foreign attachment, having been compelled by process from the admiralty court to pay the amount of wages, could not be charged again for the same sum. In the subsequent case of White v. Dunn, 134 Mass. 271, the question was directly presented, and the former opinion of Mr. Justice Gray, in 132 Mass. 56, was approved; and it was held that the wages of seamen engaged in the coastwise trade (the act of 1874, 18 Stat. at L. 64, chap. 260, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3064, being construed to exempt coastwise-trading vessels from the provisions of the act of 1872, which included what is now § 4536) are subject to attachment by the trustee process. The court expressed regret at its inability to agree with the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York, evidently referring to Judge Benedict's opinion above cited, and expressed the opinion that no practical injustice would grow out of the conflict, as the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts had recently held, in Eddy v. O'Hara, supra, that where the wages of seamen had been obliged to be paid by a decree in admiralty, a party could not again be charged under attachment proceedings, and the court expressed the opinion that, as the wages were paid upon the judgment upon which trustee process had issued a court of admiralty of the United States would not compel the owners to pay a second time.

In the case of The City of New Bedford, 20 Fed. 57, Judge Brown, sitting in admiralty in the southern district of New York, adhered to the views expressed by Judge Benedict *in McCarty v. The City of New Bedford, supra, notwithstanding the decision in Eddy v. O'Hara, supra, but held that a compulsory payment under garnishee process in Massachusetts, under principles of comity, should be recognized in the admiralty court. In Ross v. Bourne, 14 Fed. 858, Judge Nelson, sitting in the United States district court in Massachusetts, held that a suit at law against a seaman, wherein his wages had been attached by a trustee process, but not yet paid, would not bar the seaman's recovery of the whole wages by a suit in admiralty. Upon appeal to the circuit court of the same case (17 Fed. 703), Judge Lowell said that "he did not dissent" from the learned opinion of Mr. Justice Gray, in Eddy v. O'Hara, supra, but held that such an attachment proceeding should be respected out of comity only, and that comity did not require actions in favor of seamen in admiralty to be hung up to wait the dilatory proceedings of an attachment suit at common law.

From this conflict of views upon the subject we turn to the consideration of the section (4536) itself. We may premise that no contention was made in the supreme court of Hawaii, or in the assignments of error or argument in this court, that § 4536 was inapplicable because the steamship company was engaged wholly in the coastwise trade. This removes any question on that subject from the case and renders it unnecessary to decide whether the act of 1874, 18 Stat. at L. 64, chap. 260, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3064, had the effect to repeal § 4536, so far as vessels thus engaged are concerned. In the first clause of § 4536 it is provided that no wages due or accruing to any seaman shall be subject to attachment or arrestment from any court; and it is the contention of the plaintiff in error that the words "attachment" or "arrestment" only forbid such proceedings before judgment, but do not protect such wages from proceedings in attachment after judgment. Undoubtedly the word "attachment," as ordinarily understood in American law, has reference to a writ the object of which is to hold property to abide the order of the court for the payment of a judgment in the 246]event *the debt shall be established. And as Mr. Justice Alvey says, in delivering the opinion of the supreme court of Maryland (Thomson v. Baltimore & S. Steam Co. 33 Md. 318):

"An attachment has but few of the attributes of an execution; the execution contemplated by the statute being the judicial process for obtaining the debt or damages recovered by judgment, and final in its character, while the attachment is but mesne process, liable at any time to be dissolved, and the judgment upon which may or may not affect the property seized.

"Arrestment," a word derived from the English statute, is a word of Scotch origin, and derived from the Scottish law, and thus defined by Bouvier:

"The order of a judge, by which he who is debtor in a movable obligation to the arrestor's debtor is prohibited to make payment or delivery till the debt due to the arrestor be paid or secured. Erskine, Inst. 3, 6, 1; 1, 2, 12. Where arrestment proceeds on a depending action it may be loosed by the common debtor's giving security to the arrestor for his debt, in the event it shall be found due."

And in the Century dictionary it is defined to be:

"A process by which a creditor may attach money or movable property which a third person holds for behoof of his debtor. It bears a general resemblance to foreign attachment by the custom of London."

Neither of the words used in the statute, "attachment" or "arrestment," considered literally, has reference to executions or proceedings in aid of execution to subject property to the payment of judgments, but refers, as we have seen, to the process of holding property to abide the judgment. But we are of opinion that this statute is not to be too narrowly construed, but rather to be liberally interpreted with a view to effecting the protection intended to be extended to a class of persons whose improvidence and prodigality have led to legislative provisions in their favor, and which has made 247]them, *as Mr. Justice Story declared, "the wards of the admiralty." Harden v. Gordon, 2 Mason, 541, Fed. Cas. No. 6,047.

We think, too, that the section is to be construed in the light of and in connection with the other provisions of the title of which it is a part. And we may notice that, after providing against attachment or arrestment of wages, this very section goes on to enact that payment of wages to seamen shall be valid, notwithstanding any previous sale or assignment, or any attachment, encumbrance, or arrestment thereon; and that no assignment or sale of wages made prior to the accruing thereof shall bind the party making the same, except such advance securities as are authorized by this statute. When we look to the provisions of the title we see that the field of "advanced securities" for which assignment is authorized is very narrow indeed. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3079 et seq. It is made unlawful to pay any seaman his wages in advance, and an allotment of his wages is permitted only to grandparents, parents, wives, or children, or, under regulations of the Commissioner of Navigation, made with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, not to exceed one month's wages to a creditor in liquidation of a just debt for board or clothing. And it is provided that no allotment note shall be valid unless signed and approved by the shipping commissioner. This statute has been held a valid enactment (Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. ed. 1002, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821) as to advancements.

Section 4536 therefore has the effect of not only securing the wages of the seaman from direct attachment or arrestment, but further prevents the assignment or sale of his wages, except in the limited cases we have mentioned, and makes the payment of such wages valid notwithstanding any "attachment, encumbrance, or arrestment thereon."

It seems to be clearly inferable from these provisions that wages which have thus been carefully conserved to the seaman were not intended to be subject to seizure by attachment, either before or after judgment.

Furthermore, there are other sections in the title which *strongly support the [248 conclusion that it was not intended that seamen's wages should be seized upon execution or attachment to collect judgments rendered at common law. Section 4535 provides that no seaman shall forfeit his lien upon the ship or be deprived of any remedy for the recovery of his wages by an agreement other than is provided for by this title. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3082. Section 4530 provides for the payment of seamen's wages, one half at every port where such vessel shall load or deliver its cargo, and when the voyage is ended the remainder of his wages, as provided in § 4529. Section 4546 provides for the summons of the master when wages are unpaid within ten days to show cause why process should not issue against the vessel according to the rules of courts of admiralty. Section 4547 provides for process against a vessel in case a seaman's wages are not paid, or the master does not show that the same are otherwise "satisfied or forfeited," and all the seamen having like cause of complaint may be joined as complainants in a single action.

We think that these provisions, read in connection with § 4536, necessitate the conclusion that it was intended not only to prevent the seaman from disposing of his wages by assignments or otherwise, but to preclude the right to compel a forced assignment, by garnishee or other similar process, which would interfere with the remedy in admiralty for the recovery of his wages by condemnation of the ship. These provisions would be defeated if the seaman's wages, to be recovered at the end of the voyage, could be at once seized by an execution or attachment after judgment in an action at law. The evident purpose of the Federal statutes, that the seaman shall have his remedy in admiralty, would be defeated, and the seaman, in many cases, be turned ashore with nothing in his pocket, because of judgments seizing his wages, rendered, it may be, upon improvident contracts, from which it was the design and very purpose of the admiralty law to afford him protection.

"Ordinarily," says Judge Nelson, in Ross 249]v. Bourne, 14 Fed. supra*, "the sailor's only means of subsistence on shore are his wages earned at sea. If these may be stopped by an attachment suit the instant his ship is moored to the wharf, a new hardship is added to a vocation already subject to its full share of the ills of life."

We think that § 4536, construed in the light of the other provisions of the same title, prevents the seizure of the seaman's wages, not only by writs of attachment issued before judgment, but extends the like protection from proceedings in aid of execution, or writs of attachments, such as are authorized by the Hawaiian statutes, after judgment.

Finding no error in the decision of the Supreme Court of Hawaii, the same is affirmed.

JAMES RUDOLPH GARFIELD, Secretary of the Interior, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA EX
RELATIONE JOHN E. GOLDSBY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 249-264.)

Courts — relation to Land Department.

1. The fact that the legal title to allottable Indian lands is still in the government does not defeat the jurisdiction of a court over a suit to compel the Secretary of the Interior to undo, as wholly unwarranted and unauthorized by law, his action in summarily erasing from the approved rolls of citizenship in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations the name of one who has received an allotment certificate and is in possession of the land.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mandamus — to control executive action.

2. Mandamus is the proper remedy where the Secretary of the Interior, wholly without authority of law, has summarily erased from the approved rolls of citizenship in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations the name of one who has received an allotment certificate and is in possession of the land. [For other cases, see Mandamus, II. d, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — control of Interior Department — summarily erasing name from citizenship roll.

3. The Secretary of the Interior is without authority to erase from the approved rolls of citizenship in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, without notice or hearing, the name of one who has received an allotment certificate and is in possession of the land.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mandamus — to control executive action.

4. Mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Interior to undo his action in summarily striking from the approved rolls of citizenship in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations the name of one who has received an allotment certificate and is in possession of the land will not be refused on the theory that his case comes within the provisions of the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 641, chap. 1362), establishing a citizenship court, as one of the claimants whose judgment in the court of the Indian territory was annulled by the subsequent procedure in the citizenship court, leaving him the remedy of appealing to that court, and that, having failed to appeal, he lost all right to enrolment, where it does not ap-

NOTE.—On the relation of the courts to the Executive—see notes to Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 53, and Bates v. Taylor, 3 L.R.A. 316.

On the conclusiveness and effect of the decisions of the Land Department—see notes to Hartman v. Warren, 22 C. C. A. 38; Carson City Gold & S. Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co. 28 C. C. A. 344; and Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. v. Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. 57 C. C. A. 207.

As to when mandamus is the proper remedy—see notes to United States v. Lamont, 39 L. ed. U. S. 160; M'Cluny v. Silliman, 4 L. ed. U. S. 263; Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 54; Burnsville Turnp. Co. v. State, 3 L.R.A. 265; State ex rel. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 3 L.R.A. 777; and Ex parte Hurn, 13 L.R.A. 120.

On mandamus to control official action—see notes to United States ex rel. Pollok v. Hall, 1 L.R.A. 738; Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 53; State ex rel. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 3 L.R.A. 778; People ex rel. Brokaw v. Highway Comrs. 6 L.R.A. 161; and Territory ex rel. Coteau County v. Cascade County, 7 L.R.A. 105.

pear whether or not his name was on the original or other tribal rolls.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, II. d, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 248.]

Argued October 15, 16, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, granting a writ of mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Interior to undo his action in summarily erasing from the approved rolls of citizenship in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations the name of one who had received an allotment certificate and was in possession of the land. Affirmed.

See same case below, 30 App. D. C. 177.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Fowler and Attorney General Bonaparte argued the cause, and, with Mr. William R. Harr, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The matters referred to in the petition are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior, and not subject to judicial review.

McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 468, 51 L. ed. 566, 570, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 553, 47 L. ed. 299, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Blackfeather v. United States, 190 U. S. 373, 47 L. ed. 1101, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 772.

The legal title to the lands claimed by the relator being still in the United States and the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations, the lower court should have declined to interfere.

Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 476, 43 L. ed. 772, 774, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 396, 26 L. ed. 167, 171; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Humbird v. Avery, 195 U. S. 480, 505, 49 L. ed. 286, 297, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 321, 337, 338, 50 L. ed. 499, 505, 506, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Love v. Flahive, 205 U. S. 195, 198, 51 L. ed. 768, 770, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 486.

The power of the Land Department to cancel the final receiver's certificate has been often adjudged.

Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 372, 39 L. ed. 737, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Parsons v. Venzke, 164 U. S. 89, 41 L. ed. 360, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. ed. 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; 53 L. ed.

Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. ed. 1157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

To say that a certificate of allotment is conclusive as against the Secretary would be to compel the allotment of land in these nations without his supervision or approval, in face of the fact that he is given exclusive jurisdiction in regard thereto.

The rule is well settled that the courts will not interfere, by injunction, or mandamus, with the action of executive officers requiring the exercise of judgment and discretion.

United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 324, 47 L. ed. 1078, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698.

Whether a patent shall issue is certainly a matter involving the exercise of judgment and discretion. Mandamus will not lie to compel its issuance.

United States v. The Commissioner (United States ex rel. McConnell v. Edmunds) 5 Wall. 563, 18 L. ed. 692; The Secretary v. McGarrahan (Cox v. United States) 9 Wall. 298, 19 L. ed. 579.

The utmost the courts have ever done is to compel the delivery of a patent where it has been recorded and the title has passed.

United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 26 L. ed. 167.

The control and development of the tribal property still remains subject to the administrative control of the government, even though the members of the tribe have been invested with the status of citizenship under recent legislation.

Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 307, 308, 47 L. ed. 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123.

The rule as to the effect to be given the contemporaneous and long-continued construction of statutes by executive officers charged with their administration is well settled. It is said that it is entitled to great respect, and should not be disregarded except for cogent reasons and when it is clear that such construction is erroneous.

United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236, 253, 31 L. ed. 289, 396, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699.

The matter before the court is not affected by the question of vested rights. If, by reason of the selection of land made to him, the relator has acquired any vested rights therein, as he alleges, he can assert them in the proper court after the title to the land has passed from the United States and the Chickasaw Nation. But that the mere expectation of a share in the property of the Nation, arising from the fact of his once having been enrolled, does not create a vested right therein, is settled.

Stephens v. Cherokee Nation; Cherokee

Nation v. Hitchcock; and Lone Wolf v. Hitchcock,—supra; Morris v. Hitchcock, 194 U. S. 384, 48 L. ed. 1030, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712; Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363.

Assistant Attorney General Fowler and Attorney General Bonaparte also filed a separate brief for plaintiff in error:

Inasmuch as the commission and the Secretary of the Interior had no jurisdiction over the application of Goldsby, which was made in 1905, the entering of his name upon the roll by the Secretary of the Interior was a nullity.

Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; United States use of Wilson v. Walker, 109 U. S. 258, 265, 27 L. ed. 927, 929, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Bigelow v. Forrest, 9 Wall. 339, 351, 19 L. ed. 696, 700; Horn v. Lockhart, 17 Wall. 570, 580, 21 L. ed. 657, 660.

If petitioner had alleged in his petition that he was on the tribal roll, yet he would have been put upon proof of that fact, inasmuch as it was not admitted in the answer.

United States v. Low, 16 Pet. 162, 168, 10 L. ed. 923, 925; Brown v. Pierce, 7 Wall. 205, 211, 19 L. ed. 134, 136.

The writ of mandamus is not one granted ex debito justitiæ, but its allowance rests in the sound discretion of the court.

Union P. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 356, 23 L. ed. 432.

It will not be granted to correct irregular or unauthorized action by a public official when it appears from the face of the record that the result of this action has been to do justice, and that obedience to the mandamus would involve injustice.

Wiedwald v. Dodson, 95 Cal. 450, 30 Pac. 580; State ex rel. McBride v. Phillips County, 26 Kan. 419; State ex rel. Office Specialty Mfg. Co. v. Beck, 25 Nev. 105, 57 Pac. 935; Allen v. Robinson, 17 Minn. 113, Gil. 90; Van Akin v. Dunn, 117 Mich. 421, 75 N. W. 938; State ex rel. O'Hara v. Fagan, 56 N. J. L. 279, 27 Atl. 1089.

The writ will not issue in support of unjust claims, although they may technically be regular.

26 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 155, title "Mandamus;" People ex rel. Wood v. Board of Assessors, 137 N. Y. 201, 33 N. E. 145; McQueen v. Detroit, 116 Mich. 90, 74 N. W. 387.

Mr. Charles H. Merillat argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles J. Kappler and James K. Jones, filed a brief for defendant in error:

After receipt of an allotment certificate, the allottee became entitled to a patent, issuance of the same being a mere ministerial act.

Garfield v. United States, 30 App. D. C. 165.

The Secretary of the Interior, having been invested with authority to approve the rolls, his approval, whether right or wrong, is not open for review here.

Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 450, 27 L. ed. 228, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 83, 20 L. ed. 485.

Executive officers derive their powers from the statutes. Not only must an officer have jurisdiction of the subject-matter, but he must also keep within the limits of the power conferred on him by statute.

United States v. Macdaniel, 7 Pet. 1-14, 8 L. ed. 587-592; United States v. Thurber, 28 Fed. 56.

Any contention that, because of his general power of supervision over enrolment, allotments, and the Five Civilized Tribes, the Secretary must be held to have power to cancel enrolments which he ascertains he has approved by reason of fraud or mistake of law, counsel think can best be answered by citation of the case of Mosgrove v. Harper, 33 Or. 252, 54 Pac. 187, wherein it was held that the Secretary was without authority, for any cause, to cancel a once-approved lease.

Conceding that Congress could confer power on the Secretary to cancel an allotment certificate, it has not done so, whereas such express authority has been by statute conferred as to receivers' certificates, and the change in the statute naturally was followed by a change in the current of judicial decision.

Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. 333, 13 L. ed. 160; Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 372, 39 L. ed. 737, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635.

The right to public lands is not complete until the action of the register and receiver of the Land Office is approved by the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior, because, by statute, they now are vested with supervisory control; but, under the general land laws, there are stages at which their action is beyond recall.

United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 407, 26 L. ed. 175.

And, even with the supervisory power vested in the Secretary, the receiver's certificate carries with it property rights which cannot be lightly set aside by the Secretary.

Orchard v. Alexander, supra; Brown v. Gurney, 201 U. S. 192, 50 L. ed. 721, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509.

The cases arising in this court under special acts go much further and are more nearly analogous to the situation presented by the issuance of allotment certificates, especially under the Choctaw-Chickasaw agreement of July 1, 1902, and to almost or quite the same extent under the Cherokee agreement of the same year. The allotment certificates, like certification of lists of lands under these special acts, convey a title as complete as patents.

Frasher v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102, 29 L. ed. 311, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1141; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 402, 18 L. ed. 925; Barney v. Dolph, 97 U. S. 652, 24 L. ed. 1063.

Patent to the public lands, it has been held, is but evidence of the right and title thereto of the patentee. The patent, being but evidence, relates back to the inception of the equitable right.

United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 335, 50 L. ed. 505, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282.

Enrolment gave a vested right to an undivided share, and the allotment certificate was the conclusive evidence of the right to a particular segregated tract, and the patent but a more formal and recorded muniment of title.

Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716; Garfield v. United States, supra.

Even were jurisdiction to cancel names on the final approved rolls conceded, notice and opportunity of hearing in defense are absolute prerequisites to its exercise.

People ex rel. Van Petten v. Cobb, 13 App. Div. 56, 43 N. Y. Supp. 120; Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 382, 39 L. ed. 741, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635.

Enrolment was, in effect, the execution of a contract between the individual, the Indian Nations, and the United States, in accordance with conventions assented to by the United States and the other parties. Canceling an executed contract is an exertion of the most extraordinary power of a court of equity.

Atlantic Delaine Co. v. James, 94 U. S. 207, 24 L. ed. 112; Conner v. Groh, 90 Md. 686, 45 Atl. 1024.

Mandamus is the proper remedy.

Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 338, 25 L. ed. 676; Ex parte Roberts, 15 Wall. 385, 21 L. ed. 132; People ex rel. Burroughs v. Brinkerhoff, 68 N. Y. 262; People ex rel. Van Petten v. Cobb, supra; Wise v. Bigger, 79 Va. 269; Crane v. Barry, 47 Ga. 476; Raymond v. Villere, 42 La. Ann. 490, 7 So. 900; State ex rel. Columbus v. Mitchell, 31 Ohio St. 592; State ex rel. Brickman v. Wilson, 123 Ala. 259, 45 L.R.A. 772, 26 So. 482; United States ex rel. Reinach v. Cortelyou, 28 App. D. C. 570, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 166; United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 19 App. D. C. 333; Union P. R. 53 L. ed.

Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 343-353, 23 L. ed. 428-431; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Boston Turnp. Co. v. Pomfret, 20 Conn. 590; Schmulbach v. Speidel, 50 W. Va. 553, 55 L.R.A. 922, 40 S. E. 424; Baltimore University v. Colton, 98 Md. 623, 64 L.R.A. 108, 57 Atl. 14; Harwood v. Marshall, 9 Md. 83; Jackson v. State, 57 Neb. 183, 42 L.R.A. 792, 77 N. W. 662; Dawson v. Thurston, 2 Hen. & M. 132; Re Strong, 20 Pick. 484; People ex rel. Pulford v. Fire Department, 31 Mich. 458.

The enrolment of defendant in error exhausted judgment, discretion, and controversy.

Belcher v. Linn, 24 How. 526, 16 L. ed. 758; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 450, 27 L. ed. 228, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 83, 20 L. ed. 486; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 170, 37 L. ed. 125, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271.

A claim of discretion will not bar the writ, provided the construction of the acts of Congress is plain and unmistakable, since that would be to enable the executive officer to render valueless the writ of mandamus.

Roberts v. United States, 176 U. S. 221, 44 L. ed. 443, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

The Secretary of the Interior had jurisdiction to enroll all the defendants in error because the subject-matter of enrolments was expressly committed to his care.

McNitt v. Turner, 16 Wall. 364, 21 L. ed. 347; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 418, 26 L. ed. 187; Foltz v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 8 C. C. A. 635, 19 U. S. App. 581; 60 Fed. 316; Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. 341, 11 L. ed. 292; Cornett v. Williams (Nash v. Williams) 20 Wall. 226, 22 L. ed. 254; Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed. 931.

While the construction of a statute by a body charged with its enforcement, which has long obtained and which has been impliedly sanctioned by its re-enactment, must be treated, when not plainly erroneous, as read into the statute, its binding force is restricted to the exact point passed on.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

The original enrolments are an admitted fact and must be legally treated as such. The court will not go back of that. It cannot inquire into what means or methods brought the Secretary to his final approval of the rolls, nor whether that final approval was correct. It has no general supervisory power over the Secretary, and can only act where he exceeds his jurisdiction or acts arbitrarily, capriciously, and without due process of law.

De Cambra v. Rogers, 189 U. S. 121, 47 L.

ed. 734, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519; United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 323, 47 L. ed. 1076, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 205 U. S. 80, 51 L. ed. 718, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

Allotment gave the enrolled a designated and segregated tract of land, subject to sale, lease, or mortgage, with approval of the Secretary. Many such approvals were made. Such acts, as well as the statutes, are inconsistent with a claim that enrolments were only tentative until final closure of rolls.

Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 721.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought in the supreme court of the District of Columbia for a writ of mandamus against the Secretary of the Interior in his official capacity, to require him to erase certain marks and notations theretofore made by his predecessor in office upon the rolls, striking therefrom the name of the relator, Goldsby, as an approved member of the Chickasaw Nation, and to restore him to enrolment as a member of the nation.

Goldsby, in his petition, claimed that he was a recognized citizen of the Chickasaw Nation and entitled to an equal, undivided interest in the lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations; that he was an owner of an allotment of land which had been made to him as hereinafter stated, and that he was entitled to an equal, undivided, distributive share of the funds and other lands of the nation. The petition for the writ recites at length the acts of Congress supposed to bear upon the subject, and avers that the Secretary of the Interior, on October 6, 1905, affirmed a decision of the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, holding that the petitioner and his children were entitled to enrolment, and that relator's name was placed on the final roll of citizenship by blood of the Chickasaw Nation, and that the list was approved by the Secretary of the Interior on November 27, 1905, and that thereafter the petitioner secured an allotment of 320 acres of the allottable lands of the Chickasaw Nation, and an allotment certificate was issued to him by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes for the lands thus selected, and the same are now held by him. The petition then goes on to aver, in substance, that relator's name was stricken from the rolls on March 4, 1907. And it is averred that this action was unauthorized, *was beyond the power of the Secretary, and deprived the relator of valuable rights in the lands and funds of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations without due process of law.

The supreme court of the District of Columbia issued an order to show cause and the Secretary appeared and answered. The answer, we think, may be fairly construed to contain a denial of the allegation, if the petition might be construed to make the claim, that the relator was an enrolled member of the Chickasaw Nation, but it does admit that he had been enrolled by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes; that the list had been approved by the First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and averred that, before the time fixed by Congress for the completion of the rolls of members of the nation, the then Secretary of the Interior had disapproved the enrolment of the petitioner and stricken his name from the rolls. The answer admits that the certificate of allotment had been issued to petitioner by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes for lands selected by petitioner; and further avers that the Secretary of the Interior had not approved of such allotment, and no patent had been issued therefor.

The answer also admits that it had been the practice of Secretaries of the Interior to give notice before striking names from the approved lists of the Five Civilized Tribes, and avers that, owing to the limited time before the expiration of the time fixed by Congress for the completion of the rolls, March 4, 1907, it was impossible to give notice and opportunity to be heard to relator and a large number of other persons. The answer avers that the respondent's predecessor, the then Secretary of the Interior, had no jurisdiction or authority to enroll the petitioner. It also avers that the allotment of lands in severalty of the Chickasaw Nation was delegated exclusively to the Secretary of the Interior. That, by the acts of Congress, exclusive jurisdiction in matters involving the making of rolls of citizenship of the Five Civilized Tribes was conferred *upon the Secretary of the Interior, and the determination of such matters was within his exclusive judgment and discretion.

A general demurrer was filed to the answer, with a note thereto stating that one matter to be argued on demurrer is that the answer sets forth no sufficient reason in law for the cancellation of relator's enrolment by the Secretary of the Interior without notice or hearing. In the supreme court of the District of Columbia the demurrer to the answer was sustained upon that ground. The respondent elected to stand upon his answer. Judgment was entered, requiring the Secretary to erase from the rolls the statements placed thereon derogatory to the relator's rights in said tribe, and to recognize relator as an enrolled member of the nation. Upon appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia this judgment was affirmed (30 App. D. C. 177), and the case comes here.

While it does not appear from the allegations and admissions of the pleadings that Goldsby was an original enrolled member of the tribe, it does appear that, under the act of Congress of June 10, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 339, chap. 398), Goldsby made application to the Dawes Commission and was enrolled as a member of the Chickasaw Nation. It appears from a letter of the Secretary of the Interior to the commission, attached as an exhibit to the petition, and dated October 6, 1905, that the commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, on May 24, 1905, following instructions of the Department of April 2, 1905, and in accordance with the opinion of the Assistant Attorney General of March 24, 1905, in the case of Vaughn et al., rescinded its action of September 23, 1904, dismissing the application for the enrollment of Goldsby and his minor children, and held that they should be enrolled as citizens, by blood of the Chickasaw Nation; and that on July 7, 1905, the Indian Office recommended that the commission's decision be approved. The Secretary's letter of October 6, 1905, concluded with a finding that the applicants, including Goldsby, should be enrolled as citizens of the Chickasaw Nation, affirming the commission's decision. The Secretary of the Interior, on April 26, 1906, reported his approval to the Dawes Commission, the roll as approved was kept in the Secretary's office, and copies sent out as the statute required.

Goldsby selected his land and received a certificate of allotment from the commission, but no patent has been issued for the same. On March 4, 1907, the Secretary of the Interior, without notice to the relator and without his knowledge, erased his name from the rolls and opposite the same caused the entry to be made, "canceled March 4, 1907."

In the view which we take of this case it is unnecessary to recite at length the numerous acts of Congress which have been passed in aid of the purpose of Congress to extinguish the tribal titles to Indian lands and to allot the same among the members thereof with a view of creating a state or states which should embrace these lands.

The act of June 10, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 339, chap. 398), empowered the Dawes Commission to hear and determine applications for citizenship, and gave an appeal to the United States court in the Indian territory from the decisions of the commission; made the judgment of that court final, and required the commission to complete its roll of citizens of the several tribes, and to include therein the names of citizens, in accordance with the requirements of the act. And the commission was required to file the list of members as they finally approved them, with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

The act of June 28, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 497, chap. 517, § 11), made provision that when the roll of citizenship of any one of the nations or tribes is complete, as provided by law, and a survey of the land is made, the Dawes Commission should proceed to allot the lands among the citizens thereof, as shown by the roll.

By the act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 1077, chap. 832), it was provided that the rolls made by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, as approved by the Secretary of the Interior, should be final, and authorized the Secretary of the Interior to fix the time by agreement with the tribes for the closing of the roll, and, upon failure of such agreement, then the Secretary of the Interior should fix the time for the closing of the rolls, and after which no name should be added thereto.

The act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 641, chap. 1362), ratifies an agreement with the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, providing for the allotment of lands, and provides in § 23:

"23. Allotment certificates issued by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes shall be conclusive evidence of the right of any allottee to the tract of land described therein; and the United States Indian agent at the Union Agency shall, upon the application of the allottee, place him in possession of his allotment, and shall remove therefrom all persons objectionable to such allottee, and the acts of the Indian agent hereunder shall not be controlled by the writ or process of any court."

Section 31 of the act made provision for the establishment of a citizenship court. The provisions of the act, in this respect, are fully reviewed in former decisions of this court. Wallace v. Adams, 204 U. S. 415, 51 L. ed. 547, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363.

It is sufficient to say that, by the act of July 1, 1902, a suit was authorized in the citizenship court to annul the citizenship decrees made in the United States court in the Indian territory, under the act of June 10, 1896; provision was made for general suits in which a nation might be represented by ten representative defendants; and it was provided that when citizenship judgments in the court of the Indian territory were annulled in the authorized test suit, the party aggrieved, by being deprived of favorable judgment upon his claim of citizenship, might himself appeal to the citizenship court, and such proceeding should be had as ought to have been had in the court to which the same was taken from the commission, as if no judgment or decision had been rendered therein. And it was further provided that no person whose name did not appear upon the rolls, as provided for in this act, should be entitled to participate in the common property of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes.

260] *The act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 1876), provided that the rolls of the tribes should be fully complete on or before the 4th day of March, 1907, and after that day the Secretary of the Interior should have no jurisdiction to approve the enrolment of any person.

It is insisted by the learned counsel for the government that the court had no jurisdiction to entertain this suit, because the legal title has not as yet passed from the government, as no patent has passed. We have no disposition to question those cases in which this court has held that the courts may not interfere with the Land Department in the administration of the public lands while the same are subject to disposition under acts of Congress intrusting such matters to that branch of the government. Some of these cases are cited in the late case of United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 499, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282, and the principle to be gathered from them is, that while the land is under the control of the Land Department prior to the issue of patent, the court will not interfere with such departmental administration. This was held as late as the case of Love v. Flahive, 205 U. S. 195-198, 51 L. ed. 768-770, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 486.

But the question presented for adjudication here does not involve the control of any matter committed to the Land Department for investigation and determination. The contention of the relator is, that as the Secretary had exercised the authority conferred upon him and placed his name upon the rolls, and the same had been certified to the commission, and he had received an allotment certificate, and was in possession of the lands, the action of the Secretary in striking him from the roll was wholly unwarranted, and not within the authority and control over public land titles given to the Interior Department.

By the conceded action of the Secretary prior to the striking of Goldsby's name from the rolls, he had not only become entitled to participate in the distribution of the funds of the nation, but, by the express terms of § 23 of the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 641, chap. 1362), it was provided that the certificate *should be[261 conclusive evidence of the right of the allottee to the tract of land described therein. We have therefore under consideration in this case the right to control by judicial action an alleged unauthorized act of the Secretary of the Interior for which he was given no authority under any act of Congress.

It is insisted that mandamus is not the proper remedy in cases such as the one now under consideration. But we are of opinion that mandamus may issue if the Secretary of the Interior has acted wholly without authority of law. Since Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60, it has been held that there is a distinction between those acts which require the exercise of discretion or judgment and those which are purely ministerial, or are undertaken entirely without authority, which may become the subject of review in the courts. The subject was under consideration in Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271, and Mr. Justice Brown, delivering the opinion of the court, cites many of the previous cases of this court, and, speaking for the court, says:

"We have no doubt the principle of these decisions applies to a case wherein it is contended that the act of the head of a department, under any view that could be taken of the facts that were laid before him, was ultra vires, and beyond the scope of his authority. If he has no power at all to do the act complained of, he is as much subject to an injunction as he would be to a mandamus if he refused to do an act which the law plainly required him to do. As observed by Mr. Justice Bradley in Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 541, 25 L. ed. 623, 628: 'But it has been well settled that when a plain official duty, requiring no exercise of discretion, is to be performed, and performance is refused, any person who will sustain personal injury by such refusal may have a mandamus to compel its performance; and when such duty is threatened to be violated by some positive official act, any person who will sustain personal injury thereby, for which adequate compensation cannot be had at law, may have an injunction *to prevent it. In[262 such cases the writs of mandamus and injunction are somewhat correlative to each other.'"

We think this principle applicable to this case, and that there was jurisdiction to issue the writ of mandamus.

In our view, this case resolves itself into a question of the power of the Secretary of the Interior in the premises, as conferred by the acts of Congress. We appreciate fully the purpose of Congress in numerous acts of legislation to confer authority upon the Secretary of the Interior to administer upon the Indian lands, and previous decisions of this court have shown its refusal to sanction a judgment interfering with the Secretary where he acts within the powers conferred by law. But, as has been affirmed by this court in former decisions, there is no place in our constitutional system for the exercise of arbitrary power, and, if the Secretary has exceeded the authority conferred upon him by law, then there is power in the courts to restore the status of the parties aggrieved by such unwarranted action.

In the extended discussion which has been had upon the meaning and extent of constitutional protection against action without due process of law, it has always been recognized that one who has acquired rights by an administrative or judicial proceeding cannot be deprived of them without notice and an opportunity to be heard.

The right to be heard before property is taken or rights or privileges withdrawn which have been previously legally awarded is of the essence of due process of law. It is unnecessary to recite the decisions in which this principle has been repeatedly recognized. It is enough to say that its binding obligation has never been questioned in this court.

The acts of Congress, as we have seen, have made provision that the commission shall certify from time to time to the Secretary of the Interior the lists upon which the names of persons found by the commission to be entitled to enrolment shall be placed. Upon the approval of the Secretary of the Interior these lists constitute a 263]part and parcel of the final *rolls of citizens of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes and Chickasaw freedmen, upon which allotments of lands and distribution of tribal property shall be made.

The statute provides in § 30, act of July 1, 1902, supra:

"Lists shall be made up and forwarded when contests of whatever character shall have been determined, and when there shall have been submitted to and approved by the Secretary of the Interior lists embracing names of all those lawfully entitled to enrolment, the rolls shall be deemed complete. The rolls so prepared shall be made in quintuplicate, one to be deposited with the Secretary of the Interior, one with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, one with the principal chief of the Choctaw Nation, one with the governor of the Chickasaw Nation, and one to remain with the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes."

The Secretary took the action contemplated by this section and acted upon the list forwarded by the commission. The roll was made up and distributed in quintuplicate, as required by the statute. Notice was given to the commission, and land was allotted to the relator, as provided by § 23 of the act of July 1, 1902, supra. The relator thereby acquired valuable rights, his name was upon the rolls, the certificate of his allotment of land was awarded to him. There is nothing in the statutes, as we read them, which gave the Secretary power and authority, without notice and hearing, to strike down the rights thus acquired.

Nor do we think it is an answer to the petition for a writ of mandamus to say, as is earnestly contended by the counsel for the government, that Goldsby's case comes within the provisions of the act of July 1, 1902, establishing a citizenship court, as it appears in this record that he was one of the claimants whose judgment in the court of the Indian territory was annulled by the subsequent procedure in the citizenship court, leaving to Goldsby the remedy of appealing himself to that court, which, having failed to do, he has lost all right to enrolment, and therefore the decision of the Secretary of March 4, 1907, *striking[264 him from the rolls, ought not to be interfered with, for the reason that the writ of mandamus, upon well-settled principles, ought not to issue to require the Secretary to do that which it now appears he never had any lawful authority to do. But we are of opinion that the facts now adduced are insufficient to require us to say that Goldsby could not establish a right to enrolment. The government contends, and we have held, that it does not appear in this case whether Goldsby's name was on the original or other tribal rolls,—a fact essential to be known in order to determine whether his contention be sound that such an enrolment gave him the right to participate in the division of the funds and lands of the nation, irrespective of the action of the Dawes Commission, the court of the Indian territory, or the citizenship court. The question here involved concerns the right and authority of the Secretary of the Interior to take the action of March 4, 1907, in summarily striking the relator's name from the rolls. That is the question involved in this case.

For the reasons given we think this action was unwarranted, and that the relator is entitled to be restored to the status he occupied before that order was made.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia is affirmed.

JAMES RUDOLPH GARFIELD, Secretary of the Interior, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES EX REL. IDA ALLI-
SON. [No. 249.]

JAMES RUDOLPH GARFIELD, Secretary of the Interior, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES EX REL. GEORGE A.
ALLISON. [No. 250.]

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 264, 265.)

These cases are governed by the decision in Garfield v. United States, ante, p. 168.

[Nos. 249, 250.]

Argued October 15, 16, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review two judgments which affirmed judgments of the Supreme Court of the District, granting writs of mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Interior to undo his action in summarily erasing certain names from the approved rolls of citizenship in the Cherokee Nation.
Affirmed.

See same case below, No. 249, 30 App. D.
C. 190; No. 250, 30 App. D. C. 188.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Fowler and Attorney General Bonaparte argued the causes, and with Mr. William R. Harr, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Charles H. Merillat argued the causes, and, with Messrs. Charles J. Kappler and James K. Jones, filed a brief for defendant in error.

For contentions of counsel, see their briefs as reported in Garfield v. United States, ante, 168.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases were argued and submitted with the Goldsby Case, No. 248, just decided.
[Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, ante, 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62]. In the case of George A. Allison, a patent had been issued for his lands and duly recorded. In the case of Ida Allison, an allotment certificate had been issued.

The relators are Cherokees, but the legislation herein involved is not different from that governing allotments to members of the Chickasaw Nation.

The Allisons made application to the commission for admission to citizenship under the act of June 10, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 321, chap. 398). Their applications were denied and no appeal taken. Afterwards a decision by the commission, granting the application of the Allisons for enrolment as citizens by blood, was affirmed by the Department of the Interior as of April 16, 1904.

Their names were summarily stricken from the rolls by the Department's order of March 4, 1907. The cases are controlled by the decision in Goldsby's Case.

Judgments affirmed.

HOME TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COM-PANY, Appt.,
v.

CITY OF LOS ANGELES, A. C. Harper,
Mayor, and R. W. Dromgold, Edward A.
Clampitt, Walter J. Wren, Niles Pease,
A. J. Wallace, Henry H. Yonkin, Henry
Lyon, Bernard Healy, and Everett L.
Blanchard, Members of the Common Council.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 265-281.)

Telephones — municipal regulation — contracting away power to fix rates.

1. Municipal authority to enter into a contract fixing unalterably, during the term of the franchise, charges for telephone service, and disabling itself from exercising the charter power of regulation, must, at the very least, necessarily be implied from the controlling statutes, even if it be conceded that anything less than a clear and affirmative legislative expression is a sufficient foundation upon which to rest an authority of this nature.

Telephones — municipal regulation —
contracting away power to fix rates.

2. Charter authority to regulate telephone service and to fix and determine the charges therefor does not empower a municipality to enter into a contract fixing unalterably, during the terms of the franchise, the charges for such service, and disabling itself from exercising the power of regulation.

Telephones — municipal regulation —
contracting away power to fix rates.
3. Municipal authority to contract away

NOTE. — On legislative power to regulate telephone rates—see note to *Chesapeake &
P. Teleph. Co. v. Manning*, 46 L. ed. U. S.
1144.

On the power of the legislature generally to fix tolls, rates, and prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

On unconstitutional inequality or discrimination in state regulation of tolls or rates
—see note to Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed.
U. S. 92.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; *Chauvin
v. Valiton*, 3 L.R.A. 194; and *Ulman v.
Baltimore*, 11 L.R.A. 225,

the charter power to regulate telephone rates cannot be gathered from the provisions of Cal. act March 11, 1901 (Cal. Stat. 1901, p. 265), under which the telephone company obtained its franchise from the city, that application for a franchise must be filed, and, in the discretion of the council, published, that the city is entitled to a percentage of the receipts, that the grantee must give bond to perform every term and condition of the franchise, that no condition shall be inserted which restricts competition, or favors one person against another, and that the franchise must be sold to the highest bidder, especially since the 1st section of the act provides that franchises "shall be granted upon the conditions in this act provided, and not otherwise."

Constitutional law — due process of law — notice and hearing.

4. Municipal ordinances fixing telephone rates do not deny the due process of law guaranteed by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., because the section of the municipal charter under the authority of which they were enacted does not expressly provide for notice and hearing, where both notice and an opportunity to be heard were in fact accorded by ordinances providing that the rates be fixed at a meeting of the city council held in February in each year, and requiring the telephone company to furnish the city council annually in that month a statement of its receipts, expenditures, and property employed in the business.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 696-773, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — delegation of power.

5. No valid objection to intrusting a municipal council with the power to regulate telephone rates can be based upon the theory that the council is not an impartial tribunal because it is, in effect, made a judge in its own case, or that the judgment and sense of justice of the councilmen will be distorted by their dependence upon the will of the people which results from a provision in the city charter empowering 25 per cent of the electors to recall a member of the council and require him again to stand for election.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, III. b, 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws.

6. Municipal regulation of the rates which a telephone company may charge, on a lower scale than those prescribed for a competitor, does not necessarily deny the equal protection of the laws, since such competitor may bring its patrons into communication with a larger number of persons, dwelling in a more widely-extended territory, and may render much more valuable service.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 343-346, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 173.]

Argued October 21, 1908. Decided November 30, 1908.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of California to review a decree sustaining a demurrer to the bill in a suit to restrain the enforcement of municipal ordinances fixing telephone rates. Affirmed.

See same case below, 155 Fed. 554.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Oscar A. Trippet argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. Haines, filed a brief for appellant:

The California statute of 1901 and the provisions of the charter are to be read together as bearing upon the power of the city of Los Angeles to grant a franchise for a telephone system, and to fix therein rates chargeable for telephone service during the term of the franchise; and ultimately, in the light of such power, as bearing on the question whether the ordinance embodies a contract as to rates.

Los Angeles v. Davidson, 150 Cal. 63, 88 Pac. 42.

The granting of a franchise is a legislative act.

People ex rel. Dean v. Contra Costa County, 122 Cal. 422, 55 Pac. 131.

In considering the question of power to contract, the principle that the right to compensation is an inseparable incident to every franchise affected with a public use is to be kept in view.

Stockton Gas & Electric Co. v. San Joaquin County, 148 Cal. 321, 5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 174, 83 Pac. 54, 7 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 511; Truckee & T. Turnp. Road Co. v. Campbell, 44 Cal. 90; State v. Boston, C. & M. R. Co. 25 Vt. 433; State ex rel. St. Louis v. Laclede Gaslight Co. 102 Mo. 472, 22 Am. St. Rep. 789, 14 S. W. 974, 15 S. W. 383; Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed. 720.

So vital is this right and so absolutely incident is it, that even when it is left to continuous public regulation, unrestrained by contract, it comes under the guaranty of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 522-526, 42 L. ed. 819, 840, 842, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The power to agree upon maximum rates is incident to the power to grant the franchise, even though the governmental power to regulate rates by enactments in the nature of laws has not been conferred upon the municipality.

Noblesville v. Noblesville Gas & Improv. Co. 157 Ind. 162, 60 N. E. 1032.

The procedure to sell, prescribed by the statute, is contractual at every stage.

a. Because every franchise under the Broughton act contemplates a new public utility.

Omaha Water Co. v. Omaha, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 736, 77 C. C. A. 267, 147 Fed. 5.

b. Because the statutory application for a franchise may embrace a proposal as to rates.

c. Because, in exercising the discretion reposed in the council by the statute to pass on such application, the council is empowered to exercise its discretion on the rates proposed in it.

d. Because the power to sell a franchise inevitably includes the power to prescribe maximum rates as a term of the franchise.

California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 50 L. ed. 204, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100.

e. Because the discretion conferred by the Broughton act on the council, to define the character of the franchise to be advertised for sale, includes the power to fix maximum rates or charges under the franchise.

f. Because the fact that the Broughton act required the legislative body of the municipality to fix the term for which the proposed franchise is to be granted, and to state such term in the advertisement for bids, is consistent with the prescribing of maximum rates in the sale and grant of the franchise, but inconsistent with any recognized principles for exercising continuing power by the city council to legislate as a political superior upon the rates from time to time during such term.

It is not apparent how ultimate compensation for capital invested in or the cash price paid for the franchise can be provided, as justice and equity require, otherwise than by an agreement fixing maximum rates for the term. It would seem that the system of continuous rate fixing is inadequate to that end. For it is now to be considered as the settled law, that all fixing of rates by governmental authority, acting purely in the lawmaking capacity, proceeds upon the legal basis of "a fair return upon the reasonable value of the property at the time it is being used for the public." This is the utmost the holder of a franchise can expect.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 757, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 544, 546, 547, 42 L. ed. 819, 848, 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jacer, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Redlands, L. & C. Domestic Water Co. v. Redlands, 121 Cal. 365, 53 Pac. 843; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 86, 91, 46 L. ed. 92, 99, 101, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

The value of the plant and franchise themselves, whether taken separately, or as a whole, is affected by the character and duration of the franchise.

Kennebec Water Dist. v. Waterville, 97 Me. 201, 60 L.R.A. 856, 54 Atl. 12; Bristol v. Bristol & W. Waterworks, 19 R. I. 413, 32 L.R.A. 740, 34 Atl. 359; Re Brooklyn, 143 N. Y. 596, 26 L.R.A. 270, 38 N. E. 983, affirmed in 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.

Every consideration shows that the Broughton act conferred power upon the municipalities of the state to contract as to rates for telephone service.

Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 382, 46 L. ed. 592, 605, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 206 U. S. 496, 508, 51 L. ed. 1155, 1160, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 570, 44 L. ed. 886, 892, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736, 88 Fed. 730; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 3, 14, 43 L. ed. 341, 342, 347, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 533, 534, 48 L. ed. 1102, 1107, 1108, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. 201 U. S. 529, 540, 541, 50 L. ed. 854, 859, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Omaha Water Co. v. Omaha, supra; Santa Ana Water Co. v. San Buenaventura, 56 Fed. 339; State ex rel. St. Louis v. Laclede Gaslight Co. 102 Mo. 485, 22 Am. St. Rep. 789, 14 S. W. 974, 15 S. W. 383; Bessemer v. Bessemer Waterworks (Ala.) 44 So. 663.

The charter expressly confers the power to fix and determine rates for a definite period.

7 Words & Phrases, p. 641; 3 Words & Phrases, p. 829; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 383-385, 397, 46 L. ed. 592, 606, 607, 611, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

The fixing and determining of rates for a definite period is neither an abandonment or a suspension of the power to regulate by the exercise of it.

Bessemer v. Bessemer Waterworks, supra; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 206 U. S. 510, 51 L. ed. 1161, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; Stone v. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. 62 Miss. 607, 52 Am. Rep. 193; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 50 L. ed. 204, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100.

In California the right of a municipality to make a contract for a term of years, controlling the further exercise of legislative or governmental power over its subject-matter during such term, is judicially established.

McBean v. Fresno, 112 Cal. 161, 31 L.R.A. 794, 53 Am. St. Rep. 191, 44 Pac. 358; Contra Costa Water Co. v. Breed, 139 Cal. 432, 73 Pac. 189; Doland v. Clark, 143 Cal. 176, 76 Pac. 958; Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed. 720, 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Santa Ana Water v. San Buenaventura, supra.

The contemporaneous construction of the Broughton act and of the powers of the city under its charter are controlling.

Railroad Comrs. v. Market Street R. Co. 132 Cal. 680, 64 Pac. 1065; McPherson v. Blacker, 146 U. S. 27, 36 L. ed. 874, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Packard v. Richardson, 17 Mass. 143, 9 Am. Dec. 123; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 386, 21 N. E. 890; Woods v. Potter (Cal. App.) 95 Pac. 1126; Omaha Water Co. v. Omaha, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 736, 77 C. C. A. 267, 147 Fed. 1; Port Huron v. McCall, 46 Mich. 565, 10 N. W. 23; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368-398, 46 L. ed. 592, 611, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

The fixing of rates to be charged by public utilities corporations has often been said to be judicial in its nature, when exercised by a board or municipality.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633; Spring Valley Waterworks Co. v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 384, 28 L. ed. 173, 186, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Cleveland Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Cleveland, 71 Fed. 614; Agua Pura Co. v. Las Vegas, 10 N. M. 6, 50 L.R.A. 224, 60 Pac. 208; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McChord, 103 Fed. 224; Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 156 Fed. 829; Mercantile Trust Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co. 51 Fed. 542; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

The power to regulate rates of public utilities is akin to the power of taxation and of eminent domain, and the authorities concerning the constitutionality of acts of legislatures authorizing the levying of taxes and the condemnation of property are in point when construing the constitutionality of an act authorizing a municipality to fix rates.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 567, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 594; Consolidated Gas Co. v. New York, 157 Fed. 875; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 168, 174, 41 L. ed. 392, 394, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56.

There is a wide difference between a tax or assessment prescribed by a legislative body having full authority over the subject, and one imposed by a municipal corporation acting under a limited and delegated authority; and the difference is still wider between a legislative act making an assessment, and the act of mere functionaries whose authority is derived from municipal ordinances. Where the legislature has submitted these questions for inquiry to a commission, or to official persons to be appointed under municipal ordinances or regulations, the inquiry becomes in its nature judicial in such a sense that the property owner is entitled to a hearing, or to notice, or an opportunity to be heard.
53 L. ed.

Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 47, 51, 52, 42 L. ed. 944, 946, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

The act authorizing the levying of an assessment must itself provide for notice; and it is of no avail that notice is given when not provided for by the act.

Stuart v. Palmer, supra; Kuntz v. Sumption, 117 Ind. 1, 2 L.R.A. 655, 19 N. E. 474; Ferry v. Campbell, 110 Iowa, 290, 50 L.R.A. 92, 81 N. W. 604; Re Union College, 129 N. Y. 308, 29 N. E. 460; Remsen v. Wheeler, 105 N. Y. 573, 12 N. E. 564; Violett v. Alexandria, 92 Va. 561, 31 L.R.A. 382, 53 Am. St. Rep. 825, 23 S. E. 909; Re Grout, 34 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 231, 93 N. Y. Supp. 711; Mulligan v. Smith, 59 Cal. 230; Boorman v. Santa Barbara, 65 Cal. 313, 4 Pac. 31; Hutson v. Woodbridge Protection Dist. No. 1, 79 Cal. 90, 21 Pac. 435, 16 Pac. 549; Brandenstein v. Hoke, 101 Cal. 131, 35 Pac. 562; Lower Kings River Reclamation Dist. No. 531 v. Phillips, 108 Cal. 306, 39 Pac. 630, 41 Pac. 335.

The principle announced in the foregoing cases is applicable to a charter of a city.

Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Savannah, 96 Ga. 680, 23 S. E. 848.

The mayor and council to whom it is claimed is referred the power to fix rates in the city of Los Angeles is not an impartial tribunal nor a freely deliberative body.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Cleveland Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Cleveland, 71 Fed. 612; Mills v. Chicago, 127 Fed. 734; Agua Pura Co. v. Las Vegas, supra.

A classification by which the power to fix rates for a telephone company is given to a municipality is denying the equal protection of the law.

Darcy v. San José, 104 Cal. 642, 38 Pac. 500; Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 248, 27 Pac. 604; State ex rel. Garner v. Missouri &

K. Teleph. Co. 189 Mo. 83, 88 S. W. 42; Guthrie, 14th Amend. 110, 111, 114; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 160, 41 L. ed. 666, 670, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cotting v. Kansas City Stockyards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 105, 46 L. ed. 92, 107, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Builders' Supply Depot v. O'Connor, 150 Cal. 265, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 909, 119 Am. St. Rep. 193, 88 Pac. 982.

Classifying companies by name for rate regulation purposes is not a proper classification.

Cooley Const. Lim. 484, 486, 487; Stratton Claimants v. Morris Claimants (Dibrell v. Lanier) 89 Tenn. 497, 12 L.R.A. 70, 15 S. W. 87; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 155, 41 L. ed. 666, 668, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. McChord, 103 Fed. 216.

Arbitrary exercise of the police power which tends to build up one company at the expense of a rival will be restrained by the courts.

Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 238, 49 L. ed. 169, 176, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

Mr. Leslie R. Hewitt argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John W. Shenk and W. B. Mathews, filed a brief for appellees:

The following conclusions are deducible from and sustained by the decisions of the supreme court of California:

First: A freeholders' charter may contain provisions that include powers properly belonging to the state, exercisable by the legislature in the form of general laws. The only limitation in that domain placed, or that ever was placed, upon freeholders' charters, is that their provisions were subject to and controlled by general laws.

Second: The very language of the Constitution (§ 6, art. XI.) contemplates that matters other than "municipal affairs" might be provided for in a freeholders' charter.

Third: That if a power within the sphere of state action and exercisable by the legislature is embodied in such charter, nevertheless such power is perfectly valid, and remains in the city until the legislature takes that power from the city by enacting a general law upon the subject. When such a power is delegated to a city in a freeholders' charter, it is not invalid on any theory that it is a power the state cannot abdicate; it is incident to the grant of power to frame a charter for city government, and is valid until superseded by the state.

Fourth: The doctrine that powers not strictly incident or necessary to the city government cannot be delegated to a city under a freeholders' charter does not prevail in California. On the contrary, such a power is capable of being so delegated, and its exercise by the city is valid until the state steps in and resumes that which it has extended to the city.

Davies v. Los Angeles, 86 Cal. 37, 24 Pac. 771; Martin v. Election Comrs. 126 Cal. 404, 58 Pac. 932; Miner v. Justice's Court, 121 Cal. 266, 53 Pac. 795; Ex parte Sparks, 120 Cal. 395, 52 Pac. 715; People ex rel. Lawlor v. Williamson, 135 Cal. 417, 67 Pac. 504; Ex parte Braun, 141 Cal. 204, 74 Pac. 780; Fritz v. San Francisco, 132 Cal. 373, 64 Pac. 566; Popper v. Broderick, 123 Cal. 456, 56 Pac. 53; Byrne v. Drain, 127 Cal. 663, 60 Pac. 433; Morton v. Broderick, 118 Cal. 474, 50 Pac. 644; Weaver v. Reddy, 135 Cal. 430, 67 Pac. 683; Ex parte Helm, 143 Cal. 553, 77 Pac. 453; Ex parte Lemon, 143 Cal. 558, 65 L.R.A. 946, 77 Pac. 455; Ex parte Jackson, 143 Cal. 564, 77 Pac. 457; Re Pfahler, 150 Cal. 71, 11 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1092, 88 Pac. 270; Frangley v. Phelan, 126 Cal. 383, 58 Pac. 923. See also 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. pp. 39, 165, §§ 20, 102; 28 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 153; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 149 U. S. 465, 467, 468, 37 L. ed. 810, 812, 813, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990.

Appellant's contention that there is no provision of law in California by which municipalities in general can guard themselves against undue charges for telegraph and telephone service, except the power to agree upon maximum rates in the sale of a franchise under the "Broughton act," is unfounded.

Denninger v. Recorder's Court, 145 Cal. 629, 79 Pac. 360.

The appellant acquired its franchise with notice of the city's charter power under § 31, and that such power might be exercised at any time.

St. Louis v. United Railways Co. 210 U. S. 266, 52 L. ed. 1054, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 630.

The power of the city of Los Angeles to fix telephone rates is a continuing one, and the city is not bound to refrain from the exercise of that power in the matter of readjusting, by ordinance, the rates which had been prescribed in its franchise. Even if it had been the express intention of the city council to fix rates once for all, to be charged by appellant, such action on the part of the city council would amount to the abrogation of a chartered power, which is impossible under any circumstances here appearing.

Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Danville Water Co. v. Danville City, 180 U. S. 619, 45 L. ed. 696, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505; Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 180 U. S. 624, 45 L. ed. 702, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490;

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 295; Milhau v. Sharp, 17 Barb. 435; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Owensboro v. Owensboro Waterworks Co. 191 U. S. 370, 48 L. ed. 224, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 82; Buffalo East Side R. Co. v. Buffalo Street R. Co. 111 N. Y. 132, 2 L.R.A. 384, 19 N. E. 63; Brick Presby. Church v. New York, 5 Cow. 538.

Contracts are presumed to have been entered into with reference to the laws then in force, which therefore are to be deemed as forming a portion of their essence, and with reference to which they are to be construed.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 274; Stohr v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 82 Cal. 557, 22 Pac. 1125; Pignaz v. Burnett, 119 Cal. 160, 51 Pac. 48.

When the legislature acts directly in establishing rates, no notice and hearing are necessary.

Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468.

One is charged with notice of a fact who has information putting him on inquiry, if, by following up such information with diligence and understanding, the truth could have been ascertained.

Jennings v. Todd, 118 Mo. 296, 40 Am. St. Rep. 373, 24 S. W. 148.

A rate which might be fair for one company would be very unjust if equally applied to another. There are conditions which require the adjustment of rates according to the circumstances of each company, and objection to an ordinance cannot be sustained merely because another ordinance, relating to another company, fixes different rates, even though the maximum rates prescribed for the other company are greater. The question must be confined to the reasonableness and fairness of the rates fixed in the ordinance objected to.

Chicago v. Chicago Union Traction Co. 199 Ill. 259, 59 L.R.A. 666, 65 N. E. 243.

The objection to conferring upon municipal legislative bodies or other boards the rate-fixing power, on the ground that they are interested parties, is not a new one. The question has, however, been passed upon by this court and settled.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

It is quite true that a provision providing for the "recall" of public officers, including councilmen, has been adopted by the people of Los Angeles as a part of the charter of the city. But that is the concern of the people, and the validity of the "recall" was assumed by the supreme court in a case which arose out of the exercise of that provision against a member of the council. The case was decided upon an issue that did not directly involve the validity of the "recall" provisions of the charter, but they were treated as though valid.

Davenport v. Los Angeles, 146 Cal. 508, 80 Pac. 684.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity brought in the circuit court of the United States by the appellant, a telephone company, against the city of Los Angeles and its officers. The object of the suit is to restrain the enforcement of certain ordinances which fixed the rates to be charged for telephone service; required every person, firm, or corporation supplying telephone service to furnish annually to the city council a statement of the revenue from, and expenditures in, the business, and an itemized inventory of the property used in the business, with its cost and value; and provided a penalty for charges in excess of the rates fixed and for failure to furnish the required statements. The defendants demurred to the bill, the demurrer was sustained, and an appeal was taken directly to this court on the constitutional questions, which will be stated.

The ordinances complained of were enacted by virtue of the powers contained in § 31 of the city charter, which is as follows:

"(Sec. 31.) The council shall have power, by ordinance, to regulate and provide for lighting of streets, laying down gas pipes, and erection of lamp-posts, electric towers, and other apparatus, and to regulate the sale and use of gas and electric *light, and [271 fix and determine the price of gas and electric light, and the rent of gas meters within the city and regulate the inspection thereof, and to regulate telephone service, and the use of telephones within the city, and to fix and determine the charges for telephones and telephone service and connections; and to prohibit or regulate the erection of poles for telegraph, telephone, or electric wire in the public grounds, streets, or alleys, and the placing of wire thereon; and to require the removal from the public grounds, streets, or alleys of any or all such poles, and the removal and placing under ground of any or all telegraph, telephone, or electric wires."

It was decided by the judge of the court below, and is agreed by the parties, that this section of the charter conferred upon the city council, in conformity with the Constitution and laws of the state of California, the power to prescribe charges for telephone service. Not doubting the correctness of this view, we accept it without extended discussion. The power to fix, subject to constitutional limits, the charges of such a business as the furnishing to the public of telephone service, is among the powers of government, is legislative in its character, continuing in its nature, and capable of being vested in a municipal corporation.

The company, however, insists that the city, having the authority so to do, has contracted with it that it may maintain the charges for service at a specified standard, and that, as the rates prescribed in the ordinances complained of are less than that standard, the ordinances therefore impair the obligation of the contract, in violation of the Constitution of the United States. This is the first question to be considered, and the facts out of which the contention arises are alleged in the bill and admitted by the demurrer.

The company obtained its franchise under the provisions of a statute of the state enacted March 11, 1901 (Stat. 1901, p. 265), which was later than the adoption of § 31 of the city charter. This statute provides 272] that, among other franchises, "the franchise "to erect or lay telephone wires . . . upon any public street or highway" shall be granted by municipal corporations only upon the conditions prescribed in the act. The conditions enumerated are that an application for the franchise shall be filed with the governing body of the municipality, of which advertisement, in the discretion of the city council, shall be made; that the advertisement must describe the character of the franchise to be granted and state that it will be sold to the highest bidder, who must pay annually to the municipality, after five years, 2 per cent of the gross annual receipts of the business; that the franchise shall be struck off to the highest bidder; and that a bond must be given by the purchaser to secure the performance of "every term and condition" of the franchise. There are other provisions not material here. By proceedings conforming to this statute a franchise to construct and operate a telephone system for fifty years was sold to M. Adrian King, which, by assignment, assented to by the city, came into the hands of the plaintiff company, which constructed the works and has since operated them. The franchise was granted by an ordinance. In the view we take of the case we need do no more than state very briefly the main features of the ordinance. It grants a franchise for fifty years, which is to be enjoyed in accordance with terms and conditions named, stipulates for certain free service for the city, and the payment to it, after five years, of 2 per cent of the gross receipts, and provides that the charges for service shall not exceed specified amounts.

This ordinance, enacted by the city council, which exercises the legislative and business powers of the city, and, as has been shown, the charter power of regulating telephone service and of fixing the charges, contains, it is contended, the contract whose obligation the subsequent ordinances fixing lower rates impaired. Two questions obviously arise here. Did the city council have the power to enter into a contract fixing, unalterably, during the term of the franchise, charges for telephone service, and disabling itself from exercising the charter *power of regulation? If so, was such [273 a contract in fact made? The first of these two questions calls for earlier consideration, for it is needless to consider whether a contract in fact was made until it is determined whether the authority to make the contract was vested in the city. The surrender, by contract, of a power of government, though in certain well-defined cases it may be made by legislative authority, is a very grave act, and the surrender itself, as well as the authority to make it, must be closely scrutinized. No other body than the supreme legislature (in this case, the legislature of the state) has the authority to make such a surrender, unless the authority is clearly delegated to it by the supreme legislature. The general powers of a municipality or of any other political subdivision of the state are not sufficient. Specific authority for that purpose is required. This proposition is sustained by all the decisions of this court, which will be referred to hereafter, and we need not delay further upon this point.

It has been settled by this court that the state may authorize one of its municipal corporations to establish, by an inviolable contract, the rates to be charged by a public service corporation (or natural person) for a definite term, not grossly unreasonable in point of time, and that the effect of such a contract is to suspend, during the life of the contract, the governmental power of fixing and regulating the rates. Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 382, 46 L. ed. 592, 605, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 206 U. S. 496, 508, 51 L. ed. 1155, 1160, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762. But for the very reason that such a contract has the effect of extinguishing pro tanto an undoubted power of government, both its existence and the authority to make it must clearly and unmistakably appear, and all doubts must be resolved in favor of the continuance of the power. Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 561, 7 L. ed. 939, 955;

Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 325, 29 L. ed. 636, 642, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. v. Dennis, 116 U. S. 665, 29 L. ed. 770, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 599, 611, 45 L. ed. 679, 688, 693, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 211, 48 L. ed. 406, 412, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 50 L. ed. 65, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705. And see Water, Light, 274] & Gas *Co. v. Hutchinson, 207 U. S. 385, 52 L. ed. 257, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135. It is obvious that no case, unless it is identical in its facts, can serve as a controlling precedent for another, for differences, slight in themselves, may, through their relation with other facts, turn the balance one way or the other. Illustrations of the truth of this may be found in the cases of Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, supra; Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 180 U. S. 624, 45 L. ed. 702, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; and Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 189 U. S. 434, 47 L. ed. 887, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531, where no authorized contract was found, as contrasted with Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. supra, and Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 48 L. ed. 1102, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756, where a contrary conclusion was reached.

The facts in this case which seem to us material upon the questions of the authority of the city to contract for rates to be maintained during the term of the franchise are as follows: The charter gave to the council the power "by ordinance . . . to regulate telephone service and the use of telephones within the city, . . . and to fix and determine the charges for telephones and telephone service and connections." This is an ample authority to exercise the governmental power of regulating charges, but it is no authority to enter into a contract to abandon the governmental power itself. It speaks in words appropriate to describe the authority to exercise the governmental power, but entirely unfitted to describe the authority to contract. It authorizes command, but not agreement. Doubtless, an agreement as to rates might be authorized by the legislature to be made by ordinance. But the ordinance here described was not an ordinance to agree upon the charges, but an ordinance "to fix and determine the charges." It authorizes the exercise of the governmental power and nothing else. We find no other provision in the charter which, by any possibility, can be held to authorize a contract upon this important and vital subject. Those relied on for that purpose are printed in the margin.†

*This being the condition of the charter powers, the act of 1901, under which the company derived its franchise, was passed.

†Section 2 (article 1).

"(12) To manage, control, sell, lease, or otherwise dispose of any or all the property of the said corporation; and to appropriate the income or proceeds thereof to the use of the said corporation; provided that it shall have no power to mortgage or hypothecate its property for any purpose.

"(17.) To provide and maintain a proper and efficient fire department, and make and adopt such measures, rules, and regulations for the prevention and extinguishment of fires, and for the preservation of property endangered thereby, as may be deemed expedient.

"(22.) To make and enforce within its limits such local police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws and are deemed expedient to maintain the public peace, protect property, promote the public morals, and to preserve the health of its inhabitants.

"(23.) To exercise all municipal powers necessary to the complete and efficient management and control of the municipal property, and for the efficient administration of the municipal government, whether such powers be expressly enumerated herein or not, except such powers as are forbidden or are controlled by general law.

"(24.) The powers conferred by this article shall be exercised by ordinance, except as hereinafter provided.

"(Section 12, article 3.) All legislative power of the city is vested in the council, subject to the power of veto and approval by the mayor, as hereinafter given, and shall be exercised by ordinance; other action of the council may be by order upon motion.

"(Sec. 16.) Six members of the council shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but no ordinance shall be passed or other act done granting a franchise, making any contract, auditing any bill, ordering any work to be done, or supplies to be furnished, disposing of or leasing the city property, ordering any assessment for street improvement, or building sewers, or any other act to be done involving the payment of money, or the incurring of debt by the city, unless two-thirds of the members of the whole council vote in favor thereof. All other ordinances may be passed by a vote of a majority of the whole council.

"(Sec. 33.) It shall, by ordinance, provide for maintaining a fire alarm and police telegraph system, and for the cleaning and sprinkling of graded and accepted streets."

The 1st section of that act provided that franchises "shall be granted upon the conditions in this act provided, and not otherwise." Here is an emphatic caution against 276]reading *into the act any conditions which are not clearly expressed in the act itself. In view of this language it cannot be supposed that the legislature intended that so significant and important an authority as that of contracting away a power of regulation conferred by the charter should be inferred from the act, in the absence of a grant in express words. But there is no such grant. The argument of the appellant, that the authority was granted, is based upon the provisions of the act that an application for the franchise must be filed, and, in the discretion of the council, published; that the publication must state "the character of the franchise;" that the city is entitled to a percentage of the receipts; that the grantee must give bond to perform "every term and condition of such franchise;" that no condition shall be inserted which restricts competition or favors one person against another; and that the franchise must be sold to the highest bidder. It is urged that though authority to contract for the maintenance of rates is not expressed in the act, it is necessarily implied from these provisions. But we are of the opinion that there is no such necessary implication, even if anything less than a clear and affirmative expression would be sufficient foundation upon which to rest an authority of this nature. The decisions of this court, upon which the appellant relies, where a contract of this kind was found and enforced, all show unmistakably legislative authority to enter into the contract. In Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. '886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736, the contract was in specific terms ratified and confirmed by the legislature. In Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410, the contract was made in obedience to an act of the legislature that the rates should be "established by agreement between said company and the corporate authorities." The opinion of the court, after saying (p. 277) [382], "it may be conceded that clear authority from the legislature is needed to enable the city to make a contract or agreement like the ordinances in question, including rates of fare," pointed out (p. 386) that "it was made matter of agreement by the express command of the legislature." In Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 48 L. ed. 1102, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756, the legislative authority conferred upon the municipality was described in the opinion of the court (p. 534) as "comprehensive power to contract with street railway companies in respect to the terms and conditions upon which such roads might be constructed, operated, extended, and consolidated." In Cleveland v. Cleveland Electric R. Co. 201 U. S. 529, 50 L. ed. 854, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513, precisely the same authority appeared. In Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 206 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 1155, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762, the court said (p. 508): "The grant of legislative power upon its face is unrestricted, and authorizes the city 'to provide for the erection and maintenance of a system of waterworks to supply said city with water, and to that end to contract with a party or parties who shall build and operate waterworks.'" Moreover, in this case the construction of the supreme court of Mississippi of its own statutes was followed. On the other hand, it was held in Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, that two acts of the legislature, passed on successive days, authorizing municipalities to "contract for a supply of water for public use for a period not exceeding thirty years," and to authorize private persons to construct waterworks "and maintain the same at such rates as may be fixed by ordinance, and for a period not exceeding thirty years," did not confer an authority upon the municipality to contract that the water company should be exempt from the exercise of the governmental power to regulate rates. In this case, too, the construction of the highest court of the state was followed. See Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, supra. All these cases agree that the legislative authority to the municipality to make the contract must clearly and unmistakably appear. It does not so appear in the case at bar. The appellant has failed to show that the city had legislative authority to make *a contract of exemption from the exer-[278 cise of the power of regulation conferred in the charter. It therefore becomes unnecessary to consider whether such a contract in fact was made. The appellant's contention, that there was a violation of the obligation of its contract, must therefore be denied.

The appellant also contends that the ordinances fixing rates are wanting in due process of law, and therefore violate the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, because the section (31) of the charter, under whose authority they were enacted, does not expressly provide for notice and hearing before action. But rate regulation is purely a legislative function and, even where exercised by a subordinate body upon which it is conferred, the notice and hearing essential in judicial proceedings and, for peculiar reasons, in some forms of taxation (see Londoner v. Denver, 210 U.

S. 373, 52 L. ed. 1103, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708), would not seem to be indispensable. It may be that the authority to regulate rates, conferred upon the city council by § 31 of the charter, is not an authority, arbitrarily, and without investigation, to fix rates of charges, and that, if charges were fixed in that manner, the act would be beyond the authority of the council. It is not unlikely that the California courts would give this construction to the ordinance. San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633. Acting within the authority thus limited it would seem that the character and extent of the investigation made and notice and hearing afforded, in the exercise of this legislative function; would be left to the discretion of the body exercising it. It must not be forgotten that, presumably, the courts of the states, and certainly the courts of the United States, are open to those who complain that their property has been confiscated by an act of regulation of this kind, and that the latter courts will, under all circumstances, determine for themselves whether such confiscation exists. But we need not now decide whether notice and hearing were required. Both were given in this case. An ordinance of the city provided that the rates should be fixed at a regular and special meeting of the city council *held during the month of February of each year, and another ordinance, as has been shown, required the telephone company to render annually, in the month of February, to the city council, a statement of its receipts, expenditures, and property employed in the business,—facts which would be material on the question of fixing reasonable rates. This shows that a sufficient notice and hearing were afforded to the appellant, if it had chosen to avail itself of them, instead of declining to furnish all information, as it did. If notice and an opportunity to be heard were indispensable, which we do not decide, it is enough that, although the charter be silent, such notice and hearing were afforded by ordinance, as in this case. So, it was held in Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 38, 37 L. ed. 637, 640, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750, and it was held in San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804, that the kind of notice and hearing (in that case provided by statute) which the ordinance in this case afforded was sufficient. For these reasons the contention of the appellant on this part of the case is denied.

We do not understand that an objection to the ordinance requiring the statement of the appellant's receipts, expenditures, and property is made, except in so far as it is a step in the rate-making process. If a further objection is made, we see nothing in it. See San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, supra.

The appellant further insists that the city council is not an impartial tribunal, because, in effect, it is a judge in its own case. It is too late, however, after the many decisions of this court which have either decided or recognized that the governing body of a city may be authorized to exercise the rate-making function, to ask for a reconsideration of that proposition. In this connection the appellant calls attention to the fact that, by the charter of the city, 25 per cent of the electors may recall a member of the council and require him again to stand for election. Nevertheless, he takes part in the rate-making function under his personal responsibility as an officer, and it cannot be presumed, as matter of law, that the *keener sense of dependence upon the [280] will of the people which this feature of his tenure of office brings to him will distort his judgment and sense of justice. It would be conceivable, of course, that the members of the legislature themselves might be subjected to the same process of recall, but it hardly would be contended that that fact would lessen the legislative power vested in them by the Constitution and laws of the state. The charter of the city also contains a provision that, upon petition of 15 per cent of the voters of the city, any ordinance proposed must be submitted to the people and may be by them adopted. It is said, therefore, that the power of rate regulation might be, in this manner, exercised directly by the electorate at large. It may well be doubted whether such a result was contemplated by the legislature. There are certainly grave objections to the exercise of such a power, requiring a careful and minute investigation of facts and figures, by the general body of the people, however intelligent and right-minded. But the ordinance was not adopted in this manner in this case, and it will be time enough for the courts of the states and of the United States to consider, when that is done, whether the objections only go to the expediency of such a method of regulation, or reach deeper and affect its constitutionality.

Passing the questions of power, the appellant contends that it was denied the equal protection of the laws because, contemporaneously with the fixing of rates for it, different rates were fixed for another telephone company doing business within the city. The only information we have on the subject is in the allegations of the bill, that a competitor of the complainant engaged in like business was allowed to charge for telephone service sums greatly in excess of those prescribed by the ordinance, and that these rates discriminated against the complainant and deprived it of the equal protection of the laws. An important question is thus suggested, but we think the allegations are so vague that we cannot pass upon it. Whether the two companies operated in the same territory, *or afforded equal facilities for communication, or rendered the same services, does not appear. For aught that appears, the other company may have brought its patrons into communication with a very much larger number of persons dwelling in a much more widely-extended territory, and rendered very much more valuable services. In other words, a just ground for classification may have existed. Every presumption should be indulged in favor of the constitutionality of the legislation. In Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 392, 40 L. ed. 188, 193, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43, 46, it was said: "But, in determining whether the legislature, in a particular enactment, has passed the limits of its constitutional authority, every reasonable presumption must be indulged in favor of the validity of such enactment. It must be regarded as valid unless it can be clearly shown to be in conflict with the Constitution. It is a well-settled rule of constitutional exposition that, if a statute may or may not be, according to circumstances, within the limits of legislative authority, the existence of the circumstances necessary to support it must be presumed."

It is to be taken into account in considering this, as well as other questions, that the appellant has declined to furnish to the council facts within its knowledge which would enable the council to exercise their powers intelligently and justly, and that there is no suggestion in the case at bar that the rates actually fixed were so low as to operate as a practical confiscation of property.

For the foregoing reasons we are of the opinion that the action of the court below in sustaining the demurrer was correct, and the decree is affirmed.

282]*HONOLULU RAPID TRANSIT & LAND COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

TERRITORY OF HAWAII, by Charles R.
Hemenway, Attorney General of the Territory of Hawaii.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 282-293.)

Courts — relation to other departments of government.

The enforcement of the continuance by a 186

Hawaiian street railway company of a ten-minute schedule on certain of its lines, upon the ground that the public convenience demands such a schedule, is not within the limits of the judicial power, and is totally inconsistent with the power to regulate the management of the street railway in this respect, which is ultimately vested by Haw. Rev. Laws, § 843, and Session Laws 1905, act No. 78, in the executive authorities.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 412.]

Argued and submitted November 6, 1908.
Decided November 30, 1908.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of the First Judicial Circuit, in that territory, enjoining a street railway company from reducing its service on certain of its lines. Reversed.

See same case below, 18 Haw. 553.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. David L. Withington argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Aldis B. Browne, Alexander Britton, W. R. Castle, and A. Perry, filed a brief for appellant:

The officers specifically charged with the duties of inspection and control should be the only officers authorized to initiate proceedings for a violation of its provisions.

Bird v. Merchants' Teleph. Co. 1 Rap. Jud. Quebec, 5 C. S. 445; State ex rel. Chandler v. Manchester & L. R. Co. 62 N. H. 29; State v. Mobile & M. R. Co. 59 Ala. 321; Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, 27 L. ed. 468, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91; Anonymous, 2 Ld. Raym. 989.

This power of fixing time schedules and of regulation of other details of the operation of street railways is oftentimes left with the common councils of cities.

New York v. Dry Dock, E. B. & B. R. Co. 133 N. Y. 104, 28 Am. St. Rep. 609, 30 N. E. 563; State ex rel. Knight v. Helena Power & Light Co. 22 Mont. 393, 44 L.R.A. 692, 56 Pac. 685; Nellis, Street Surface Railroads, p. 205; People v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 116 Mich. 132, 74 N. W. 520.

Legislative authority would be necessary in order to give power to courts to render a judgment of this kind.

Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 297, 45 L. ed. 199, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

NOTE. — On relation of the courts to the Executive—see notes to Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 53, and Bates v. Taylor, 3 L.R.A. 316.

Mr. Charles R. Hemenway submitted the cause for appellee:

The construction placed upon this franchise by the local courts is entitled to great weight in this court.

Kawananakoa v. Polyblank, 205 U. S. 349, 51 L. ed. 834, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Kealoha v. Castle, 210 U. S. 149, 153, 52 L. ed. 998, 1001, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 684; Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. v. Territorial Bd. of Equalization, 206 U. S. 474, 51 L. ed. 1143, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant, hereafter called the transit company, was incorporated by a law of the territory of Hawaii. Revised Laws of 287]Hawaii, chap. 66, *§§ 835 to 871. The corporation was granted the right to construct and operate a street railway for a term of thirty years in the district of Honolulu. The character of the construction was, in part, expressly prescribed by the statute, and, in some details, left to be determined by the transit company, subject to the approval of the superintendent of public works. Section 841 enacted that—

"The said association . . . shall at all times maintain a sufficient number of cars to be used upon said railway for the carriage of passengers as public convenience may require, and such other cars designed for the carriage of mails, parcels, and goods as they may deem necessary."

It was provided that, after paying from the income certain charges, including a dividend of 8 per cent on the stock, the excess of the income should be divided equally between the territory and the stockholders, and that "the entire plant, operation, books, and accounts . . . shall, from time to time, be subject to the inspection of the superintendent of public works." Section 868. In certain parts of the field of operation a maximum rate of fare was established by the statute, and in certain other parts it was left to the transit company to fix, subject to the approval of the governor. It was provided by § 843, paragraph 4, that—

"The said association . . . shall make reasonable and just regulations with the consent and approval of the governor regarding the maintenance and operation of said railway on and through said streets and roads; and the said association . . . failing to make such rules and regulations, the superintendent of public works, with the approval of the governor, may make them. All rules and regulations may be changed from time to time as the public interests may demand, at the discretion of the governor."

53 L. ed.

The railway was constructed and its operation was in progress. On certain streets of its line the transit company had been running cars at intervals of ten minutes. It proposed to discontinue this schedule and 288]established one with *somewhat longer intervals, and had applied to the superintendent of public works for permission to lay the switches necessary to put the proposed schedule into convenient operation. Thereupon the territory, on the relation of its attorney general, brought, in one of the circuit courts of the territory, a suit in equity, in which an injunction was sought to prevent the company from running the cars in question at less frequent intervals than ten minutes. In the bill it was alleged that the convenience of the public required that the ten-minute schedule should be maintained and continued. The respondent answered, issue was joined by replication, evidence was taken, and the court found as a fact that the public convenience required the maintenance of the ten-minute schedule. An injunction against the change was accordingly granted. Upon appeal to the supreme court of the territory, the judgment of the lower court was affirmed, and findings of fact made, including the finding that the public convenience required the continuance of the ten-minute schedule. The transit company then appealed here, upon the ground, which is well taken, that the amount in controversy was more than $5,000.

The dispute between the parties is whether the courts of the territory had jurisdiction in equity to issue the injunction. The transit company contends that no such jurisdiction existed, and, in the alternative, that, if there was jurisdiction in the courts over the subject, it could only be exercised by mandamus. We think it unnecessary to consider the latter proposition, and confine ourselves to a consideration of the broad question whether the court had power, by any form of proceedings, thus to regulate and control the operations of the company. The courts below based the right to issue the injunction upon § 841, correctly interpreting that section as imposing the general duty upon the transit company to operate as well as to maintain such cars as the public convenience requires. The section, however, is not a specific direction to keep in force on the streets covered by the order *of the court a defined schedule,[289 with cars running at named intervals, and the right of a court to enforce by injunction or mandamus such a schedule need not be considered. But the action of the court below went much farther than this, and farther than is warranted by any decision which has been called to our attention. In the absence of a more specific and well-defined duty than that of running a sufficient number of cars to meet the public convenience, the court, in this case, inquired and determined, as matter of fact, what schedule the public convenience demanded on particular streets, and then, in substance and effect, compelled a compliance with that schedule. And this was done, though, as will be shown, the full power to regulate the management of the railway in this respect was vested by the statute in the executive authorities. In form the order of the court was a mere prohibition against a change of an existing schedule; but its substantial effect was to direct the transit company to operate its cars upon a schedule found to be required by the public convenience. The effect of the order is not changed by the fact that the schedule enforced by the order of the court is that upon which the transit company was then running its cars. The order of the court was not founded upon the consideration that the schedule was the one existing, although that was taken into account; but upon the fact that it was the one which the public convenience required. The question to be determined is whether a court, not invested with special statutory authority, nor having the property in its control by receivership, may, solely, by virtue of its general judicial powers, control to such an extent and in such detail the business of a transportation corporation. The question can be resolved by well-settled principles applicable to the subject. At the threshold the distinction between the case at bar and those cases where there is an enforcement of a specific and clearly-defined legal duty must be observed. This distinction was drawn and acted upon in the case of Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington Territory, 142 U. S. 492, 35 L. ed. 1092, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 283. In that case it appeared that the railroad company *was incorporated by an act of Congress, with power to construct and operate a railroad from Lake Superior to Puget sound, with a branch to Portland. The charter directed that the railroad should be constructed "with all the necessary . . . stations." The territory of Washington filed in the territorial court a petition for mandamus to compel the railroad company to erect and maintain a station at Yakima city, and to stop its trains at that point. The petition alleged, and the jury found, facts which warranted the inference that a station at Yakima city was desirable and necessary for the proper accommodation of traffic. Thereupon a writ of mandamus issued as prayed for, and, upon appeal, the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory. Upon writ of error this court reversed the judgment. In the opinion of the court, delivered by Mr. Justice Gray, it was said: "A writ of mandamus to compel a railroad corporation to do a particular act in constructing its road or buildings, or in running its trains, can be issued only when there is a specific legal duty on its part to do that act, and clear proof of a breach of that duty." And the charter direction, that the railroad should construct all necessary stations, was described as "but a general expression of what would be otherwise implied by law," and as not to "be construed as imposing any specific duty or as controlling the discretion in these respects of a corporation intrusted with such large discretionary powers upon the more important questions of the course and the termini of its road." (P. 500.) Accordingly it was held that the determination of the directors with regard to the number, place, and size of the station, having regard to the public convenience as well as the pecuniary interests of the corporation, could not be controlled by the courts by writ of mandamus. And see People ex rel. Linton v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 172 N. Y. 90, 64 N. E. 788.

The business conducted by the transit company is not purely private. It is of that class so affected by a public interest that it is subject, within constitutional limits, to the governmental power of regulation. This power of regulation *may be exercised to control, among other things, the time of the running of cars. It is a power legislative in its character, and may be exercised directly by the legislature itself. But the legislature may delegate to an administrative body the execution in detail of the legislative power of regulation. Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 393, 394, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 494, 42 L. ed. 243, 251, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896. We need not consider whether that legislative power may be conferred upon the courts of the territory, as it may be upon the courts of a state, so far as the Federal Constitution is concerned. Prentiss v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, ante, 150, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67. In this case the legislative power of regulation was not intrusted to the courts. On the contrary, it was clearly vested, by § 843, in the governor and the superintendent of public works. By that section the transit company was itself given authority, in the first instance, with the approval of the governor, to make reasonable and just regulations regarding the maintenance and operation of the railway through the streets. The operation of a railway consists very largely in the running of cars, and the right of the transit company, to regulate, in the first instance, the operation of its railway, clearly includes the power to decide upon time schedules. But the company cannot finally determine, as it chooses, the manner of operating its road in respect of the time, speed, and frequency of its cars. Its primary duty is to operate a sufficient number of cars to meet the public convenience. This duty would rest upon the company, even if it were not expressed, as it is, in § 841. If the company itself complies with its duty by just and reasonable regulations of its own, it is enough. If the company fails in the performance of the duty, its performance is secured in the manner pointed out in the latter part of § 843. The superintendent of public works may make, with the approval of the governor, just and reasonable regulations, and they may be changed from time to time, as the public interest may demand, at the discretion of the governor. Moreover, 292]by an *amendment of the charter (act 78, Session Laws 1905), the superintendent of public works may prescribe the speed of cars. The precise function, therefore, which was exercised by the courts below, is, by the statute, confided primarily to the transit company, and ultimately to the discretion of the governor and superintendent of public works. The courts have no right to intrude upon this function, and subject the company to a species of regulation which the statute does not contemplate. If the courts were held to have the powers which were assumed in this case it would lead to great embarrassment in the operation of the railway, and perhaps to distressing conflict. Can it be that the courts can dictate the frequency of the running of the cars, and the superintendent of public works their speed? If so, the lot of the company is indeed a hard one. The two incidents of operation are not only related, but inseparable. The authority which controls the one must control the other, or operation becomes impossible. Suppose, again, that the courts, upon hearing evidence, should be of opinion that one schedule is required for the public convenience, and the governor and superintendent of public works should be of opinion that another schedule would better subserve that convenience, which order must the company obey? Must it choose between the liability to punishment for contempt for disobeying the order of the court, and the liability to forfeiture of its franchise for failing to obey the order of the governor and superintendent of public works?† These and other like situations, which easily might *be imagined, are signal illustrations[293 of the importance of observing the boundaries between the judicial and legislative field, and of the confusion and injury which would follow from the failure to respect those boundaries. Nothing is decided as to the power of the courts to review the action of the superintendent or governor.

In our opinion, the injunction which was issued in this case, constituting in substance a regulation of the operation of the railway, was, in the first place, not within the limits of the judicial power, and, in the second place, totally inconsistent with the power of regulation vested unmistakably by the legislature in the executive authorities.

Decree reversed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE dissents.

—
MILLER & LUX, INCORPORATED, Appt.,
v.
EAST SIDE CANAL & IRRIGATION COM-PANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 293-306.)

Courts — jurisdiction — diverse citizenship — collusive incorporation.

Incorporation in Nevada by direction of a California corporation, for the sole purpose of having the matters in dispute between such California corporation and another corporation of that state determined in a Federal rather than in the state court, where they were pending and undetermined, must be regarded as an attempt collusively to make a party plaintiff simply for the purpose of creating a case cognizable by the Federal court, which, under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, 472, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 508, 511), § 5, requires the dismissal of the suit, where the new corporation assumes to be the owner of the property rights which the old company had asserted only that it may have a standing in the Federal court as a litigant in respect of those rights, and the old corporation can control the conduct of the suit brought by the new corporation at any time up to the date of the decree, and can require the new corporation, in the event of a decree in its favor, to transfer the benefit of such decree to the old corporation without any new or valuable consideration.

†Sec. 870. "Whenever the said association or any corporation which may have been duly organized under the laws of this territory for the purpose of constructing, operating, and maintaining the lines of railway mentioned in this chapter, and as by this chapter provided, refuses to do or fails to do or perform or carry out or comply with any act, matter, or thing requisite or required to be done under the provisions of this chapter, and shall continue so to refuse or fail to do or perform or carry out or comply therewith, after due notice by the superintendent of public works to comply therewith, the superintendent of public works shall, with the consent of the governor, cause proceedings to be instituted before the proper tribunal to have the franchise granted by this chapter and all rights and privileges granted hereunder, forfeited and declared null and void."

NOTE. — As to diverse citizenship, as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247; Mason v. Dullagham, 27 C. C. A. 296; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L.R.A. 216; Emory v. Greenough, 1 L. ed. U. S. 640; Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 2 L. ed. U. S. 435; M'Donald v. Smalley, 7 L. ed. U. S. 287; and Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

[For other cases, see Courts, 697, 698, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 518.]

Submitted October 13, 1908. Decided December 7, 1908.

APPPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of California to review a decree dismissing the bill in a suit between corporations of different states because of the collusive incorporation of the complainant. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward F. Treadwell submitted the cause for appellant:

The mere fact (if it be a fact) that complainant was formed and this property transferred to it for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction upon the Federal courts can in no way affect the jurisdiction of those courts.

Dickerman v. Northern Trust Co. 176 U. S. 181, 191, 44 L. ed. 423, 430, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; McDonald v. Smalley, 1 Pet. 620, 7 L. ed. 287; Smith v. Kernochen, 7 How. 198, 216, 12 L. ed. 666, 673; Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L. ed. 825; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 315, 328, 32 L. ed. 690, 694, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Cross v. Allen, 141 U. S. 528, 533, 35 L. ed. 843, 847, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 585, 36 L. ed. 552, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; Lake County v. Dudley, 173 U. S. 243, 254, 43 L. ed. 684, 689, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; South Dakota v. North Carolina, 192 U. S. 286, 310, 48 L. ed. 448, 457, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 448, 50 L. ed. 801, 821, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Briggs v. French, 2 Sumn. 251, Fed. Cas. No. 1,871; Case v. Clarke, 5 Mason, 70, Fed. Cas. No. 2,490; Van Dolsen v. New York, 17 Fed. 817; Neal v. Foster, 36 Fed. 41; Ashley v. Presque Isle County, 27 C. C. A. 585, 54 U. S. App. 450, 83 Fed. 537; Woodside v. Ciceroni, 35 C. C. A. 177, 93 Fed. 1; Collins v. Ashland, 112 Fed. 178; Adams v. Shirk, 55 C. C. A. 25, 117 Fed. 805; Cole v. Philadelphia & E. R. Co. 140 Fed. 946.

The transfer to the Nevada corporation was upon a valuable consideration, and consequently no trust resulted in favor of the California corporation.

Irvine Co. v. Bond, 74 Fed. 854.

The doctrine of resulting trusts has no possible application for many reasons: First, because when a deed declares a beneficial use to the grantee, it will prevent a trust resulting in favor of the grantor, although there was no valuable consideration to support the conveyance.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1125.

Secondly, when the conveyance recites a consideration, this is conclusive that the grantee is to take a beneficial estate. Ibid.

So there can be no resulting trust when a deed is executed in pursuance of a written agreement.

St. John v. Benedict, 6 Johns. Ch. 111.

It is perfectly obvious, therefore, that neither the California corporation nor the stockholders thereof have a right to compel a reconveyance of the property.

The dissolution or nondissolution of the California corporation is entirely immaterial.

The transfer to the Nevada corporation was an absolute one, without any understanding, express or implied, that the property should ever be reconveyed, and the case of Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 327, 40 L. ed. 444, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307, has no application to such a transfer.

It matters not how closely related two corporations may be, nor what similarity there may be in names, incorporators, stockholders, officers, and purposes, they will be considered distinct so far as Federal jurisdiction is concerned.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 552, 563, 43 L. ed. 1081, 1087, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 559, 40 L. ed. 802, 807, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 327, 347, 40 L. ed. 444, 451, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 136 U. S. 356, 373, 374, 379, 34 L. ed. 363, 367, 368, 370, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004; Muller v. Dows, 94 U. S. 444, 445, 24 L. ed. 207, 208; Goodwin v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 124 Fed. 364; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Meeh, 30 L.R.A. 250, 16 C. C. A. 510, 32 U. S. App. 691, 69 Fed. 755; Farnum v. Blackstone Canal Corp. 1 Sumn. 62, Fed. Cas. No.

4,675; Racine & M. R. Co. v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 49 Ill. 331, 95 Am. Dec. 595.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. James F. Peck was on the brief:

The circuit court properly disregarded the superficial aspect of complainant as a separate and distinct corporation. In determining the jurisdictional question it had the right to look through the web of the artificial corporate entity and find the real parties in interest.

Oriental Invest. Co. v. Barclay, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 558, 64 S. W. 88; Venner v. Great Northern R. Co. 209 U. S. 24, 52 L. ed. 666, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 327, 40 L. ed. 444, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307.

There appears, upon consideration of the whole transaction, such a beneficial and exclusive interest of the California corporation in the subject-matter of this suit, as to make it appear beyond a doubt that the suit is not really and substantially between citizens of different states.

Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 327-340, 40 L. ed. 444-449, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Waite v. Santa Cruz, 184 U. S. 325, 46 L. ed. 567, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327.

The removal was not with a bona fide intention of changing the corporate domicile.

Butler v. Farnsworth, 4 Wash. C. C. 103, Fed. Cas. No. 2,240; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 328, 329, 32 L. ed. 694, 695, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, supra.

So far as Federal jurisdiction is concerned, and for jurisdictional purposes in a case like this, the citizenship of the California corporation of Miller & Lux determines the question of Federal jurisdiction in this case.

Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 552, 563, 43 L. ed. 1081, 1087, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 559, 40 L. ed. 802, 807, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Goodwin v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 124 Fed. 371; Nashua & L. R. Corp. v. Boston & L. R. Corp. 136 U. S. 356, 373, 34 L. ed. 363, 367, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004; Smith v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 96 Fed. 507.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of California by "Miller & Lux, Incorporated," a corporation of Nevada, against the East Side Canal & Irrigation Company, a corporation of California, 53 L. ed.

The case is here upon a certificate under the act of Congress of March 3d, 1891, chap. 517, 26 Stat. at L. 826, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488, relating to the jurisdiction of the circuit court as affected by the 5th section of the act of March 3d, 1875, chap. 137, 18 Stat. at L. 470, 472, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 508, 511. That section provides that if, in any suit commenced in a circuit court, or removed from a state court to a circuit court of the United States, it shall appear at any time to the satisfaction of said circuit court that such suit "does not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy properly within the jurisdiction of said circuit court, or that the parties to said suit have been improperly or collusively made or joined, either as plaintiffs or defendants, *for the purpose of [297 creating a case cognizable or removable under this act, the said circuit court shall proceed no further therein, but shall dismiss the suit or remand it to the court from which it was removed, as justice may require, and shall make such order as to costs as shall be just; but the order of said circuit court dismissing or remanding said cause to the state court shall be reviewable by the Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal, as the case may be."

In stating the object and scope of that act this court in Williams v. Nottawa, 104 U. S. 209, 211, 26 L. ed. 719, 720, referred to the act of 1875 and said: "In extending a long way the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, Congress was specially careful to guard against the consequences of collusive transfers to make parties, and imposed the duty on the court, on its own motion, without waiting for the parties, to stop all further proceedings and dismiss the suit the moment anything of the kind appeared. This was for the protection of the court as well as parties against frauds upon its jurisdiction; for, as was very properly said by Mr. Justice Miller, speaking for the court, in Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 288, 18 L. ed. 825, 827, such transfers for such purposes are frauds upon the court, and nothing more."

In the answer of the defendant it is alleged that Miller & Lux, Incorporated, was organized as a corporation in Nevada, but to act only as an agent of "Miller & Lux," a corporation of California; but the California corporation was the owner of all the capital stock of Miller & Lux, Incorporated, which, as a corporation, had no existence except as a mere agency of Miller & Lux, the California corporation; that all the property held by the plaintiff was as such agent, in order that suits could be brought and prosecuted in the United States courts; and that the plaintiff does not transact any business or do any act or thing other than such as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of the California corporation, "except to hold title to property for the purpose of prosecuting suits in the United States courts."

To these allegations the plaintiff made special replication, *evidence was taken as to their truth, and the cause was submitted upon the issue thus made. The court found the allegation in the answer to be true; that the complainant held the title to the lands described in the bill for the purpose only of prosecuting and commencing this action in the circuit court of the United States, and that the lands were conveyed to plaintiff for that purpose; and it appearing to the satisfaction of the court that the Nevada corporation had been collusively made a party plaintiff for the purpose of creating a case cognizable by the circuit court of the United States, and that the suit did not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy within the jurisdiction of that court, the bill was dismissed.

It was established by the evidence and the court found as follows:

Henry Miller and Charles Lux were partners prior to and up to the death of Lux, one of the parties, which occurred March 15th, 1887.

In April, 1897, the heirs of the deceased partner and Miller, the surviving partner, wishing to have the partnership business liquidated and its assets distributed among those entitled thereto, made an agreement to form a corporation under the laws of California and transfer to it all the property of the partnership, each person to receive in lieu thereof capital stock proportioned to his interest in the partnership. Pursuant to that agreement the corporation of "Miller & Lux" was organized in California on the 5th day of May, 1897; to it was conveyed the property of the partnership, and the stock of the corporation was distributed as provided in the agreement.

On the 17th day of December, 1900, the California corporation of Miller & Lux commenced an action in the superior court of Merced county, California, against the present defendant, the East Side Canal & Irrigation Company, a California corporation. The object of that suit was to have the latter corporation perpetually enjoined from obstructing the natural flow of the waters of San Joaquin river and its branches, along and *bordering on which the California corporation of Miller & Lux claimed certain lands, as well as from interfering with the waters of that river above those lands and to their injury.

On the 12th day of June, 1905,—the above suit in the state court still being on the docket,—the California corporation and the stockholders owning more than two thirds of its capital stock entered into an agreement that they would at once form a corporation under the laws of Nevada with an authorized capital of $12,000,000,—all of such capital stock to be issued and be deemed fully paid up,—each director of the California corporation of Miller & Lux to be an incorporator of the Nevada corporation and to subscribe two shares of such capital stock, to be issued as fully paid-up stock of the new corporation.

That agreement stated that the laws of California were unsatisfactory and in many particulars uncertain and unsettled, "particularly as to dividends,—a matter of the most vital importance to us, and as to which litigation is now pending and undetermined." These difficulties, it was said, did not exist to the same extent under the laws of Nevada. Among the reasons assigned in the agreement for the formation of the Nevada corporation was the belief on the part of the stockholders of the California corporation, that their rights in litigated cases would be "most fully protected and conserved in the Federal courts, to which corporations formed in other states are entitled to resort."

The above agreement provided that, upon the formation of the Nevada corporation, all the property, real and personal, of the California corporation, should be transferred and conveyed to the Nevada Corporation, and that the capital stock of the latter corporation should be issued as fully paid-up stock to the California corporation; and that, after such transfer and conveyance were completed, and as soon as the law would permit, the California corporation should be dissolved by voluntary proceedings under the state Code of Civil Procedure of that state.

On the same day, June 12th, 1905, the parties to that agreement *signed and[300 acknowledged articles of incorporation for the proposed Nevada corporation of "Miller & Lux, Incorporated." All the capital stock of that corporation was issued to the California corporation. The directors of the California corporation became and are also the directors of the Nevada corporation. Each company had the same president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer, and offices at the same place. "Said corporation," it was found, "are the same in name, purposes, capitalization, directors, officers, office, and place of business."

On the 15th day of June, 1905, the California corporation of Miller & Lux directed the dismissal of the suit brought in the state court. And on the same day the present suit was brought in the circuit court of the United States in the name of the Nevada corporation against the East Side Canal & Irrigation Company. The relief sought was substantially the same as that sought in the suit instituted in the state court.

Process in the suit brought in the circuit court by the Nevada corporation was served on June 17th, 1905, and on the same day the California corporation formally dismissed its suit in the state court.

The California corporation had not been dissolved nor had it ceased to exist when the present suit was brought by the Nevada corporation. It was then in existence, with all of its powers unmodified. And it does not appear that any steps had or have been taken to disincorporate the California corporation. Nor can it be said when, if ever, that corporation will be dissolved.

We are of opinion that the court below did not err in dismissing the suit. The question raised by the record is substantially the same as that determined in Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 327, 336 et seq., 40 L. ed. 444, 447, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307. That was an action involving the title to certain lands in Virginia in the possession of citizens of that commonwealth, and of which lands a Virginia corporation claimed to be the owner. The individual stockholders and officers of the Virginia corporation organized a *corporation in Pennsylvania, to which the former corporation conveyed all its rights, title, and interest in the Virginia lands, without any valuable consideration. The stockholders in both corporations were identical. The admitted purpose of organizing the Pennsylvania corporation and conveying to it the lands there in question was to give the circuit court of the United States, sitting in Virginia, jurisdiction to determine the disputed controversy as to the lands. All this having been done, the Pennsylvania corporation instituted a suit in the Federal court in Virginia against the individual citizens of Virginia to recover the lands. When that suit was instituted, the Virginia corporation still existed, with the same stockholders it had at the time of the conveyance by it to the Pennsylvania corporation.

This court said that "the Virginia corporation still exists, with the same stockholders it had when the conveyance of March 1, 1893, was made; and that, as soon as this litigation is concluded, the Pennsylvania corporation, if it succeeds in obtaining judgment against the defendants, can be required by the stockholders of the Virginia corporation, being also its own stockholders, to reconvey the lands in controversy to the Virginia corporation without any consideration passing to the Pennsylvania corporation."

After referring to several cases, this court, among other things, also said: "In harmony with the principles announced in former cases, we hold that the circuit court properly dismissed this action. The conveyance to the Pennsylvania corporation was without any valuable consideration. It was a conveyance by one corporation to another corporation, the grantor representing certain stockholders, entitled collectively or as one body to do business under the name of the Virginia Coal & Iron Company, while the grantee represented the same stockholders, entitled collectively or as one body to do business under the name of the Lehigh Mining & Manufacturing Company. It is true that the technical legal title to the lands in controversy is, for the time, in the Pennsylvania *corporation. It is also true[302 that there was no formal agreement upon the part of that corporation 'as an artificial being, invisible, intangible, and existing only in contemplation of law,' that the title should ever be reconveyed to the Virginia corporation. But when the inquiry involves the jurisdiction of a Federal court,—the presumption in every stage of a cause being that it is without the jurisdiction of a court of the United States unless the contrary appears from the record (Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 278, 283, 27 L. ed. 932, 934, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Börs v. Preston, 111 U. S. 252, 255, 28 L. ed. 419, 420, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407),—we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that there exists what should be deemed an equivalent to such an agreement; namely, the right and power of those who are stockholders of each corporation to compel the one holding the legal title to convey, without a valuable consideration, such title to the other corporation. In other words, although the Virginia corporation, as such, holds no stock in the Pennsylvania corporation, the latter corporation holds the legal title, subject at any time to be divested of it by the action of the stockholders of the grantor corporation who are also its stockholders. The stockholders of the Virginia corporation,—the original promoters of the present scheme, and, presumably, when a question of the jurisdiction of a court of the United States is involved, citizens of Virginia,—in order to procure a determination of the controversy between that corporation and the defendant citizens of Virginia, in respect of the lands in that commonwealth which are here in dispute, assumed, as a body, the mask of a Pennsylvania corporation, for the purpose, and the purpose only, of invoking the jurisdiction of the circuit court of the United States, retaining the power, in their discretion, and after all danger of defeating the jurisdiction of the Federal court shall have passed, to throw off that mask and reappear under the original form of a Virginia corporation,—their right in the meantime to participate in the management of the general affairs of the latter corporation not having been impaired by the conveyance to the Pennsylvania corporation. And all this may be done, if the position of the plaintiffs 303] be *correct, without any consideration passing between the two corporations.” Observing that the Pennsylvania corporation received the technical legal title for the purpose only of bringing a suit in the Federal court, the court proceeded: “As we have said, that corporation may be required by those who are stockholders of its grantor, and who are also its own stockholders, at any time, and without receiving therefor any consideration whatever, to place the title where it was when the plan was formed to wrest the judicial determination of the present controversy from the courts of the state in which the land lies. It should be regarded as a case of an improper and collusive making of parties for the purpose of creating a case cognizable in the circuit court. If this action were not declared collusive, within the meaning of the act of 1875, then the provision making it the duty of the circuit court to dismiss a suit, ascertained at any time to be one in which parties have been improperly or collusively made or joined, for the purpose of creating a case cognizable by that court, would become of no practical value, and the dockets of the circuit courts of the United States will be crowded with suits of which neither the framers of the Constitution nor Congress ever intended they should take cognizance.”

The present case is controlled by the one just cited. The two cases are alike in all material respects. Looking at the facts as they were when this suit was instituted in the circuit court, it must be taken that the transfer of the property of the California corporation to the Nevada corporation was merely formal,—only a device by which to have the rights asserted by the California corporation in a state court determined by the Federal court rather than by the state court. The agreement that all the property of the California corporation should be transferred to the Nevada corporation was attended by the condition that all the capital stock of the new corporation should be issued—and it was issued—to the California corporation, which remained in existence with full power, as the owner of such stock, to control the operations of the *Nevada corporation. If, before the institution of this suit, the California corporation had distributed among those entitled to it the stock of the Nevada corporation, issued to it as fully paid-up stock, and had then ceased to exist or been dissolved, a different question might have been presented. But such is not this case. As the facts were, when this suit was brought, the California corporation could at any time, even after this suit was concluded, have required the Nevada corporation, without any new or valuable consideration, to surrender all its interest in the property which it had obtained from the California corporation for the purpose of acquiring a standing in the circuit court of the United States. In other words, the Nevada corporation had no real interest in the property. Its ownership was a sham, in that it could at any time after the bringing of this suit have been compelled by the California corporation to dismiss the suit and abandon all claim to the property in question. It took the title only as matter of form, in order that the California corporation, or the stockholders interested in it, might, under the name of the Nevada corporation, invoke the jurisdiction of the Federal court and avoid the determination of the rights of the parties in the courts of the state. Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 288, 18 L. ed. 825, 827. The prosecution of the suit was really for the benefit of those who were interested in the California corporation.

We do not intend by what has been said to qualify the general rule, long established, that the jurisdiction of a circuit court, when based on diverse citizenship, cannot be questioned upon the ground merely that a party's motive in acquiring citizenship in the state in which he sues was to invoke the jurisdiction of a Federal court. But that rule is attended by the condition that the acquisition of such citizenship is real, with the purpose to establish a permanent domicile in the state of which he professes to be a citizen at the time of suit, and not fictitious or pretended. Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 315, 328, 32 L. ed. 690, 694, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289. In that case the question was whether the plaintiff, who was residing with his adversary in Alabama, actually acquired such *a domicile in Tennessee as en- [305] titled him to bring suit in the Federal court, sitting in Alabama. This court said: “Upon the evidence in this record, we cannot resist the conviction that the plaintiff had no purpose to acquire a domicile or settled home in Tennessee, and that his sole object in removing to that state was to place himself in a situation to invoke the jurisdiction of the circuit court of the United States. He went to Tennessee without any present intention to remain there permanently or for an indefinite time, but with a present intention to return to Alabama as soon as he could do so without defeating the jurisdiction of the Federal court to determine his new suit. He was, therefore, a mere sojourner in the former state when this suit was brought. He returned to Alabama almost immediately after giving his deposition. The case comes within the principle announced in Butler v. Farnsworth, 4 Wash. C. C. 101, 103, Fed. Cas. No. 2,240, where Mr. Justice Washington said: 'If the removal be for the purpose of committing a fraud upon the law, and to enable the party to avail himself of the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, and that fact be made out by his acts, the court must pronounce that his removal was not with a bona fide intention of changing his domicile, however frequent and public his declarations to the contrary may have been.' "

In the present case, although the Nevada corporation appeared, upon the face of the record, to be the owner of the rights which the California corporation had asserted in the state court, it was, when this suit was brought, only the representative of the California corporation and its stockholders. The latter corporation, holding all the stock and having the same directors and officers as the Nevada corporation, could control the suit brought by the Nevada corporation, and, in the event of a favorable decree, could have compelled it to surrender or abandon all its claims to the California corporation, which was still in existence when this suit was brought.

As the Nevada corporation was formed by the direction of the California corporation, its stockholders and officers, for the purpose only of having the matters in dispute between the California corporation and the East Side Canal & Irrigation Company determined in the Federal court rather than in the state court where they were pending and undetermined; as the Nevada corporation assumed to be the owner of the property rights which the California corporation had asserted against the Canal & Irrigation Company only that it might have a standing in the Federal court as a litigant in respect of those rights; and as the California corporation could have controlled the conduct of the suit brought by the Nevada corporation at any time after it was brought, and up to the date of the decree below, and could have required the Nevada corporation, in the event of a decree in its favor, to transfer the benefit of such decree to the California corporation, without any new or valuable consideration,—we hold that the suit was properly dismissed under the 5th section of the act of 1875 as one in which the Nevada corporation was organized and collusively made plaintiff in the suit in the Federal court simply for the purpose of creating a case cognizable by that court.

Decree affirmed.

NORTH AMERICAN COLD STORAGE COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

CITY OF CHICAGO et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 306-321.)

Courts — jurisdiction — Federal question.

1. An allegation in a bill that a municipal ordinance providing for the summary seizure and destruction of food in cold storage when unfit for human consumption violates U. S. Const. 14th Amend., because it provides neither for notice nor for an opportunity to be heard before such seizure and destruction, presents, although unfounded, a constitutional question within the original jurisdiction of the Federal circuit court.

[For other cases, see Courts, 489-494, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court — extent of review.

2. A decision on the merits may be had in the Federal Supreme Court on a direct appeal taken under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488), § 5, in a case involving a question under the Federal Constitution, although the circuit court dismissed the case for want of jurisdiction, and has certified the question of jurisdiction alone to the Supreme Court for decision.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 919, 4230-4236, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — notice and hearing.

3. Due process of law is not denied the owner or custodian of food in cold storage by a municipal ordinance under which such food, when unfit for human consumption, may summarily be seized, condemned, and destroyed by municipal officers without a preliminary hearing.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 764-773, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 28.]

Argued November 13, 1908. Decided December 7, 1908.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a decree dismissing, NOTE. — As to Federal question as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308, and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7.

On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of decisions of circuit or district courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

On municipal power over nuisances affecting safety, health, and personal comfort—see note to Harrington v. Providence, 38 L.R.A. 305.

for want of jurisdiction, a suit to enjoin municipal officers from summarily seizing and destroying food in cold storage as unfit for human consumption. Modified by striking out the ground for dismissal as being for want of jurisdiction, and, as so modified, affirmed.

See same case below, 151 Fed. 120.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The bill of complaint in this case was dismissed by the circuit court for want of jurisdiction, and a certificate of the circuit judge was given that the jurisdiction of the court was in issue, and the question of jurisdiction alone was certified to this court, under paragraph 2 of § 5 of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488). The appellant also appealed, and now asserts its right of appeal under paragraph 5 of the same section of the above act, on the ground that the case involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States, and hence may be brought directly to this court from the decision of the circuit court. 308] *The bill was filed against the city of Chicago and the various individual defendants in their official capacities,—commissioner of health of the city of Chicago, secretary of the department of health, chief food inspector of the department of health, and inspectors of that department, and policemen of the city,—for the purpose of obtaining an injunction under the circumstances set forth in the bill. It was therein alleged that the complainant was a cold storage company, having a cold storage plant in the city of Chicago; and that it received, for the purpose of keeping in cold storage, food products and goods as bailee for hire; that, on an average, it received $20,000 worth of goods per day, and returned a like amount to its customers, daily, and that it had on an average in storage about two million dollars' worth of goods; that it received some 47 barrels of poultry on or about October 2, 1906, from a wholesale dealer, in due course of business, to be kept by it and returned to such dealer on demand; that the poultry was, when received, in good condition and wholesome for human food, and had been so maintained by it in cold storage from that time, and it would remain so, if undisturbed, for three months; that on the 2d of October, 1906, the individual defendants appeared at complainant's place of business and demanded of it that it forthwith deliver the 47 barrels of poultry for the purpose of being by them destroyed, the defendants alleging that the poultry had become putrid, decayed, poisonous, or infected in such a manner as to render it unsafe or unwholesome for human food. The demand was made under § 1161 of the Revised Municipal Code of the City of Chicago for 1905, which reads as follows:

"Every person being the owner, lessee, or occupant of any room, stall, freight house, cold storage house, or other place, other than a private dwelling, where any meat, fish, poultry, game, vegetables, fruit, or other perishable article adapted or designed to be used for human food shall be stored or kept, whether temporarily or otherwise, and every person having charge of, or being interested or engaged, whether as principal *or[309 agent, in the care of or in respect to the custody or sale of any such article of food supply, shall put, preserve, and keep such article of food supply in a clean and wholesome condition, and shall not allow the same, nor any part thereof, to become putrid, decayed, poisoned, infected, or in any other manner rendered or made unsafe or unwholesome for human food; and it shall be the duty of the meat and food inspectors and other duly authorized employees of the health department of the city to enter any and all such premises above specified at any time of any day, and to forthwith seize, condemn, and destroy any such putrid, decayed, poisoned, and infected food, which any such inspector may find in and upon said premises."

The complainant refused to deliver up the poultry, on the ground that the section above quoted of the Municipal Code of Chicago, in so far as it allows the city or its agents to seize, condemn, or destroy food or other food products, was in conflict with that portion of the 14th Amendment which provides that no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

After the refusal of the complainant to deliver the poultry the defendants stated that they would not permit the complainant's business to be further conducted until it complied with the demand of the defendants and delivered up the poultry, nor would they permit any more goods to be received into the warehouse or taken from the same, and that they would arrest and imprison any person who attempted to do so, until complainant complied with their demand and delivered up the poultry. Since that time the complainant's business has been stopped and the complainant has been unable to deliver any goods from its plant or receive the same.

The bill averred that the attempt to seize, condemn, and destroy the poultry, without a judicial determination of the fact that the same was putrid, decayed, poisonous, or infect, was illegal; and it asked that the defendants, and each of them, might be enjoined from taking or removing the poultry 310] from *the warehouse, or from destroying the same, and that they also be enjoined from preventing complainant delivering its goods and receiving from its customers, in due course of business, the goods committed to its care for storage.

In an amendment to the bill the complainant further stated that the defendants are now threatening to summarily destroy, from time to time, pursuant to the provisions of the above-mentioned section, any and all food products which may be deemed by them, or either of them, as being putrid, decayed, poisonous, or infected in such manner as to be unfit for human food, without any judicial determination of the fact that such food products are in such condition.

The defendants demurred to the bill on the ground, among others, that the court had no jurisdiction of the action. The injunction was not issued, but, upon argument of the case upon the demurrer, the bill was dismissed by the circuit court for want of jurisdiction, as already stated.

Mr. L. A. Stebbins argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. H. Sears, filed a brief for appellants:

That notice and an opportunity to be heard shall precede the taking of life, liberty, or property, is an ideal which is absolutely fundamental in every system of constitutional government.

R. v. University of Cambridge, 1 Strange, 565; Bradstreet v. Neptune Ins. Co. 3 Sumn. 600, Fed. Cas. No. 1,793.

The police power of the several states can only be exercised within the limits of the Constitution.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 31, 28 L. ed. 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 659, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Booth v. People, 186 Ill. 43, 50 L.R.A. 762, 78 Am. St. Rep. 229, 57 N. E. 798; McGehee, Due Process of Law, 305; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 196 U. S. 194, 205, 49 L. ed. 444, 449, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 514; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 149, 47 L. ed. 108, 115, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 688, 43 L. ed. 858, 861, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

Whatever doubt may exist as to the exact limits of due process of law, two things are always, everywhere, universally recognized as being absolutely indispensable to due process of law: (1) notice; (2) an opportunity to be heard.

McGehee, Due Process of Law, pp. 3, 4, 53 L. ed.

58, 73; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; Pennoy v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 731, 24 L. ed. 565, 572; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 366, 21 L. ed. 959, 963.

A few cases in point from the state courts are worthy of consideration.

King v. Hayes, 80 Me. 206, 13 Atl. 883; Edson v. Crangle, 62 Ohio St. 49, 56 N. E. 648; Varden v. Mount, 78 Ky. 86, 39 Am. Rep. 212; Hey Sing Ieck v. Anderson, 57 Cal. 251, 40 Am. Rep. 117; Lowry v. Rainwater, 70 Mo. 152, 35 Am. Rep. 420; Munn v. Corbin, 8 Colo. App. 113, 44 Pac. 783; Weil v. Ricord, 24 N. J. Eq. 169; Hutton v. Camden, 39 N. J. L. 132, 23 Am. Rep. 203; Fisher v. McGirr, 1 Gray, 1, 61 Am. Dec. 381.

None of the elements which were controlling in the case of Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499, exist in the case at bar.

A distinction exists between the legal status of property which can only be used for an unlawful purpose, and which is actually found being used for such unlawful purpose, and that property which is in itself lawful,—which is not a nuisance per se.

McConnell v. McKillip, 71 Neb. 712, 65 L.R.A. 610, 115 Am. St. Rep. 614, 99 N. W. 505, 8 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 898.

Any act of the state, whether of its legislative, executive, or judicial department, or any subdivision of the state, created by the state, acting through its officers, and claiming to act in their capacity as officers, and with the pretense of lawful authority, which takes life, liberty, or property without due process of law, is within the provisions of the 14th Amendment, and raises a Federal question which confers jurisdiction upon the Federal court.

Raymond v. Chicago Edison Co. 207 U. S. 42, 52 L. ed. 90, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; McGehee, Due Process of Law, p. 28; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 373, 30 L. ed. 227, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

Although it is held in Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77, and similar cases, that it is within the police power of the several states to fix rates of compensation to be charged by public warehouses and common carriers, and that such fixing is a legislative, and not a judicial, function, yet, in the long line of cases which follow, of which Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418, is typical, and in which it appears from testimony adduced in court, that a law, though fair and reasonable upon its face, in its general operation as to certain persons or classes of persons is a deprivation of their property without due process of law, though they are, in their general scope, admittedly proper police regulations, it is held they are in conflict with the 14th Amendment, and such conflict raises a Federal question for the final determination of this court.

Mr. Emil C. Wetten argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George W. Miller and Edward J. Brundage, filed a brief for appellees:

For general definitions of the police power, see 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 915; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25-33, 24 L. ed. 989-992; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100-128, 34 L. ed. 128-139, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

The police power is inherent in the several states and is left with them under the Federal system of government, and may always be exercised by the state legislatures, and the Federal government cannot exercise any police power except where Congress has specifically excluded all state legislation; as, for example, the District of Columbia, where the police power of Congress is the same as that of the state legislatures within their respective jurisdictions; and being a right which the Federal government never had, it would be impossible to impair or abridge that right by the adoption of the 14th Amendment.

Parker & W. Public Health & Safety, p. 2; Brannon, 14th Amend. pp. 167, 175; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 925, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 664, 665, 31 L. ed. 205, 211, 212, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 667, 24 L. ed. 1036, 1038; Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 554, 35 L. ed. 572, 574, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 683, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 504, 24 L. ed. 1115, 1116.

The ordinance is a valid and proper exercise of police power.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 669, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 213, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 136, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Parker & W. Public Health & Safety, p. 6; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 684, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 115, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 27, 30, 49 L. ed. 643, 650, 651, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765; Gardner v. Michigan, 199 U. S. 325, 332, 50 L. ed. 212, 216, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Chicago v. Netcher, 183 Ill. 111, 48 L.R.A. 261, 75 Am. St. Rep. 93, 55 N. E. 707.

Summary destruction of unwholesome food products is proper.

Freund, Pol. Power, §§ 520, 521; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 685, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; People ex rel. Kemmler v. Durston, 119 N. Y. 578, 7 L.R.A. 715, 16 Am. St. Rep. 859, 24 N. E. 6; Compagnie Française de Navigation à Vapeur v. State Bd. of Health, 186 U. S. 380, 392, 46 L. ed. 1209, 1215, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811.

A notice and hearing before the summary abatement of a nuisance is not necessary.

McGehee, Due Process of Law, p. 372; People ex rel. Copcutt v. Board of Health, 140 N. Y. 1, 23 L.R.A. 481, 37 Am. St. Rep. 522, 35 N. E. 320; Parker & W. Public Health & Safety, § 175; Salem v. Eastern R. Co. 98 Mass. 443, 96 Am. Dec. 650; Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 543, 10 L.R.A. 116, 23 Am. St. Rep. 850, 26 N. E. 100; Stone v. Heath, 179 Mass. 386, 60 N. E. 975; Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32, 27 L.R.A. 710, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833; Lowe v. Conroy, 120 Wis. 155, 66 L.R.A. 907, 102 Am. St. Rep. 983, 97 N. W. 942, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 341; Daniels v. Homer, 139 N. C. 219, 3 L.R.A.(N.S.) 997, 51 S. E. 992; Blue v. Beach, 80 Am. St. Rep. 218, note; Egan v. Health Department, 20 Misc. 38, 45 N. Y. Supp. 325; Pearson v. Zehr, 138 Ill. 51, 32 Am. St. Rep. 113, 29 N. E. 854; State v. Main, 69 Conn. 136, 36 L.R.A. 623, 61 Am. St. Rep. 30, 37 Atl. 80; Gaines v. Waters, 64 Ark. 612, 44 S. W. 353; Booth v. People, 186 Ill. 48, 50 L.R.A. 762, 78 Am. St. Rep. 229, 57 N. E. 798.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

In this case the ordinance in question is to be regarded as in effect a statute of the state, adopted under a power granted it by the state legislature, and hence it is an act of the state within the 14th Amendment. New Orleans Water Works Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31, 31 L. ed. 607, 612, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741.

The circuit court held that the defendants, being sued in their official capacities, could not be held for acts or threats which they had no power or authority under the ordinance to make or perform; that, although it was alleged that the defendants acted under the provisions of the section of the Code already quoted, yet that under no possible construction of that ordinance could the defendants claim the right to the entire stoppage of the business of the complainant in storing admittedly wholesome articles of food, so that it would seem that these acts were mere trespasses, and plainly without the sanction of the ordinance; as to these acts, therefore, the remedy was to be pursued in the state courts, there being no constitutional question involved necessary to give the court jurisdiction.

The court further held that the allegation that the intention to seize and destroy the poultry without any judicial determination as to the fact of its being unfit for food was in violation of the 14th Amendment could not be sustained; that such amendment did not impair the police power of the 314]*state, and that the ordinance was valid, and not in violation of that amendment. The demurrer was therefore sustained and the bill dismissed, as stated by the court, for want of jurisdiction.

We think there was jurisdiction, and that it was error for the court to dismiss the bill on that ground. The court seems to have proceeded upon the theory that, as the complainant's assertion of jurisdiction was based upon an alleged Federal question which was not well founded, there was no jurisdiction. In this we think that the court erred. The bill contained a plain averment that the ordinance in question violated the 14th Amendment, because it provided for no notice to the complainant or opportunity for a hearing before the seizure and destruction of the food. A constitutional question was thus presented to the court, over which it had jurisdiction, and it was bound to decide the same on its merits. If a question of jurisdiction alone were involved, the decree of dismissal would have to be reversed. The complainant, however, has, in addition to procuring the certificate of the court as to the reason for its action, also appealed from the decree of dismissal directly to this court under the 5th paragraph of § 5 of the act of 1891. Such appeal can be heard without resort to the certificate and may be decided on its merits. Giles v. Harris, 189 U. S. 475, 486, 47 L. ed. 909, 912, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639. A constitutional question being involved, an appeal may be taken directly to this court from the circuit court.

Holding there was jurisdiction in the court below, we come to the merits of the case. The action of the defendants, which is admitted by the demurrer, in refusing to permit the complainant to carry on its ordinary business until it delivered the poultry, would seem to have been arbitrary and wholly indefensible. Counsel for the complainant, however, for the purpose of obtaining a decision in regard to the constitutional question as to the right to seize and destroy property without a prior hearing, states that he will lay no stress here upon that portion of the bill which alleges 315]the unlawful and forcible *taking possession of complainant's business by the defendants. He states in his brief as follows:

"There is but one question in this case, and that question is, Is section 1161 of the Revised Municipal Code of Chicago in conflict with the due process of law provision of the 14th Amendment, is this: that it does not provide for notice and an opportunity to be heard before the destruction of the food products therein referred to? If there is no such conflict, the ordinance is valid for the purposes of Federal jurisdiction; the bill states no cause of action, and was properly dismissed, as there is no claim of any such diversity of citizenship as would confer jurisdiction upon the Federal court, and no such jurisdiction exists, except by reason of the claim that such ordinance is in conflict with the 14th Amendment."

The general power of the state to legislate upon the subject embraced in the above ordinance of the city of Chicago, counsel does not deny. See California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306, 318, 50 L. ed. 204, 209, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100. Nor does he deny the right to seize and destroy unwholesome or putrid food, provided that notice and opportunity to be heard be given the owner or custodian of the property before it is destroyed. We are of opinion, however, that provision for a hearing before seizure and condemnation and destruction of food which is unwholesome and unfit for use is not necessary. The right to so seize is based upon the right and duty of the state to protect and guard, as far as possible, the lives and health of its inhabitants, and that it is proper to provide that food which is unfit for human consumption should be summarily seized and destroyed to prevent the danger which would arise from eating it. The right to so seize and destroy is, of course, based upon the fact that the food is not fit to be eaten. Food that is in such a condition, if kept for sale or in danger of being sold, is in itself a nuisance, and a nuisance of the most dangerous kind, involving, as it does, the health, if not the lives, of persons who may eat it. A determination on the part of the seizing officers that food is in an unfit condition to be eaten is not a decision which concludes *the owner. The ex parte find-[316 ing of the health officers as to the fact is not in any way binding upon those who own or claim the right to sell the food. If a party cannot get his hearing in advance of the seizure and destruction, he has the right to have it afterward, which right may be claimed upon the trial in an action brought for the destruction of his property; and in that action those who destroyed it can only successfully defend if the jury shall find the fact of unwholesomeness, as claimed by them. The often-cited case of Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499, substantially holds this. By the 2d section of an act of the legislature of the state of New York of 1880 it was provided that any "net . . . for capturing fish which was floated upon the water or found or maintained in any of the waters of the state," in violation of the statutes of the state for the protection of fish, was a public nuisance, and could be abated and summarily destroyed, and that no action for damages should lie or be maintained against any person for or on account of seizing or destroying such nets. Nets of the kind mentioned in that section were taken and destroyed by the defendant, and the owner commenced action against him to recover damages for such destruction. That portion of the section which provided that no action for damages should lie was applicable only to a case where the seizure or destruction had been of a nature amounting to a violation of the statute, and of course did not preclude an action against the person making a seizure if not made of a net which was illegally maintained. The seizure and destruction were justified by the defendant in the action, and such justification was allowed in the state courts (119 N. Y. 226, 7 L.R.A. 134, 16 Am. St. Rep. 813, 23 N. E. 878) and in this court. Mr. Justice Brown, in delivering the opinion of this court, said:

"Nor is a person whose property is seized under the act in question without his legal remedy. If in fact his property has been used in violation of the act, he has no just reason to complain; if not, he may replevy his nets from the officer seizing them, or, if they have been destroyed, may have his action for their value. In such cases the burden 317] would be upon the *defendant to prove a justification under the statute. As was said by the supreme court of New Jersey, in a similar case (American Print Works v. Lawrence, 21 N. J. L. 248, 259): 'The party is not, in point of fact, deprived of a trial by jury. . . .' Indeed, it is scarcely possible that any actual injustice could be done in the practical administration of the act."

The statute in the above case had not provided for any hearing of the question of violation of its provisions, and this court held that the owner of the nets would not be bound by the determination of the officers who destroyed them, but might question the fact by an action in a judicial proceeding in a court of justice. The statute was held valid, although it did not provide for notice or hearing. And so, in People ex rel. Copeutt v. Board of Health, 140 N. Y. 1, 23 L.R.A. 481, 37 Am. St. Rep. 522, 35 N. E. 320, the question arose in a proceeding by certiorari, affirming the proceedings of the board of health of the city of Yonkers, by which certain dams upon the Nepperhan river were determined to be nuisances and ordered to be removed. The court held that the acts under which the dams were removed did not give a hearing in express terms nor could the right to a hearing be implied from any language used in them, but that they were valid without such provision, because they did not make the determination of the board of health final and conclusive on the owners of the premises wherein the nuisances were allowed to exist; that before such a final and conclusive determination could be made, resulting in the destruction of property, the imposition of penalties and criminal punishments, the parties proceeded against must have a hearing, not as a matter of favor, but as a matter of right, and the right to a hearing must be found in the acts; that if the decisions of these boards were final and conclusive, even after a hearing, the citizen would, in many cases, hold his property subject to the judgments of men holding ephemeral positions in municipal bodies and boards of health, frequently uneducated, and generally unfitted to discharge grave judicial functions. It was said that boards of health under the acts referred to could not, as to any existing state of facts, by their *determination make that a [318 nuisance which was not in fact a nuisance; that they had no jurisdiction to make any order or ordinance abating an alleged nuisance unless there were in fact a nuisance; that it was the actual existence of a nuisance which gave them jurisdiction to act. There being no provision for a hearing, the acts were not void nevertheless, but the owner had the right to bring his action at common law against all the persons engaged in the abatement of the nuisance to recover his damages, and thus he would have due process of law; and if he could show that the alleged nuisance did not in fact exist, he will recover judgment, notwithstanding the ordinance of the board of health under which the destruction took place.

The same principle has been decided by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts. The case of Salem v. Eastern R. Co. 98 Mass. 431, 96 Am. Dec. 650, was an action brought to recover moneys spent by the city to drain certain dams and ponds declared by the board of health to be a nuisance. The court held that, in a suit to recover such expenses incurred in removing a nuisance, when prosecuted against a party on the ground that he caused the same, but who was not heard, and had no opportunity to be heard upon the questions before the board of health, such party is not concluded in the findings or adjudications of that board, and may contest all the facts upon which his liability is sought to be established.

Miller v. Horton, 152 Mass. 540, 10 L.R.A. 116, 23 Am. St. Rep. 850, 26 N. E. 100, is in principle like the case before us. It was an action brought for killing the plaintiff's horse. The defendants admitted the killing, but justified the act under an order of the board of health, which declared that the horse had the glanders, and directed it to be killed. The court held that the decision of the board of health was not conclusive as to whether or not the horse was diseased, and said that: "Of course there cannot be a trial by jury before killing an animal supposed to have a contagious disease, and we assume that the legislature may authorize its destruction in such emergencies without a hearing beforehand. *But it does not follow that it can throw the loss on the owner without a hearing. If he cannot be heard beforehand he may be heard afterward. The statute may provide for paying him in case it should appear that his property was not what the legislature had declared to be a nuisance, and may give him his hearing in that way. If it does not do so, the statute may leave those who act under it to proceed at their peril, and the owner gets his hearing in an action against them."

And in Stone v. Heath, 179 Mass. 385, 60 N. E. 975, the court held that, under the statute, it had no power to restrain the board of health from abating nuisances and from instituting proceedings against plaintiff on account of his failure to abate them, as provided for in the statute, because the board of health had adjudged that a nuisance existed and had ordered it to be abated by the plaintiff, yet still the question "whether there was a nuisance, or whether, if there was one, it was caused or maintained by the parties charged therewith, may be litigated by such parties in proceedings instituted against them to recover the expenses of the abatement, or may be litigated by the parties whose property has been injured or destroyed in proceedings instituted by them to recover for such loss or damage, and may also be litigated by parties charged with causing or maintaining the nuisance in proceedings instituted against them for neglect or failure to comply with the orders of the board of health directing them to abate the same." In that way they had a hearing and could recover or defend in case there was no nuisance.

See also Lowe v. Conroy, 120 Wis. 151, 66 L.R.A. 907, 102 Am. St. Rep. 983, 97 N. W. 942; Pearson v. Zehr, 138 Ill. 48, 32 Am. St. Rep. 113, 29 N. E. 854; State v. Main, 69 Conn. 123, 36 L.R.A. 623, 61 Am. St. 53 L. ed.

Rep. 30, 37 Atl. 80; Gaines v. Waters, 64 Ark. 609, 612, 44 S. W. 353, where the same principle is announced.

Complainant, however, contends that there was no emergency requiring speedy action for the destruction of the poultry in order to protect the public health from danger resulting from consumption of such poultry. It is said that the food was in cold storage, and that it would continue in the same condition *it then was for three months, if properly stored, and that therefore the defendants had ample time in which to give notice to complainant or the owner and have a hearing of the question as to the condition of the poultry; and, as the ordinance provided for no hearing, it was void. But we think this is not required. The power of the legislature to enact laws in relation to the public health being conceded, as it must be, it is to a great extent within legislative discretion as to whether any hearing need be given before the destruction of unwholesome food which is unfit for human consumption. If a hearing were to be always necessary, even under the circumstances of this case, the question at once arises as to what is to be done with the food in the meantime. Is it to remain with the cold storage company, and, if so, under what security that it will not be removed? To be sure that it will not be removed during the time necessary for the hearing, which might frequently be indefinitely prolonged, some guard would probably have to be placed over the subject-matter of investigation, which would involve expense, and might not even then prove effectual. What is the emergency which would render a hearing unnecessary? We think when the question is one regarding the destruction of food which is not fit for human use the emergency must be one which would fairly appeal to the reasonable discretion of the legislature as to the necessity for a prior hearing, and in that case its decision would not be a subject for review by the courts. As the owner of the food or its custodian is amply protected against the party seizing the food, who must, in a subsequent action against him, show as a fact that it was within the statute, we think that due process of law is not denied the owner or custodian by the destruction of the food alleged to be unwholesome and unfit for human food without a preliminary hearing. The cases cited by the complainant do not run counter to those we have above referred to.

Even if it be a fact that some value may remain for certain purposes in food that is unfit for human consumption, the right to destroy it is not, on that account, taken away. The *small value that might remain in said food is a mere incident, and furnishes no defense to its destruction when it is plainly kept to be sold at some time as food. California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 306-322, 50 L. ed. 204-211, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Gardner v. Michigan, 199 U. S. 325, 331, 50 L. ed. 212, 216, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106.

The decree of the court below is modified by striking out the ground for dismissal of the bill as being for want of jurisdiction, and, as modified, is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer dissents.

HANNAH FITCHIE, Barry Fitchie, Hannah Fitchie and Barry Fitchie, Executors under the will of Eliza Fitchie, Deceased; Eliza French, John Galbraith, William Galbraith, Samuel Galbraith, Martha Cully, Margaret Jane Rome, and Hugh Galbraith, Apts.,

v.

CECIL BROWN and William O. Smith, Executors under the will of George Galbraith, Deceased, and the Hawaiian Trust Company, Limited.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 321-335.)

Appeal — hearing — who may complain.

1. Counsel for the executors has no right to appear and be heard against the decree below in an action involving the validity and construction of a testamentary trust where his clients have not appealed.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4013-4047, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Perpetuities — duration of trust — lives in being.

2. The rule against perpetuities, where the common law prevails, is not violated by a will creating a trust for "as long a period as is legally possible," to terminate when the law requires it "under the statute," to receive the income and pay annuities therefrom to certain named annuitants and their heirs, and, on the termination of the trust, to distribute the trust fund equally among those then entitled to the annuities, since the testator clearly must have intended to limit the duration of the trust to twenty-one years after the death of the last survivor of the annuitants named in the will, when distribution is to be made.

[For other cases, see Perpetuities, 1-7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Perpetuities — corporation as life in being.

3. A corporation or joint stock company to which an annuity is bequeathed will not be deemed a life in being where so to regard it would cause a trust created by the will to violate the rule against perpetuities.

Perpetuities — number of lives in being.

4. A trust does not violate the common-law rule against perpetuities because the selected lives in being by which the duration of the trust is limited exceed forty in number.

Trusts — distribution — surplus.

5. The surplus income after paying annuities, must accumulate as part of the trust estate until the time for distribution arrives, when it must be distributed to those entitled to the main fund, where the trust provides that the trustee is to devote sufficient of the income toward paying the annuities, and, on the termination of the trust, is to distribute the trust fund to those entitled to the annuities.

Trusts — incapacity of trustee — substitution.

6. The validity of a trust is not affected by the incapacity of the trustee, since, if he cannot act, the court will appoint a new trustee to carry out the provisions of the trust.

[For other cases, see Trusts, 94, 95, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 47.]

Argued October 29, 30, 1908. Decided December 7, 1908.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a decree rendered in an agreed case, sustaining the validity of a testamentary trust. Affirmed.

See same case below, 18 Haw. 52.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The parties to this proceeding agreed upon a case, without action, containing the facts upon which a controversy had arisen between them, and submitted the same to the supreme court of the territory of Hawaii, conformably to the laws of that territory.

The court heard the case and made a decree therein, from which those named above as plaintiffs in the submission have appealed to this court, but the defendants executors have not appealed.

From the agreed statement of facts contained in the submission it appears that one George Galbraith, who died at Honolulu on the 5th of November, 1904, while domiciled in the territory of Hawaii, left a will, which has been duly admitted to probate in Hawaii, disposing of an estate of about $121,000 in personal property and $128,000 in real estate in Hawaii, and a small amount of real estate in Ireland.

*The will gave some pecuniary legacies to a number of people, relatives and friends, and then provided that—

"The balance, residue, or remainder of my estate is, to be placed in trust for as long a period as is legally possible, the termination or ending of said trust to take place when the law requires it under the statute.

NOTE.—On the rule against perpetuities—see note to Re Lawrence, 11 L.R.A. 85.

As to removal of trustee or appointment of new trustee—see note to May v. May, 42 L. ed. U. S. 179.

"I hereby nominate and appoint the Hawaiian Trust Company, Limited, of Honolulu, territory of Hawaii, as trustee of the aforesaid balance, residue, or remainder of my estate, and they are to devote sufficient of the annual income derived from the same toward paying the following annuities, which are to be free and clear of all taxes, unto the following persons mentioned, namely" [here follow the names of the annuitants and the amounts which they are to receive yearly].

"All of the foregoing for life, and then to their heirs, save and excepted the last three persons; namely, Josie Fink, Emma Douglass, and Matilda Bailey, who are to receive only their annuities, and, at their death, all their interests to cease.

"On the final ending and distribution of the trust, the trust fund to be divided equally amongst those persons entitled at that time to the aforementioned annuities."

On the same day the testator made a codicil, in which he made some changes of the annuities, substituting for the annuity given to the seven children of Hugh Galbraith, of $2,520 annually, an annuity to the same children of $2,100 yearly for life, and then to their heirs.

The testator also bequeathed by the codicil an annuity to the Kona Orphanage of Kona of $100 yearly, "under the same conditions as the other annuitants mentioned, save and accepted, Hugh Galbraith, Josie Fink, Emma Douglass, and Matilda Bailey."

Upon the above facts several questions arose and were submitted to the court below, among them one which relates to the validity of the trust and another to the disposition of the surplus income remaining after the payments to the annuitants mentioned in the will.

324] *The supreme court of Hawaii ordered a decree to be entered, which declared that the will of George Galbraith established a valid trust, and that the Hawaiian Trust Company, Limited, a corporation, the trustee named in the will, was legally authorized to administer the trust; that under the trust it was the duty of the trustee to pay out of the income of the trust property the annuities payable by the provisions of the will to the four persons named therein for their respective lives, and for the payment of the other annuities payable by the will to the other annuitants therein named for and during their respective lives and thereafter to pay the same to their heirs respectively until the end of twenty-one years after the death of the last survivor of all the said annuitants, and during the same period of time to pay to the Kona Orphanage the annuity directed in the will, and, at the end of said twenty-one years, to divide the trust fund and its accumulated and unapplied income as required by the direction in that behalf contained in the will.

Mr. Aldis B. Browne argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander Britton, W. L. Stanley, and Henry Holmes, filed a brief for appellants:

The words "for as long a period as is legally possible, the termination or ending of said trust to take place when the law requires it under the statute," do not in themselves prevent the corpus from vesting absolutely for twenty-one years after lives in being, nor fix such a period during which the payment of annuities must go on.

Shelley v. Shelley, L. R. 6 Eq. 540; Re Johnston, L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 538; Sackville-West v. Homesdale, L. R. 4 H. L. 543; Harrington v. Harrington, L. R. 5 H. L. 105; Hill v. Hill [1902] 1 Ch. 537, 807; Re Moore [1901] 1 Ch. 936; Re Exmouth, L. R. 23 Ch. Div. 158; Scarsdale v. Curzon, 1 Johns. & H. 40; Davies v. Davies, L. R. 36 Ch. Div. 380; Tollemache v. Coventry, 2 Clark & F. 611; Pownall v. Graham, 33 Beav. 242.

The object of the courts is to ascertain not the intention simply, but the expressed intention, of the testator,—the meaning which the words of the will, properly interpreted, convey.

Hawkins, Wills, p. 1; Scale v. Rawlins [1892] A. C. 345.

The trust for division of the capital among those persons entitled to the annuities at that time is void for perpetuity; clearly for uncertainty.

Re Moore, supra; Gray, Rule against Perpetuities, 2d ed. § 219.

The extinction of forty-odd lives is more than can be made out by reasonable evidence or without difficulty; or it may be almost, if not quite, impracticable to ascertain when forty-odd lives became extinguished.

Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 Ves. Jr. 286; Gray, Rule against Perpetuities, § 218.

The intention of the testator was that no person should be entitled to touch the capital of the trust fund for so long a period as it was legally possible to tie it up, whatever the period might be; and he did not anticipate that the direction for payment of these annual sums carried with it any rights in the capital of the trust fund. It is quite legal for a trust of corpus and a trust of income to exist quite independently of each other.

Cadell v. Palmer, 21 English Ruling Cases, 140, note, 1 Clark & F. 372.

The rule against perpetuities is not a rule of construction, but a peremptory command of law. It is not like a rule of construction, a test more or less artificial, to determine intention. Its object is to defeat intention. Therefore, every provision in a will is to be construed as if the rule did not exist; and then, to the provisions, so construed, the rule is to be remorselessly applied.

Gray, Rule against Perpetuities, 2d ed. 629, note 1; Hcasman v. Pearse, L. R. 7 Ch. 283.

When some of the trusts in a will are legal and some illegal, if they are so connected together as to constitute an entire scheme, so that the presumed wishes of the testator would be defeated if one portion was retained and other portions rejected, or if manifest injustice would result from such construction to the beneficiaries or some of them, then all the trusts must be construed together and must fall.

Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 50, 14 L.R.A. 40, 27 Am. St. Rep. 487, 28 N. E. 880.

The provision as to the division of the trust fund at the final ending of the trust measures the time when the payment of the annuities is to cease. It is difficult to see how these two provisions of the will can be separated without ignoring the words of the will.

Whether or not an annuity is perpetual is considered in Re Morgan [1893] 3 Ch. 222; Blight v. Hartnoll, L. R. 19 Ch. Div. 294.

The court has authority to set apart a portion of the corpus sufficient to produce the annuities with certainty, and to hand over the balance at once to the heirs-at-law and next of kin.

Harbin v. Masterman [1896] 1 Ch. 351; Evans v. Walker, L. R. 3 Ch. Div. 211; Bent v. Cullen, L. R. 6 Ch. 235.

The heirs of the annuitants will differ according to the nature of the property; thus, the law of the domicile will apply in the case of the distribution of all movable property, wherever situate (2 Wharton, Conf. L. 3d ed. p. 1290); and to the law of the state in which the land is situated we must look for the rules which govern its descent.

De Vaughn v. Hutchinson, 165 U. S. 566, 570, 41 L. ed. 827, 829, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461.

In the case of all of the annuitants the court has jurisdiction to set apart or appropriate sufficient of the estate to answer such annuities.

Harbin v. Masterman, supra.

In case the court decides that the "heirs" are entitled to perpetual annuities, they will be entitled to have appropriated and paid to them on the death of the life annuitants such a sum as will be sufficient to produce their respective annuities.

Bent v. Cullen, supra.

Mr. Clarence H. Olson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William O. Smith and A. Lewis, Jr., filed a brief for Galbraith's Executors.

Mr. John C. Gray argued the cause, and, with Mr. Roland Gray, filed a brief for the Hawaiian Trust Company:

The lives of the annuitants were all lives in being at the testator's death. That is so, although some of them are described as the children of certain persons.

2 Jarman, Wills, 6th Am. ed. *1010; Scott v. Harwood, 5 Madd. Ch. 332.

The time set for the distribution is not too remote, because the testator has expressly said it shall not be too remote; he has said it shall be legally possible. It is a necessary qualification of the time for distribution that it shall not be too remote. Dates which are too remote are expressly excluded by the testator.

Pownall v. Graham, 33 Beav. 242; Gray, Rule against Perpetuities, § 219.

A gift "as far as the rules of law and equity will permit" is not bad for uncertainty, and the period to be taken is to be determined from the consideration of the will.

Shelley v. Shelley, L. R. 6 Eq. 540; Re Johnston, L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 546; Gray, Rule against Perpetuities, §§ 363-367; Harrington v. Harrington, L. R. 3 Ch. 564, L. R. 5 H. L. 87; Hill v. Hill [1902] 1 Ch. 813.

The number of lives to be taken, in applying the rule against perpetuities, must be an ascertainable number; that is, as was said in the leading case of Thellusson v. Woodford, 11 Ves. Jr. 134, the number of lives chosen must not be more than will admit of making out, by reasonable evidence, at what time the survivor ceases to exist. Provided the termination of the lives can be determined by reasonable evidence, their number is immaterial. In our case there are forty-one lives. In Cadell v. Palmer, 1 Clark & F. 372, there were twenty-eight lives. In Humberston v. Humberston, 1 P. Wms. 332, cited in Thellusson v. Woodford, 11 Ves. Jr. 135, there were about fifty life estates.

Surplus income shall be accumulated, and distributed as part of the trust fund when the time for distribution has arrived.

Genery v. Fitzgerald, Jacob, 468; Re Dumble, L. R. 23 Ch. Div. 365; Hurford v. Haines, 67 Mtl. 240, 9 Atl. 540; McKee's Appeal, 96 Pa. 284; Cochrane v. Schell, 140 N. Y. 537, 35 N. E. 971.

A construction should be adopted which will make realty and personalty go together, where the testator has treated them as one fund.

Abbott v. Essex Co. 18 How. 202, 216, 15 L. ed. 352, 356.

The rule that the intermediate income of future gifts of personalty or mixed funds will be accumulated is a consequence of the rule that courts will prefer a construction which prevents a partial intestacy.

Given v. Hilton, 95 U. S. 591, 594, 24 L. ed. 458, 459; Kenaday v. Sinnott, 179 U. S. 606, 616, 45 L. ed. 339, 344, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233.

As fast as the income is received, it becomes as much a part of the trust fund as the principal.

Minot v. Tappan, 127 Mass. 337; Re Travis [1900] 2 Ch. 548.

Any lack of authority in this trust company to act as trustee would have no effect on the validity of this trust. Another trustee would be appointed by the court having jurisdiction for that purpose in Hawaii. The heirs or next of kin would get no interest in the trust fund.

Vidal v. Philadelphia, 2 How. 127, 188, 11 L. ed. 205, 230.

No private person has a right to object to a corporation's taking or holding any property on the ground that its charter does not authorize it to do so.

Vidal v. Philadelphia, 2 How. 127, 11 L. ed. 205; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188; Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 293, 33 L. ed. 317, 321, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

In the view we take of the case there are but two questions necessary to be noticed, and they involve the validity of the trust and the disposition of the surplus income. 328]The appellants,*who are the heirs of testator, insist, first, that the provision in the will for final distribution, ordering the trust fund to be divided equally among those persons entitled at that time to the annuities mentioned, is invalid, because there is no direction in the will as to when it is to take place, and therefore effect cannot be given to it; that the only direction in the will as to the duration of the trust is contained in the words "the residue . . . to be placed in trust for as long a period as is legally possible, the termination or ending of said trust to take place when the law requires it under the statute." Unless there is contained in those words a direction as to the duration of the trust, or, in other words, a direction as to the period at which that part of the trust which consists of the payment of annuities is to cease, and that part which consists of the distribution of the capital is to take place, then, it is contended, the duration of the trust has not been sufficiently declared by the testator, and the trust is one which the court cannot carry out; second, that if the above words do constitute a direction as to the duration of the trust, yet still the testator has not selected the lives in being which are to be taken as a limitation of the trust; third, that even if the testator had selected the lives, consisting of all the annuitants mentioned, they are more than forty in number, and the trust is void, because it would then tend to a perpetuity, as the extinction of more than forty lives is more than can be made out by reasonable evidence or without difficulty, it being quite impracticable to ascertain when the last of more than forty lives would be extinguished.

The counsel for the executors of the testator, appellees herein, was permitted in this court to file a brief and was heard orally on the argument before us, although no appeal from the decree had been taken by the executors, this court stating, however, that it would thereafter decide whether counsel for executors had any right to be heard to contend against the decree of the court below.

Counsel, in fact, did argue against some parts of the decree, *contending that the[329 trust was valid in so far as it provided for the payment of the annuities specified, but that the provision for final distribution was void, and that the annuities succeeding to and other than the life annuities were perpetual, and that there was an intestacy as to that not required to satisfy all the annuities.

We are of opinion that counsel for the executors had no right to appear and be heard against the decree, no appeal having been taken from it by his clients.

The trustee contends that the whole trust is valid, and that the surplus income over the amount necessary for the payment of the annuities mentioned must be accumulated up to the time of the general distribution under the trust, as provided for in the will, and that such surplus shall then be distributed as part of the trust fund to the persons then entitled to that fund.

Our first inquiry is, Was this trust valid as a whole? It is conceded by all that the common law is applicable, and that there is no statute in Hawaii governing the subject, except the statute making the common law applicable there, and that the utmost extent of a trust at common law is limited by lives in being at its creation and for twenty-one years thereafter; that the lives must be selected by the testator in his will; that they must be ascertained lives, i. e., lives that can be distinguished; and the fact of the death of the last survivor must be capable of being made out by reasonable evidence (Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 Ves. Jr. 227, 11 Ves. Jr. 134, 146; Re Moore [1901] 1 Ch. 936), and the selected lives need not be those having an interest in the property. Moore's Case is an example of a void limitation on the ground of uncertainty. The limitation was measured by twenty-one years from the death of the last survivor of all persons living at the death of the testatrix.

A perusal of the will shows that the testator did not, in so many words, name the persons whose lives the trustee contends he selected for the limitation of the trust.

330] *However, if the scheme of the will, discoverable from its provisions, be such that a plain implication arises from those provisions that a certain class or number of lives mentioned, or referred to, in the will, were selected by the testator for a limitation of the trust, such implied selection is sufficient. It is the intention of the testator that is to be sought, and such intention is not always found to have been directly, and in so many words, expressed in the will. An intention which is implied from language actually used and from facts actually appearing in the will is to be carried out, provided it does not violate the law. An intention so implied is as good as an intention more plainly and in direct terms expressed. The question is, therefore, whether the testator, by an implication arising from the language used in the will and the facts therein appearing, selected those lives by which the trust is to be limited.

Looking at the will, it is seen that a trust is created for three purposes: The first, to pay certain annuitants out of the income of the fund; the second, to hold the fund until the time for distribution arrives; and the third, to distribute it to those people who may then be entitled to it, as provided by the terms of the will.

The whole trust, the testator has provided, shall continue as long as is legally possible, and it is not to be confined to any particular subdivision of the trust. The direction to hold and distribute is as imperative as the direction to pay annuitants until distribution is made. When the testator created the trust in the language already quoted he must have intended it should be measured by some lives then in being, and for not more than twenty-one years thereafter; because that is the longest time a trust of that kind is legally possible, and he provided it should last as long as that. There are no other lives that can reasonably be said to have been within the intention of the testator when he was making this provision. It is said that, being ignorant of the legal length of time a trust could last, he therefore provided that it should *last[331 as long as legally possible; and thus he could not have had an intention to select any particular life or lives in limiting the length of the trust.

There is force in the argument, but we are disposed to think that the position taken by the trustee is the correct one, and, indeed, is the only one compatible with the intention of the testator, to be gathered from the will. That intention could not have been to create annuities to last forever, as is contended, because it is plain from the provisions of the will that the testator intended to have the gift over of the whole estate created by the will divided at some future time among those who would be entitled to it at the time of such distribution. A perpetual annuity would prevent some part of the gift over from taking effect. There is not only the provision for continuing the trust as long as is legally possible, but there is also a provision, as part of the trust, for holding the fund and distributing it according to the terms of the will. Distribution, therefore, is certainly part of the scheme of the will, and distribution of all of the fund created by the trust,—not a part of it. This distribution could not take place if the payment of the annuities provided for in the will were to continue forever.

As he was making provision for the annuitants mentioned in the will and for the payment to the heirs of such of those annuitants as died, it seems plain that the trust for the payment of the annuities should continue no longer than up to the time provided in the will for the distribution of the whole estate; and that distribution—we think the testator intended to be twenty-one years after the death of the last survivor of the annuitants named in the will, for that period was as long as the trust could last under the terms of the will.

Upon all these considerations, the inference, we think, is very strong that the lives selected were the lives of the annuitants. A reading of the will fails to suggest any other set of lives that the testator could reasonably be supposed to have intended. The inference that he intended these lives is almost conclusive. That he intended to dispose of his whole estate, *and not to die[332 intestate as to any part of it, is plain from the language of the will. Either these lives must be regarded as intended by the testator or there is an intestacy as to a considerable part of the estate. The testator certainly did not mean that, and there is, in addition, a strong presumption against it. Counsel for the heirs do not argue that testator did not intend to make testamentary disposition of his whole estate, but that the disposition which they contend he did make was invalid. The answer to the question of what disposition he did make is easier to be given when aided by the presumption that he intended a valid rather than invalid disposition, there being from the language of the will one construction of his intention that would make the will valid, although there might be another possible, and at the same time unlikely, construction that would render it invalid. This selection prevents the trust from being bad for uncertainty or remoteness.

The whole of the language of the will must be considered, and while it says the trust is to continue as long as it is legally possible, it must also be remembered that a distribution of the whole estate is to be made, and therefore the continuation of the trust must also be limited by the direction to distribute; or, in other words, the trust is to continue as long as is legally possible and as shall be consistent with making the distribution as directed by the will. This distribution must be made at a time which is not too remote,—that is, a time within which the trust would be valid,—for the testator provided that the trust should only last that long. Payments of the most of the annuities are to be continued to the heirs of the annuitants, but we think these payments are to stop with the death of the last survivor of the annuitants named in the list and twenty-one years thereafter. The distribution of the entire corpus of the fund remaining with the trustee is then to be made as provided for in the will.

The use of the words "under the statute" in the will, providing for the termination of 333] the trust when the law requires *it under the statute, is not material. It must be assumed that the testator was not positive as to the time provided by law for the duration of a trust, or whether it was limited by any particular statute. It is enough to know that his desire was to have the trust continue as long as was legally possible, and consistent with distribution as directed, and that the estate was to be then distributed, and hence the trust to pay the annuities was to cease when it would no longer be consistent with the provision for distribution. As the testator has mentioned annuitants to whom payments are to be made, it is most reasonable to infer from that fact that their lives and the life of the survivor of them were the lives he had in view, and therefore they are to be regarded as selected by him. The fact that in the meantime, when an annuitant died, payment was to be made to his heirs, does not affect the limitation to the survivor of the annuitants. His death then terminates the class, and 53 L. ed.

twenty-one years from that time distribution is to be made.

As the question whether a valid trust has been created depends upon the construction to be given to the language of this particular will, reported cases in regard to the language used in other wills (unless similar to this in their facts) are not of great benefit in the solution of the question as to the intention of the testator in the will before us. The case of Pownall v. Graham, 33 Beav. 242 (Gray, Rule against Perpetuities, § 219), seems, however, to be as nearly in point as any to be found. There the question was as to what lives were to be taken as measuring the limitation of the trust, as none had been directly selected in so many words by the testator; but it was thought, upon looking over the entire will, that the testator intended a certain class of lives mentioned in it as the limitation of the trust, and the court accordingly so decided. Counsel for the heirs have criticized the application of that case, but we think unsuccessfully.

Some light is also to be found in a certain class of English cases, known as the Heirloom Cases, where bequests of personal *property were made to go as heirlooms[334 along with certain real property, "as far as the rules of law and equity will permit." These cases are to be found in Gray on Rule against Perpetuities, notes to §§ 363-367. They are cited for the purpose of showing that a limitation in a gift, "as far as the rules of law and equity will permit," is not bad for uncertainty, and that the period of limitation to be taken is to be determined from a consideration of the whole will. They strengthen the proposition that it is not necessary to find in the will, in so many words, the selection of lives, but that such selection is good if, from a consideration of the whole will, that selection can be ascertained.

Counsel for the heirs contend that there is as much reason for including the Kona Orphanage among the lives of the annuitants as a limitation of the trust as there is to say that the limitation includes only the individual annuitants. The orphanage is a corporation or joint stock company, and could not be included in or constitute a life in being within the rule of which we are speaking. To include it would render the trust void, and the testator intended a valid trust.

We see no reason for holding that the number of annuitants, which, it is said, exceeds forty, is too large for a valid limitation of the trust. There are cases cited from the English reports showing that even a larger number than that has been held not to exceed a valid limitation, and in Hum- berston v. Humberston, 1 P. Wms. 332, which is cited in Thellusson v. Woodford, 11 Ves. Jr. 112, 135, it would seem there were about fifty life estates.

We therefore sustain the validity of the trust in this case, and the question remaining is as to the disposition of the surplus income arising during the payment of the annuities. The will shows that the testator supposed there would be such surplus. Should it be accumulated or paid to the heirs of testator? We think the surplus, after paying annuities, must accumulate as part of the trust estate until the time arrives for the distribution of that estate, and 335] that such accumulation *must then be distributed as a part thereof to those who will then have the right to take the estate as provided for in the will. The accumulation is to be treated as a surplus arising from both real and personal estate, and the person or persons entitled to receive the main fund are to take the surplus as if it arose entirely from personalty. Some of the cases upon this subject are gathered in the brief of counsel for the trustee and it is not necessary to cite them here. Holding the trust to be valid, it is not now necessary to determine to whom the distribution is to be made when the time for distribution shall arrive.

The trust company is entitled to take the property and execute the trust. We do not understand that this is now controverted by counsel for any of the parties. In any event, it does not affect the validity of the trust. If the trustee named could not act, the court would appoint a trustee to carry out the provisions of the trust. Vidal v. Philadelphia, 2 How. 127, 191, 11 L. ed. 205, 231; Re McGraw, 111 N. Y. 66, 104, 2 L.R.A. 387, 19 N. E. 233.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Hawaii is affirmed.

EVA A. INGERSOLL, as Administratrix of the Estate of Robert G. Ingersoll, Deceased, Petitioner,

v.

JOSEPH A. CORAM, Henry A. Root, and Charles H. Palmer, Trustee.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 335-370.)

Courts — proper district for suit — waiver.

1. The objection that a suit in a Federal circuit court between citizens of different states is not brought in the proper district is waived by demurring and answering without raising that question.

[For other cases, see Courts, 938-941a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — conflict of jurisdiction — Federal and state courts.

2. The jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court of a controversy between citizens of different states, presented by a bill which seeks to declare and foreclose an attorney's lien upon certain interests in the distributive shares of the property of a decedent within the district, is not defeated because the settlement of the estate is pending in a state probate court, where no interference with that court is sought or decreed, and rights between the parties arising from their transactions and contracts are adjudged and are decreed to be redressed only when the probate court shall have finished its functions.

[For other cases, see Courts, VI. g, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — Federal jurisdiction — suit by assignee.

3. A suit to declare and enforce a lien on certain interests in distributive shares of the property of a decedent in the hands of an ancillary administrator is not within the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 629, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 503, governing Federal jurisdiction of suits by assignees of choses in action, because plaintiff's right is derived from an heir whose citizenship is the same as that of such administrator, where the plaintiff, who sues as administratrix, and who is a citizen of a different state from the defendant administrator, is suing primarily on the obligation of such heir to her intestate, to secure which a lien was given upon such heir's distributive share.

[For other cases, see Courts, 817-830, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — res judicata — parties.

4. A judgment against an ancillary administrator in a suit by him to declare and enforce a lien on certain interests in the distributive shares of the property of a decedent is not a bar to a suit founded on the same cause of action, brought by an ancil-

NOTE.—On proper district for suit in Federal court—see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

On waiver of right as to district in which suit may be brought—see note to Memphis Sav. Bank v. Houchens, 52 C. C. A. 192.

As to conflict of jurisdiction between Federal and state courts—see notes to Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 356, and J. I. Case Plow Works v. Finks, 26 C. C. A. 50.

On pendency of action in state or Federal court as ground for abatement of action in other—see notes to Wilson v. Milliken, 42 L.R.A. 449; Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co. v. Shoshone Min. Co. 47 C. C. A. 205; and Barnsdall v. Waltemeyer, 73 C. C. A. 521.

As to the exercise by courts of powers which bring them into collision—see notes to Carson v. Dunham, 3 L.R.A. 203, and Tefft v. Sternberg, 5 L.R.A. 221.

On suits by assignees in Federal courts—see notes to Goldsmith v. Holmes, 1 L.R.A. 817; Republic Iron Min. Co. v. Jones, 2 L.R.A. 746; and American Freehold Land & Mortg. Co. v. Thomas, 12 L.R.A. 681.

As to the lien of an attorney for compensation—see note to Texas v. White, 19 L. ed. U. S. 992.

lary administrator of the estate in another jurisdiction.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 814-819, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Attorneys — contract for compensation — performance.

5. The condition in a contract to pay an attorney in a will contest a stipulated fee "in case the will is defeated and our clients get their shares" is satisfied where the contest and the attorney's services result in a compromise agreement by which the will, which, as propounded, disinherited such clients, was so qualified in probate that they received a larger proportion of the estate than if the testator had died intestate.

[For other cases, see Attorneys, III. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Attorneys — lien for compensation.

6. An agreement to pay a stipulated fee for legal services to be rendered in a will contest, contingent upon success, which agreement, by way of exception in favor of one of the signers, stipulated against any other liability on his part than to pay such fee "out of the funds secured from the estate," gives the attorney, in case his efforts are successful, an equitable lien on such funds for his fee.

[For other cases, see Attorneys, III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 8.]

Argued March 11, 12, 1908. Decided December 7, 1908.

ON WRIT of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts in favor of petitioner in a suit to declare and enforce an attorney's lien upon certain distributive shares in the property of a decedent within the district. Reversed. Decree of the Circuit Court, with certain modifications, affirmed.

See same case below, 78 C. C. A. 303, 148 Fed. 169.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

The petitioner, as administratrix of the estate of Robert G. Ingersoll, deceased, sued the respondents and certain other persons, in the circuit court of the United States 337] for the district *of Massachusetts, to subject certain interests in the estate of Andrew J. Davis to a lien which is alleged to have accrued to her intestate by the agreement which is set out in the opinion, and by the laws of Montana, in which state the services were rendered.

Andrew J. Davis, a man of great wealth, a citizen of Montana, died, leaving property in that state and in Massachusetts. By a will, which was offered for probate in Montana, all of his property was left to his brother, John A. Davis. Certain other of his next of kin, five in number (referred to in the bill as the "five heirs"), associated to contest the probate of the will.

Henry A. Root, one of the respondents, and a nephew of Andrew J. Davis, agreed with the four other contestants to conduct the litigation and to procure evidence and counsel at his own expense, receiving therefor an assignment of a part of the prospective distributive shares of the others. Joseph H. Coram, another respondent, also acquired an interest in the prospective shares of some of the contestants. Robert G. Ingersoll, the petitioner's intestate, was engaged as counsel to conduct the litigation, and Root and Coram entered into the agreement with him, which will hereafter be set out.

Upon the trial of the contest the jury disagreed. Pending the preparation for the second trial an agreement of compromise was made, by which Ingersoll's clients received a larger portion of the estate than though Davis had died intestate. It is alleged that this was the result of Ingersoll's services as counsel. "By reason," it is alleged, "and in consideration of the prosecution of said contests, and the force, effect, and stress thereof, as against the proponent of such alleged will, in preventing the admission thereof to probate, and in consideration of the determination of said controversy and litigation, and for no other consideration or reason," was the compromise effected. It is hence further alleged that the "will was defeated in so far as it could affect the rights, shares, or interest in and to said estate of said five heirs mentioned in *said agreement and promise made[338 and delivered by said Root and Coram to said Robert G. Ingersoll, for as much as they were entitled to only 350 eleven hundredths of said estate as such heirs at law of Andrew J. Davis, deceased, and got absolute right and title to 515½ eleven hundredths thereof, through the prosecution of said contests and decree determining the same." Two hundred and fifty eleven hundredths, it is alleged, were allotted directly to said five heirs and 265½ eleven hundredths, for their use and benefit, to Charles H. Palmer (a respondent here) and Andrew J. Davis, Jr., trustees. A copy of the decree was annexed to the bill and made part of it. And it is alleged that, by reason of said agreement and the fulfilment thereof and the "provisions of the laws and statutes of Montana," which are set out, an attorney's lien accrued in favor of said Ingersoll and his legal representatives, "and is existing and is in force and effect upon the portions, parcels, and interests of, in, and to the funds and other property of said Andrew J. Davis, deceased, so acquired for said five heirs." That Root and Coram have conveyed away the real estate vested in them by the decree determining the said will contests, and that the distributions under said decree "have practically exhausted the funds and property of said estate in the state of Montana, and that, by reason of the employment of Ingersoll and the services rendered by him, and by the promises of payment, an equitable lien exists on the funds and effects acquired by said heirs, situate in Boston, Massachusetts," and that such funds and effects should not be distributed or carried away "in default of payments of said indebtedness owing by Root and Coram to the estate and legal representatives of Robert G. Ingersoll, deceased, but that said funds and effects situate in Boston, Massachusetts, should be and remain subject to said indebtedness, and to be resorted to for the payment thereof."

It is alleged that John H. Leyson is the duly appointed, qualified, and acting administrator of the estate of Andrew J. Davis, deceased, situate in Massachusetts, and has custody of the funds and effects acquired [339] by Root and his associates, and *upon which the said lien exists in favor of the estate and legal representatives of Ingersoll, and that, if such funds and effects should be distributed, the lien will be defeated.

The death of Ingersoll in the state of New York is alleged, and the appointment of Eva A. Ingersoll, administratrix, by the surrogate's court of the county of Westchester, of that state, and her qualification. And it is alleged that she was subsequently appointed administratrix of his estate by the probate court of the county of Suffolk, commonwealth of Massachusetts, situate in that commonwealth, and that she duly qualified as such. It is alleged that the estate of Andrew J. Davis, situate in Boston, and in the hands of said John H. Leyson as administrator, consists of money, convertible stocks and bonds of the value of $450,000, after paying expenses of administration, of which funds and effects Coram and other parties for whom Ingersoll prosecuted said will contest are entitled, by virtue of the decree of the district court of the state of Montana, directly and through Charles H. Palmer and Andrew J. Davis, Jr., to 515½ eleven hundredths, "acquired as part of the fruits of the labors of said Robert G. Ingersoll in the prosecution of said will contests." That Root, Coram, and their associates have petitioned the probate court of Suffolk county to order distribution of said shares of said funds and effects to them. That all of said 515½ eleven hundredths, except the interest owned by Sarah Maria Cummings and the interest owned by Ellen S. Cornue, are subject to the lien of Ingersoll. It is alleged that the interests of Elizabeth S. Ladd and Mary L. Dunbar have been transferred to Root and Coram.

A conspiracy and purpose of Coram and Root to defeat the lien of Ingersoll are alleged, and that distribution of the estate in Massachusetts is sought as a means thereto; further, that if the funds and effects be removed from Massachusetts or distributed to Root and Coram before the representatives of said Ingersoll have an opportunity to enforce their lien, the same will be placed beyond their reach and the payment or *the indebtedness secured thereby de-[340]feated; that the funds and effects remaining in Montana will be required and used to pay indebtedness and expenses of administration there; and that Root and Coram have no tangible property other than their shares and interest in the estate of Davis.

It is further alleged that petitioner brought suit in the district court of the state of Montana in her name, as administratrix of Robert G. Ingersoll, to enforce payment of said claim existing in favor of the estate and legal representatives of Ingersoll. That Root and the other defendants therein appeared and demurred to the complaint on the ground that the same did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, but did not specify or raise the objection that she was not qualified to prosecute said suit, although she alleged her appointment as administratrix by the surrogate's court of New York. That, upon her urging the pendency of said suit against the petition for distribution filed by Root and Coram and their associates, it was objected that said suit had not been brought by an administrator of Ingersoll appointed in Montana. The court sustained the objection. That thereupon John S. Harris was appointed administrator in Montana, and substituted in said suit for petitioner. The cause coming on to be heard in the district court of Montana, Root objected to the introduction of any evidence, on the ground that the complaint therein did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The motion was sustained, and, without further proceedings, the court granted a nonsuit and dismissed the complaint on the alleged ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; in consequence no trial thereof has been had, nor has the claim and lien of Ingersoll even been adjudicated, nor is it barred by any statute of limitation.

The bill prays an injunction against Leyson to restrain him from delivering, and against respondents to restrain them from receiving, said funds and effects, and for the appointment of a receiver, discovery of Coram's interest, and judgment for *the[341] same, and that it be declared a lien on such interest. Judgment is prayed against Root for $95,000, with interest, and that the sum be declared a lien on his shares and interests. What else is prayed need not be noticed.

There were demurrers to the bill that went to the parties, the jurisdiction of the court, to the merits, and that the judgment of the district court of Montana constituted a bar. The grounds of demurrer to jurisdiction were expressed in the demurrer filed by Root and Coram and Herbert P. Cummings, executor of the last will and testament of Sarah Maria Cummings, one of the five heirs, as follows:

"2. These defendants also demur to the bill of complaint upon the further ground that this court has not jurisdiction of this action, because it appears from the said bill that this action is brought to secure from this court a writ of injunction staying proceedings now pending in the probate court in and for the county of Suffolk and commonwealth of Massachusetts, to distribute the funds and effects of the estate of Andrew J. Davis, deceased, situate in the state of Massachusetts, among the persons entitled thereto, or to otherwise dispose of said funds and effects, and this court is forbidden by § 720 of the United States Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581) from granting a writ of injunction to stay proceedings in any court of a state."

The demurrer of Leyson was more general, stating that the court "had no jurisdiction to grant the relief prayed for in the bill of complaint or any part thereof." And Andrew J. Davis particularized this by the specification that to enjoin the disposition of property in the hands of Leyson as administrator "would be an interference with the proceedings of the probate court of Suffolk county, having jurisdiction of the matter, and would be unauthorized and illegal."

The demurrers were overruled except as against certain parties, and except so far as the bill claimed a statutory lien. The court said: "No statutory lien can be maintained, and that portion of the bill must be regarded as ineffectual; and, as it is specially demurred to, it must be stricken out." 342]127 *Fed. 418. The bill was amended in compliance with the order of the court, making Charles H. Ladd, individually and as administrator of the estate of Elizabeth S. Ladd, a party. The bill, however, was subsequently ordered to be dismissed as to him, Mary Louise Dunbar (one of the five heirs), and Herbert R. Cummings, executor. 132 Fed. 168. They seem, however, to have been regarded as parties until the final disposition of the case, for they joined Coram, Root, and Palmer in an answer. Leyson filed a separate answer. In the answers some of the allegations of the bill were denied and others admitted. The answers also pleaded in bar of the suit the proceedings and judgment in the action brought in the district court of Butte county, state of Montana. Proofs were taken, the allegations of the bill were found to be true, and a decree entered for petitioner. 136 Fed. 689. Root, Coram, and Palmer took an appeal to the circuit court of appeals, the other respondents declining to join them, which court reversed the decision by a divided court. 78 C. C. A. 303, 148 Fed. 169. This certiorari was then granted.

Messrs. Hannis Taylor and E. N. Harwood argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Hollis R. Bailey and John H. Hazelton, filed a brief for petitioner:

The administrator appointed in Montana had no title to the chose in action.

Wilkins v. Ellett, 9 Wall. 740, 19 L. ed. 586; Wilkins v. Ellett, 108 U. S. 256, 27 L. ed. 718, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Harper v. Butler, 2 Pet. 239, 7 L. ed. 410; Wyman v. Halstead (Wyman v. United States) 109 U. S. 654, 27 L. ed. 1068, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Thorne v. Watkins, 2 Ves. Sr. 36; Eccls v. Holder, 12 Fed. 668; May v. Logan County, 30 Fed. 250; Van Bokkelen v. Cook, 5 Sawy. 591, Fed. Cas. No. 16,831; Rand v. Hubbard, 4 Met. 252; Pinney v. McGregory, 102 Mass. 186; Petersen v. Chemical Bank, 32 N. Y. 21, 88 Am. Dec. 298; St. John v. Hodges, 9 Baxt. 334; Re Cape May & D. B. Nav. Co. 51 N. J. L. 82, 16 Atl. 191; Gove v. Gove, 64 N. H. 503, 15 Atl. 121; State Tax on Foreign-held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179.

There is no privity of administrators appointed in different states either "in law or in estate."

Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. 467, 497, 11 L. ed. 1059, 1073; Stacy v. Thrasher, 6 How. 44, 12 L. ed. 337; Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 35 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960; Merrill v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. 103 Mass. 245, 4 Am. Rep. 548; Low v. Bartlett, 8 Allen, 262; Ela v. Edwards, 13 Allen, 48, 90 Am. Dec. 174; Taylor v. Barron, 35 N. H. 484; Brown v. Fletcher, 146 Mich. 401, 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 632, 123 Am. St. Rep. 233, 109 N. W. 686; St. John v. Hodges and Pinney v. McGregory, supra.

There is an equitable lien existing in favor of the complainant by virtue of the contract, promises, pledges, and other facts shown in the bill and established by admissions and proofs.

Turwin v. Gibson, 3 Atk. 719; Barnesley v. Powell, 1 Ambl. 102; Welsh v. Hole, 1 Dougl. K. B. 238; Ormerod v. Tate, 1 East, 464; Randle v. Fuller, 6 T. R. 456; Read v. Dupper, 6 T. R. 361; Andrews v. Morse, 12 Conn. 444, 31 Am. Dec. 752; McDonald v.

Napier, 14 Ga. 110; Weed Sewing Mach. Co. v. Boutelle, 56 Vt. 570, 48 Am. Rep. 821; Renick v. Ludington, 16 W. Va. 378; Sexton v. Pike, 13 Ark. 193; Carter v. Davis, 8 Fla. 183; Rooney v. Second Ave. R. Co. 18 N. Y. 371; Warfield v. Campbell, 38 Ala. 527, 82 Am. Dec. 724; Ex parte Lehman, 59 Ala. 631; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116, 28 L. ed. 915, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Wylie v. Cox, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753, 5 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 336; Stanton v. Embrey, 93 U. S. 556, 23 L. ed. 985; McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404, 24 L. ed. 746; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 865, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Goad v. Hart, 128 Cal. 197, 60 Pac. 761, 964; Maddaugh v. Wilson, 151 U. S. 333, 38 L. ed. 183, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Cowdrey v. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. 93 U. S. 352, 23 L. ed. 950; Semmes v. Whitney, 50 Fed. 666; Mahone v. Southern Teleg. Co. 33 Fed. 702; Frink v. McComb, 60 Fed. 486; Tuttle v. Claflin, 31 C. C. A. 419, 59 U. S. App. 602, 88 Fed. 122; Needles v. Smith, 32 C. C. A. 226, 58 U. S. App. 276, 87 Fed. 316; Foster v. Danforth, 59 Fed. 750; Weeks v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 73 Mich. 256, 41 N. W. 269; Carpenter v. Myers, 90 Mich. 209, 51 N. W. 206; Justice v. Justice, 115 Ind. 201, 16 N. E. 615; Stratton v. Hussey, 62 Me. 286.

The language used in the contract with Colonel Ingersoll "should receive a fair and reasonable interpretation, so as to attain the objects for which the instrument is designed, and the purpose to which it is applied."

Lawrence v. McCalmont, 2 How. 449, 17 L. ed. 334; Nash v. Towne, 5 Wall. 689, 18 L. ed. 527; Wylie v. Cox; McPherson v. Cox; Walker v. Brown; and Maddaugh v. Wilson,—supra; Mackall v. Willoughby, 167 U. S. 681, 42 L. ed. 323, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 954; Noonan v. Bradley, 9 Wall. 405, 19 L. ed. 761; Ballard v. Carr, 48 Cal. 74; Howard v. Throckmorton, 48 Cal. 482; Thurber v. Meves, 119 Cal. 35, 50 Pac. 1063, 51 Pac. 536; Chester v. Jumel, 125 N. Y. 237, 26 N. E. 297, 2 Silv. Sup. Ct. 159, 5 N. Y. Supp. 809; Justice v. Justice and Goad v. Hart, supra; Gliddon v. McKinstry, 25 Ala. 246.

The will was defeated.

Century Dict. "Defeat;" 2 Co. Litt. Hargrave's ed. 236b, § 384; "Defeasance;" Comyn's Dig. "Defeasance;" Bouvier's Law Dict. "Defeasance;" Simmons v. West Virginia Ins. Co. 8 W. Va. 486.

If there had been any possible ground of dissatisfaction on the part of Colonel Ingersoll's clients as to the proceedings by which the will was defeated and their shares secured, it was waived. But there was none.

Swain v. Seamens, 9 Wall. 254, 19 L. ed. 554; Scott v. Jackson, 89 Cal. 258, 26 Pac. 898.

The right of Colonel Ingersoll's clients to share in the distribution of the estate of Andrew J. Davis, deceased, had to be established, if established at all, according to the law of his domicil.

Armstrong v. Lear, 8 Pet. 52, 8 L. ed. 863.

Their rights were established beyond all question according to the law of the domicil by the stipulations, proceedings, and decree determining the will contests, as affirmed by the highest court of the state.

Re Davis, 27 Mont. 237, 70 Pac. 721.

The rights so established will be given effect wherever said Andrew left estate.

Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 14 L. ed. 472; Armstrong v. Lear, supra; Wilkins v. Ellett, 9 Wall. 740, 19 L. ed. 586; Shannon v. White, 109 Mass. 146.

The decree determining the will contests prosecuted by Colonel Ingersoll, and mentioned in the contract with him, superseded and took the place of the will, and itself became the basis of administration, and controlling as to the devolution of the property of said estate; and further declared that said five heirs are, in effect, distributees of the estate.

Re Davis, supra.

Colonel Ingersoll's clients got their shares.

Ibid.; Goad v. Hart; Mackall v. Willoughby; and Gliddon v. McKinstry,—supra.

In the courts of chancery, executors and administrators are considered as trustees. And when an administrator or trustee is made party to a suit touching the trust estate, he represents the interests of each cestui que trustent, of whose interests he is presumed to have full knowledge.

Green v. Creighton (Kendall v. Creighton) 23 How. 90, 16 L. ed. 419; Wilkins v. Ellett, 108 U. S. 256, 27 L. ed. 718, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Concoran v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 94 U. S. 741, 24 L. ed. 190; Richter v. Jerome, 123 U. S. 233, 31 L. ed. 132, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Semmes v. Whitney, 50 Fed. 666.

It is, moreover, unnecessary to make the assignor of a thing party to a suit against the assignee touching the thing assigned.

Robertson v. Carson, 19 Wall. 94, 22 L. ed. 178; South Fork Canal Co. v. Gordon, 6 Wall. 561, 18 L. ed. 894; West v. Randall, 2 Mason, 181, Fed. Cas. No. 17,424; Fitch v. Creighton, 24 How. 159, 16 L. ed. 596.

It is not necessary to join in an action persons who have assigned, and disclaim any right to, the property or interests to which the action relates.

Fitch v. Creighton; Robertson v. Carson; and South Fork Canal Co. v. Gordon,—supra.

A court of equity has power to foreclose a lien on the interests of Coram and Root in said funds and effects, although they are in the custody of an administrator.

Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260; Hook v. Payne, 14 Wall. 252, 20 L. ed. 887; Turwin v. Gibson, 3 Atk. 719; Green v. Creighton, supra; Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 11, 26 L. ed. 439; Wylie v. Cox, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753; Semmes v. Whitney, supra; Palmer v. Whitney, 166 Mass. 306, 44 N. E. 229; Davis v. Newton, 6 Met. 537; Ricketson v. Merrill, 148 Mass. 76, 19 N. E. 11.

The circuit court had power to enjoin, as provided in its foreclosure decree in the case at bar, the delivery of the funds on which complainant's lien rests, to defendants.

Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 33 L. ed. 538, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; French v. Hay (French v. Stewart) 22 Wall. 250, 22 L. ed. 857; Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 308, 25 L. ed. 476; Hart v. Sansom, 110 U. S. 151, 28 L. ed. 101, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; Lawrence v. Nelson, 143 U. S. 215, 36 L. ed. 130, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; McDaniel v. Traylor, 196 U. S. 415, 49 L. ed. 533, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Riverdale Cotton Mills v. Alabama & G. Mfg. Co. 198 U. S. 188, 49 L. ed. 1008, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629.

The injunction clauses of the decree are framed strictly within the rules of law laid down in decisions of this court; and do not, in the slightest degree, interfere with the administration of said estate anywhere. Ibid.

The Federal courts have no original probate jurisdiction.

Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; Garzot v. Rios de Rubio, 209 U. S. 283, 52 L. ed. 794, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

A Federal court, exercising its equity jurisdiction in a proper case, may adjudicate, establish, protect, and enforce any equitable right in property in the hands of an administrator, where it may be done without taking possession of the estate, or interfering with the ordinary probate administration thereof.

Byers v. McAuley and Wylie v. Cox, supra.

Whatever equity jurisdiction has lately been vested by statute in the probate courts of Massachusetts must be exercised independently of their ordinary probate jurisdiction.

Sherman v. American Cong. Asso. 51 C. C. A. 329, 113 Fed. 609; Bennett v. Kimball, 175 Mass. 199, 55 N. E. 893; Green v. Gaskill, 175 Mass. 265, 56 N. E. 560.

The case at bar has in view the establishment of a lien on certain shares of funds and effects, which, although now in the hands of an administrator of an estate already settled, with the exception of possibly a few minor details, as shown without dispute, will be distributed to the parties holden for the debt secured by that lien. The administrator is a necessary party for the purpose of the suit and to protect the lien on the shares in his hands subject thereto, which he will have for distribution to the parties holden for the debt secured by the lien. The lien can only be established and protected by a court of equity jurisdiction.

Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075; Fletcher v. Morey, 2 Story, 555, Fed. Cas. No. 4,864; Pinch v. Anthony, 8 Allen, 536; Hovey v. Elliott, 118 N. Y. 124, 23 N. E. 475.

No probate court, as such, could adjudicate the question of debt and the existence of the lien involved in the case at bar.

Ferris v. Higley, 20 Wall. 375, 22 L. ed. 383.

If the probate court of Suffolk county, Massachusetts, is invested with any equity jurisdiction, it must be exercised separately from its probate jurisdiction, and is concurrent with that of other equity courts of Massachusetts, state and Federal.

Bennett v. Kimball and Green v. Gaskill, supra; Sherman v. American Cong. Asso. 51 C. C. A. 332, 113 Fed. 612.

Moreover, all equitable remedies provided by state laws to be administered by state courts possessing equity jurisdiction, for the protection and enforcement of an equitable right, interest, or lien in or upon property in the hands of an administrator, will be likewise administered by the Federal circuit court in that state, in a proper case belonging to the chancery jurisdiction. But no abridgment of the equity jurisdiction of the state courts by state law would restrict or impair the chancery jurisdiction of the Federal court sitting in that state.

Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260; Green v. Creighton (Kendall v. Creighton) 23 How. 90, 16 L. ed. 419; Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15, 28 L. ed. 52, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 33 L. ed. 909, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Bardon v. Land & River Improv. Co. 157 U. S. 327, 39 L. ed. 719, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Rich v. Braxton, 158 U. S. 405, 39 L. ed. 1032, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1006; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 516, 42 L. ed. 819, 838, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Byers v. McAuley, supra.

A citizen of another state may establish a debt against the estate.

Yonley v. Lavender, 21 Wall. 276, 22 L. ed. 536; Hess v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 28 L. ed. 927, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377.

In like manner, a distributee, citizen of another state, may establish his right to a share in the estate, and enforce such adjudication against the administrator personally, or his sureties (Payne v. Hook, supra) or against any other parties subject to liability (Borer v. Chapman, 119 U. S. 587, 30 L. ed. 532, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342), or in any other way which does not disturb the possession of the property by the state court.

Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 620, 37 L. ed. 873, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

The only qualification in the application of this principle is, that the courts of the United States, in the exercise of their jurisdiction over the parties, cannot seize or control property while in the custody of a court of the state.

Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 617, 618, 37 L. ed. 872, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

A controversy as to the existence of a debt and lien on property to secure it, or other equitable right in property in the hands of an administrator or executor, may be adjudicated and determined by a court of equity without seizing or taking actual possession of the property on which the lien rests.

Wylie v. Coxe, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753; McComb v. Frink, 149 U. S. 629, 37 L. ed. 876, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 993; Canfield v. Canfield, 55 C. C. A. 169, 118 Fed. 1; Richardson v. Green, 9 C. C. A. 565, 15 U. S. App. 488, 61 Fed. 423; Van Bokkelen v. Cook, 5 Sawy. 587, Fed. Cas. No. 16,831; Snyder v. McComb, 39 Fed. 292. See also Semmes v. Whitney, 50 Fed. 666; Davis v. Newton, 6 Met. 537; Moses v. Murgatroyd, 1 Johns. Ch. 119, 7 Am. Dec. 478; Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116.

The courts are constantly adjudicating and establishing such rights without taking actual custody of funds or other personal property which is subject to the lien or other equitable right.

Hovey v. Elliott, supra; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L. ed. 666; Turwin v. Gibson, 3 Atk. 719; Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 11, 26 L. ed. 439; Moses v. Murgatroyd; Pierce v. Robinson; and Davis v. Newton,—supra; Marriot v. Marriot, 1 Strange, 666, Gilbert, Eq. Rep. 203; Semmes v. Whitney and Wylie v. Coxe, supra; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 865, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453.

The equity jurisdiction of the Federal circuit court, sitting in any state, is as extensive, speaking generally, as that of any court of such state. For besides the general chancery jurisdiction of the Federal court,—co-extensive with that of the English chancery,—if there be state law giving to its equity courts additional equitable remedies, the Federal court will also administer them in a proper case, lying within chancery cognizance.

Bardon v. Land & River Improv. Co.; Gormley v. Clark; Holland v. Challen; Rich v. Braxton; and Smyth v. Ames,—supra; Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 431, 37 L. ed. 804, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 883, 977.

The equity jurisdiction of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts is entirely sufficient for the purposes of the relief sought by complainant and granted in the decree in the case at bar.

Ingersoll v. Coram, 127 Fed. 422; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. p. 511, § 294; Davis v. Newton, supra; Palmer v. Whitney, 166 Mass. 306, 44 N. E. 229; Maynard v. Cleaves, 149 Mass. 307, 21 N. E. 376; Forbes v. Lothrop, 137 Mass. 523; Snyder v. Smith, 185 Mass. 58, 69 N. E. 1089; Lenz v. Prescott, 144 Mass. 515, 11 N. E. 928; Ricketson v. Merrill, 148 Mass. 76, 19 N. E. 11; Re Angle, 148 Cal. 102, 82 Pac. 668; Saunders v. Strobel, 64 S. C. 489, 42 S. E. 429; Earle v. Grove, 92 Mich. 285, 52 N. W. 615; Lawson v. Virgin, 21 Ga. 356; Sayre v. Flournoy, 3 Ga. 541; Selman v. Milliken, 28 Ga. 366; Bennick v. Bennick, 62 N. C. (Phill. Eq.) 45; Napier v. Howard, 3 Ga. 193; Greer v. Simrall, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1037, 59 S. W. 759; Cassady v. Grimmelman, 108 Iowa, 695, 77 N. W. 1067; Oppenheimer v. Collins, 115 Wis. 283, 60 L.R.A. 406, 91 N. W. 690.

A Massachusetts court of equity would, as we have shown, apply the remedies which have been applied in the case at bar, to protect and enforce complainant's equitable right in the funds in the hands of the administrator, although they be in probate administration. So may the Federal circuit court, sitting in Massachusetts, apply the same equitable remedies to a case cognizable in chancery, even though it be an enlarged remedy given by statute.

Clark v. Smith, 13 Pet. 195, 203, 204, 10 L. ed. 123, 127; Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 10, 23 L. ed. 524; Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 33 L. ed. 909, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15, 28 L. ed. 52, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Bardon v. Land & River Improv. Co.; Rich v. Braxton; Smyth v. Ames; and Richardson v. Green,—supra.

There is, moreover, direct statutory authority given to the United States circuit court to enforce any legal or equitable lien upon real or personal property within the district.

McDaniel v. Traylor, 196 U. S. 415, 49 L. ed. 533, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369.

The equity jurisdiction of the United States circuit court, for cases cognizable therein, is as complete and effective as that of any equity court in the land.

Harvey v. Richards, 1 Mason, 381, Fed. Cas. No. 6,184.

A court of equity will use the writ of injunction, and decree injunction provisions, to protect and enforce a lien on funds or other property which might be put beyond the reach of the lien holder.

Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1339; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075; Milnor v. Metz, 16 Pet. 221, 10 L. ed. 943; Dulaney v. Scudder, 36 C. C. A. 52, 94 Fed. 6; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 1339, 1340; Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 308, 25 L. ed. 473, 476; McKinney v. Curtiss, 60 Mich. 611, 27 N. W. 691; Sherman v. American Stove Co. 85 Mich. 169, 48 N. W. 537; Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co. v. Skinner, 91 Hun, 641, 36 N. Y. Supp. 1000; Lewis v. Dodge, 17 How. Pr. 229; Keller v. Payne, 22 Abb. N. C. 352, note, 1 N. Y. Supp. 148; Hendricks v. Morrill, 3 Silv. Sup. Ct. 21, 6 N. Y. Supp. 254; Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 33 L. ed. 538, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Williams v. Ingersoll, 89 N. Y. 508; Hovey v. Elliott, 118 N. Y. 124, 23 N. E. 475.

The United States circuit court, by statute, has jurisdiction to foreclose the lien, even if it had not personal jurisdiction over the defendants.

McDaniel v. Traylor, 196 U. S. 417, 49 L. ed. 535, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369.

With the parties before the court in person, having appeared, answered, and submitted their claims to the court for adjudication without objection as to the district in which the suit was brought, the court had jurisdiction in personam for all purposes, and for all relief which the cause and facts warrant.

Re Moore, 209 U. S. 490, 52 L. ed. 904, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 706; French v. Hay (French v. Stewart) 22 Wall. 250, 22 L. ed. 857; Watts v. Waddle, 6 Pet. 391, 8 L. ed. 438; Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 308, 25 L. ed. 476; Cole v. Cunningham, supra; Lewis v. Darling, 16 How. 1, 14 L. ed. 819.

The circuit court has jurisdiction to foreclose a lien on personal property in the hands of a third person, and to protect the equitable rights of the lienor, as owner of a beneficial interest in the property, entitled to the enjoyment of the specific fruits.

Hauselt v. Harrison and Phelps v. McDonald, supra.

The circuit court, in a case where the citizenship of parties entitles the complainant to come into that court, has jurisdiction in equity to ascertain, determine, and enforce the right of an heir, devisee, or legatee, in estate property in the hands of an administrator (Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260), and may construe a will, or declare a trust created by a writing which falls short of a will, and determine and enforce the rights of an heir, devisee, legatee, or cestui que trustent, in the estate property in the hands of an administrator, in the course of probate administration (Byers v. 53 L. ed.

McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906); or may enforce the right of an assignee of a distributive share or part thereof in the hands of an administrator or executor (per Mr. Justice Washington, in Mayer v. Foulkrod, 4 Wash. C. C. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 9,341); or declare a will admitted to probate by a state court void, and determine and enforce the rights of an heir where, by the state law, its courts of equity have jurisdiction to determine the validity of the will (Gaines v. Fuentes, supra; Richardson v. Green, 9 C. C. A. 565, 15 U. S. App. 488, 61 Fed. 423). The circuit court has jurisdiction to correct frauds or mistakes of an administrator with respect to disposition of estate property, though his acts have been sanctioned by order of the state probate court; and has jurisdiction to compel executors and administrators to account and distribute the assets in their hands.

Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260; Dodd v. Ghiselin, 27 Fed. 405; Sullivan v. Andoe, 4 Hughes, 290, 6 Fed. 641.

And there can be no doubt that an administrator invested with the apparent right to receive or recover by suit, property or money, may be compelled to deliver or pay it over to someone who established a better right, or that what was so recovered was held in trust for someone not claiming under the will or under the administrator.

Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 11, 26 L. ed. 439.

The United States circuit court has jurisdiction to foreclose an attorney's equitable lien on funds in the hands of an administrator in the court of probate administration.

Wylie v. Coxe, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753; Semmes v. Whitney, 50 Fed. 666.

The executor or administrator of either person entitled to share in the trust fund could sue Leyson in the United States circuit court, and have his share determined, if his citizenship and that of Leyson's permitted.

Mayer v. Foulkrod, supra.

When a court of equity takes jurisdiction by reason of the equitable right or interest involved, it will adjudicate and determine all matters necessary to grant complete relief, notwithstanding it relates to property in the hands of an administrator.

Payne v. Hook, supra.

The present suit is not to enforce the contents of a promissory note or other chose in action, against Leyson. It is to enforce a lien on funds in Leyson's hands. But if complainant were suing citizens of other states to enforce the contents of a chose in action, the title to which had devolved upon her by operation of law, as by appointment as administratrix, she could prosecute such suit in the Federal court even if her intestate could not have prosecuted a suit "in such court to recover the said contents."

Mayer v. Foulkrod, supra; Chappedelaine v. Dechenaux, 4 Cranch, 306, 308, 2 L. ed. 629, 630; Sere v. Pitot, 6 Cranch, 333, 3 L. ed. 240; Bushnell v. Kennedy, 9 Wall. 387, 19 L. ed. 736; Childress v. Emory, 8 Wheat. 643, 3 L. ed. 705; Rice v. Houston, 13 Wall. 66, 20 L. ed. 484; New Orleans v. Gaines (New Orleans v. Whitney) 138 U. S. 595, 34 L. ed. 1102, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Glass v. Coneordia Parish, 176 U. S. 207, 44 L. ed. 436, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Mayer v. Foulkrod, supra.

An attorney's equitable lien to secure his compensation for contesting a will on behalf of an heir has been foreclosed on the share of each heir in a fund arising from came to him by reason of defeating the will.

Justice v. Justice, 115 Ind. 201, 16 N. E. 615.

A court of equity will determine the share of each heir in a fund arising from the sale of estate property made under order of the county court, because the county court has only a summary jurisdiction given by the statute, and has no authority to grant relief as a court of equity.

Shaw v. Shaw, 4 Cranch, C. C. 715, Fed. Cas. No. 12,724.

The equity court will not only determine the share of each heir in such fund, but will charge each share with its proper equitable burden which arose or accrued by act of the owner thereof in favor of other parties to the action, entitled to such relief.

Ibid.

The court of equity will adjudicate, adjust, and determine all rights and interests of the parties properly before it, in or to such estate property, however complicated the same may be, and notwithstanding the fund or property is under the jurisdiction of the county court for certain administrative purposes prescribed by statute.

Ibid.

The court of equity will grant injunction against the custodians to stay the money and bonds in their hands until the further order of the court.

Ibid.

A court of equity has jurisdiction to, and will, determine, and cause to be distributed, the share of a single heir or distributee of estate property, in an administrator's hands. In order to do that the court may, and will, when necessary, require accounting by the administrator; and will also ascertain and apply foreign law governing the succession.

Harvey v. Richards, 1 Mason, 381, Fed. Cas. No. 6,184.

And the court will determine the legitimacy of the claim of heirship.

Harvey v. Richards, 2 Gall. 555, Fed. Cas. No. 6,183; Canfield v. Canfield, 118 Fed. 1, 55 C. C. A. 169; Sullivan v. Andoe, 4 Hughes, 290, 6 Fed. 641.

Those things will be done by a court of equity while the probate administration of the estate is in progress, and regardless of what may have been done or sanctioned by the probate court.

Sullivan v. Andoe, supra; Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260; Hook v. Payne, 14 Wall. 252, 20 L. ed. 887.

An executor and administrator is the trustee and proper representative of all persons interested in the personal estate; . . . consequently, when he is made a party to the bill filed by a distributee to sell the personal property of an estate and divide its proceeds, the other distributees are not necessary parties.

Alston v. Cohen, 1 Woods, 487, Fed. Cas. No. 265; Green v. Creighton (Kendall v. Creighton) 23 How. 90, 16 L. ed. 419; Payne v. Hook and Hook v. Payne, supra; Wormley v. Wormley, 8 Wheat. 422, 5 L. ed. 651; Harvey v. Richards, supra; West v. Randall, 2 Mason, 181, Fed. Cas. No. 17,424; Van Bokkelen v. Cook, 5 Sawy. 587, Fed. Cas. No. 16,831.

Courts of equity have jurisdiction to search out from among the personal assets of an estate, in the hands of an administrator for probate administration, that which belongs to a trust, determine the amount of it, and take the trust property away from the administrator, creditors, and succession, and deliver it to the cestui que trustent.

McComb v. Frink, 149 U. S. 629, 37 L. ed. 876, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 993; Walker v. Walker (Walker v. Beal) 9 Wall. 743, 19 L. ed. 814; Moses v. Murgatroyd, 1 Johns. Ch. 119, 7 Am. Dec. 478; Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116.

An equity court has jurisdiction to, and in a proper case will, determine what share of an unsettled and undistributed estate in the hands of an administrator an individual heir or distributee is entitled to, in order to subject that share to the debt of the heir or distributee; and to that end the equity court will restrain by injunction the administrator or executor from delivering such share to the heir or distributee.

Ricketson v. Merrill, 148 Mass. 76, 19 N. E. 11; Earle v. Grove, 92 Mich. 285, 52 N. W. 615; McKinney v. Curtiss, 60 Mich. 611, 27 N. W. 691; Napier v. Howard, 3 Ga. 193; Lawson v. Virgin, 21 Ga. 356; Selman v. Milliken, 28 Ga. 366; Bennick v. Bennick, 62 N. C. (Phill. Eq.) 45; Greer v. Simrall,

211 U. S.

22 Ky. L. Rep. 1037, 59 S. W. 759; Cassady v. Grimmelman, 108 Iowa, 695, 77 N. W. 1067; Oppenheimer v. Collins, 115 Wis. 283, 60 L.R.A. 406, 91 N. W. 690.

A court of equity will also determine the share of an heir or distributee in property of an unsettled estate in the hands of an administrator, in order to enforce the right of an assignee of the share, or part of the share, of such distributee, in the estate property.

Green v. Creighton, supra; Mayer v. Foulkrod, 4 Wash. C. C. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 9,341; Davis v. Newton, 6 Met. 537; Lenz v. Prescott, 144 Mass. 515, 11 N. E. 923; Re Angle, 148 Cal. 102, 82 Pac. 668; Saunders v. Strobel, 64 S. C. 489, 42 S. E. 429.

The court, exercising its equity jurisdiction to enforce an attorney's equitable lien, will not only determine the share of an heir in estate property, acquired for him by contesting a will, which stood in the way of his right to share in the estate (Justice v. Justice, 115 Ind. 201, 16 N. E. 615), but will, by injunction, protect and enforce the attorney's equitable lien (Wylie v. Cox, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753; Key v. Bank of United States, 1 Hayw. & H. 74, Fed. Cas. No. 7,746). And an administrator will be enjoined from delivering estate property to others where it is necessary to protect an attorney's equitable lien, or other equitable right or interest, in or upon funds or other property in his hands.

Wylie v. Cox; Lenz v. Prescott; Ricketson v. Merrill; Earle v. Grove; McKinney v. Curtiss; Lawson v. Virgin; and Selman v. Milliken,—supra.

Where a claim for services rendered by an attorney may be defeated by an assignment of the fund on which such claim is an equitable lien, the court will enjoin the payment of the claim, without the consent of the complainant.

Key v. Bank of United States, supra.

The paramount efficacy of the decree in the case at bar—more important than any other part of the relief—is the establishment of the equitable right of complainant to have her lien satisfied out of the portion of said money and bonds owned by Coram and Root, in this case, where they and the administrator and all parties interested in the portion of the estate decreed to Colonel Ingersoll's clients are present before the circuit court in person, except Cornue, who is also represented by the administrator. Complainant's right is thereby established on as solid footing as the right of Coram and Root, in the money and bonds in question. Her right, thus established, will have the same protection as theirs, and must be given effect whenever and wherever the shares of Root and Coram are to be passed over to them or their legal representatives or assigns. That is sufficient with respect to such affairs.

Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 33 L. ed. 538, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 308, 25 L. ed. 473, 476; French v. Hay (French v. Stewart) 22 Wall. 250, 22 L. ed. 857; Wylie v. Cox, supra; Mcdaugh v. Wilson, 151 U. S. 333, 38 L. ed. 183, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116, 28 L. ed. 915, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 501, 34 L. ed. 1023, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405; Canfield v. Canfield, 55 C. C. A. 169, 118 Fed. 1; Dulaney v. Scudder, 36 C. C. A. 52, 94 Fed. 6; Mahone v. Southern Teleg. Co. 33 Fed. 702; Frink v. McComb, 60 Fed. 486; Semmes v. Whitney, 50 Fed. 666; Davis v. Newton and Ricketson v. Merrill, supra; Hovey v. Elliott, 118 N. Y. 124, 23 N. E. 475; Rooney v. Second Ave. R. Co. 18 N. Y. 368; Earle v. Grove, 92 Mich. 285, 52 N. W. 615; McKinney v. Curtiss, 60 Mich. 611, 27 N. W. 691; Justice v. Justice, 115 Ind. 201, 16 N. E. 615; Stratton v. Hussey, 62 Me. 286; Renick v. Ludington, 16 W. Va. 378; Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116; Moses v. Murgatroyd, 1 Johns. Ch. 119, 7 Am. Dec. 478; Welsh v. Hole, 1 Dougl. K. B. 238; Ormerod v. Tate, 1 East, 464; Read v. Dupper, 6 T. R. 361; Turwin v. Gibson, 3 Atk. 719.

The English chancery jurisdiction, as exercised when our state and national governments were formed, had a direct and controlling effect upon the administration and disposition of estate property. This is shown in the part it took in the construction of wills, enforcing payment of legacies and distributive shares of estates to heirs of an intestate, and in other ways protecting their interests as well as that of the creditors.

Fonbl. Eq. 1835 Am. ed. pp. 524, 525; 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 579, 582.

Mr. Louis D. Brandeis argued the cause, and, with Mr. William H. Dunbar, filed a brief for respondents:

An equitable lien is not created by a promise to pay from a specified fund, unaccompanied by some sort of assignment.

Wright v. Ellison, 1 Wall. 16, 17 L. ed. 555; Christmas v. Russell (Christmas v. Gaines) 14 Wall. 69, 20 L. ed. 762; Trist v. Child (Burke v. Child) 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. ed. 623; Dillon v. Barnard, 21 Wall. 430, 22 L. ed. 673; Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457, 25 L. ed. 593; Ex parte Tremont Nail Co. Fed. Cas. No. 14,168; Re Butler, 44 C. C. A. 584, 105 Fed. 549; Strang v. Richmond, P. & C. R. Co. 41 C. C. A. 474, 101 Fed. 511; Columbus, S. & H. R. Co.'s Appeal, 109 Fed. 197; Cushing v. Chapman, 115 Fed. 237; Boyle v. Boyle, 116 Fed. 764; Bradley's Case, Ridgeway, t. Hardw. 194; Newell v. West, 149 Mass. 520, 21 N. E. 954; Rogers v. Hossack, 18 Wend. 319; Williams v. Ingersoll, 89 N. Y. 508; Cameron v. Boeger, 200 Ill. 84, 93 Am. St. Rep. 165, 65 N. E. 690; Silent Friend Min. Co. v. Abbot, 7 Colo. App. 73, 42 Pac. 318; Story v. Hull, 143 Ill. 506, 32 N. E. 265; Ford v. Garner, 15 Ind. 298; Seymour v. Aultman, 109 Iowa, 297, 80 N. W. 401; Phillips v. Hogue, 63 Neb. 192, 88 N. W. 180; Thomas v. New York & G. L. R. Co. 139 N. Y. 163, 34 N. E. 877; Christmas v. Griswold, 8 Ohio St. 558; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Portland, 37 Or. 33, 54 Pac. 814, 60 Pac. 563; Eib v. Martin, 5 Leigh, 132; Hicks v. Roanoke Brick Co. 94 Va. 741, 27 S. E. 596; Hossack v. Graham, 20 Wash. 184, 55 Pac. 36.

None of the acts set out in the bill of complaint, done after Colonel Ingersoll's death, created a lien.

Christmas v. Russell and Re Butler, supra; Re Lucan, L. R. 45 Ch. Div. 470; Addison v. Enoch, 48 App. Div. 111, 62 N. Y. Supp. 613, affirmed in 168 N. Y. 658, 61 N. E. 1127.

The authorities cited by the petitioner do not support the contention that an equitable lien exists. Examination of those cases shows that they do not support this proposition, but belong to one or another of several classes of wholly distinct cases.

Cases in which a court directs payment of counsel fees from a fund in its possession:

Cowdrey v. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. 93 U. S. 352, 23 L. ed. 950; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116, 28 L. ed. 915, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Meddaugh v. Wilson, 151 U. S. 333, 359, 38 L. ed. 183, 191, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Frink v. McComb, 60 Fed. 486; United States v. Boyd, 79 Fed. 858; Burden Cent. Sugar Ref. Co. v. Ferris Sugar Mfg. Co. 31 C. C. A. 233, 58 U. S. App. 166, 87 Fed. 810; Tuttle v. Clafin, 31 C. C. A. 419, 59 U. S. App. 602, 88 Fed. 122; Elk Fork Oil & Gas Co. v. Foster, 39 C. C. A. 615, 99 Fed. 495; Andrews v. Morse, 12 Conn. 444, 31 Am. Dec. 752; Abend v. Endowment Fund Commission, 174 Ill. 96, 50 N. E. 1052; Justice v. Justice, 115 Ind. 201, 16 N. E. 615; Weeks v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 73 Mich. 256, 41 N. W. 269; McKelvy's Appeal, 108 Pa. 615; Potter v. Ajax Min. Co. 19 Utah, 421, 57 Pac. 270; Gregory v. Pike, 15 C. C. A. 33, 21 U. S. App. 658, 33 U. S. App. 76, 67 Fed. 843; Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 501, 34 L. ed. 1023, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405.

Cases of statutory liens:

Semmes v. Whitney, 50 Fed. 666.

Cases of equitable lien created by assignment or transfer:

De Chambrun v. Cox, 9 C. C. A. 86, 20 U.

S. App. 347, 60 Fed. 471, Chester v. Jumel, 125 N. Y. 237, 26 N. E. 297; Dowell v. Cardwell, 4 Sawy. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 4,039; Commercial Bank v. Rufe, 92 Fed. 789; Holmes v. Evans, 129 N. Y. 140, 29 N. E. 233; Lanigan v. Bradley & C. Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 201, 24 Atl. 505.

The will of Andrew J. Davis, unaffected by any decree carrying out the compromise agreement, was admitted to probate in Massachusetts, and remains the only authority by which to determine the disposition to be made of the estate of the deceased in Massachusetts. The decree of the court in Montana, giving effect to the compromise agreements, was not filed with the will, but only at a subsequent hearing; the decree actually filed with the will was entitled to no effect and has received none. The court in Montana cannot direct how the estate in Massachusetts shall be disposed of. Whatever the administrator in Massachusetts does as to the estate there, under the direction or by authority of the probate court, or of the laws of the state, is binding, and he cannot be held to account in Montana for the property so disposed of.

Boston v. Boylston, 2 Mass. 384; Clark v. Blackington, 110 Mass. 369; Cowden v. Jacobson, 165 Mass. 240, 43 N. E. 98; Holcomb v. Phelps, 16 Conn. 127.

If the will had been admitted to probate in Montana, and had not been admitted to probate in Massachusetts, the property in the latter state would have been distributed as intestate property, and persons claiming under the will could not have recovered the property so distributable.

Walton v. Hall, 66 Vt. 455, 29 Atl. 803.

Upon a distribution according to the will, all the property in Massachusetts would go to John A. Davis, the residuary legatee. John A. Davis died in 1893. No administrator of his estate has been appointed in Massachusetts. No administrator appointed elsewhere could act as to his estate in Massachusetts. His next of kin did not acquire any direct right to his property, entitling them to collect it. The personal property of a decedent vests in the executor or administrator, and not in the next of kin.

Lawrence v. Wright, 23 Pick. 128.

If a legatee dies before receiving his legacy, the next of kin cannot recover it. The legacy belongs to the legal representatives of the deceased legatee.

Clapp v. Stoughton, 10 Pick. 463.

Even if there are no debts, and but a single person entitled as next of kin, such person cannot dispose of any of the property, and, therefore, cannot give a valid receipt for it. The right of the next of kin is absolutely limited to requiring an administrator to collect and account for the property.

Pritchard v. Norwood, 155 Mass. 539, 30 N. E. 80; Flynn v. Flynn, 183 Mass. 365, 67 N. E. 314.

These principles are elementary in the law of administration of decedents' estates, and are universally recognized.

Duchesse d'Auxy v. Soutter, 35 Fed. 809; Gardner v. Gantt, 19 Ala. 666; Dugger v. Tayloe, 60 Ala. 504; Costephens v. Dean, 69 Ala. 385; Hickox v. Frank, 102 Ill. 660; Alexander v. Stewart, 8 Gill & J. 226; Downing v. Porter, 9 Mass. 386; Taylor v. Brooks, 20 N. C. 273 (4 Dev. & B. L. 139); Bradford v. Felder, 2 M'Cord, Eq. 168; Kaminer v. Hope, 9 S. C. 253; Strickland v. Bridges, 21 S. C. 21; Stills v. Harmon, 7 Cush. 406.

The appellant has founded her case upon rights assumed to have been acquired by the defendants to share directly in the fund in Massachusetts. She cannot now ask relief upon the basis of an indirect right in the defendants to receive from the next of kin of John A. Davis what the latter may get, either from an administrator of John A. Davis's estate, appointed in Massachusetts, or from a distribution by the Montana court in case the fund is transmitted. There are no allegations in the bill to support such a claim, and her right to relief must be determined by the case she has stated.

Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 14 L. ed. 592; Grosholz v. Newman, 21 Wall. 481, 22 L. ed. 471; Andrews v. Farnham, 10 N. J. Eq. 91; Stucky v. Stucky, 30 N. J. Eq. 546.

The doctrine that personal property has a situs only at the domicil of the owner is a rule of convenience that never applied to the question of situs for purposes of administration, and that, for all purposes, is limited in its scope. The actual situs of tangible personal property is recognized wherever it becomes practically important.

Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 22, 35 L. ed. 613, 616, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

The same is true of intangible personal property. Even for purposes of taxation, debts due by residents to nonresidents may be recognized as property of the creditor within the jurisdiction where the debtor is found.

State Assessors v. Comptoir National d'Escompte, 191 U. S. 388, 48 L. ed. 232, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109.

This does not rest upon the ground that, if notes have been given, the physical presence of the notes determines the situs of the debt; for the physical presence in one state of notes made by citizens of another state, payable to the citizen of a third state, 53 L. ed.

does not warrant taxation where the notes are found.

Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 51 L. ed. 1106, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712.

For all practical purposes the presence of the debtor within a state establishes the existence of property of the creditor within that state.

By garnishment process such a debt may be seized at the domicil of the debtor, and applied to the satisfaction of the claim of a nonresident creditor; such seizure must be recognized and given effect in other jurisdictions.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797.

Upon the death of the creditor, the situs of the debt for purposes of dealing with it as property is recognized as at the domicil of the debtor, precisely as if the debt were a chattel.

Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

It has never been seriously doubted that, for purposes of founding administration, a debt constitutes assets of the deceased at the domicil of the debtor.

Wyman v. Halstead (Wyman v. United States) 109 U. S. 654, 656, 27 L. ed. 1068, 1069, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. 198 U. S. 458, 467, 49 L. ed. 1125, 1129, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1121; New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Woodworth, 111 U. S. 138, 28 L. ed. 379, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Murphy v. Creighton, 45 Iowa, 179; Moore v. Jordan, 36 Kan. 271, 59 Am. Rep. 550, 13 Pac. 337; McIlvoy v. Alsop, 45 Miss. 365; Re Ames, 52 Mo. 290; Church v. Church, 78 Vt. 360, 63 Atl. 228; Walton v. Hall, 66 Vt. 455, 29 Atl. 803.

The ancillary administrator does not derive his power over assets within the jurisdiction of his appointment from any act on the part of the principal administrator. His authority is derived from the power which appoints him,—the state within whose jurisdiction the property which he is to administer is situated. Indeed, the appointment of an ancillary administrator may precede the appointment of a principal administrator or executor.

Bowdoin v. Holland, 10 Cush. 17.

By virtue of his appointment, an ancillary administrator acquires power to deal with the assets within his jurisdiction.

Payment of a debt to him by a person at the time within the jurisdiction of the ancillary appointment is valid.

Wilkins v. Ellett, 108 U. S. 256, 27 L. ed. 718, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Woodworth, supra.

An ancillary administrator may bring suit against persons within his jurisdiction, to collect simple contract debts due the deceased, without requiring or receiving any assignment or authority from the principal administrator.

New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Woodworth, supra; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown, 187 U. S. 308, 47 L. ed. 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Noonan v. Bradley, 9 Wall. 394, 19 L. ed. 757; Pinney v. McGregory, 102 Mass. 186; Sulz v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 145 N. Y. 563, 28 L.R.A. 379, 40 N. E. 242; Fox v. Carr, 16 Hun, 434; Traflet v. Empire L. Ins. Co. 64 N. J. L. 387, 46 Atl. 204.

So far as property in a foreign jurisdiction is concerned, the domiciliary administrator has no right nor title that can conflict with the title of the ancillary administrator.

Bowdoin v. Holland, 10 Cush. 18.

The presence in New York of the letter of August 17, 1891, is immaterial.

Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 206, 47 L. ed. 439, 445, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 403, 51 L. ed. 1106, 1112, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712; New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Woodworth, 111 U. S. 138, 145, 28 L. ed. 379, 381, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364.

The authorized act of an ancillary administrator as to property of the intestate within his jurisdiction is binding everywhere.

If an ancillary administrator, in the course of his administration, and in accordance with the local law, sells property of the estate situated within the jurisdiction, the title of the purchaser is not open to attack elsewhere.

Holcomb v. Phelps, 16 Conn. 127; Wells v. Wells, 35 Miss. 638; Walton v. Hall, supra.

If a debtor within the jurisdiction of an ancillary administrator's appointment pays to him a debt due the estate, such payment is a valid discharge from all liability there or elsewhere.

Slocum v. Sanford, 2 Conn. 533; Stevens v. Gaylord, 11 Mass. 256.

If an ancillary administrator, under the authority of his appointment, brings suit upon a claim in favor of the estate, and against a person within the jurisdiction, and recovers judgment, that judgment is a merger of the claim, and no suit can thereafter be brought upon the same claim in that jurisdiction or elsewhere; and the ancillary administrator can, in his own name, sue to enforce the judgment in any other jurisdiction without the necessity of taking out administration there.

Biddle v. Wilkins, 1 Pet. 686, 693, 7 L. 220

ed. 315, 318; Wilkins v. Ellett, supra; Talmage v. Chapel, 16 Mass. 71.

An administrator de bonis non takes the title of the deceased in succession to the preceding administrator.

United States, use of Wilson v. Walker, 109 U. S. 258, 261, 27 L. ed. 927, 928, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Waterman v. Dockray, 78 Me. 139, 3 Atl. 49.

There is no privity of estate between him and his predecessor, but whatever the predecessor has lawfully done as to that property which passes to the administrator de bonis non is binding on the latter.

Bell v. Speight, 11 Humph. 451; Eckert v. Triplett, 48 Ind. 174, 17 Am. Rep. 735; Benson v. Rice, 2 Nott & M'C. 577.

If a claim has become barred by the statute of limitation against an original administrator, the administrator de bonis non is equally barred.

Wych v. East India Co. 3 P. Wms. 309; Heard v. Meader, 1 Me. 156.

In the case of succeeding trustees, there is the same absence of privity in any legal sense; but the holding and administration of property by trustees would become impossible if, whenever a new trustee was appointed, the acts of his predecessor in the lawful administration of his trust could be ripped up.

The rule is the same in the case of successive receivers. A receiver appointed in supplementary proceedings, who brings suit, is barred by the result of a former suit, brought by a former receiver.

Verplanck v. Van Buren, 76 N. Y. 247.

In the case of ancillary receivers an act done by one is binding, so far as it affects property within his jurisdiction, upon the principal and all other ancillary receivers of the same estate.

Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 272, 35 L. ed. 464, 470, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773.

Every administrator acts in a purely representative capacity as trustee or agent for the creditors and next of kin as to matters within his jurisdiction.

Yonley v. Lavender, 21 Wall. 276, 280, 22 L. ed. 536, 538; Tate v. Norton, 94 U. S. 746, 752, 24 L. ed. 222, 224; Cowen v. Adams, 24 C. C. A. 198, 47 U. S. App. 439, 78 Fed. 544; Blood v. Kane, 130 N. Y. 514, 15 L.R.A. 490, 29 N. E. 994.

Whatever the agent or trustee does within the scope of his authority is binding upon his principal or cestui que trust.

Meeks v. Olpherts, 100 U. S. 564, 25 L. ed. 735.

If a suit is brought against the administrator, the judgment recovered cannot, so far as the property within that jurisdiction is concerned, be attacked by the creditors or next of kin.

Pickens v. Yarborough, 30 Ala. 408; Morris v. Murphey, 95 Ga. 307, 51 Am. St. Rep. 81, 22 S. E. 635; Fraser v. Charleston, 19 S. C. 384.

A suit brought by an ancillary administrator is subject to the same principle as an act done touching tangible property.

Reynolds v. Stockton, supra.

A judgment in favor of an administrator on a cause of action belonging to the estate indisputably produces a merger; thereafter there can be no recovery except in an action on the judgment.

Biddle v. Wilkins, 1 Pet. 686, 7 L. ed. 315.

A cause of action may be merged as effectually and in the same sense legally by a judgment for the defendant as by a judgment for the plaintiff.

Sweet v. Brackley, 53 Me. 346; Weeks v. Harriman, 65 N. H. 91, 4 L.R.A. 744, 23 Am. St. Rep. 21, 18 Atl. 87.

If, by the laws of Montana, an administrator appointed in New York had been able to sue without ancillary appointment, as is the law in some states, and the plaintiff had herself prosecuted the suit to the end without the intervention of Harris, it is clear that she could not afterwards have sued on the same cause of action in New York. The judgment would have been binding upon her as principal administratrix.

Lawrence v. Nelson, 143 U. S. 215, 36 L. ed. 130, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440.

If an administrator, having the right to do so, has brought suit, the result of that suit must be final.

Reynolds v. Stockton, supra; Sulz v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assn. 145 N. Y. 563, 28 L.R.A. 379, 40 N. E. 242; Merrill v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. 103 Mass. 245, 4 Am. Rep. 548; Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. 467, 11 L. ed. 1059; Stacy v. Thrasher, 6 How. 44, 12 L. ed. 337; Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Carpenter v. Strange, 141 U. S. 87, 35 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 960; Taylor v. Barron, 35 N. H. 484; Brown v. Fletcher, 146 Mich. 401, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 632, 123 Am. St. Rep. 233, 109 N. W. 686; Cherry v. Speight, 28 Tex. 503; Carrigan v. Semple, 72 Tex. 306, 12 S. W. 178; Schouler, Exrs. & Admsrs. 3d ed. § 178; Black, Judgm. 2d ed. § 922.

So far as the compromise agreement was the contract of the next of kin, it cannot be enforced in this suit without joining them as parties. The right of the widow and next of kin was only a chose in action.

Hayward v. Hayward, 20 Pick. 517; Wheeler v. Bowen, 20 Pick. 563; Strong v. Smith, 1 Met. 476; Mechanics' Sav. Bank v. Waite, 15 Mass. 234, 22 N. E. 915.

The right assigned could be enforced only through the assignors. The assignment did not undertake to transfer the whole interest of the widow and next of kin. The assignee could not, therefore, require a separate payment, but must take satisfaction through the assignors.
53 L. ed.

Mandeville v. Welch, 5 Wheat. 277, 288, 289, 5 L. ed. 87, 90, 91.

The assignment being only of a part of the chose in action, the only rights acquired were dependent on the contract. There was no completed transfer.

Re Lucan, L. R. 45 Ch. Div. 470.

The determination of the rights under the contract, and the agreement of payment in favor of the assignees of part of the amount, requires, on the most liberal views of equity pleading, the presence of the assignors.

Hovey v. Elliott, 118 N. Y. 124, 23 N. E. 475.

The circuit court had no authority to interfere with the administration of the estate by the probate court for Suffolk county.

Yonley v. Lavender, 21 Wall. 276, 22 L. ed. 536; Borer v. Chapman, 119 U. S. 587, 600, 30 L. ed. 532, 537, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

The circuit court in adjudicating Root's interest in the property, exceeded its jurisdiction.

Byers v. McAuley, supra; Susquehanna & W. Valley R. & Coal Co. v. Blatchford, 11 Wall. 173, 20 L. ed. 179; Broderick's Will (Kieley v. McGlynn) 21 Wall. 503, 22 L. ed. 509; Ellis v. Davis, 109 U. S. 485, 27 L. ed. 1006, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 50 L. ed. 101, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Corbin v. Black Hawk County, 105 U. S. 659, 26 L. ed. 1136.

The orders of the circuit court as to the distribution of the property were an interference with the jurisdiction of the probate court.

Whitney v. Wilder, 4 C. C. A. 510, 13 U. S. App. 180, 54 Fed. 554; Evans v. Gorman, 115 Fed. 399; Chicago Trust & Sav. Bank v. Bentz, 59 Fed. 645; Foster v. Bank of Abingdon, 68 Fed. 723; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 20 L. ed. 666; Hale v. Coffin, 57 C. C. A. 528, 120 Fed. 470; Sherman v. American Cong. Assn. 51 C. C. A. 329, 113 Fed. 609.

The decree seeks to give the order of the court extraterritorial effect.

Emery v. Batchelder, 132 Mass. 452; Vaughan v. Northrup, 15 Pet. 1, 5, 10 L. ed. 639, 640.

The court cannot entertain such a suit unless there is a res of which it can take jurisdiction, Robertson v. Carson, 19 Wall. 94, 22 L. ed. 178; McBurney v. Carson, 99 U. S. 567, 25 L. ed. 378; Goodman v. Niblack, 102 U. S. 556, 26 L. ed. 229; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Bangs, 103 U. S. 435, 26 L. ed. 580; Mellen v. Moline Malleable Iron Works, 131 U. S. 352, 33 L. ed. 178, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 33 L. ed. 918, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Greeley v. Lowe, 155 U. S. 58, 39 L. ed. 69, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Dick v. Foraker, 155 U. S. 404, 39 L. ed. 201, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Compton v. Jesup, 167 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 55, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 795; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Jellenik v. Huron Copper Min. Co. 177 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 647, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; McDaniel v. Traylor, 196 U. S. 415, 49 L. ed. 533, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Citizens' Sav. & T. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 205 U. S. 46, 51 L. ed. 703, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425.

There was no res within the jurisdiction upon which the decree of the court could be enforced.

Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 615, 37 L. ed. 867, 871, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906; Hess v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 28 L. ed. 927, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377; Kennedy v. Creswell, 101 U. S. 641, 25 L. ed. 1075; Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260; Yonley v. Lavender and Borer v. Chapman, supra; Rio Grande R. Co. v. Gomila (Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet) 132 U. S. 478, 33 L. ed. 400, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Heidritter v. Elizabeth Oil-Cloth Co. 112 U. S. 294, 28 L. ed. 729, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135; Wabash R. Co. v. Adelbert College, 208 U. S. 38, 52 L. ed. 379, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; McDaniel v. Traylor, supra; Brendel v. Charch, 82 Fed. 262.

Every state has the right to prescribe how property found within its borders at the death of the owner shall be disposed of. Transmission of property after death is a privilege accorded by the law of the state where the property is. As such it may be taxed (Blackstone v. Miller, 188 U. S. 189, 47 L. ed. 439, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277); and for the same reason such transmission is wholly within the control of the legislature (Mager v. Grima, 8 How. 493, 12 L. ed. 1170).

The right of an individual under the laws of a state governing the devolution of property is a right the enforcement of which cannot, according to the decisions of this court, be limited to state tribunals. But the rules which shall determine such rights, and the method in which such rights shall be enforceable, are wholly within the control of the state legislature.

Security Trust Co. v. Black River Nat. Bank, 187 U. S. 211, 227, 47 L. ed. 147, 154, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52.

The state, in like manner, determines the nature of the proceedings which shall be had for the settlement of the estate, and their effect.

Farrell v. O'Brien, supra; Tilt v. Kelsey, 207 U. S. 43, 56, 52 L. ed. 95, 101, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

In conformity with these principles, a state may make such provision as to the disposition of property of deceased nonresidents found within its jurisdiction as it thinks fit, and may impose a tax upon the transmission of the property, although the state of the decedent's domicile collects a like tax on the same property. This tax is justified on the ground of the supreme power of the state over the privilege of transmitting property upon death.

Blackstone v. Miller, supra.

Since a state has this supreme power, whatever provisions it makes are controlling, and must be complied with in whatever court the questions may arise. The circuit court of the United States is bound to administer the same law as a state court in dealing with property in course of administration in Massachusetts.

Moreover, a state may confer upon a special tribunal exclusive power of administration. Probate of wills is very generally in the exclusive jurisdiction of state probate courts, and when such is the case, a Federal court has no jurisdiction of a proceeding for probate.

Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 110, 50 L. ed. 101, 111, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727.

So, too, while a Federal court may, when the necessary diversity of citizenship exists, take jurisdiction of and determine a controversy between individuals as to the share to which one is entitled, it cannot assume jurisdiction to administer the estate when, by the state law, that administration is confided to the probate court.

Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

A nonresident has a right, of which a state cannot deprive him, to have his controversies decided in a Federal court; but the only subject-matter of the suit in the Federal court must be the right of the nonresident to receive from the executor or administrator his share.

Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260; Hook v. Payne, 14 Wall. 252, 20 L. ed. 887; Byers v. McAuley, supra.

To determine the jurisdiction of the parties, the court must arrange the parties according to their actual interests. It is a claim of Root against Leyson that is to be enforced, and, in the establishment of that claim, although the purpose of establishing it may be inimical to Root, his interest is identical with the plaintiff's and therefore he must be classed, for purposes of determining the jurisdiction, as a plaintiff.

Pacific R. Co. v. Ketchum, 101 U. S. 289, 25 L. ed. 932; Evers v. Watson, 156 U. S. 527, 532, 39 L. ed. 520, 522, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430.

The necessity of establishing a claim at law before resorting to equity for its enforcement has always been strictly maintained by this court. Unless there is an actual existing lien or express trust as to property, a creditor desiring the assistance of a court of equity must first reduce his claim to judgment.

Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 37 L. ed. 804, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 883, 977; Hollins v. Brierfield Coal & I. Co. 150 U. S. 371, 37 L. ed. 1113, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127.

The circuit court is excluded from any exercise of jurisdiction which disturbs the possession of the property by the probate court, or the free exercise by the probate court of its jurisdiction over the property, and this limitation excludes jurisdiction of the case at bar.

Controversies in which a title is asserted adverse to the title of the deceased do not involve any question as to this limitation of jurisdiction.

Erwin v. Lowry, 7 How. 172, 12 L. ed. 655; Williams v. Benedict, 8 How. 107, 12 L. ed. 1007; Wiswall v. Sampson, 14 How. 52, 14 L. ed. 322; Peale v. Phipps, 14 How. 368, 376, 14 L. ed. 459, 462; Wylie v. Coxe, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753; Walker v. Walker (Walker v. Beal) 9 Wall. 743, 19 L. ed. 814; McComb v. Frink, 149 U. S. 629, 37 L. ed. 876, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 993; Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 865, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Snyder v. McComb, 39 Fed. 292; Semmes v. Whitney, 50 Fed. 666.

The limitation prevents any exercise of jurisdiction by other courts, inconsistent with the possession of property by the probate court, or with its exercise of exclusive jurisdiction in matters of probate administration.

Suydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. 67, 10 L. ed. 357; Williams v. Benedict, 8 How. 107, 12 L. ed. 1007; Union Bank v. Vaiden, 16 How. 503, 15 L. ed. 472; Green v. Creighton (Kendall v. Creighton) 23 How. 90, 16 L. ed. 419; Payne v. Hook and Hook v. Payne, supra; Yonley v. Lavender, 21 Wall. 276, 22 L. ed. 536; Broderick's Will (Kieley v. McGlynn) 21 Wall. 503, 22 L. ed. 599; Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 10, 23 L. ed. 524; Kittredge v. Race, 92 U. S. 116, 23 L. ed. 488; Tate v. Norton, 94 U. S. 746, 24 L. ed. 222; Kennedy v. Creswell, 101 U. S. 641, 25 L. ed. 1075; Ellis v. Davis, 109 U. S. 485, 27 L. ed. 1006, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Hess v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 28 L. ed. 927, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377; Borer v. Chapman, 119 53 L. ed.

U. S. 587, 30 L. ed. 532, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; Simmons v. Saul, 138 U. S. 439, 34 L. ed. 1054, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Clark v. Bever, 139 U. S. 96, 35 L. ed. 88, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Lawrence v. Nelson, 143 U. S. 215, 36 L. ed. 130, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440; Hayes v. Pratt, 147 U. S. 557, 37 L. ed. 279, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; Byers v. McAuley, supra; Security Trust Co. v. Black River Nat. Bank, 187 U. S. 211, 47 L. ed. 147, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52; Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 50 L. ed. 101, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727.

The determination of a claim on behalf of a creditor against the estate is not excluded by the jurisdiction of the probate court.

The right of a nonresident to establish his claim in a Federal court does not imply a right to satisfy his claim from the assets of the estate, except in the regular course of administration, pursuant to the state law.

Williams v. Benedict; Yonley v. Lavender; Kittredge v. Race; Hess v. Reynolds; Security Trust Co. v. Black River Nat. Bank; Borer v. Chapman; Lawrence v. Nelson; Tate v. Norton; and Kennedy v. Creswell,—supra.

As to any matter of probate administration not determinable under the law of the state by a proceeding inter partes, the jurisdiction of the probate court is exclusive.

Broderick's Will; Ellis v. Davis; and Farrell v. O'Brien,—supra.

Whether the remedy in a given case is by a proceeding inter partes or by a probate proceeding depends upon the law of the state.

Ellis v. Davis and Farrell v. O'Brien, supra; Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260; Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.

Under the law of Massachusetts there can be no proceeding inter partes to recover a distributive share until the probate court has ordered distribution.

Haskins v. Hawkes, 108 Mass. 379; Pritchard v. Norwood, 155 Mass. 539, 30 N. E. 80; Cathaway v. Bowles, 136 Mass. 54; Fletcher v. Fletcher, 191 Mass. 211, 77 N. E. 758.

The probate court of Suffolk county has not, as ancillary to its possession of the property, final jurisdiction to ascertain, declare, enforce, and foreclose a lien on a share in the fund.

Bennett v. Kimball, 175 Mass. 199, 55 N. E. 893; Green v. Gaskill, 175 Mass. 265, 56 N. E. 560; Lenz v. Prescott, 144 Mass. 505, 11 N. E. 923.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

A question of jurisdiction occurs. It was discussed somewhat in the original briefs of counsel, but questions were submitted to them as appropriate to elicit further discussion.†. We find it, however, more convenient and more conducive to brevity, in passing on the question of jurisdiction, to 355]be somewhat *general. The petitioner (and her intestate) were citizens of New York. The defendants in the suit below, nine in number, were citizens of Massachusetts. Coram was a citizen of Massachusetts. Root and Andrew J. Davis, trustee, were citizens of Montana. Leyson was also a citizen of Montana. It is hence contended that, while there was diversity of citizenship when the suit was brought, there was no jurisdiction against Root and Andrew J. Davis, they not being inhabitants of the district. The suit against them, it is further contended, was without jurisdiction also, because it was not brought either in the district of the residence of the plaintiff or the defendant. And this, it was said, was recognized by the bill, which prayed an order for the absent defendants to appear and plead in accordance with § 738 of the Revised Statutes, now act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, 472, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 508, 513). That act provides for notice to absent defendants in any suit "to enforce any legal or equitable lien . . . or cloud upon the title to real or personal property within the district." And it is urged that the circuit judge said that the proceeding could only be sustained under that act.

The objection that Massachusetts was not the district of the residence of either Root or Davis was not made to the bill. The objection to the jurisdiction made by the demurrers was to the jurisdiction of the circuit court to interfere with or stay proceedings in a probate court of the commonwealth of Massachusetts. It makes no difference how the parties were served or brought in. Being in, all objections to the bill should have been made. The bill prayed a personal judgment against Root as well as a lien upon his share, and those represented by Coram, in the hands of Leyson as administrator of Davis, deceased, and that Leyson be restrained from paying them and Root and Coram from receiving or carrying them away. And general relief was also prayed. In other words, the whole case arising from Ingersoll's service and the remedies for that service was presented. And to this case the defendants were summoned to answer. They did answer as to the jurisdiction of the court as to subject-matter, as to the relation of the *courts of the [356 United States to the courts of Massachusetts. They did not answer as to the jurisdiction of the court as to parties, as to the rights of the parties to be sued in the district of their residence. The latter objection may be waived, and is waived by not being made. Re Moore, 209 U. S. 490, 52 L. ed. 904, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 706.

To decide what jurisdiction the circuit court exercised we must consider the decree. It found all of the allegations of the bill to be true, and that there was due and owing to the plaintiff (petitioner here), on the contract executed by Coram and Root, the sum of $95,000, with interest, amounting in all to the sum of $138,010.83. It adjudged Root to be personally indebted and liable for that sum, and awarded execution against him, and for any balance that should be due if the property upon which the lien was declared, as presently mentioned, should not satisfy such indebtedness; that Coram was personally obligated and liable for the payment of said indebtedness upon the full amount which he had received, or should receive, from the shares of the estate of Andrew J. Davis, deceased, acquired for the five heirs mentioned in said agreement, or either of them, under or pursuant to the decree of the district court of the state of Montana. It was also found and decreed that there was in the state of Massachusetts, in the hands of John H. Leyson, as administrator of Andrew J. Davis, deceased, $337,862, and 137 bonds of the United States, and 170 bonds of the Butte & Boston Consolidated Mining Company, of which money and bonds and the increase thereof, the said five heirs of Andrew J. Davis, de-

†1. Has the circuit court jurisdiction to ascertain and declare a lien upon property in the possession of the administrator appointed by the probate court for the county of Suffolk and state of Massachusetts?

2. Has the circuit court jurisdiction to enforce by foreclosure a lien upon property so situated?

3. Has the circuit court jurisdiction to determine the shares of Root and Coram in the property so situated?

4. Has the circuit court jurisdiction, upon the pending bill, either in its present form or as it might be amended, to direct that Leyson, Root, Coram, or either of them, should hold any property coming into their hands by order of distribution of the probate court, upon the trust to satisfy the claim of the complainant?

5. To what extent, if any, is the jurisdiction of the circuit court limited or affected by the fact that the property from which payment is sought is in the hands of an administrator appointed by the probate court of Suffolk county?

6. Has the probate court of Suffolk county, as ancillary to its possession of the property, jurisdiction in equity to ascertain, declare, enforce, and foreclose a lien upon it?

ceased, and their legal representatives and successors in interest, were entitled to receive 515½ eleven hundredths under and pursuant to the decree of the district court of the state of Montana; and of which money and bonds and the increase thereof Coram and Root were entitled to have and receive 415½ eleven hundredths parts on distribution of such money and bonds by the proper court having jurisdiction thereof in the administration and distribution of the estate of Andrew J. Davis, deceased. Up-357]on such 415½ eleven hundredths *parts petitioner was decreed to have a lien "subject to all proper and lawful administration," as a part of the estate of Andrew J. Davis, deceased, "pursuant to the orders and decrees or judgments of the probate court of Suffolk county, Massachusetts, now having probate jurisdiction thereof, or any court which may hereafter have probate jurisdiction . . . to administer the same as part of the estate of said Andrew J. Davis, deceased, in the due and lawful course of administration thereof." A lien is decreed upon said money and bonds, and foreclosed, subject to the terms of the decree, wheresoever said money and bonds may be taken or removed, whether within or without the state of Massachusetts, and in the custody of whomsoever the same may come, "subject only to the proper and lawful probate and administration . . . pursuant to the orders, judgments, or decrees of the probate court of Suffolk county, in the state of Massachusetts, now having probate jurisdiction thereon . . . to administer the same as a part of the estate of Andrew J. Davis, deceased, in the due and lawful course of administration thereof." And it was decreed that, as soon as the probate administration is finished and distribution is ordered by the probate court having jurisdiction, that Leyson, as administrator, or his successor in custody thereof, should set apart and bring into court the said 415½ eleven hundredths of said money and bonds, to be applied to the satisfaction of the lien of complainant. It was decreed that each and all of the injunctive and restraining terms and commands of the interlocutory injunction order be made perpetual, and Leyson was enjoined and restrained, as administrator, from removing out of Massachusetts 415½ eleven hundredths parts of the money and bonds in his possession, "unless and until the proper court within the state of Massachusetts, having probate jurisdiction of such money and bonds, by its final order, judgment, or decree, directs such John H. Leyson, as such administrator, to remove such 415½ eleven hundredths of such money and bonds out of the state of Massachusetts."

*We have made this epitome of the[358 main provisions of the decree to show how careful the court was to require the observance of its direction expressed in its opinion that the decree should declare that nothing in it was intended to contravene, or should contravene, "any action of any probate tribunal in Massachusetts with reference to distribution, or to any order or judgment remitting to the courts of the domicile."

The decree therefore deals exclusively with the parties. It adjudges what contract they made, the extent of their obligation, and how that contract was secured. The remedies awarded are executed through the parties, and through Leyson only as he holds property to be delivered to the parties. No action of the probate court of Suffolk county is attempted to be restrained or limited or trenching upon, nor the property in its possession disturbed. And yet it is urged that the suit that sought this purpose and a decree that executes this purpose transcend the jurisdiction of a circuit court of the United States.

The proposition has been discussed at length by counsel, many cases cited and arguments advanced based upon the respective functions of courts of equity and probate.

The respondents especially rely upon the pendency of proceedings in the probate court of Suffolk county, and, as a corollary, that the property was in the possession of the probate court and under its jurisdiction, and, therefore, not within the jurisdiction of the circuit court. Respondents express and illustrate the latter conclusion in various ways. Their fundamental postulate, however, is that the circuit court has not power to disturb the possession of the property by the probate court or do any act which may interfere with the free exercise of jurisdiction by the probate court. This postulate is argued at length and many cases are cited. Besides, a statute of Massachusetts is relied upon which provides that, upon the settlement of an estate, and after the payment of all debts for which the same is liable in that commonwealth, the residue of the personal estate may be distributed and disposed *of in the manner provided-[359 ed by the will of a deceased, if he left any, or according to the laws of the state or country of which he was an inhabitant, "or, in the discretion of the court, it may be transmitted to the executor or administrator, if any, in the state or country where the deceased had his domicile, to be there disposed of according to the laws thereof." (Italics ours.)

We think, however, a lengthy discussion is not necessary. The controversy presented by the bill was one between citizens of different states, and there was that ground of jurisdiction in the circuit court, being a court of the United States. One object of the bill, among others, was to declare and foreclose a lien upon property within the district, and there was that ground of jurisdiction, and we do not think that jurisdiction thus established and supported was taken away by the mere fact that the settlement of the estate of Davis was pending in the probate court of Suffolk county. No interference with that court was sought or decreed, as we have seen. Rights between the parties, arising from their transactions and contracts, were only adjudged and only decreed to be redressed when the probate court should have finished its functions. Indeed, it may even be that the circuit court was too restrictive in the exercise of its power, for it may be disputed whether it is within the power of a state court to order property upon which there is a lien sent out of a district and thereby defeat the jurisdiction of a court of the United States to enforce such lien in cases where they have jurisdiction under the act of March 3, 1875. This question, however, does not arise, nor any question depending upon it; and the line of cases of which Wabash R. Co. v. Adelbert College, 208 U. S. 38, 52 L. ed. 379, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182, is an example does not apply, nor do the cases cited by respondents, but the case falls within the principles announced in Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 260, and Byers v. McAuley, 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906, and cases there cited.

The power of the court of equity to subject the share of a person under a lien, "and yet in the hands of an executor," 360]* to the payment of his debts, has been decided in Massachusetts. Ricketson v. Merrill, 148 Mass. 76, 19 N. E. 11. The same in principle is Davis v. Newton, 6 Met. 537, where it was held that the distributive share of an insolvent debtor in the hands of an administrator passed to his assignee, and that the administrator could not withhold it from the assignee.

In Lenz v. Prescott, 144 Mass. 505, 11 N. E. 923, it was decided that the probate court does not take cognizance of assignments of their interests, made by legatees or distributees, but deals only with those primarily entitled to the legacies or distributive shares; and many cases were cited. The court therefore sustained a bill in equity to ascertain the validity and construction of an assignment of an interest in an estate. See also Green v. Gaskill, 175 Mass. 265, 56 N. E. 560, where the probate jurisdiction of the probate court and its equity jurisdiction in relation to other courts is explained, and it is decided that administrators and executors have a right to have their accounts adjusted and the amounts due to or from them determined in the probate court, on its probate side, and in the usual probate proceedings; but, when the amount for which they are liable is so determined, may, by a bill in equity, be compelled to pay to those entitled their share of the property of the deceased. And this being the power of the courts of equity of the state, a like power certainly may be exercised by the Federal courts.

It is further objected that there is no property of the respondents in Massachusetts. The argument which is urged to support the objection is difficult to state. It seems to draw a distinction, under the laws of Massachusetts, between the will of Andrew J. Davis and the decree of the Montana court admitting the will to probate. "The probate court," respondents say, "might and did accept the decree of the Montana court as proof that the will ought to be allowed. It could not and did not accept the decree as establishing that the property in Massachusetts should be disposed of otherwise than as the will provided." And from a consideration of the laws of Massachusetts, respondents conclude that (we quote the language of counsel), "no part of the property in Massachusetts can therefore in any sense be said to belong to the defendants in the suit. All of it must by law either be paid over according to the will, or be transmitted to Montana, to be distributed as the court may direct." We cannot refrain from saying that it is hard to believe that respondents would like to be taken at the full sense of their words, and we are quite sure that the probate court of Suffolk county will regard not the will as propounded for probate, but the will as qualified by the decree, as determining the rights of the parties. At any rate, it is only upon the shares which that court will distribute that the decree of the circuit court will operate.

Again, it is charged that the right of the petitioner's intestate was derived from Root, and as he, it is further contended, could not have sued to establish his right to a share in the funds of the administrator, the latter and he being citizens of Montana, that the petitioner was equally disqualified to establish and recover Root's share of the property. The argument is that she is seeking to enforce a right of Root against the administrator, arising on an equitable assignment by Root to her intestate, and she is therefore, it is said, suing to recover as assignee of a chose in action upon which the assignor could not sue, because his citizenship is the same as that of the administrator in Massachusetts. Rev. Stat. § 629, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 503. There are several answers to the contention. It is certainly very disputable if an interest in a distributive share of an estate is within the statute. Again, she is suing primarily on the obligation of Root to her intestate, to secure which a lien was given on Root's distributive share; and besides, again, she sues as administratrix, and she is a citizen of a different state from Leyson. Sere v. Pitot, 6 Cranch, 333, 3 L. ed. 240; Chappedelaine v. Dechenaux, 4 Cranch, 308, 2 L. ed. 630; Bushnell v. Kennedy, 9 Wall. 387, 19 L. ed. 736; Susquehanna & W. Valley R. & Coal Co. v. Blatchford, 11 Wall. 172, 20 L. ed. 179; Rice v. Houston, 13 Wall. 66, 20 L. ed. 484.

Respondents assert the identity of the action in Montana *with the present suit, and upon that identity they urge that such action constitutes res judicata. Petitioner denies the identity of the actions, and urges besides that there is no such privity between the parties as to make the Montana action res judicata of the pending case. In support of the latter contention petitioner urges that an ancillary administrator in one jurisdiction is not in privity with an ancillary administrator in another jurisdiction, and that therefore a judgment against one is not a bar to a suit by the other. And this was the ruling of the circuit court. The circuit court of appeals took the contrary view, and rested its judgment upon the conclusive effect of the Montana action.

We shall assume that there is identity of subject-matter between the Montana action and that at bar, but the question remains, Was there identity of parties? An extended discussion of the question is made unnecessary by the case of Brown v. Fletcher, 210 U. S. 82, 52 L. ed. 966, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 702. In that case a suit in equity against Fletcher, brought in his lifetime, was revived after his death, and a decree obtained. Fletcher resided in Michigan, where he died leaving a will, which was duly probated in the probate court of Wayne county in that state, in which the decree of the Massachusetts court was filed as evidence of a claim against the estate. Its effect as such was denied, and the case was brought here by writ of error. Replying to the contention of plaintiff in error, that the Michigan executor and the administrator with the will annexed of Fletcher's estate in Massachusetts were in such privity that the decree was conclusive evidence of it in the proceedings in Michigan, this court held that the decree was not binding upon the Michigan executor or the estate in his possession, citing Vaughan v. Northup, 15 Pet. 1, 10 L. ed. 639; Aspden v. Nixon, 4 How. 467, 11 L. ed. 1059; Stacy v. Thrasher, 6 How. 44, 12 L. ed. 337. The latter case was quoted from as follows: "Where administrations are granted to different persons in different states, they are so far deemed independent of each other that a judgment obtained against one will furnish no right of action against the *other, to affect[363] assets received by the latter in virtue of his own administration; for, in contemplation of law, there is no privity between him and the other administrator. See Story, Conf. L. § 522; Brodie v. Bickley, 2 Rawle, 431." McLean v. Meek, 18 How. 16, 15 L. ed. 277; Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, were also cited, and it was said that the "doctrine was enforced in Massachusetts. Low v. Bartlett, 8 Allen, 259."

Respondents insist that this doctrine has no application to the Montana judgment, and urge that the latter was a bar of the pending suit (1) because it was a judgment on the merits, and (2) because such a judgment "against an ancillary administrator in the suit brought by him is conclusive as to that cause of action against the domiciliary or any other ancillary administrator." And this is said to follow from the proposition which respondents advance, that "the authorized act of an ancillary administrator as to property of the intestate within his jurisdiction is binding everywhere;" and it is hence concluded that a suit brought by an ancillary administrator is subject to the same principle as an act done touching tangible property. That the argument by which this conclusion is supported has strength is established by the fact that the circuit court of appeals yielded to it, and it is said to be sanctioned by Biddle v. Wilkins, 1 Pet. 686, 7 L. ed. 315; Wilkins v. Ellett, 108 U. S. 256, 27 L. ed. 718, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Talmage v. Chapel, 16 Mass. 71. But as these cases preceded Brown v. Fletcher, they must be regarded as consistent with it. Besides, in that case, Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, was cited as establishing, on the authority of Aspden v. Nixon and Stacy v. Thrasher, supra, Low v. Bartlett, 8 Allen, 259, the doctrine that a judgment recovered against the administrator of a deceased person in one state is no evidence of debt, in a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff in another state, either against an administrator, whether the same or a different person, appointed there, or against any other person having assets of the deceased. That there is a certain amount of artificiality in the doctrine was pointed out in Stacy v. Thrasher, and that it leads to the inconvenience *and burdensome re-[364] suit of retrying controversies and repeating litigations. The doctrine, however, was vindicated as a necessary consequence of the different sources from which the different administrators received their powers, and the absence of privity between them, and that the imputations against it were not greater than could be made against other "logical conclusions upon admitted legal principles." It is not necessary, therefore, to review in detail the argument of respondents. Its fundamental concept is that the authorized act of an administrator as to property of the intestate within his jurisdiction is binding everywhere, and it is said that a suit brought by an administrator is subject to the same principle. The generality of the conclusion, however, counsel immediately limits by the concession that it does not include a suit brought against an administrator, whether he successfully or unsuccessfully defends it. In other words, the principle is true only of an action brought by an ancillary administrator to enforce a claim in behalf of the estate, and judgment goes against him. But counsel even limits this again, and says it would not be binding "in the sense of creating a personal liability for costs, if costs be awarded, or otherwise, but it is binding in the sense that the cause of action has been effectively disposed of." That is, as counsel explains, merged in the judgment. We do not think that the doctrine announced in Brown v. Fletcher, supra, admits of these distinctions, and surely the estoppel of a judgment must be mutual. The argument of respondents contends for the contrary; it makes a judgment against an ancillary administrator binding against other administrators, but not binding for them. We think, therefore, that the Montana judgment is not a bar to the pending suit.

On the merits there are two propositions: (1) Did the complainant establish the existence of a debt due from Coram and Root to Ingersoll? (2) Did she establish the existence of a lien? On neither of these propositions did the court of appeals pass; the circuit court decided them in favor of complainant.

365] *We need not recite the evidence. The circuit court found, and, we think, rightly found, that the agreement sued on was performed. In other words, that the will of Davis was defeated, and that the contestants got their shares through the services of Ingersoll. The form in which the defeat was expressed is unimportant. The will as propounded was defeated. As propounded it cut them off from inheritance. As qualified in probate, by compromise more property was received than would have come to them by inheritance. And the evidence leaves no doubt that it was brought about, to quote the bill, "by the force, effect, and stress" of the contest and by the services which it is admitted Ingersoll rendered, and from the belief that the will as propounded would not receive probate and would only receive probate when so qualified as to recognize the rights of the contestants as heirs of the estate. That it did not do so was its defect, and to make it do so was the purpose for which they employed Ingersoll and which his services achieved. There was performance, therefore, of his contract.

The next question is, Does the evidence establish the existence of the lien? An affirmative answer must be given. It is manifest that payment to Ingersoll was dependent upon success, but it is equally manifest that he relied upon more than the personal responsibility of the parties. The so-called five heirs, Elizabeth S. Ladd, Ellen M. Cornue, M. Louise Dunbar, Ellen Cornue, and Henry A. Root, entered into an agreement in which it was recited that controversies had arisen in regard to the will, and that Root had rendered services and expended money in behalf thereof, and had undertaken "to procure evidence, counsel, and such other needs" as were necessary for opposing the will and obtaining for the others their "respective rights and shares" of the estate, and in consideration thereof there was assigned to Root and one Gideon Wells one-third part of each of their interests to reimburse Root for the moneys he had expended or should expend or the liabilities which he might incur on account thereof. And it was agreed *that the[366 assignment was to be in full for past or future liabilities. Root, on his part, agreed to employ counsel and to do all things necessary to secure the interests of the other parties.

It is alleged in the complaint and admitted by the answer that Coram acquired the remaining interests of Elizabeth Ladd and Mary L. Dunbar, and that the interests so acquired were dependent upon the prosecution of the objections to and contests of the validity of the will until the shares of the five heirs should be secured to them by a grant from the proponent of the will or by the decree of the district court of Montana. This being the situation, Ingersoll wrote to Root as follows:

May 1st, 1891.

My dear Root:—

Do not know whether I can get the money, but feel sure I can raise $25,000—have already secured $13,000.

"Now, there is another thing: I suppose it is best for you and I to have a specific and definite understanding in regard to my fee. Of course, if you should lose the case you could not pay. We can raise money enough to pay expenses and of course I shall want expenses, but the real question is as to what I am to have in case of success and how that is to be secured,—i. e., what papers are necessary, etc.

Let me hear from you.

Yours, R. G. Ingersoll.

To which Coram and Root replied as follows:

Butte City, Mont., August 17, 1891.

R. G. Ingersoll, Esq.,

Butte City, Montana.

Sir:—

We agree that for your services in the contest of Maria Cummings and Henry A. Root against the probate of the alleged will of A. J. Davis, deceased, rendered and to be rendered, that your fee, in case the will is defeated and our clients get their shares, shall be one hundred (100,000) thousand dollars, and that your expenses and disbursements shall be paid in any event.

367] *There is to be no personal obligation against J. A. Coram, in the event that the interests represented by Henry A. Root are unsuccessful, and in no event is the said J. A. Coram obligated except to pay such fee out of the funds secured from the estate of A. J. Davis, deceased, by Maria Cummings, Lizzie S. Ladd, M. Louise Dunbar, and Mrs. Ellen S. Cornue and Henry A. Root.

Henry A. Root,
J. A. Coram.

It is evident, therefore, that Ingersoll asked for security in a definite and written form. We do not think it can be said that he sought only a promise to pay. That followed from his employment, and, besides, Coram stipulated against personal liability, but did obligate himself to pay "out of the funds secured from the estate." And this is the test of the agreement. It is the exception that establishes that, as to Root, there was a personal and property obligation; as to Coram, a property obligation. It is confirmed by excerpts from the letters of Root, set out in the complaint and introduced in evidence. In those letters he expresses a desire "that Mrs. Ingersoll should realize out of the Davis estate as much as possible," and would "bend every effort" to that end. And, explaining the agreement, he said that Ingersoll "was to receive $100,000 for moneys collected from the Davis estate for his services," and assured Mrs. Ingersoll that he would do everything in his power to see that she received "as much from that fund" (referring to the estate in Boston).

The sufficiency of the agreement of August 17, 1891, to create a lien, seems not to have been seriously questioned in the circuit court upon the argument of the de-murrer. However, the court said that "upon all settled rules with reference to the construction of such instruments we cannot doubt that this one of August 17, 1891, created a lien on the funds therein referred to in behalf of Mr. Ingersoll." On the final hearing the effect of the instrument was contested, and the court adhered to its ruling, saying: "Whether or not the particular *agreement creates a lien is a[368 matter of construction. In this case the fact that there was no primary personal responsibility on J. A. Coram specially serves to stamp the agreement in issue as declaring a purpose to create a lien. Therefore, on the whole, we hold that, on this final hearing on bill, answer, and proofs, the bill must be sustained." The conclusion of the court is sustained by authority. In Wylie v. Cox, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753, a contract was made with an attorney for the prosecution of a claim against Mexico to pay him a contingent fee of 5 per cent out of the fund awarded. It was held that the agreement constituted a lien upon the fund. In Re Paschal (Texas v. White) 10 Wall. 483, 19 L. ed. 992, in the letter retaining Paschal, it was said that his compensation would depend upon the action of a future legislature, "unless a recovery is had in the suit, in which event I shall feel authorized to let you retain it out of the amount received." It was held that, in accordance with the prevailing rule in this country, Paschal had a lien on the fund in his hands for disbursement and professional fees. The case was cited in McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404, 417, 24 L. ed. 746, 750, and the doctrine repeated. See also Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116, 28 L. ed. 915, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 501, 507, 34 L. ed. 1023, 1025, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 405. In Walker v. Brown, 165 U. S. 654, 41 L. ed. 865, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453, it was held that every express executory agreement in writing, whereby the contracting party sufficiently indicates an intention to make some particular property, real or personal, or fund, therein described or identified, a security for a debt or other obligations, creates an equitable lien on the property so indicated. This was an application of the doctrine of Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Yardley, 165 U. S. 634, 41 L. ed. 855, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439, and Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S. 306, 25 L. ed. 999. These cases are not opposed by Trist v. Child (Burke v. Child) 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. ed. 623, and Wright v. Ellison, 1 Wall. 16, 17 L. ed. 555. In the latter case it is said that it is indispensable to the lien thus created that there should be a distinct appropriation of the fund by the debtor, and an agreement that the creditor should be paid out of it. These conditions are satisfied in the case at bar.

The other contentions of respondents asserted a defect of parties *and error in the decree as to the amount of interest adjudged to Root and Coram in the property. In the first contention we do not concur.

The second contention is justified. We do not think, however, that it is necessary to enter into all of its details, with some of which, we may say, we do not agree. We think that the circuit court rightly, as we have already pointed out, adjudged that the five heirs were entitled, by virtue of the final decree in Montana, to $515\frac{1}{2}$ eleven hundredths of the estate in Massachusetts, and in adopting, as we think it did, in making division among them according to intestacy, that is, in proportion to the shares they would have taken in case Davis had died intestate. Those shares the bill alleged and the answers admitted would have been as follows: Sarah M. Cummings and Elizabeth S. Ladd, one eleventh each; Henry A. Root, Ellen S. Cornue, and Mary Louise Dunbar, one twenty-second each,—in all, 350 eleven hundredths of the estate. But there was error in adjudging the interest remaining in Sarah Maria Cummings and Ellen S. Cornue, after the assignment of one third of their interest to Root, to be respectively $62\frac{2}{3}$ eleven hundredths and $33\frac{1}{3}$ eleven hundredths. The bill shows that they were entitled respectively to 100 eleven hundredths and 50 eleven hundredths of the amount they, as two of the five heirs, would have been entitled to if Davis had died intestate; that is, those shares of 350 eleven hundredths. But the amount was increased by the decree in Montana to $515\frac{1}{2}$ eleven hundredths and their shares thereof necessarily increased. In other words, as they were entitled respectively to two sevenths and one seventh of the first amount, they are entitled respectively to two sevenths and one seventh of the second amount, to wit, $147\frac{1}{14}$ eleven hundredths, and $73\frac{1}{14}$ eleven hundredths, one third of which amounts was assigned to Root. There were left in them respectively, therefore, $98\frac{1}{21}$ eleven hundredths and $49\frac{2}{21}$ eleven hundredths. To Root, as we have seen, they assigned one third of their shares, and there was also assigned to him one third of the 370]shares* of Elizabeth S. Ladd and Mary Louise Dunbar, making, with the one seventh to which he is entitled in his own right, $220\frac{13}{14}$ eleven hundredths. Coram is entitled as assignee to the other two thirds of the shares of Ladd and Dunbar, to wit, $147\frac{1}{14}$ eleven hundredths, making the total in him and Root of $368\frac{3}{14}$ eleven hundredths instead of $415\frac{1}{2}$ eleven hundredths, as stated in the decree. The decree must be modified accordingly.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed and that of the Circuit Court is modified as above indicated, and 'as modified, affirmed.

Mr. Justice Holmes and Mr. Justice Moody dissent.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

F. W. KEITEL, Arie Keitel, Frank P. Fay, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 370-399.)

Appeal — in criminal case — review on behalf of government.

1. Jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court of a writ of error sued out under the act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1246, chap. 2564, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 209), to review a judgment of a Federal district court quashing an indictment for a conspiracy illegally to acquire coal lands from the United States, because of the opinion that the Federal statute did not prohibit the acts complained of, cannot be successfully challenged on the theory that the indictment, and not the statute, was construed.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 314-316, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — in criminal case — review on behalf of government.

2. Interpretation as well as construction of the statute, conceding an abstract distinction between these two terms, is comprehended by the provision of the act of March 2, 1907, authorizing a writ of error on behalf of the government from the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of a district or circuit court, quashing an indictment, when based upon the construction of the statute upon which the indictment is founded.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 314-316, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mines — entry for disqualified principal.

3. The prohibition against more than one entry of coal lands by the same person, which is made by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2350, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1441, prohibits a qualified person from entering such lands apparently for himself, but in fact as the agent for a person who is himself disqualified because he has already purchased the full quantity permitted by law.

[For other cases, see Mines, 18-18b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Conspiracy — to defraud United States.

4. A conspiracy to obtain title to coal lands of the United States, in clear violation of the prohibition of the coal-land laws against making more than one entry,

NOTE.—On the right of a state to appeal in a criminal case—see note to People ex rel. Hodson v. Miner, 19 L.R.A. 342.

On the location of a mining claim—see note to Dwinnell v. Dyer, 7 L.R.A. (N.S.) 763.

is embraced by the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, making criminal conspiracies "to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose."

[For other cases, see Conspiracy, 2-9, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mines — coal-land entry — false and fraudulent papers.

5. Making and presenting false, fictitious, and fraudulent papers in connection with an entry of coal lands is not made criminal by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4746, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3279, as amended by the act of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 718, chap. 578, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3279), because such amendatory statute, in repeating the original words, "concerning any claim for pension or payment thereof, or pertaining to any other matter within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Pensions," adds the words "or of the Secretary of the Interior," since such section as originally enacted, related exclusively to pension or bounty land claims, and every enumeration or description of new acts or papers, in addition to those embraced in the section prior to the amendment, alone concerns pension or bounty land claims.

Appeal — by government in criminal case — scope of review.

6. The whole case is not open to review in the Supreme Court of the United States on the writ of error to a Federal district or circuit court, authorized on behalf of the government in criminal cases by the act of March 2, 1907, but the scope of review is limited to the particular decisions enumerated in that statute.

[No. 286.]

Argued October 22, 23, 26, 1908. Decided December 14, 1908.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment quashing an indictment for a conspiracy illegally to obtain coal lands from the United States. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 157 Fed. 396.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Attorney General Bonaparte argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Hoyt and Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Many other laws, or departmental regulations even, furnish the occasion for crimes under statutes which otherwise have no connection with them.

Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. ed. 415, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Curley v. United States, 64 C. C. A. 369, 130 Fed. 1.

For individuals or associations to acquire from the United States coal lands in excess of the specified quantity through "dummy" entrymen is a violation of the coal-land laws and an actual fraud.

53 L. ed.

United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; United States v. Lonabaugh, 158 Fed. 314.

The coal-land laws cannot be construed one way in a suit to cancel patents issued thereunder, and another way in criminal prosecutions involving those laws.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 401, 48 L. ed. 679, 726, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

While it has been often urged in Federal courts that the word "defraud" was used in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, in its common-law sense, that argument has heretofore always been rejected. The decision of the district court in these cases is not only without precedent, but is contrary to numerous decisions of district and circuit courts, circuit courts of appeals, and this court.

Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. ed. 90, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760; Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 38 L. ed. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680; United States v. Lonabaugh, supra; United States v. Robbins, 157 Fed. 999; Stearns v. United States, 82 C. C. A. 48, 152 Fed. 900; Bradford v. United States, 31 C. C. A. 607, 152 Fed. 617; Gantt v. United States, 47 C. C. A. 210, 108 Fed. 61; United States v. Owen, 32 Fed. 534; United States v. Gordon, 22 Fed. 250; United States v. Mitchell, 141 Fed. 666; United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 33, 25 L. ed. 539; Curley v. United States, 195 U. S. 628, 49 L. ed. 351, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, 64 C. C. A. 369, 130 Fed. 1; United States v. Morse, 161 Fed. 429; United States v. Haas, 163 Fed. 908; United States v. Stone, 135 Fed. 392; McGregor v. United States, 134 Fed. 187.

Solicitor General Hoyt also argued the cause, and, with Mr. Ernest Knaebel, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The content of the term "construction," when concerned practically in legislation and judicial decisions, seems always to include the content of the term "interpretation."

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 51; Bouvier's Law Dict. "Interpretation," "Construction," 2 Parsons, Contr. 9th ed. p. 647, n. (a); Johnson v. Des Moines L. Ins. Co. 105 Iowa, 277, 75 N. W. 101; O'Donnell v. Glenn, 9 Mont. 467, 8 L.R.A. 633, 23 Pac. 1018; Stratton v. Stratton, 68 N. H. 585, 44 Atl. 699; Black, Constr. & Interpretation of Laws, p. 1; Terre Haute & L. R. Co. v. Erdel, 158 Ind. 347, 62 N. E. 706; Bouvier's Law Dict. Rawle's Rev. "construction."

The assertions of defendants' counsel that questions of pleading and other questions, independent of those raised upon the statutes, formed in whole or in part the basis of the trial court's decision, are flatly contradicted by the opinion, and need not be otherwise answered. Hence, the attempt to restrict this court's jurisdiction to cases and questions resting exclusively upon construction of statutes is premature, as it is also out of accord with decisions heretofore rendered.

Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Burton v. United States, 196 U. S. 283, 295, 49 L. ed. 482, 485, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Field v. Barber Asphalt Co. 194 U. S. 618, 620, 48 L. ed. 1142, 1152, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 695, 42 L. ed. 626, 630, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Holder v. Aultman, M. & Co. 169 U. S. 81, 88, 42 L. ed. 669, 671, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 71, 41 L. ed. 632, 633, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 509, 40 L. ed. 510, 513, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 576, 36 L. ed. 266, 268, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

Mr. Edwin H. Park argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

Before an act can be punished as a crime, under the Federal laws, that act must be specifically made a crime by statute.

United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 190, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 278, 39 L. ed. 982, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 44 L. ed. 780, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 5 L. ed. 37; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 27 L. ed. 698, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. ed. 533, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; United States v. Dietrich, 126 Fed. 676; United States v. Chase, 135 U. S. 255, 259, 261, 34 L. ed. 117, 119, 120, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; United States v. Williams, 3 Fed. 491; United States v. Comerford, 25 Fed. 904; United States v. Wilson, 58 Fed. 771; United States v. Whittier, 5 Dill. 35, Fed. Cas. No. 16,688; United States v. Hewecker, 79 Fed. 64; Re McDonough, 49 Fed. 362; Sarlls v. United States, 152 U. S. 570, 575, 38 L. ed. 556, 558, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 37, 39 L. ed. 601, 611, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. § 491.

The court below rightly held that § 5440, U. S. Rev. Stat., is limited to cases where the object of the conspiracy is criminal, and not the means employed.

Connor v. People, 18 Colo. 378, 25 L.R.A. 341, 36 Am. St. Rep. 295, 33 Pac. 159; Miller v. People, 22 Colo. 533, 45 Pac. 408;

Lipschitz v. People, 25 Colo. 265, 53 Pac. 1111; Short v. People, 27 Colo. 184, 60 Pac. 350; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 309, 44 L. ed. 780, 781, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 206, 27 L. ed. 698, 700, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; United States v. Crafton, 4 Dill. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 14,881; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. ed. 588, 593.

The word "defraud" not being defined in the statute itself, nor in any other statute, it is to be presumed that Congress used the word "defraud" in its common-law meaning; and we should turn to the common law to find what acts of fraud are held to be criminal.

An interpretation will not be given to a statute which would lead to injustice, oppression, or absurd consequences.

Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1060, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

In going to the common law for a definition of the word "defraud," the indictment receives no assistance, but is there demonstrated to be essentially, and in this vital particular wholly, insufficient, and does not charge defendants with any criminal offense.

Wharton, Crim. Law, § 2316; 3 Greenl. Ev. § 90; Wharton, Crim. Law, 7th ed. § 2288; Alderman v. People, 4 Mich. 414, 69 Am. Dec. 321.

It was not the intention of Congress to embrace constructive fraud, and the act cannot be construed to embrace any such frauds. The statute only includes those frauds known as a crime at common law,—those involving moral turpitude; and not merely a violation of an act which merely limits or prohibits.

Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 26 L. ed. 347.

Whatever may be the meaning of the word "defraud" as used in equity, it has a totally different and distinct meaning when the same word is used in a penal statute.

Ferrett v. Atwill, 1 Blatchf. 156, Fed. Cas. No. 4,747; United States v. Sheldon, 2 Wheat. 119, 4 L. ed. 199; Myers v. Foster, 6 Cow. 567; Daggett v. State, 4 Conn. 60, 10 Am. Dec. 100; United States v. Maid, 116 Fed. 652; United States v. Stone, 135 Fed. 392; Curley v. United States, 64 C. C. A. 369, 130 Fed. 1.

The utmost that can be gathered from the indictment is that the defendants sought to violate the limitation of the amount of acreage of coal lands. It is malum prohibitum, not "malum in se." The act did not violate good morals; moral turpitude is not involved.

Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 57, 26 L. ed. 347, 349.

The coal laws are far short of anything of a penal nature.

Smith v. Townsend, supra.

The word "fraud" has no definite meaning.

Meldrum v. Meldrum, 15 Colo. 487, 11 L.R.A. 65, 24 Pac. 1083.

The maxim that "every man is charged with a knowledge of the law" means that he is charged with the knowledge of what the law designates as offenses. If the law fails to define an offense, the individual cannot be charged with knowing more than the law itself knows.

Eddy, Combinations, § 352.

Under the bankrupt laws of the United States it is held that the word "fraud," as there used, means only positive fraud,—the fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude, or intentional wrong, as does embezzlement.

Forsyth v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 181, 44 L. ed. 723, 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Bullis v. O'Beirne, 195 U. S. 606, 620, 49 L. ed. 340, 346, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118.

The word "defraud" used in the statute is coupled with the word "offense;" and under the maxim of noscitur a sociis the word "defraud" must be construed to mean something in the nature of an offense, recognized as such by some statute of the United States.

Barry v. Snowden, 106 Fed. 571.

The government, in disposing of its public lands, acts as a private corporation, as distinguished from its governmental purposes.

Lee v. Kaufman, 3 Hughes, 36, Fed. Cas. No. 8,191; Elliot v. Van Voorst, 3 Wall. Jr. 301, Fed. Cas. No. 4,390; Cotton v. United States, 11 How. 229, 331, 13 L. ed. 675, 676; United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 128 U. S. 673, 676, 32 L. ed. 571, 572, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; McKinley Creek Min. Co. v. Alaska United Min. Co. 183 U. S. 563, 571, 46 L. ed. 331, 334, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Parsons v. Venzke, 164 U. S. 89, 92, 41 L. ed. 360, 362, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 541, 548, 33 L. ed. 761, 764, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; People v. Shearer, 30 Cal. 658; State v. Bachelder, 5 Minn. 223, Gil. 179, 80 Am. Dec. 410; Camp v. Smith, 2 Minn. 155, Gil. 131; Stockdale v. Webster County, 12 Iowa, 538; United States v. Cornell, 2 Mason, 60, Fed. Cas. No. 14,867; Woodruff v. North Bloomfield Gravel Min. Co. 9 Sawy. 441, 18 Fed. 772; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 224, 11 L. ed. 565, 571.

The words, "not exceeding 160 acres to such individual, or 320 acres to such association," and the words, "only one entry by the same person or association of persons," are words of limitation, and not prohibition.

53 L. ed.

Re Peterson, 6 Land Dec. 371; Pereles v. Weil, 157 Fed. 419.

Words of limitation and words of prohibition are distinct, and have distinctly different meanings. The word "prohibition" means the act of forbidding or inderdicting; prohibitory.

Anderson's Law Diet.

The word "limitation" has reference to boundary, circumspection, restriction, curtailment.

Ibid.

A statute containing simple words of limitation has never been construed as the basis, when violated, of a criminal prosecution, and no criminal action can or will lie therefor. A contract based upon a violation of a limitation is not even void; a contract based upon the violation of a prohibitory statute may or may not be void.

A contract in violation of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5200, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3494, for loaning more than one-tenth part of the capital stock of a bank to one individual, is not even void.

Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 640, 24 L. ed. 648.

The breach of any statute or regulation of the Department relating to coal lands is not a crime, and has never been so construed by the Department.

Re Northern P. Coal Co. 7 Land Dec. 422; Kerr v. Utah-Wyoming Improv. Co. 2 Land Dec. 728; Re Allen, 8 Land Dec. 140; Larson v. Weisbecker, 1 Land Dec. 409; Re Durango Land & Coal Co. 18 Land Dec. 382; Re Donahue, 32 Land Dec. 349; Dawson v. Higgins, 22 Land Dec. 544.

The coal-land law is a part of the mineral laws of the United States, and must be construed together with all the mineral laws.

Re Crowder, 30 Land Dec. 95; Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307-324, 325, 31 L. ed. 182-189, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Mullan v. United States, 118 U. S. 271, 277, 30 L. ed. 170, 172, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1041.

Contemporaneous construction of the statutes is controlling.

Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. 58, 7 L. ed. 347; United States v. State Bank, 6 Pet. 29, 39, 8 L. ed. 308, 311; Robertson v. Bradbury, 132 U. S. 491, 493, 33 L. ed. 405, 406, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; United States v. Macdaniel, 7 Pet. 1, 8 L. ed. 587; United States v. Gilmore, 8 Wall. 330, 19 L. ed. 396; United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 499, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 763, 24 L. ed. 588, 589; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 582, 34 L. ed. 1063, 1067, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 541, 548, 33 L. ed. 761, 764, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S.

139, 157, 45 L. ed. 463, 472, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309.

The statutes bearing upon the right of alienation of the rights acquired by entry-men under the various provisions of the public-land laws have always been interpreted most liberally.

Mullen v. Wine, 26 Fed. 206; Pourier v. Barnes, 57 Fed. 956; Webster v. Luther, 163 U. S. 331, 339, 41 L. ed. 179, 181, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 963; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. 291, 20 L. ed. 562; Davenport v. Lamb, 13 Wall. 418, 430, 20 L. ed. 655, 658; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. 307, 314, 21 L. ed. 759, 761; St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. 171 U. S. 650, 656, 657, 43 L. ed. 320, 322, 323, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61; Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 651, 26 L. ed. 875, 880; United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 36 L. ed. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 516, 48 L. ed. 769, 771, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Hafemann v. Gross, 199 U. S. 342, 50 L. ed. 220, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. 200 U. S. 321, 339, 50 L. ed. 499, 506, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 462, 52 L. ed. 278, 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

No crime is charged in count two of the indictment, either under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4746, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3279, or amendment thereto, for the reason that said section and the amendment have reference solely and alone to pension matters.

Edgington v. United States, 164 U. S. 361, 41 L. ed. 467, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; United States v. Wood, 127 Fed. 171; Pooler v. United States, 62 C. C. A. 307, 127 Fed. 514.

If the amendment be ambiguous or unintelligible, or if any doubt exists as to its application, the court is at liberty to consult the proceedings of Congress in order to determine the evil sought to be remedied by the enactment of the statute.

American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 474, 35 L. ed. 821, 824, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 462, 36 L. ed. 227, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 19 L. ed. 513.

The words "or pertaining to any other matter within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Pensions or the Secretary of the Interior," under the rule of ejusdem generis, the other matter must be of a like or similar character, and pertaining to matters within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Pensions, to-wit: concerning any claim for pension or payment thereof.

United States v. Beach, 71 Fed. 160; Caldwell's Case (United States v. Caldwell) 19

Wall. 264, 268, 22 L. ed. 114, 115; State v. Sumner, 10 Vt. 587, 33 Am. Dec. 219; Edson v. Hayden, 20 Wis. 683; American Manganese Co. v. Virginia Manganese Co. 91 Va. 280, 21 S. E. 466; United States v. Bitty, 208 U. S. 393, 402, 52 L. ed. 543, 546, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396.

If given its broadest meaning, the statute would be unlimited in its scope and purpose. This was not the intention of Congress, as a perusal of the whole act, as amended, would prevent any such unlimited construction.

United States v. Sheldon, 2 Wheat. 119, 121, 4 L. ed. 199, 200; McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 287, 293, 41 L. ed. 437, 439, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

The courts have long distinguished between "interpretation" and "construction."

Bloomer v. Todd, 3 Wash. Terr. 612, 1 L.R.A. 111, 19 Pac. 138; Morris Aqueduct v. Jones, 36 N. J. L. 206; State ex rel. Hastings v. Smith, 35 Neb. 22, 16 L.R.A. 791, 52 N. W. 700; People ex rel. Twenty-third Street R. Co. v. Tax Comrs. 95 N. Y. 559; Deane v. State, 159 Ind. 313, 64 N. E. 916; Terre Haute & L. R. Co. v. Erdel, 158 Ind. 347, 62 N. E. 706; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 96, 5 L. ed. 37, 42.

Judge Lewis, in the court below, simply denied the existence of facts necessary to bring the indictment within the operation of the statutes claimed to have been violated.

Crary v. Devlin, 154 U. S. 619, appx., and 23 L. ed. 510, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1199.

In order to give this court jurisdiction, the construction of the statute must have been the controlling question decided by the court below.

Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 171, 181, 37 L. ed. 1042, 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 263, 20 L. ed. 635, 637; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 576, 40 L. ed. 536, 540, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 47, 43 L. ed. 63, 66, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742.

A construction of a statute is not necessarily involved because the right of one of the parties is based upon the statute.

Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 507, 44 L. ed. 864, 865, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 662, 666, 38 L. ed. 305, 307, 308, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Ferry v. King County, 141 U. S. 668, 673, 35 L. ed. 895, 898, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Snow v. United States, 118 U. S. 346, 30 L. ed. 207, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1059; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 651, 34 L. ed. 1110, 1115, 11

Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 690, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 160, 48 L. ed. 655, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359; Sloan v. United States, 193 U. S. 614, 48 L. ed. 814, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Caro v. Davidson, 197 U. S. 197, 200, 49 L. ed. 723, 724, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 205 U. S. 225, 233, 51 L. ed. 779, 782, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; Budzisz v. Illinois Steel Co. 170 U. S. 41, 42 L. ed. 941, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 168 U. S. 430, 42 L. ed. 531, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. 191 U. S. 526, 48 L. ed. 287, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; California Powder Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 38 L. ed. 206, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 34 L. ed. 700, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114.

Although the record discloses a construction of a statute, or that constitutional rights are asserted, it will not change the real character of the controversy and make it a case in which the controlling rule of decision involves the construction of a statute or application of the Constitution.

District of Columbia v. Gannon, 130 U. S. 227, 229, 32 L. ed. 922, 923, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 312, 47 L. ed. 480, 486, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. German Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 270, 52 L. ed. 201, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78.

Mr. Frederick N. Judson also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Tyson S. Dines and John F. Green, filed a brief for defendants in error:

There are no common-law offenses against the United States. Any offense which may be the subject of criminal procedure in a court of the United States must be an act committed or omitted in violation of a public law of the United States either prohibiting it or commanding it.

United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch, 32, 3 L. ed. 259; United States v. Coolidge, 1 Wheat. 415, 4 L. ed. 124; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 5 L. ed. 37; Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U. S. 240, 35 L. ed. 159, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 678, 36 L. ed. 592, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 27 L. ed. 698, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; United States v. Clayton, 2 Dill. 219, Fed. Cas. No. 14,814; United 53 L. ed.

States v. Manion, 44 Fed. 800; Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 278, 39 L. ed. 982, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889.

It necessarily follows, and has been declared by this court, that a requirement in a rule or regulation of a department cannot make any act or neglect to act a criminal offense in the absence of a statute making such act or neglect a criminal offense.

United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677, 36 L. ed. 591, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764; Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. ed. 415, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

In the coal-land statute there is no prohibition of alienation by pre-contract or otherwise, and such prohibition cannot be inferred from any supposed public policy which Congress has failed to enact in a statute.

St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. 171 U. S. 650, 43 L. ed. 320, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61.

As there are no common-law offenses in the United States, criminal conspiracies are punishable only as such when they are distinctly declared in the statute. There must be a combination of two or more persons by concerted action to accomplish a criminal or unlawful purpose, or some purpose not in itself criminal or unlawful, by criminal or unlawful means. It is thus sharply distinguished from conspiracy at common law, which has been substantially modified both by judicial decisions and statute in England and in the courts of the several states.

United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 192, 27 L. ed. 703, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. ed. 419, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; 2 Stephen, History of Crim. Law, Eng. 121-127; 2 Wharton, Crim. Law, 10th ed. § 1356a, b and note; Wright, History of Crim. Conspiracies, Am. ed. 6, 68.

It follows that the word "defraud" in the second clause of the conspiracy statute must be construed in the sense of committing a fraud made so by Federal statute.

2 Wharton, Crim. Law, 10th ed. 1356a, b. The indictment does not state a case of "defraud" at common law.

Bouvier's Law Dict. "defraud;" 7 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 123, "cheats;" 19 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 387, "false pretenses;" United States v. Wilson, 44 Fed. 751; 2 Stephen, History of Crim. Law, Eng. 121-127.

The statutory requirement of overt acts in conspiracies against the government is analogous to and taken from the constitutional requirement in indictments for treason; and this latter has sprung from the dread of constructive treason, and is controlled by considerations of public policy, which prohibit the extension by judicial construction of statutory crimes which are dangerous to liberty.

4 Bl. Com. chap. VI.; United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 33, 25 L. ed. 539; The Federalist, No. 43; 2 Curtis, History of U. S. Const. 384; 3 Coke, Inst. p. 23; Com. v. Hunt, 4 Met. 111, 38 Am. Dec. 346; Wright, History of Crim. Conspiracies, p. 68; 2 Wharton, Crim. Law, 10th ed. § 1338, a. b.

The conspiracy must therefore be sufficiently charged irrespective of any averment of overt acts, which are merely to afford a locus paenitentiae.

United States v. Britton and Pettibone v. United States, supra; United States v. Taffe, 86 Fed. 113.

As the United States cannot be defrauded by the exercise by a citizen's sale of his right of entry and purchase of coal lands when it has not been prohibited by statute, it is not necessary to consider the distinction between frauds at common law and the frauds cognizable in a court of equity, which latter, it is said, are incapable of definition.

To say that constructive fraud, such as is cognizable only in a court of equity, can be the basis of a criminal prosecution for conspiracy, would, in effect, say that no man could tell whether he had committed a crime until the chancellor had passed judgment thereon.

Thus, the word "fraud," as used in the bankruptcy act, has been held to mean positive fraud, involving moral turpitude.

Neal v. Clark (Neal v. Seruggs) 95 U. S. 704, 24 L. ed. 586. See also Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S. 676, 28 L. ed. 565, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

It is impossible to define the equitable conception of fraud.

2 Pom. Eq. Jur. 873; Stephen, History of Crim. Law, p. 121.

United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 161, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57, relied upon by counsel in the court below, is clearly not in point, as this is a criminal action, and, even in civil cases, in view of the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Adams v. Chureh, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. ed. 769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512, must be limited to its special facts; and in this latter case the court distinctly upheld this inherent right of contract.

Hafemann v. Gross, 199 U. S. 342, 50 L. ed. 220, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Hartman v. Butterfield Lumber Co. 199 U. S. 335, 50 L. ed. 217, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 36 L. ed. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. 291, 20 L. ed. 562.

The government of the United States, therefore, cannot be defrauded by the exercise by a citizen of the right of alienation by contract, where, for a consideration, deemed satisfactory to himself, he extinguishes his own right.

Had Congress intended to prevent the exercise of this right, it would have said so. The specific acts of defendant must be shown to have been clearly forbidden by the statute.

France v. United States, 164 U. S. 676, 41 L. ed. 595, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219.

The cases relied on by counsel (Curley v. United States, 64 C. C. A. 369, 130 Fed. 1, and United States v. Stone, 135 Fed. 393) are not in point, for the reason that, in those cases, the conspiracies relate directly to the exercise of governmental functions in public service, and in the protection of lives upon the high seas, and involved the invasion, not the violation, of specific statutes, and were acts in themselves mala in se, and not mala prohibita.

There is no averment in either count of the indictment that any entryman did not possess the qualifications required by the statute, or that any entryman was disqualified by having already exhausted his right, or that there was any false personation or imposition, or that any statutory requirement was not performed; nor is there any charge that any lands were entered with any misrepresentations or concealment as to the character of the lands. Therefore the indictment in neither count states any crime under the laws of the United States.

The second count of the indictment is specifically based upon U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4746, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3279, which is distinctly a pension statute, and not applicable to the case at bar.

The court is at liberty to refer to the proceedings in Congress in order to determine the evil sought to be remedied by the enactments of the statute.

Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 19 L. ed. 513; American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468-473, 35 L. ed. 821-823, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Northern P. R. Co. v. United States, 36 Fed. 285; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 37 Fed. 551; Untermeyer v. Freund, 50 Fed. 80; United States v. Patterson, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 775, 55 Fed. 641; United States v. Wilson, 58 Fed. 768; United States v. Hansee, 79 Fed. 303.

This statute was construed as a pension statute in Pooler v. United States, 62 C. C. A. 307, 127 Fed. 509. See also Edgington v. United States, 164 U. S. 361, 41 L. ed. 467, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72.

As the act under which this writ of error is sued out in no wise limits the jurisdiction of the court, it follows that the court has the duty, if necessary, of reviewing the whole case.

Burton v. United States, 196 U. S. 283, 49 L. ed. 482, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; United States v. Bitty, 208 U. S. 393, 52 L. ed. 543, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United States v. Macdonald, 207 U. S. 120, 52 L. ed. 130, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53.

As this case is brought before this court under the statute of 1907, it is before the court for all purposes, both as to the crime under the statute and the sufficiency of the indictment in all respects.

Ledbetter v. United States, 170 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 1164, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 774.

Messrs. Frederick N. Judson and Edwin H. Park also filed a reply brief for defendants in error:

Laws which create a crime ought to be so explicit that all men subject to their penalties may know what acts it is their duty to avoid. Before any man can be punished, his case must be plainly and unmistakably within the statute.

One of two alternatives we must here accept. We must, with the old English judges, look upon all voluntary combinations as suspicious, and an object of judicial suppression; or we must declare that only such combinations are penally cognizable as are here declared beforehand to be unlawful.

Wharton, Crim. Law, § 2288.

The courts have uniformly declared that the right of alienation is incident to every property right which is capable of possession in any sense. Whatever a man owns he can transfer, unless there is some statute prohibiting the exercise of that right.

St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. 171 U. S. 650, 43 L. ed. 320, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61; Mullen v. Wine, 26 Fed. 206; Pourier v. Barnes, 57 Fed. 956, 12 C. A. 9, 27 U. S. App. 500, 64 Fed. 14; Webster v. Luther, 163 U. S. 331, 41 L. ed. 179, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 963.

Under the mining law, assignments of placer claims have been sustained. This principle of the assignability of property rights is illustrated in the rulings of the courts upon the assignability of claims under the mining laws of the United States, as in the case of "grub-stake" contracts, which have been held assignable, though oral, and wherever capable of proof.

St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 654, 26 L. ed. 875, 881.

In the absence of actual fraud, perjury, and dummy entrymen, there is no criminal conspiracy in the corporations securing coal lands through pre-contract with the entrymen.

Pereles v. Weil, 157 Fed. 419.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The United States prosecutes this writ of error upon the assumption that the decision of the district court was based upon an erroneous construction of the statutes upon which the indictment was founded, and therefore, by virtue of the act of March 2, 1907, chap. 2564, 34 Stat. at L. 1246, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 209, the right obtained *to review the decision by [380 writ of error direct from this court.

The indictment contained two counts. Without quoting them fully, it suffices to say, for the purposes of the questions which we are called upon to decide, if we have authority to decide them, that the first count charged that the eleven defendants illegally conspired, in violation of § 5440, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676), with certain named persons and others unknown, to illegally obtain the title of certain coal lands belonging to the United States. The conspiracy was to be effected by procuring various persons as agents to enter coal lands in their own name, ostensibly for their own benefit, but in reality for the use and benefit of the accused and a named organization; the purchases being made by the agents as above stated, not with their own money, but with money of the accused or the corporation, and under agreements to convey the title, when acquired, to the accused or to the corporation, thus enabling the accused and the corporation to obtain coal lands belonging to the United States in excess of the quantity which they were allowed by law to enter. Copious averments were made in the count as to the use of alleged false, fictitious, and fraudulent papers in making the entries in question, which papers, as filed and entries made, had for their object and purpose to deceive the land officers of the United States, so as thereby to cause them to allow the entries in the name of the agents on the supposition that the entries were for the benefit of the entrymen, and which entries they would not have had the power to allow under the law, and would not have allowed, had the truth been disclosed. The second count charged an illegal conspiracy to do acts made criminal by § 4746, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3279), in making and presenting, and causing to be made and presented, in connection with the entries of coal land, certain false, forged, fictitious, etc., affidavits and papers.

To clear the approach to the issues to be decided we bring into view the statutes which must be passed on. Section 5440, relating to conspiracies, was amended May 17, 1879 [21 Stat. at L. 4, chap. 8, U. S. Comp. Stat. 381] 1901, p. 3676], by changing *the penalties imposed by the section as primarily enacted. As amended this section is as follows:

"Sec. 5440. If two or more persons conspire either to commit any offense against the United States, or to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose, and one or more of such parties do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy, all the parties to such conspiracy shall be liable to a penalty of not more than ten thousand dollars, or to imprisonment for not more than two years, or to both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court."

The text of §§ 2347, 2348, 2349, and 2350 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1440, 1441), which provide for the sale of coal lands belonging to the United States, is as follows:

"Sec. 2347. Every person above the age of twenty-one years, who is a citizen of the United States, or who has declared his intention to become such, or any association of persons severally qualified as above, shall, upon application to the register or the proper land office, have the right to enter, by legal subdivisions, any quantity of vacant coal lands of the United States not otherwise appropriated or reserved by competent authority, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres to such individual person, or three hundred and twenty acres to such association, upon payment to the receiver of not less than ten dollars per acre for such lands, where the same shall be situated more than fifteen miles from any completed railroad, and not less than twenty dollars per acre for such lands as shall be within fifteen miles of such road.

"Sec. 2348. Any person or association of persons severally qualified, as above provided, who have opened and improved, or shall hereafter open and improve, any coal mine or mines upon the public lands, and shall be in actual possession of the same, shall be entitled to a preference right of entry, under the preceding section, of the mines so opened and improved: Provided, That when any association of not less than four persons, severally qualified as above provided, shall have expended not less than five thousand dollars in working and im- 382] proving *any such mine or mines, such association may enter not exceeding six hundred and forty acres, including such mining improvements.

"Sec. 2349. All claims under the preceding section must be presented to the register of the proper land district within sixty days after the date of actual possession and 238 the commencement of improvements on the land, by the filing of a declaratory statement therefor; but when the township plat is not on file at the date of such improvement, filing must be made within sixty days from the receipt of such plat at the district office; and where the improvement shall have been made prior to the expiration of three months from the third day of March, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, sixty days from the expiration of such three months shall be allowed for the filing of a declaratory statement, and no sale under the provisions of this section shall be allowed until the expiration of six months from the third day of March, eighteen hundred and seventy-three.

"Sec. 2350. The three preceding sections shall be held to authorize only one entry by the same person or association of persons; and no association of persons any member of which shall have taken the benefit of such sections, either as an individual or as a member of any other association, shall enter or hold any other lands under the provisions thereof, and no member of any association which shall have taken the benefit of such sections shall enter or hold any other lands under their provisions; and all persons claiming under section twenty-three hundred and forty-eight shall be required to prove their respective rights and pay for the lands filed upon within one year from the time prescribed for filing their respective claims; and upon failure to file the proper notice, or to pay for the land within the required period, the same shall be subject to entry by any other qualified applicant."

Section 2351 provides for conflicting claims in designated cases, and thus concludes:

"The Commissioner of the General Land Office is authorized *to issue all need-[383 ful rules and regulations for carrying into effect the provisions of this and the four preceding sections."

Section 4746 of the Revised Statutes, embraced in the title "Pensions," was amended by the act of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 718, chap. 578, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3279). The section, as amended, is as follows, the amendments which the law of 1898 enacted being printed in italics:

"That every person who knowingly or wilfully makes or aids, or assists in the making, or in any wise procures the making or presentation of any false or fraudulent affidavit, declaration, certificate, voucher, or paper, or writing purporting to be such, concerning any claim for pension or payment thereof, or pertaining to any other matter within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Pensions or of the Secretary of the Interior, or who knowingly or wilfully makes or causes to be made, or aids or assists in the making, or presents or causes to be presented at any pension agency any power of attorney or other paper required as a voucher in drawing a pension, which paper bears a date subsequent to that upon which it was actually signed or acknowledged by the pensioner, and every person before whom any declaration, affidavit, voucher, or other paper or writing to be used in aid of the prosecution of any claim for pension or bounty land or payment thereof purports to have been executed who shall knowingly certify that the declarant, affiant, or witness named in such declaration, affidavit, voucher, or other paper or writing personally appeared before him and was sworn thereto or acknowledged the execution thereof, when, in fact, such declarant, affiant, or witness did not personally appear before him or was not sworn thereto or did not acknowledge the execution thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or by imprisonment for a term of not more than five years."

On behalf of the various defendants motions to quash the indictment were filed, which the court granted. The grounds of demurrer were substantially the same, many being addressed to technical attacks upon the sufficiency of the indictment; but in each of the motions the validity of the indictment ³⁸⁴ was assailed upon the ground that neither count stated an offense within the statutes when properly understood.

The court, in the reasons given by it for granting the motions to quash, substantially held as follows:

1st. That the first count related exclusively to cash entries of coal lands under § 2347, Rev. Stat. That under this section no affidavits or papers were required other than the application to purchase, and therefore that all the allegations of the count respecting false and fictitious affidavits, papers, etc., related to documents required solely by the rules and regulations of the Land Department, which, not being expressly authorized by the statute, could not form the basis of a criminal conspiracy. The papers were therefore put out of view.

2d. That the coal-land statutes did not prohibit one who was qualified to enter coal lands from making a cash entry of such lands in his own name, ostensibly for himself, but really for the benefit of another, who was disqualified to directly make the entry, even although the ostensible entryman, in making the purchase in his own name, was really acting as the agent of the disqualified person, paid the price of the land with the money of such disqualified person, and made the entry under an obligation, on the completion of the purchase from the United States, to transfer the land to such disqualified person.

3d. From the import of the coal-land statutes thus announced it was decided that a conspiracy to acquire coal lands from the United States by the means stated was not a violation of § 5440, as the acts alleged did not constitute a defrauding of the United States within the meaning of the word "defraud" as used in the second clause of the Section, because that word must be interpreted in a restricted sense, and be given only its assumed common-law significance, and could not be used so as to embrace acts not expressly forbidden by law, upon the theory that their performance was contrary to a public policy which it might be assumed caused the enactment of the statutes.

*4th. It was directly held that the ³⁸⁵ conclusions just stated were not in conflict with a previous adjudication of this court, construing the coal-land laws, as the decision had been rendered in a civil controversy, and could not be extended and carried over so as to control the construction of the statute in a criminal prosecution, thus "spelling out" a crime where none was expressly declared in the statute.

5th. As to the second count, it was decided that § 4746 embraced only affidavits, etc., relating to pension and bounty land claims, and the charge of a conspiracy to commit a crime in violation of the section in question could not be based upon allegations of the use of false and fictitious papers, etc., in connection with entries of coal lands.

At the threshold our jurisdiction is questioned because it is asserted the case does not come within the act of March 2, 1907. The grounds of this contention are as follows:

First. That the court below merely held that the facts charged in the indictment were not within the statute, and therefore the indictment, and not the statute, was interpreted or construed.

Second. Because, in any event, the court below did not construe, but merely interpreted, the statutes.

As to the first ground, we dispose of it simply by saying that the analysis which we have hitherto made of the decision of the court below demonstrates that the contention is devoid of all merit.

In support of the second ground, it is insisted that the construction of a statute is one thing and its interpretation another and different thing. That abstractly there may be a difference between the two terms is not denied in argument by the United States, and finds support in works of respectable authority.

But, conceding the abstract distinction, and granting, for the sake of the argument only, 386] that the conclusion of the *court below might properly be classed, abstractly speaking, as an interpretation, and not a construction, of the statute, we think the contention without merit. It may not be doubted that, in common usage, interpretation and construction are usually understood as having the same significance. This was aptly pointed out in Cooley's Constitutional Limitations, 6th edition, where, after stating the theoretical difference, it is observed (p. 52): "In common use, however, the word 'construction' is generally employed in the law in a sense embracing all that is properly covered by both, when each is used in a sense strictly and technically correct." We think, when the context of the act of March 2, 1907, is taken into view, and the remedial character of the act is given due weight, it becomes apparent that the word "construction" is employed in the statute in its common signification, and hence includes both construction and interpretation, although there may be an abstract difference between them. This being so, it follows that we have jurisdiction to review the action of the court in quashing the indictment.

Putting aside for the moment technical objections to the sufficiency of the indictment, it is conceded by both sides that if the statutes which the court below construed be given the meaning which the United States, by the assignments of error, assert is the correct one, an offense against the United States was stated in both counts of the indictment. The construction of the statutes, therefore, is the real question for decision. We propose to examine the statutes applicable to each count separately; and, in doing so, to weigh the conflicting contentions urged in argument bearing on the question of the true construction. We reserve, however, for final consideration various contentions relating merely to the construction of the indictment as a pleading, by which the United States contends that the court below was wrong, even if, for the sake of argument, it be assumed that its construction of the statutes was right, and by which the defendants in error contend that the order quashing the indictment was 387] right, even if the court was *wrong in its view of the law, because of defects in the indictment.

1. The first count.

This count requires us to consider only the conspiracy provision, § 5440, and the coal-land provisions, §§ 2347, 2348, 2349, and 2350. As the applicability of § 5440 to the facts charged largely depends upon whether those acts were forbidden by the sections last mentioned, we proceed first to their consideration. Under these sections the question is, Do they prohibit a person who is disqualified from acquiring additional coal lands from the United States, because he has already purchased the full quantity permitted by law, from employing one who would be qualified if he made any entry of coal land in his own behalf, to make such entry ostensibly for himself, but really as agent for the disqualified principal, to pay for the land with money of such principal under the obligation, when the title has been obtained by purchasing from the United States, to turn over the land purchased to the concealed and disqualified principal? That the statute does expressly prohibit such a transaction we think is foreclosed by a previous decision of this court. Before coming to so demonstrate, however, in view of the contrary conclusion reached by the court below and the earnestness with which the correctness of that conclusion has been pressed at bar, we shall briefly consider the subject upon the hypothesis that it is open, and not foreclosed. Beyond question, by § 2347, Rev. Stat., everyone possessing the qualifications of age and citizenship therein stipulated is entitled, upon application and on payment of the price fixed by law, to purchase in his own behalf 160 acres of coal land, and every association of persons possessing the qualifications therein mentioned is entitled to purchase 320 acres of such land. This right, however, to thus purchase, is not uncontrolled, since it is limited by the § 2350, saying:

"The three preceding sections shall be held to authorize only one entry of the same person or association of persons; *and[388 no association of persons, any member of which shall have taken the benefit of such sections, either as an individual or as a member of any other association, shall enter or hold any other lands under the provisions thereof; and no member of any association which shall have taken the benefit of such sections shall enter or hold any other lands under their provisions. . . ."

The express command that the preceding sections shall be held to authorize only one entry by the same person or association of persons causes the grant to purchase not to embrace more than one entry by the same person; and as the right to purchase the coal land did not exist except by the authority conferred by the statute, it follows that the express provision excluding the right to do a particular act is, both in form and substance, a prohibition against the doing of such act. To hold that this prohibition does not exclude the existence in a disqualified person of a power to employ an agent to make a second entry, to furnish him with the money to pay for the land, under an obligation, when he has bought from the United States, to transfer the land to the disqualified person, would require us to say that the power was given to do that which the statute, in express terms, declares shall not be done. In other words, it would compel us to decide that an act done for a disqualified person by an agent acting for him and for his exclusive benefit was not the act of the disqualified principal. But this would be to nullify the prohibition upon the inconceivable hypothesis that the act of a duly authorized agent was not the act of his principal. To escape this impossible result it is insisted in argument that where a person qualified to purchase buys in his own name, without disclosing that he is a mere agent for a disqualified person, as he, the agent, thereby exhausts his individual right, the purchase must be treated as his, and not that of the undisclosed principal. This, however, does not change the situation, but simply seeks to avoid it by the statement of a distinction without a difference, since it again but reads the prohibition out of the statute by 389]*causing it to be inoperative if the disqualified person elects to do by another, his agent, that which the statute forbids him to do. True, the statute imposes no limitation on the right of a purchaser who has acquired coal land from the United States to sell the same after he has become the owner of the land. The absence, however, of a limitation on the power to sell after acquisition affords no ground for saying that the express prohibition of the statute against more than one entry by the same person should not be enforced according to its plain meaning. This clearly follows, since the right to sell that which one has lawfully acquired neither directly nor indirectly implies the authority to unlawfully acquire in violation of an express prohibition.

It is elaborately argued that the laws as to the sale of coal lands were originally embraced in the general statutes regulating the disposition of mineral lands, in which there were no limitations whatever as to the number of entries that a single entryman might make. With this genesis in mind it is urged that the sole purpose of the prohibition forbidding more than one entry by the same person, inserted in the coal-land laws when that subject came to be separately dealt with, was to secure to every citizen the right, if he chose, to make one entry; in other words, to prevent the monopolization by one person by means of many entries of the whole or a vast part of the coal fields belonging to the United States.

From this it is insisted the prohibition forbidding more than one entry by the same person should not be held to embrace an entry made by a qualified person for the benefit and as the agent of a disqualified one when the qualified person did not disclose the fact that he was acting as an agent. Conceding, for the sake of argument, the premise, we do not perceive its relevancy. That is to say, we do not comprehend how such concession lends support to the proposition that the prohibition against more than one entry by the same person should be disregarded by allowing more than one entry by the same person, if only that person chose, after making one entry in his own name, *to cause other and subsequent entries ad libitum to be made for his benefit by his agent, with his money, and for his exclusive account.

But if the mind could bring itself, upon grounds of the supposed public policy of the statute, to disregard the prohibition which it expressly contains, the argument here advanced, instead of conducing to that result, leads directly to the contrary. The purpose of the prohibition being, as the argument insists, to keep open the opportunity to every citizen to make one entry for himself, thus discouraging monopoly, it is obvious that that public purpose would be frustrated by allowing a person to make one entry in his own name and thereafter as many as he chose through his agents and for his exclusive benefit. It is a misconception to assume that there is any real identity between a purchase made by a qualified person in his own name and for himself with a purchase made by such person ostensibly for himself but really as the agent of a disqualified person. In the one case the person securing coal land from the United States for himself is free to dispose of the land after acquisition as he may deem best for his interest and for the development of the property acquired. In the other case, the ostensible purchaser acquires with no dominion or control over the property, with no power to deal with it free from the control of the disqualified person for whose benefit the purchase was made.

And the legislation of Congress subsequent to the coal-land laws indicates that Congress contemplated, in enacting the prohibition against more than one entry, the distinction between an entry made by one for himself, with the full power of disposition after entry, and an entry made by one ostensibly for himself, but in reality for another. Thus, under the timber culture act of June 14, 1878, chap. 190, 20 Stat. at L. 113, which conferred authority upon citizens of the United States, or persons who had declared their intention to become such, to make one entry of not exceeding one quarter section of land for the cultivation of timber, the statute was sedulous to require 391]that the person desiring to hold and cultivate the land should, at the time of making his entry, swear in his application that his filing and entry was made for his own exclusive use and benefit.

And the public policy lying at the foundation of the prohibition against an entry of land for the conceded benefit of another, whilst leaving full power of disposition in one who acquired the land in compliance with the statute, was pointed out in United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 36 L. ed. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575, where, in considering the timber and stone act of June 3, 1878, chap. 151, 20 Stat. at L. 89, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545, it was said (p. 163):

"The act does not, in any respect, limit the dominion which the purchaser has over the land after its purchase from the government, or restrict in the slightest his power of alienation. All that it denounces is a prior agreement,—the acting for another in the purchase. If, when the title passes from the government, no one save the purchaser has any claim upon it, or any contract or agreement for it, the act is satisfied."

We shall not further pursue the analysis, as we think it is patent that the whole argument rests upon a plain disregard of the prohibition which the statute contains, or seeks to render that prohibition nugatory by contradictory assumptions; that is to say, by assuming that things which are one and the same are wholly different; and, on the other hand, by asserting that things which are different are one and the same. This is said because such is the result of the contention that a purchase made by one through his agent is, in legal effect, a different thing from a purchase made by the principal; and, on the other hand, by the proposition that a purchase made by one for his own account is not different from a purchase made by the same person, not for his own account, but for another.

But, as we have hitherto observed, the review of the contentions as an original question was not essential, because their want of merit affirmatively appears from a prior adjudication of this court. The case referred to is United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57. The United States 392]sued to *annul certain patents to coal lands on the ground that the land had been purchased by officers and employees of a corporation when the corporation itself was disqualified, because it had already made one entry. The court below had sustained a demurrer to the bill. Its decree was reversed and it was expressly decided that the entries made both by the officers of the corporation and its employees were void. The contention was urged that the employees, having each a right to make an entry for his own account, it was not unlawful to do so for the benefit of the corporation. This was expressly negatived, the court saying (p. 167):

"It is true, in the present case, that some of the persons who made the entries in question were not, strictly speaking, members of the corporation, but only its employees. But, as they were parties to the alleged scheme, and were, in fact, agents of the defendant in obtaining from the government coal lands that could not rightfully have been entered in its own name, that circumstance is not controlling. . . . There is, consequently, in view of all the allegations of the bill, no escape from the conclusion that the lands in question were fraudulently obtained from the United States. We say fraudulently obtained, because, if the facts admitted by the demurrer had been set out in the papers filed in the Land Office, the patent sought to be canceled could not have been issued without violating the statute. The defendant would not have been permitted to do indirectly that which it could not do directly."

Because the statute was thus construed in a civil cause affords no reason for saying that the authoritative construction of the statute is not to be applied in a criminal case. It is true that, in the reasoning of the opinion, the public policy upon which the prohibition of the statute was founded was pointed out; but this does not justify the contention that the decision was rested, not upon the prohibition, but upon public policy alone.

The contention that the rules and regulations of the General Land Office or decisions made thereunder have recognized *the [393] right of a qualified person to enter coal lands in his own name, ostensibly for himself, but really for a disqualified person, under the obligation to transfer the land after purchase to such person, we think finds no semblance of support, either in the rules and regulations or in the decisions of the Department.

The meaning of the coal-land statutes being thus fixed, the consideration of the conspiracy statute, § 5440, Rev. Stat., is free from difficulty. It will be observed that the section embraces two classes of conspiracies: the first, "to commit any offense against the United States;" and the other, "to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose." The count we are now considering, it is not disputed, was framed upon the second clause. The proposition urged in argument that a charge of the commission of crime cannot constitutionally be predicated upon the averment of a conspiracy to defraud under the second clause, unless the acts charged were antecedently made criminal, is without merit, and is foreclosed by Hyde v. Shine, 199 U. S. 62, 50 L. ed. 90, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760, wherein it was expressly held that a prosecution would lie upon the charge of a conspiracy to obtain, by fraudulent practices, public lands of the United States. And, indeed, the ruling in that case was but the reiteration of the prior rulings in United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 33, 25 L. ed. 539, and Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 38 L. ed. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680.

The contention that the word "defraud" must be confined to its common-law significance, and hence cannot embrace the acts here charged, is without merit, even if we concede, for the sake of argument, that the word has a common-law meaning, and that that meaning would be implied if the word stood alone in the statute. This follows because the argument rests upon the assumption that the word "defraud" stands alone in the statute, and ignores the broader meaning which must result from the words "in any manner or for any purpose," by which the word "defraud" is accompanied in the statute. Besides, the contention is foreclosed by United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co., 394 where transactions of the very nature of those here charged were declared to be a fraudulent obtaining of the lands of the United States, and, indeed, transactions generally of a like character formed the subject-matter of the ruling in Hyde v. Shine.

The unsoundness of the argument that as when the prohibited entries were made the price of the lands was paid to the United States, therefore the United States could not have been defrauded, is refuted by its mere statement. If it were true, then in every case, however flagrant, where the lands of the United States were procured in violation of express prohibitions of law, the element of fraud would cease to exist by the mere payment of the price; that is to say, the successful operation of the fraud would deprive the transaction of its fraudulent character. But the inherent weakness of the contention need not be further pointed out, because its want of merit is conclusively established by the ruling in Hyde v. Shine, where a like contention was decided to be without foundation.

The attempt to distinguish this case from Hyde v. Shine, upon the theory that there the parties obtaining the land were disqualified, whilst in this they were not, rests upon the misconstruction of the coal-land statutes which we have already pointed out,— a misconstruction which we have seen led the court, in its ultimate conclusion, erroneously to say that the entrymen who acted as the agents of the disqualified persons or corporation were not forbidden by the statute to act as they did, because they might have made an entry for themselves.

Nor do we deem it necessary to do more than briefly refer to the elaborate statements at bar concerning constructive crimes and the fear which also found expression in the opinion below, that, if the words "to defraud in any manner or for any purpose" receive a broad significance, charges of crime may be hereafter predicated upon acts not prohibited and innocuous in and of themselves, and which, when they were committed, might have been deemed by no one to afford the basis of a criminal prosecution. It will be time enough to *consider such [395 forebodings when a case arises indicating that the dread is real, and not imaginary. That they are mere phantoms when applied to the case here presented results from the obvious consideration that the conspiracy charged had for its purpose the doing of acts which were in clear violation of the direct prohibition of the coal-land laws,—a prohibition whose meaning and effect had been unmistakably announced and applied by a decision of this court rendered many years before the formation of the conspiracy here charged. The cogency of these considerations becomes more pointedly manifest when it is borne in mind that the purpose and necessary effect of the conspiracy complained of was to obtain the lands of the United States by the suppression of facts which, had they been disclosed, would have rendered the acquisition impossible.

2. The second count.

The court below considered that the second count was framed solely upon the first clause of § 5440; that is, it held that the count charged the formation of a conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States through a violation of § 4746; and because of the construction given to that section, it was decided that the count stated no offense. In testing the count in this aspect, we must primarily fix the meaning of § 4746, as violations of that section were charged to have been the subject of the alleged conspiracy.

It was conceded by the United States in argument, and indeed it could not have been in reason denied, that the section in question, as originally embodied under the head of "Pensions" in the Revised Statutes, related exclusively to pension or bounty land claims. No crime, therefore, could have been predicated under the original section upon the affidavits or other papers used in making the coal-land entries, as alleged in the indictment. The contention, therefore, as now made by the United States, to sustain the second count, rests upon the proposition that the amendment to § 4746 by the act of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 718, chap. 578, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3279), had the effect of bringing within that section subjects *to which, prior to the amendment, the section in no manner related. Turning to the text, which we have previously quoted, with the provisions incorporated by the amending act printed therein in italics, it will be observed that every enumeration or description of new acts or papers in addition to those embraced in the section prior to the amendment, alone concern pension or bounty land claims. The argument as to the broad scope of the statute in its present form rests therefore alone upon the proposition that because the amendatory statute, in repeating the original words, viz., "concerning any claim for pension or payment thereof, or pertaining to any other matter within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Pensions," adds to them the following, viz., "or of the Secretary of the Interior," therefore the statute now embraces not only acts done in connection with pension or bounty land claims, but all acts of the prohibited character as to any matter coming before the Secretary of the Interior, or subject to so come, entirely without reference to whether they were in pension or bounty land claims or proceedings. But to adopt this latitudinarian construction would cause the statute to create a multitude of new and substantive crimes, wholly disconnected with claims for pensions or bounty land, with which latter it was alone evidently the purpose of the original as well as the amendatory statute to deal. We think to state the proposition is in effect to answer it. When the original text and the amendments which were made are taken into view, the conclusion inevitably follows that the purpose of the amendment was but to more specifically define the pension or bounty land papers, etc., with which the statute was concerned, and to enlarge the operation of the statute in respect to such papers so as to cause it to be criminal to use the pension or bounty land papers, etc., to which the statute refers, as well before the Secretary of the Interior as before the Commissioner of Pensions. In other words, that the only purpose of the amendment was to more fully deal with the subjects with which the provision which was amended *dealt, and not by way of the amendment to legislate concerning every conceivable subject coming within the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior. To otherwise hold would not only violate the most elementary rules of construction, but would require the treating as superfluous the new words of enumeration concerning pension matters which the amendatory act expressed. This follows, because, if the adding by way of amendment of the words "or of the Secretary of the Interior," contemplated bringing within the criminal inhibitions of the statute every act of a like nature to those forbidden, done in connection with every subject within the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior, then the new enumerations made in the amendment were wholly unnecessary, because, without enumeration, they would have been embraced in the statute as amended. Indeed, if the purpose intended to be accomplished by the amendment had been to embrace all acts of the prohibited nature as to every subject within the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior, no reason can be suggested why the new legislation should have taken the form of mere amendment to the section of the statutes which was alone concerned with pension and bounty land claims. Construing the statute as relating only to the subject of pension and bounty land claims coming within the authority of the Commissioner of Pensions or the Secretary of the Interior, it follows that a violation of its provisions could not arise from the acts charged in the indictment concerning the coal-land entries.

Finally we come to the two contentions of the government which we have hitherto temporarily put aside, and to the various contentions on the part of the defendants in error, insisting either that the court below misconstrued the indictment, or that there were such defects in the indictment that it was rightly quashed, irrespective of the construction of the statutes which led the court below to do so. But we do not think we have jurisdiction on this writ of error to consider these questions. The right of the United States to come directly *to this[398] court because of the construction of the statutes by the court below, as we have previously said in considering the question of jurisdiction, is solely derived from the act of 1907, the text of which is printed in the margin.† That act, †Chap. 2564.—An Act Providing for Writs of Error in Certain Instances in Criminal Cases.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That a writ of error may be taken by and on behalf of the United States from the district or circuit courts direct to the Supreme Court of the United States in all criminal cases, in the following instances, to wit:

"From a decision or judgment quashing, setting aside, or sustaining a demurrer to, we think, plainly shows that, in giving to the United States the right to invoke the authority of this court by direct writ of error in the cases for which it provides, it contemplates vesting this court with jurisdiction only to review the particular question decided by the court below for which the statute provides. In other words, that the purpose of the statute was to give the United States the right to seek a review of decisions of the lower court concerning the subjects embraced within the clauses of the statute, and not to open here the whole case. 399]*We think this conclusion arises not only because the giving of the exceptional right to review in favor of the United States is limited by the very terms of the statute to authority to re-examine the particular decisions which the statute embraces, but also because of the whole context, which clearly indicates that the purpose was to confine the right given to a review of the decisions enumerated in the statute, leaving all other questions to be controlled by the general mode of procedure governing the same. It follows from what we have said that the court erred in its construction of the statutes by which it quashed the first count of the indictment, and that, from a rightful construction of the statutes, no error was committed in quashing the second count. The order, therefore, quashing the first count, is reversed, and that quashing the second count is affirmed, and the case is reversed and remanded for further proceedings in conformity to this opinion.

any indictment, or any count thereof, where such decision or judgment is based upon the invalidity or construction of the statute upon which the indictment is founded.

"From a decision arresting a judgment of conviction for insufficiency of the indictment, where such decision is based upon the invalidity or construction of the statute upon which the indictment is founded.

"From the decision or judgment sustaining a special plea in bar, when the defendant has not been put in jeopardy."

"The writ of error in all such cases shall be taken within thirty days after the decision or judgment has been rendered, and shall be diligently prosecuted, and shall have precedence over all other cases.

"Pending the prosecution and determination of the writ of error in the foregoing instances, the defendant shall be admitted to bail on his own recognizance: Provided, That no writ of error shall be taken by or allowed the United States in any case where there has been a verdict in favor of the defendant.

"Approved, March 2, 1907." 34 Stat. at L. 1246, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 209.

53 L. ed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

ROBERT FORRESTER, Benjamin N. Freeman, Otis B. Spencer, Frank Eldredge, and George C. Franklin.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 399-404.)

Mines — entry for disqualified principal.

Persons entitled, under U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 2348, 2349, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1440, to a preferential right of entry of coal lands, are prevented, by § 2350 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1441), prohibiting the making of more than one entry by the same person, from entering such lands apparently for themselves, but in fact as agents for a person who is himself disqualified because he has already purchased the full quantity permitted by law.

[For other cases, see Mines, 18-18b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 287.]

Argued October 22, 23, 26, 1908. Decided December 14, 1908.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment quashing an indictment for conspiring illegally to obtain title to coal lands of the United States. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Attorney General Bonaparte argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence, filed a brief for plaintiff in error. For their contentions, see their briefs as reported in United States v. Keitel, ante, 230.

Mr. John M. Waldron argued the cause, and, with Mr. G. Q. Richmond, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The rationale of opinion in Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163, per se warrants affirmance of the judgment under review.

Congress has never in terms prohibited the making of contracts of the character set forth in the indictment, and crimes cannot be created by judicial implication or construction.

United States v. Worrall, 2 Dall. 384, 394, 1 L. ed. 426, 430, Fed. Cas. No. 16,766; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 95, 5 L. ed. 37, 42; United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch, 32, 34, 3 L. ed. 259, 260; Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U. S. 240, 262, 35 L. ed. 159, 166, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559;

NOTE. — On the right of a state to appeal in a criminal case—see note to People ex rel. Hadson v. Miner, 19 L.R.A. 342.

Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 278, 282, 39 L. ed. 982, 983, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Jones v. United States, 137 U. S. 202, 211, 34 L. ed. 691, 695, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; United States v. Dietrich, 126 Fed. 678; Peters v. United States, 36 C. C. A. 105, 94 Fed. 131; United States v. Coppersmith, 4 Fed. 198; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 478, 31 L. ed. 508, 512, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564.

The term "defraud," employed in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3720, defines nothing. Hence, unaided by other Federal legislation, is ineffective as the basis of a criminal prosecution.

4 Elliott, Ev. § 2922; 2 Wharton, Crim. Law, 9th ed. § 1356a.

"Fraud" and "fraudulent" are words so frequently employed by bench, bar, and laity, that their precise meaning and exact import might superficially seem to be thoroughly established; and yet, upon inquiry and reflection, they and their congener, "defraud," will be found to embody mere abstract ideas, and are consequently devoid of specific significance, and are undefined and undefinable.

McAleer v. Horsey, 35 Md. 452; 2 Parsons, Contr. 7th ed. p. 769; Benjamin, Sales, Rev. ed. p. 554; 1 Eddy, Combinations, § 63; Anderson's Law Dict. title, "Fraud," p. 475; 1 Bigelow, Fr. p. 3; 20 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 14; Story, Contr. § 546; 1 Perry, Tr. § 169; Hobbs v. Boatright, 195 Mo. 693, 5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 906, 113 Am. St. Rep. 709, 93 S. W. 934.

Crime is not to arise upon doubtful construction of a statute, where a person of ordinary intelligence, reading the statute, would not understand from it that the act was forbidden.

2 Wilson's Works, p. 374; 1 Wilson's Works, p. 21; United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, 288, 35 L. ed. 190, 193, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 220, 23 L. ed. 563, 565; United States v. Comerford, 25 Fed. 902; Com. v. Adams Exp. Co. 123 Ky. 720, 97 S. W. 386.

The term "defraud" has repeatedly been adjudged to be vague and indeterminate from the standpoint of the criminal law when unaided by the context in a penal statute.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. ed. 588, 593; State v. Keach, 40 Vt. 113; State v. Parker, 43 N. H. 88; State v. Roberts, 34 Me. 320; Alderman v. People, 4 Mich. 414, 69 Am. Dec. 321; Com. v. Shedd, 7 Cush. 515; Com. v. Wallace, 16 Gray, 221.

The term "fraud" may have a different signification when employed in a criminal statute than when the like term appears in an act relating solely to civil rights or remedies.

2 Bishop, New Crim. Law, § 818.

Language employed in criminal statutes, no less certain in its essence than the term "defraud" in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, has been held void, and upon the express ground that it would be an unconstitutional exercise of authority for the judiciary to define, wholly unaided by statute, the acts necessary to constitute the offense inadequately attempted to be denounced by the legislature.

Cook v. State, 26 Ind. App. 282, 59 N. E. 489; State v. Mann, 2 Or. 238; Augustine v. State, 41 Tex. Crim. Rep. 59, 96 Am. St. Rep. 765, 52 S. W. 77; Jennings v. State, 16 Ind. 335; Marvin v. State, 19 Ind. 181; McConvill v. Jersey City, 39 N. J. L. 38; State v. Partlow, 91 N. C. 550, 49 Am. Rep. 652; State v. Gaster, 45 La. Ann. 639, 12 So. 739.

Some act of Congress must exist which, in and of itself, clearly defines as a crime the particular conduct sought to be penalized.

State v. Bates, 14 Utah, 300, 43 L.R.A. 33, 47 Pac. 78; 10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 303, 304; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 163.

The words "fraud," "defraud," and "fraudulent," when employed in a pleading, even in a civil suit, are respectively universally regarded as a statement of a mere legal conclusion, and not descriptive of any actionable fact or facts whatsoever.

Kerr, Fraud & Mistake, p. 366; Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 586, 591, 27 L. ed. 322, 324, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556; Fogg v. Blair, 139 U. S. 118-127, 35 L. ed. 104, 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; Lumley v. Wabash R. Co. 71 Fed. 27; Cella v. Brown, 75 C. C. A. 608, 144 Fed. 754.

Conspiracy as a common-law offense is not cognizable in the Federal courts, and the word "defraud," being of uncertain import, resort cannot be had to that system of jurisprudence to determine its meaning.

2 Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 398; United States v. Smith, 5 Wheat. 154, 160, 5 L. ed. 57, 58.

The word "entry" has a technical meaning, and applies only to the formal proceedings culminating in the payment of the requisite purchase price to the government for the lands desired to be acquired.

Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 363, 33 L. ed. 363, 366, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; McFadden v. Mountain View Min. & Mill. Co. 87 Fed. 154; Stearns v. United States, 82 C. C. A. 48, 152 Fed. 900; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629-638, 28 L. ed. 1122-1125, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Lockwitz v. Larson, 16 Utah, 279, 52 Pac. 279.

The contracts forming the sole basis of this prosecution are not denounced by the letter or express terms of the coal-land act as illegal, fraudulent, or in any manner prohibited, and for the judiciary to denounce such contracts as a criminal conspiracy will be the creating of a crime by purely judicial construction or implication; and constructive crimes, as this court has expressly held, are unknown to Federal criminal jurisprudence.
211 U. S.

Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 282, 39 L. ed. 982, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889.

The fundamental principles of the common law prohibit the enlargement of the letter of the statute by construction for the purpose of entailing penal consequences upon a citizen.

Harrison v. Vose, 9 How. 373-379, 13 L. ed. 179-182; Sarlls v. United States, 152 U. S. 570, 576, 38 L. ed. 556, 558, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; State v. Moore, 5 Blackf. 118; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 310, 44 L. ed. 780, 782, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; France v. United States, 164 U. S. 676, 683, 41 L. ed. 595, 597, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; Bishop, Statutory Crimes, § 220; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, p. 455; Potter's Dwarr. Stat. & Const. p. 247; James v. Bowman, 190 U. S. 127, 47 L. ed. 979, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; United States v. Fox, 95 U. S. 670, 24 L. ed. 538.

All interests, inchoate or vested, to, in, or concerning lands, public or private, are assignable in the absence of an express prohibitory statute.

St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 651, 26 L. ed. 875, 880; Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How 185, 16 L. ed. 251; Gilbert v. Thompson, 14 Minn. 544; Gil. 414; Myrick v. Thompson, 99 U. S. 291, 296, 297, 25 L. ed. 324, 326, 327; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. § 168; Mitchell v. Winslow, 2 Story, 630, Fed. Cas. No. 9,673.

The contracts assailed by the indictment would not furnish the basis for a common-law criminal conspiracy.

3 Coke, Inst. 143; Jacob's Dict. title "Conspiracy;" Black's Law Dict. title "Conspiracy;" 4 Bl. Com. p. 136; Schick v. United States, 195 U. S. 65, 69, 49 L. ed. 99, 102, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 585; 2 Wilson's Works, p. 429; 2 Wharton, Crim. Law, 9th ed. § 1338; Wright, Criminal Conspiracies, p. 48.

The prevailing definition of "conspiracy" at the present time, viz., "A combination of two or more persons by concerted action to accomplish a criminal or unlawful purpose, or some purpose not in itself criminal or unlawful, by criminal or unlawful means," is a modern innovation and enlargement by a process of judicial legislation upon the true common-law rule.

53 L. ed.

R. v. Jones, 4 Barn. & Ad. 348; State v. Buchanan, 5 Harr. & J. 317, 9 Am. Dec. 534; Com. v. Hunt, 4 Met. 111, 38 Am. Dec. 346; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 37 L. ed. 419, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542.

The modern cases expanding the doctrine of conspiracy so as to include virtually whatever a court may see proper to declare to be an unlawful object have been bitterly assailed.

1 Eddy, Combinations, §§ 353, 354.

When Federal courts seek to ascertain the status of the common law on a given subject, they accept such law as expounded and settled by the decisions of the English courts prior to, and not after, the separation of the thirteen colonies from the mother country.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 279, 280; Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. 264, 8 L. ed. 120.

The term "unlawful," as an element of the modern judicial definition of "conspiracy," means unlawful in a criminal, and not merely in a civil, sense.

Wright, Crim. Conspiracies, pp. 50, 51; 1 Roscoe, Crim. Ev. 8th ed. p. 565; State v. Van Pelt, 136 N. C. 646, 68 L.R.A. 760, 49 S. E. 177, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 495; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 119; 3 Greenl. Ev. 15th ed. § 90a; Johnson v. State, 66 Ohio St. 66, 61 L.R.A. 277, 90 Am. St. Rep. 564, 63 N. E. 607; Potter v. State, 162 Ind. 213, 64 L.R.A. 942, 102 Am. St. Rep. 198, 70 N. E. 129, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 32; Com. v. Adams, 114 Mass. 324, 19 Am. Rep. 362; Estelle v. State, 51 N. J. L. 185, 17 Atl. 118; Pettibone v. United States, supra; 6 Encyclopædia Britannica, 9th ed. p. 294; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 748.

Precedents sustaining prosecutions for conspiracy to "defraud" under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, are limited to combinations involving "moral turpitude" or acts malum in se, and this case presents neither of these elements.

Neal v. Clark (Neal v. Scruggs) 95 U. S. 704, 24 L. ed. 586; Hagerman v. Buchanan, 45 N. J. Eq. 299, 14 Am. St. Rep. 732, 17 Atl. 946.

Does the making of contract which merely violates an implied prohibition contained in a statute, but which, in and of itself, would not, per se, be in derogation of any principle of the common law (independent of the statutory prohibition), involve the commission of "moral turpitude?"

Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 26 L. ed. 347; Blackburn v. Clark, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 659, 41 S. W. 431; Baxter v. Mohr, 37 Misc. 833, 76 N. Y. Supp. 982; Re Coffey, 123 Cal. 522, 56 Pac. 448; State v. Horton, 139 N. C. 592, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 991, 111 Am. St. Rep. 818, 51

S. E. 945, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 797; People v. Phyfe, 136 N. Y. 554, 19 L.R.A. 141, 32 N. E. 978; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 199, 27 L. ed. 698, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531.

Where a statute merely prohibits the doing of an act, but provides no penalty as a result of its violation, the only legal liability which can follow from such infraction is a recovery in a civil suit by the injured party.

Chapman v. Douglas County, 107 U. S. 348, 356, 27 L. ed. 378, 381, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Pratt v. Short, 79 N. Y. 445, 35 Am. Rep. 531.

The exposition of the coal-land act contained in the opinion of this court in the equity suit of United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57, is neither authoritative nor applicable in the pending prosecution.

The reasoning and conclusions in the Trinidad Case have been, in effect, overruled, sub silentio, even for purposes of purely equitable relief.

United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 36 L. ed. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Hafemann v. Gross, 199 U. S. 342, 50 L. ed. 220, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. ed. 769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Hartman v. Butterfield Lumber Co. 199 U. S. 335, 50 L. ed. 217, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63. See also United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 37 Fed. 180; Lipscomb v. Nichols, 6 Colo. 290.

Civil and criminal law are wholly independent branches of jurisprudence.

Andrews, Am. Law, § 688; 2 Bishop, New Crim. Law, § 818; Com. v. Tobin, 108 Mass. 429, 11 Am. Rep. 375; State v. Moore, 12 N. H. 47; Milton v. State, 40 Fla. 251, 24 So. 60; Kerr, Fraud & Mistake, p. 43.

Statutes against frauds are to be liberally and beneficially expounded. This may seem a contradiction to the last rule, most statutes against frauds being in their consequences penal, but this difference is here to be taken, when the statute acts upon the offender and inflicts a penalty, as the pillory or a fine; it is then to be taken strictly; but when the statute acts upon the offense by setting aside the fraudulent transaction, here it is to be construed liberally.

1 Bl. Com. 88; 2 Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. §§ 337-683; Potter's Dwarrr. Stat. & Const. p. 260; Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 497, 37 L. ed. 533, 534, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

The same expressions may be differently construed according to their appearing in a civil or criminal action.

Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, p. 335; Com. v. Duane, 1 Binn. 601, 2 Am. Dec. 497.

The same language may have a broader scope and effect for remedial purposes than under the restraining influence of considerations which induce strict construction.

2 Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. § 517.

There is no impropriety in putting a literal construction on a penal clause and a liberal construction on a remedial clause in the same act of Parliament.

Short v. Hubbard, 2 Bing. 355.

In construing statutes to prevent frauds there is a pressure toward a liberal interpretation; but, if they also provide a penalty, being a thing odious to the law, there is another pressure toward the strict rule.

Bishop, Statutory Crimes, § 199.

The courts have adopted the sensible proposition that, in so far as the statute is remedial, it is to be liberally construed; but strictly construed in so far as it is penal.

State ex rel. Reeves v. Ross, 62 W. Va. 106, 57 S. E. 284.

The words "fraud" and "defraud" in equity may receive an entirely different meaning from the sense in which the same terms are understood even in a civil action at law; and, a fortiori, a radically distinct acceptation when like terms are employed in a penal statute.

Broome v. Beers, 6 Conn. 198; Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 515, 32 L. ed. 1005, 1009, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. § 922; 16 Cyc. Law. & Proc. pp. 84, 87, note, 44; 2 Bigelow, Fr. pp. 9, 10; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 19, note 2.

The judicial exposition of a statute is not law in future controversies.

Alferitz v. Borgwardt, 126 Cal. 201, 58 Pac. 460; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 371, 37 L. ed. 772, 774, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 1, 18, 19, 10 L. ed. 865, 871; Yates v. Lansing, 9 Johns. 415, 6 Am. Dec. 290; United States Sav. & L. Co. v. Harris, 113 Fed. 27; Phipps v. Harding (Hudson Furniture Co. v. Harding) 30 L.R.A. 513, 17 C. C. A. 203, 34 U. S. App. 148, 70 Fed. 468; Falconer v. Simmons, 51 W. Va. 172, 41 S. E. 193.

A Federal court cannot lawfully create a crime by construction, where Congress has omitted to even remotely suggest such result in direct terms.

United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch, 32; 3 L. ed. 259; Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 278, 282, 39 L. ed. 982, 983, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Field v. United States, 69 C. C. A. 568, 137 Fed. 8; People v. Phyfe, 136 N. Y. 559, 19 L.R.A. 141, 32 N. E. 978; Ex parte McNulty, 77 Cal. 164, 11 Am. St. Rep. 257, 19 Pac. 237; Jones v. United States, 137 U. S. 202, 211, 34 L. ed. 691, 695, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 95, 5 L. ed. 37, 42.

If the court entertains a reasonable doubt touching the rules of law or either of them, applicable in a criminal proceeding, the defendant is entitled to the benefit thereof.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 330; State v. Beck, 21 R. I. 295, 45 L.R.A. 269, 43 Atl. 366; 2 Sutherland, Stat. Constr. p. 966; State v. Walsh, 43 Minn. 444, 45 N. W. 721; State v. Krueger, 134 Mo. 271, 35 S. W. 604; State v. Dailey, 76 Neb. 770, 107 N. W. 1095; Harrison v. Vose, 9 How. 372, 13 L. ed. 179.

Jurists recognize conspiracy enactments as the most dangerous to the liberty of the citizen to be found upon the statute books of a state or nation; and this is true because, by elasticity of judicial construction, cases may be in practice brought within their operation when the law-making power may never have intended that such result should follow.

2 Wharton, Crim. Law, 9th ed. §§ 1338, 1360; 3 Chitty, Crim. Law, pp. 1138, 1139; Lambert v. People, 9 Cow. 597.

In many of the continental countries of Europe conspiracy as a substantive offense has been expressly abolished by legislative enactment.

2 Wharton, Crim. Law, 9th ed. § 1360.

Mr. John M. Waldron also filed a separate brief for defendants in error:

Decisions of the Land Department are valueless because the Department has boxed the compass in this behalf by changing its construction from time to time to fit its particular policy prevailing at any given period.

Re McConnell, 18 Land Dec. 414; 35 Land Dec. 665; Re Allen, 8 Land Dec. 143.

A settled policy of the Department will not control in the construction of any act of Congress.

Dewey v. United States, 178 U. S. 510-521, 44 L. ed. 1170-1174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528-536, 34 L. ed. 767, 769, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 601, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Deming v. McClaughry, 51 C. C. A. 349, 113 Fed. 641.

Defendants' construction of the coal-land act of 1873 is supported by the fact that Congress, in enacting such statute, thereby withdrawing coal lands from entry under the general mining law of 1872, did not insert specific prohibitions forbidding alienation contracts by entrymen or those qualified to enter coal lands prior to final entry, as it had done in the homestead and pre-emption statutes theretofore passed by it.

53 L. ed.

Such departure from preceding public-land legislation is significant and must have been intentional, not accidental. The later stone-and-timber and timber-culture acts specifically forbid an entryman to sell or contract to sell his right of entry prior to final purchase from the government.

When Congress so failed to prohibit such contracts in the coal-land act, the rationale of the following decisions denies the right of judicial legislation under the guise of construction to accomplish such end.

Maxwell v. Moore, 22 How. 185, 16 L. ed. 251; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. 291, 20 L. ed. 562; Gilbert v. Thompson, 14 Minn. 544, Gil. 414; Myrick v. Thompson, 99 U. S. 291, 25 L. ed. 324; United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 36 L. ed. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Hafemann v. Gross, 199 U. S. 342, 50 L. ed. 220, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. ed. 769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Hartman v. Butterfield Lumber Co. 199 U. S. 335, 50 L. ed. 217, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

A demurrer having been sustained to an indictment found against the present defendants in error, this writ of error was prosecuted on behalf of the United States under the authority of the act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1246, chap. 2564, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 209).

The five persons named as defendants were accused of having at Durango, Colorado, entered into an unlawful conspiracy to defraud the United States of more than 3,500 acres of coal lands, eighteen tracts of which land were particularly described. The purpose and object of the conspiracy was averred to have been the obtaining of the title to the lands for a Colorado corporation, styled the Calumet Fuel Company, in a quantity far greater than the corporation could lawfully acquire. The lands were averred to be "all then and there lands of the United States, chiefly valuable for the deposit of coal therein, situated within said land district, and open to entry and purchase as coal lands at the said land office, under the laws of the United States relating to the entry and sale of coal lands, and the rules and regulations then in force, which had theretofore been made under authority of said laws of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior." The means by which *the lands were to be fraud-[401] ulently acquired were substantially as follows: Persons qualified to enter coal lands were to be procured, who would be furnished by the conspirators or the corporation with the means to purchase such lands upon antecedent agreements that the lands, when acquired, should be conveyed as directed by the conspirators, each entryman to make the application to purchase and the final entry, and, in so doing, to make affidavit, in which, among other things, it would be falsely stated that the entryman was making the entry for his own use and benefit, and not directly or indirectly for the use or benefit of any other person, whereby the local land officers would be deceived, etc. Forty-nine separate overt acts were charged to have been done in furtherance of the conspiracy. In six of the paragraphs relating to the commission of overt acts the making of affidavits at purchase concerning six of the eighteen tracts enumerated in the body of the indictment was alleged, and the affidavits were set forth verbatim. In each affidavit, besides asserting citizenship, no previous exercise of a right to purchase, and stating the character of the lands, the applicant declared that he had expended a small sum (in one instance fifty dollars, in the others fifteen or twenty dollars) in developing a mine on the particular tract, that the applicant was in actual possession of the mine, and that the entry was made for his own use and benefit, and not indirectly for the use or benefit of any other party. The remaining overt acts concerned the borrowing of the money to make the purchases, the furnishing of the money to the entrymen to make the payments, the execution of deeds by the entrymen, the surveying of certain of the lands, an affidavit as to the distance of some of the lands from a completed railroad, etc.

Among other grounds of demurrer to the indictment was one asserting that no offense was stated therein. The demurrer was sustained "for reasons given on consideration of the first count in case No. 2022, United States v. Keitel." The decision thus made the [402]basis of the *ruling was that reviewed in case No. 286, which we have just decided (211 U. S. 370, ante, 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123). As pointed out in the opinion in that case, the court below, in quashing the indictment there considered, treated it as relating solely to cash entries made under the provisions of § 2347, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1440). If the indictment in this case is also to be so treated, it clearly follows from the ruling which we have made in the previous case that the court erred in sustaining the demurrer. But it is insisted on behalf of the defendants in error that this case differs from the Keitel Case, because the conspiracy here charged did not concern cash entries so-called, but embraced only entries of coal lands made by persons who had secured, by the opening and developing of mines and the filing of declaratory statements, as provided in § 2349, preferential rights of entry. If it be certain that the court below had construed the indictment as solely relating to strictly cash entries, then, under the views expressed in the Keitel Case, the contention now made as to the true significance of the indictment would not be open upon this record. It does not, however, follow that the court below interpreted the indictment here as relating solely to cash entries, because it referred to the reasons given for quashing the first count of the indictment in the Keitel Case as affording the basis for its action in sustaining the demurrer to the indictment in this. We say this because it may well be that the court deemed that the construction which it gave to the statutes as applied in the Keitel Case to cash entries was applicable, even although the indictment in the case was concerned with preferential entries. In any event, in applying the ruling which it made in the Keitel Case to this, the court below must have construed the conspiracy charged in the indictment as relating to all or any of the following classes: 1, to the procuring of the making of original cash entries by qualified entrymen in their own names while secretly acting as agents for a disqualified person; 2, to the procuring of qualified persons to take possession and improve coal lands and to file declaratory statements, with the ultimate object and purpose of entering the lands for the *benefit of disqualified persons; [403] and, 3, to cause persons in whose favor preference rights to enter coal lands had arisen to exercise such rights by purchasing the land ostensibly for themselves, but in reality for the benefit of disqualified persons, and to pay for the same with money furnished by those persons under an obligation to convey the land to them.

The first two of these classes are so obviously controlled by the construction of the statute which we have just announced in the Keitel Case, as to demonstrate beyond contention that the court below erred in its ruling on the demurrer. The third class is, we think, also necessarily governed by the construction which we have given the statute in the Keitel Case. It being settled in that case that the prohibition against more than one entry of coal lands by the same person prohibits a qualified person from entering such lands apparently for himself, but in fact as the agent of a disqualified person, it follows that the prohibition embraces an entry made by one through the procurement and for the benefit of another, although the entryman had previously initiated a preference right to enter the land for his own account. The mere preference right obtained as the result of taking the steps enumerated in §§ 2348 and 2349, Rev. Stat., including the filing of the declaratory statement, is, as described in § 2348, simply "a preference right of entry, under the preceding section, of the mine so opened and improved." Turning to § 2347, the preceding section referred to, it will be seen that the entry therein provided for is the cash entry made by applying to purchase the land, and contemporaneously therewith making payment for the same, which entry, as we have decided in the Keitel Case, excludes the right of a qualified person to make the entry in his own name with the money and for the benefit of a disqualified person. When it is considered that the preference which the statute allows is but a right within the time limited in the statute to make the entry authorized by § 2347, it cannot be held, without destroying that section, that the obtaining of such mere right of preference authorized the making, not only 404] of an *entry which the statute permitted, but as well one which the statute forbade. All the argument which seeks to demonstrate that the provision which gives the right to be preferred in making an authorized entry endows with the authority to make an illegal because prohibited entry rests upon a mere misconception of the nature and character of the right of preference for which the statute provides. The argument assumes that the right of preference is, in and of itself, the equivalent of an entry, not controlled by the prohibition which the statute expresses, when in truth and in fact the right of preference is merely a privilege given to make the statutory entry of a particular tract of coal land in preference to others. And the misconceptions upon which the argument rests concerning the nature and character of the preference right for which the coal-land statutes provide, when duly appreciated, at once demonstrate the irrelevancy of previous rulings of this court concerning the right of an entryman after entry, or after the doing of acts made by the statute equivalent to an entry, to dispose of the land embraced within the entry.

It follows from the construction which we have given the statutes in the opinion delivered in the Keitel Case, No. 286, just decided, and for the reasons here stated, that the court below erred in sustaining the demurrer to the indictment.

Reversed and remanded for further proceedings in conformity to this opinion.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CHARLES E. HERR and George C. Franklin.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 404, 405.)

This case is governed by the decisions in United States v. Keitel, ante, 230, and United States v. Forrester ante, 245.

[No. 291.]

Argued October 22, 23, 26, 1908. Decided December 14, 1908.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment quashing an indictment for conspiring illegally to obtain title to coal lands of the United States. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Attorney General Bonaparte argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence, filed a brief for plaintiff in error. For their contentions, see their briefs as reported in United States v. Keitel, ante, 230.

Mr. B. W. Ritter argued the cause, and, with Mr. N. C. Miller, filed a brief for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The court below sustained a demurrer to the indictment in this case, for the reasons which caused it to quash the first count of the indictment in the case of United States v. Keitel [211 U. S. 370, ante, 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123].

The indictment alleged a conspiracy to defraud the United States of coal lands, in violation of § 5440, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676). The conspiracy charged was, speaking in a broad sense, of the same general nature as that set forth in the first count of the indictment in the Keitel Case. In the argument at bar, however, counsel differ as to the correct construction of the indictment here under consideration, the United States contending that the conspiracy to which the indictment related concerned entries based upon preferential rights, while, on the part of the defendants in error, it is insisted that the conspiracy related to only cash entries. In view, however, of our ruling in the Keitel Case, No. 286, and the reasoning by which the decision in that case was held to be controlling in United States v. Forrester, No. 287, just decided [211 U. S. 399, ante, 245, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132], the contentions referred to are irrelevant on this writ of error.

As it results from the opinions in the cases just referred to that the court below erred in sustaining the demurrer to the indictment, its order so doing must be reversed.

Reversed and remanded for further proceedings in conformity to this opinion.

406] *UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CHARLES E. HERR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 406, 407.)

This case is governed by the decision in United States v. Keitel, ante, 230.

[No. 292.]

Argued October 22, 23, 26, 1908. Decided
December 14, 1908.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment quashing an indictment for a conspiracy illegally to obtain coal lands from the United States. Affirmed.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Attorney General Bonaparte argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence, filed a brief for plaintiff in error. For their contentions see their brief as reported in United States v. Keitel, ante, 230.

Mr. N. C. Miller argued the cause, and, with Messrs. B. W. Ritter and Edgar Buchanan, filed a brief for defendant in error;

It is not enough that a question of construction of the statute was presented to the court below. It must, we think, appear affirmatively that such question was not only presented, but that its decision was necessary to the determination of the cause, and that it was the actual basis of the decision, or that the judgment rendered could not have been given without deciding it. In other words, such must have been the controlling question involved.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556-576, 40 L. ed. 536-541, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38-47, 43 L. ed. 63-66, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 366, 37 L. ed. 1111, 1112, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 170, 181, 37 L. ed. 1041, 1044, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505-509, 44 L. ed. 864-866, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Ferry v. King County, 141 U. S. 668, 673, 35 L. ed. 895, 898, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128;

252

Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 167, 48 L. ed. 655, 661, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359; Sloan v. United States, 193 U. S. 614, 620, 48 L. ed. 814, 817, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Caro v. Davidson, 197 U. S. 197-200, 49 L. ed. 723, 724, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 205 U. S. 225, 233, 51 L. ed. 779, 782, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 203 U. S. 461, 51 L. ed. 269, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. German Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 270, 52 L. ed. 201, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78.

"Interpretation" has been said to be the "finding of the true sense of the special form of words used;" and "construction" to be "the drawing of conclusions respecting subjects that lie beyond the direct expression of the text."

Bloomer v. Todd, 3 Wash. Terr. 612, 1 L.R.A. 111, 19 Pac. 135; Morris Aqueduct v. Jones, 36 N. J. L. 206; State ex rel. Hastings v. Smith, 35 Neb. 22, 16 L.R.A. 791, 52 N. W. 700; People ex rel. Twenty-third Street R. Co. v. Tax Comrs. 95 N. Y. 559; Deane v. State, 159 Ind. 316, 64 N. E. 916; Terre Haute & L. R. Co. v. Erdel, 158 Ind. 347, 62 N. E. 706.

There are no common-law offenses against the United States, and every indictment must, therefore, be founded upon a statute.

Todd v. United States, 158 U. S. 278, 39 L. ed. 982, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677, 36 L. ed. 591, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764.

There is no room for "construction"—in its true sense—when the statute is plain and unambiguous.

United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 96, 5 L. ed. 37, 43; Thornley v. United States, 113 U. S. 310, 28 L. ed. 999, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528, 34 L. ed. 767, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; United States v. Alger, 152 U. S. 384, 38 L. ed. 488, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635.

In cases of doubt, the title and subject of the act may always be resorted to to determine the meaning of the body of the act.

Myer v. Western Car Co. 102 U. S. 1, 26 L. ed. 59; Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511.

The original statute applied only to pension matters, and was further restricted to the proceedings in these matters while pending before, and within the jurisdiction of, the Commissioner of Pensions himself. It did not impose a penalty upon the person who himself prepared a false affidavit, but only upon the one who procured it to be done; nor did it cover, under the first clause, any paper other than an affidavit; nor did it cover a case where, on appeal from the Commissioner of Pensions, a false affidavit was procured to be presented to the Secretary of the Interior.

211 U. S.

United States v. Kuentsler, 74 Fed. 220; Edgington v. United States, 164 U. S. 361, 41 L. ed. 467, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72.

The amendment of 1898 is plainly of a very special character, and broadens the original act only to a very limited extent.

Pooler v. United States, 62 C. C. A. 307, 127 Fed. 513.

When we remember that the old statute covered only certain offenses in pension matters, and applies only to a restricted class of persons, at particular stages only of the proceedings, it is not unreasonable to suppose, unless the language of the amendment necessarily repels the presumption, that Congress intended only to extend the provisions of the section to persons who made, as well as those who procured, any material false paper in a pension matter at any stage of the proceeding.

Brewer v. Blougher, 14 Pet. 178, 10 L. ed. 408; Petri v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 142 U. S. 644, 35 L. ed. 1144, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Cherokee Intermarriage Cases, 203 U. S. 76, 89, 51 L. ed. 96, 102, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29; McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 287, 41 L. ed. 437, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

When a particular class is spoken of and general words follow, the class first mentioned is to be taken as the most comprehensive, and the general words treated as referring to matters ejusdem generis with such class.

Broom, Legal Maxims, 625; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 268; Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, p. 361. Bishop, Statutory Crimes, p. 261, § 245; Sarlls v. United States, 152 U. S. 570, 38 L. ed. 556, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; United States v. Irwin, 5 McLean, 178, Fed. Cas. No. 15,445; Caldwell's Case (United States v. Caldwell) 19 Wall. 264, 22 L. ed. 114; United States v. Beach, 71 Fed. 160; State v. Bryant, 90 Mo. 534, 2 S. W. 836; State v. Schuchmann, 133 Mo. 111, 33 S. W. 35, 34 S. W. 842; State ex rel. Balch v. Fry, 186 Mo. 198, 85 S. W. 328; Wheeler v. Northern Colorado Irrig. Co. 9 Colo. 248, 11 Pac. 103; Hover v. People, 17 Colo. App. 375, 68 Pac. 679; Morse v. Morrison, 16 Colo. App. 449, 66 Pac. 169; Troy Laundry & Machinery Co. v. Denver, 11 Colo. App. 368, 53 Pac. 256; Brooks v. Cook, 44 Mich. 617, 38 Am. Rep. 282, 7 N. W. 216; Moore v. Settle, 82 Ky. 187, 56 Am. Rep. 889; State v. Sumner, 10 Vt. 587, 33 Am. Dec. 219; Edson v. Hayden, 20 Wis. 683; American Manganese Co. v. Virginia Manganese Co. 91 Va. 272, 21 S. E. 466; 53 L. ed.

State v. Goodrich, 84 Wis. 359, 54 N. W. 577; Shirk v. People, 121 Ill. 61, 11 N. E. 888; State v. Fontenot, 112 La. 628, 36 So. 634; People v. New York & M. B. R. Co. 84 N. Y. 569; Bevitt v. Crandall, 19 Wis. 582; 26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 610.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The indictment in this case contains two counts, each purporting to charge the commission of an offense in violation of Rev. Stat., § 4746 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3279), as amended.

The substantial charge in each count is that the defendant unlawfully procured a named person, in connection with a preferential entry of coal lands, to make and present to the Secretary of the Interior, by and through the register and receiver of the United States land office at Durango, Colorado, an affidavit at purchase, which was false and fraudulent in specified particulars. A demurrer to the indictment was filed and the validity of each count was assailed on many grounds. In disposing of the demurrer it was assumed by the district *judge[407 as conceded by the government, that the affidavit was not, in fact, presented to the Secretary of the Interior, but was simply filed in the local land office.

The demurrer was sustained "for reasons given on consideration of the second count in the indictment" in the case against F. W. Keitel et al. The case at bar comes within the principles applied by us in No. 286, just decided [211 U. S. 370, ante, 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123], where, in passing upon the rulings made below in the Keitel Case, it was held that the second count of the indictment there considered, when the statute was correctly construed, stated no offense. The judgment below, which involved a similar ruling, is therefore affirmed.

EDWARD H. HARRIMAN, Appt.,
v.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.
(No. 315.)

OTTO H. KAHN, Appt.,
v.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.
(No. 316.)

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Appt.,
v.

EDWARD H. HARRIMAN. (No. 317.)
(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 407-429.)

Interstate Commerce Commission — power to compel testimony.

Witnesses cannot be required to testify before the Interstate Commerce Commission except in connection with complaints for violation of the interstate commerce act or with the investigation by the Commission of subjects that might have been made the object of complaint, these being the only matters contemplated by the provision of § 12 of that act, giving the Commission power to require testimony "for the purposes of this act," which power cannot be exercised by the Commission in performing its duty under that section to keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the business of common carriers is conducted, nor in connection with the enforcement of the requirement of § 20 respecting reports by carriers, nor to aid the Commission in recommending, pursuant to § 21, additional legislation to Congress. [For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 315, 316, 317.]

Argued November 3, 4, 1908. Decided December 14, 1908.

TWO APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review orders directing appellants to answer certain questions put during an investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Reversed. Also an APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review an order denying a petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission to compel an answer to certain questions put during an investigation by the Commission. Affirmed.

See same case below, 157 Fed. 432.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John G. Milburn and John C. Spooner argued the cause, and, with Mr. Robert S. Lovett, filed a brief for Harriman:

The appellant Harriman was not bound to answer the questions in dispute if they did not relate to any particular matter under investigation, or to any matter which the Commission is entitled, under the Constitution or laws, to investigate.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 479, 38 L. ed. 1047, 1058, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125.

The subject-matter of the questions propounded is not interstate commerce, nor so related to interstate commerce as to be subject to regulation by Congress under the commerce clause.

(1) The power of Congress under the commerce clause is limited to matters in direct relation to interstate commerce, and does not extend to the acts, transactions, and dealings of state corporations and their officers not in that relation.

Angell & A. Priv. Corp. 11th ed. p. 19, § 684; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 75, 50 L. ed. 665, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 211, 6 L. ed. 73; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 225, 52 L. ed. 1036, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 472, 22 L. ed. 684; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 701, 40 L. ed. 849, 859, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Ashley v. Ryan, 153 U. S. 436, 38 L. ed. 773, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 664, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 210 U. S. 187, 202, 52 L. ed. 1016, 1023, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 12, 13, 39 L. ed. 325, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 702, 26 L. ed. 238, 241; Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 623, 48 L. ed. 1142, 1154, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 229, 44 L. ed. 136, 143, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; 17 Harvard Law Rev. 536, 537; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 348, 349, 48 L. ed. 679, 704, 705, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

(2) The subject-matter of the questions propounded was not interstate commerce nor directly related to it.

The questions have no relation to the reasonableness of the rates of the Union Pacific.

A state corporation does not, by engaging in interstate commerce, subject all its affairs to the regulation and control of Congress.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

Capital is not an "instrumentality" of interstate commerce in the sense that Congress may regulate the financial affairs of a state corporation and inquire into a possible devastation of its funds.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 98 U. S. 569, 25 L. ed. 143.

There is no peculiar or special right to regulate the present Union Pacific Railroad Company, owing to the Federal grant of corporate powers and franchises to its predecessor in title.

The possibility that the Commission may consider whether Congress should require all corporations engaging in interstate commerce to reincorporate or take out a license under Federal law does not warrant an inquiry into transactions of individuals, or the relations between state corporations and their directors.

Congress has not the power under the Constitution to compel testimony in aid of its legislative functions, and consequently could not delegate such power to the commission.

12 Senate Miscellaneous Documents, 2d Sess. 53d Cong. 1893, 1894, Digest of Decisions and Precedents, p. 277.

The 5th Amendment of the Constitution protects the citizen against such an intrusion into his affairs.

McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 61, 49 L. ed. 78, 97, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 561; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 336, 37 L. ed. 463, 471, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 182, 26 L. ed. 377, 384; Re Pacific R. Commission, 32 Fed. 241; Ex parte Jackson, 96 U. S. 727, 732, 24 L. ed. 877, 879; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 833, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 762, 28 L. ed. 585, 588, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 684, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Re Davies, 168 N. Y. 105, 56 L.R.A. 855, 61 N. E. 118; Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 4 Wheat. 235, 244, 4 L. ed. 559, 561; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 124, 32 L. ed. 623, 626, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; 1 Kent, Com. 10th ed. p. 601; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 434; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 145, 40 Am. Dec. 274; Norman v. Heist, 5 Watts & S. 173, 40 Am. Dec. 493; Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 209, 62 Am. Dec. 160; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 628, 29 L. ed. 746, 750, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 140, 41 L. ed. 949, 950, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 234, 41 L. ed. 979, 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 389, 42 L. ed. 780, 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 280, 15 L. ed. 372, 376.

The fact that the practice has been successfully adopted in some instances does not, for that reason, establish its legality.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 690, 40 L. ed. 849, 855, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714.

If Congress has power to compel testimony in aid of its legislative functions, the power is legislative in its character, and may not be delegated to an administrative body under a general grant of power.

Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 15-17, 6 L. ed. 256, 257; Marshall Field & Co. v. 53 L. ed.

Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 163.

Congress has conferred upon the Commission authority to investigate, and, in connection therewith, compel the testimony of witnesses, only in aid of its duty to execute and enforce the provisions of the act to regulate commerce.

Mr. John C. Spooner also filed a separate brief for Harriman:

A railway corporation created by a state, and authorized to build and operate a railway within a state, which also engages in interstate commerce, remains, notwithstanding, a state corporation, and subject to the control of the state as to its organization, the number of its directors, the amount of its capital stock, the liability of its stockholders, its authority to borrow money and to mortgage its property, in possession and expectancy, including its franchises, to extend its railway into other states, by their consent, by construction, purchase, or by stock ownership in other state railway corporations, and as to the general regulation of its powers, the increase or diminution of its franchises, its conduct of commerce "completely internal."

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 349, 48 L. ed. 705, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 472, 38 L. ed. 1055, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 276, 36 L. ed. 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 391, 50 L. ed. 521, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 211, 6 L. ed. 73; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 497, 52 L. ed. 308, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

The subject-matter of the inquiries addressed to the appellant Harriman are, if open to inquiry other than a judicial one, an invasion of the visitatorial power exclusively possessed by the state which created the Union Pacific Railway Company and the other state corporation involved; and beyond the power of the Congress to deal with; and therefore outside of any power which could be conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate.

2 Kent, Com. 306, 313; Angell & A. Priv. Corp. p. 724, § 687; Guthrie v. Harkness, 199 U. S. 148, 50 L. ed. 130, 26 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 4, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 433; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 720, 25 L. ed. 501; Clark & M. Priv. Corp. § 864; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 348, 48 L. ed. 704, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

The power of a state to authorize a railway corporation created by it to acquire and hold the stocks of other railway corporations is indisputably subject only to the limitation that no state may give a corporation created by its laws authority to restrain interstate or international commerce against the will of the nation, as lawfully expressed by Congress.

It is clear that the power of inquiry conferred by § 12. of the interstate commerce law does not warrant such inquiry as is contended for into the organization, internal management and affairs of a state railway corporation, or the questions propounded by it to the appellant Harriman.

It will not be denied, we suppose, that if an interstate railway corporation, engaged in both interstate and intrastate commerce, conducted the latter separately as to trains, employees, and otherwise from the former, that there could not be imputed to Congress an intent to authorize the Commission to inquire and keep themselves informed as to the method and manner in which the corporation conducted its business of intrastate commerce alone. That is, as to regulation, beyond the power of Congress.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 19, 51 L. ed. 941, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

If it were admitted that either house or the Congress may lawfully delegate to the Commission power to compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses solely for the purpose of enabling the Commission to gather information upon which to base recommendations to Congress of new legislation, it has not delegated the power to the Commission.

Neither house of Congress nor the Congress possesses, under the Constitution, power to compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses or the production of papers solely in aid of its legislative power.

Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 189, 26 L. ed. 386; Re Pacific R. Commission, 32 Fed. 250; Re Chapman, 166 U. S. 661, 41 L. ed. 1154, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677.

But, if either house of Congress or the Congress possesses the power to compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses in aid of legislation, the power is legislative, and cannot be delegated.

The Commission had no jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the investigation as delineated by the resolution or order under which it was conducted, and therefore no power under the interstate commerce law to issue subpoenas, or to have the compulsory testimony of witnesses therein.

Sprigg v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 457; China & J. Trading Co. v. Georgia R. Co. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 241.

Whatever the conduct and transactions of the directors may have been, no cause of action exists in respect of them except by or for the company, and the transactions were their private affairs to all the world except the real party in interest.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 98 U. S. 609, 25 L. ed. 153; State v. Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. (Wis.) 116 N. W. 900.

The subject-matter of the questions is judicial in its nature, and the compulsory testimony of the appellant in respect thereof, save in a suit brought by the real party in interest, in a court of competent jurisdiction, and conducted according to the forms of law, would deprive him of his liberty without due process of law, contrary to article 5 of the Amendments of the Constitution of the United States.

Kilbourn v. Thompson, supra.

Mr. Walker D. Hines argued the cause, and, with Mr. Paul D. Cravath, filed a brief for Kahn:

Even on the Commission's theory, the questions are not relevant unless they relate to the value of the property employed by the Union Pacific for the public convenience, and therefore throw light upon the reasonableness of the Union Pacific rate schedules, considered as a whole.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 546, 42 L. ed. 819, 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Central Yellow Pine Asso. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 539.

The Commission has declared frequently that its powers are confined to the enforcement of the act, and do not extend to investigating financial operations, or matters which may injuriously affect the corporations.

Commission's Second Annual Report to Congress (1888) p. 21; Thirteenth Annual Report (1899) p. 10; Fourteenth Annual Report (1900) p. 10; New York Produce Exchange v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 7 Inters. Com. Rep. 658.

The Commission's construction has been regularly reported to Congress, has been relied upon by Congress, and, therefore, should control, even if the language of the statute were doubtful.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 401, 50 L. ed. 515, 525, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

No court has held that the Commission has any power to make inquiries of private persons when not relating to any violation of the act.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. ed. 1047, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 48 L. ed. 860, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Reichmann, 145 Fed. 235.

The compulsory disclosure of private affairs, although allowable for the enforcement of rights already established by law, is not allowable for mere general purposes of administration or legislation.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, supra; Re Pacific R. Commission, 32 Fed. 250; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 26 L. ed. 377.

While state courts have considered occasionally the powers of state legislatures to conduct investigations, the cases have related not to inquiries into strictly private affairs, but to investigations of public officers.

Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray, 226, 74 Am. Dec. 676; Lowe v. Summers, 69 Mo. App. 637; People ex rel. McDonald v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463, 52 Am. Rep. 49, 2 N. E. 615; People v. Sharp, 107 N. Y. 427, 1 Am. St. Rep. 851, 14 N. E. 319; Ex parte Parker, 74 S. C. 466, 114 Am. St. Rep. 1011, 55 S. E. 122, 7 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 874; Re Falvey, 7 Wis. 630.

The power to compel the disclosure of purely private affairs for the enforcement of established rights rests upon absolute necessity, whereas such disclosures are not an absolute necessity, but, at most, only a convenience, with respect to the performance of mere executive or legislative functions.

Amey v. Long, 9 East, 484; Summers v. Moseley, 2 Crompt. & M. 488; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 73, 50 L. ed. 652, 665, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; 3 Wigmore, Ev. § 2192.

Unless the Commission's powers of investigation are confined to the enforcement of the act, there is no standard by which the exercise of those powers can be guided, and there is an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power.

Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union 53 L. ed.

Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

The provision of § 12 requiring the courts to aid the Commission in obtaining testimony is constitutional only upon the theory that the statute itself creates and defines the duty of the witness which the court is called upon to enforce; hence, the statute must be so construed as to define a duty upon the part of the witness.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 476, 38 L. ed. 1057, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125.

Statutes conferring discretionary power upon administrative bodies should not be extended by unnecessary implication, so as to enlarge the administrative body's opportunities for arbitrary action.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 369, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

If the statute could be construed as conferring such general inquisitorial power on the Commission, the court should reject such construction, to avoid the grave constitutional doubts pointed out.

Knights Templars' & M. Life Indemnity Co. v. Jarman, 187 U. S. 197, 204, 47 L. ed. 139, 145, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108.

Messrs. Cordenio A. Severance and Frank B. Kellogg argued the cause, and, with Mr. Henry L. Stimson, filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The Interstate Commerce Commission, in making this investigation, had all the power of a congressional committee of inquiry, so far as interstate carriers are concerned, and could inquire into the management of such interstate carriers, and all the financial operations and business thereof, not only for the purpose of regulating rates, fares, and charges, as provided by the interstate commerce act, but for the purpose of recommending additional legislation.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 474, 38 L. ed. 1047, 1056, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 506, 42 L. ed. 243, 255, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 438, 51 L. ed. 553, 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075.

A marked instance of legislation resulting from the investigation of a matter in which the Commission had no power to make an order will be seen in the report entitled "Re Alleged Unlawful Discrimination," 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 597, which opinion was handed down April 5, 1906, and a provision, inserted in § 15 of the Hepburn act on June 29, 1906, evidently pursuant to the recommendation contained in such report of the Commission.

The importance of the powers of investigation conferred by § 12 was recognized by the Commission from the very first; and they have been with increasing frequency exercised to the present time without challenge, since the decision in the Brimson Case.

Commission, 1st report, p. 25, § 12; Seventeenth Annual Rep. (1903) pp. 32, 33; Annual Rep. Dec. 19, 1906; Re Through Routes & Through Rates, 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 163; Re Differential Freight Rates, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 13; Re Charges for Transportation of Fruit, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 129, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 360; Re Rates on Corn & Corn Products, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 212; Re Rates from St. Louis to Texas Common Points, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 238; Re Power or Train Brakes, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 429; Re Transportation of Salt, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 1; Re Transportation of Immigrants, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 13; Re Tariffs on Export & Import Traffic, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 55; Re Allowances to Elevators, 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 309; Re Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 473.

Nor are such powers of investigation or such investigations, novel outside the sphere of Federal jurisdiction. They are precisely the same powers which have been conferred upon similar bodies in the various states of this country, as the only intelligent means of dealing with similar problems.

Massachusetts Acts of 1902, chap. 432, § 12; chap. 265, §§ 17, 19, 21-23, 25; Public Service Com. Law of N. Y. 45, 48.

Prior to the amendments contained in the Hepburn act, this court held that while the equity powers of the Commission did apply to § 20, owing to the specific limitations upon the power of mandamus in the old law, the writ of mandamus did not apply. Knapp v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. (United States ex rel. Knapp v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co.) 197 U. S. 536, 49 L. ed. 870, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538. In the new law, Congress has removed the limitation on mandamus thus established; it would seem that Congress, therefore, had expressed its intention that § 20 should have the most complete remedies possible for its enforcement.

The present efforts of the respondents substantially to nullify § 20 and the powers of the Commission thereunder are similar to those with which the Commission was confronted immediately after the enactment of the interstate commerce act. At that time the broad purpose of the section and its constitutionality were ably defended by Judge Cooley, in the Second Annual Report of the Commission, p. 4.

The power of Congress to regulate commerce is not confined to the control of the act of transporting persons or goods. It includes the power to employ all means necessary to make such regulations effective. Pursuant to this power, Congress may, therefore, regulate the instrumentalities engaged in interstate commerce, and directly or indirectly affecting the same.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 565, 19 L. ed. 999, 1002; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 597, 43 L. ed. 297, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 344, 48 L. ed. 703, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 22, 49 L. ed. 371, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 75, 50 L. ed. 665, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Stockton v. Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 411, 32 Fed. 17; Perkins v. Northern P. R. Co. 155 Fed. 454; United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 321.

If a given subject affects or is connected with interstate commerce, Congress can take hold of and legislate in regard to it with the same freedom as if there were no state lines. Its power is complete and dominant. It has the full powers of any national legislature acting upon subjects within its jurisdiction.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 197, 6 L. ed. 70; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 413, 5 L. ed. 257, 293; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 336, 48 L. ed. 699, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Stockton v. Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. and Hale v. Henkel, supra.

Congress has passed many laws regulating certain of these instrumentalities more or less remote from the immediate carriage of the goods.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 494, 52 L. ed. 307, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158.

Within its sphere the power of Congress is supreme. The appellants completely lose sight of the difference between the power of Congress over interstate commerce and the power of the state over intrastate commerce; while, undoubtedly, each is supreme within its own distinctive jurisdiction, if regulations conflict in any degree the action of Congress is controlling, under the 6th article of the Constitution.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 18, 32 L. ed. 346, 349, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211-227, 44 L. ed. 136-142, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. supra.

It cannot at this day be disputed that Congress may create interstate corporations, regulate their capital, rates of transportation, the duties of their officers, the relation of the line to other lines of railway, provide for rates of dividend and the dealings between officials and the company. This is clearly within the constitutional power of Congress, and the Commission may inquire into the management of existing interstate carriers with a view to recommending similar regulations.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 407-409, 420-422, 4 L. ed. 579, 601, 602, 605; California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 39, 32 L. ed. 150, 157, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Wilson v. Shaw, 204 U. S. 25, 34, 51 L. ed. 352, 357, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 233.

The constitutional history of the national banks affords a striking parallel and convincing authority for the construction of the commerce power for which we contend.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 408, 409, 4 L. ed. 602; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204.

We are not announcing any new doctrine, or advancing one step beyond the construction of Chief Justice Marshall, when we say that when the state corporation projects itself across the state line and engages in interstate commerce, it becomes subject to the same regulation, with respect to all its affairs, directly or indirectly relating to such business, as it would if created by Congress itself.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 345, 48 L. ed. 679, 703, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 75, 50 L. ed. 652, 665, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 57, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Snead v. Central R. Co. 151 Fed. 619.

Can it be said for a moment that a commission which had power to investigate the method of the conduct of its transportation by the Union Pacific was without power to investigate these transactions, so inextricably bound up with that transportation?

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 48 L. ed. 860, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

To hold that the investment business of an interstate carrier, conducted by the same fiscal instrumentalities as its transportation business is conducted, cannot be inquired into by Congress because the carrier operates under a state charter, and the chartering state permits such an investment business, is to limit the plenary power of Congress to regulate commerce by the divergent notions of policy and self-interest held by forty-six states.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 344, 345, 48 L. ed. 703, 704, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

The situation is even more serious than when a court is called upon to pass upon the constitutionality of a statute. In such a case the court will not set aside the statute unless the unconstitutionality exists beyond a reasonable doubt.

Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 531, 20 L. ed. 305; Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 96, 25 L. ed. 552; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 514, 43 L. ed. 791, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

But the case now before the court goes even further. To uphold these appellants in their contumacy is to prejudge Congress, and to hold that, by no rational possibility, could it legislate upon the subject-matter at issue; and this without permitting Congress, through the Interstate Commerce Commission, to obtain, the facts upon which such legislation could properly be constitutionally based; and without permitting Congress itself, after it shall have acquired such facts, within its constitutional powers of debate, to consider them.

The cases of Re Chapman, 166 U. S. 668, 41 L. ed. 1158, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; People ex rel. McDonald v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463, 52 Am. Rep. 49, 2 N. E. 615; People v. Sharp, 107 N. Y. 427, 1 Am. St. Rep. 851, 14 N. E. 319, and Re Falvey, 7 Wis. 630, lay down very clearly the rule which entitles legislative committees to elicit information of the character here sought.

The basic principle by which the judiciary respects and enforces the determination of the legislative branch of the government is especially applicable to economic legislation like the interstate commerce act. For it is particularly true of such legislation that the constitutionality or non-constitutionality of a given statute will often depend upon the facts out of which the general rule of conduct prescribed by the statute has been derived by induction. Thus, a proposed exercise of the power of eminent domain may be held constitutional as to some portions of the United States, and unconstitutional as to others, by reason of the difference of facts existing in each locality.

Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361-369, 49 L. ed. 1085-1088, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1171; Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co. 200 U. S. 527, 531, 50 L. ed. 581, 583, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1174; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. ed. 937, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. No. 1133.

To foreclose inquiry on the ground that the subject-matter has in the past not been regarded as relating to interstate commerce is to lose sight of the fact that, while the nature of the power to regulate commerce does not change, the scope of its operation must often be extended to new matter.

Re Debs, 158 U. S. 591, 39 L. ed. 1105, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 9, 24 L. ed. 710.

Let the end be legitimate, let it be within the scope of the Constitution, and all means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, which are not prohibited, but consist with the letter and spirit of the Constitution, are constitutional.

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 421, 423, 4 L. ed. 579, 605.

Congress is not limited in its employment of means to those that are absolutely essential to the accomplishment of the objects within the scope of the powers granted to it.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 473, 38 L. ed. 1056, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125.

If there be involved any delegation of powers in the creation of an administrative body with authority to investigate the subject of interstate commerce, then not only has this delegation been expressly sustained by this court in the Brimson Case, but the standard by which the delegated powers are to be exercised is as definite as that sanctioned in a number of cases.

Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Dunlap v. United States, 173 U. S. 65, 74, 43 L. ed. 616, 619, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

The information sought by the Commission and refused by the respondents is material as bearing upon the reasonableness of the rates in force on the Union Pacific.

Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. ed. 935, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Re Rates from St. Louis to Texas Common Points, 11 Inters. Com. Rep. 240; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 546, 547, 42 L. ed. 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Re Proposed Advances in Freight Rates, 9 Inters. Com. Rep. 402; Kennebec Water Dist. v. Waterville, 97 Me. 200, 60 L.R.A. 856, 54 Atl. 6; Noyes, American R. Rates, p. 27; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 757, 43 L. ed. 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 412, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1028, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 442, 47 L. ed. 892, 894, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; Falmouth v. Falmouth Water Co. 189 Mass. 325, 62 N. E. 255; Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. 99 Me. 371, 59 Atl. 537; Smith v. Griffith, 3 Hill, 338, 38 Am. Dec. 639; Kountz v. Kirkpatrick, 72 Pa. 388, 13 Am. Rep. 687; Sedgw. Damages, 8th ed. § 249.

The resolution of the Commission was amply broad to cover the entire investigation; though in fact it is immaterial whether or not the resolution recited all the subject-matter developed in the course of the investigation.

Re Chapman, 166 U. S. 669, 41 L. ed. 1158, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677.

The contention that the inquiry involved the private business of the appellants is no answer to the right of the Commission to have the inquiry answered.

Wigmore, Ev. § 2192; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 46, 48 L. ed. 869, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray, 226, 74 Am. Dec. 676; Re Chapman, supra; Lloyd v. Freshfield, 2 Car. & P. 325; Emmott v. Star Newspaper Co. 62 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 77; Hannum v. McRae, 18 Ont. Pr. Rep. 185.

Messrs. Cordenio A. Severance and Frank B. Kellogg also filed a separate brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

While Congress may not grant or repeal the charters of state corporations, yet, when those corporations become instrumentalities of interstate commerce, and within the regulative power of Congress, it may impose proper restrictions; and, where some portion of the corporate activities authorized by the charter is repugnant to the regulation of Congress, may prevent the corporations from exercising them, in so far as such exercise bears upon or affects interstate commerce.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Harriman v. Northern Securities Co. 197 U. S. 244, 49 L. ed. 739, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

Capital is an instrumentality of interstate commerce in the sense that Congress may regulate the financial affairs of a state corporation engaged in such commerce.

Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851.

The power of Congress, in making inquiries concerning subjects upon which it has the right to legislate, cannot be distinguished from the power of the state legislatures in cases committed to their jurisdiction, and the decisions of the state courts sustain this power to the full extent.

People ex rel. McDonald v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463, 52 Am. Rep. 49, 2 N. E. 615; People v. Sharp, 107 N. Y. 427, 1 Am. St. Rep. 851, 14 N. E. 319; Re Falvey, 7 Wis. 630; Burnham v. Morrissey, 14 Gray, 226, 74 Am. Dec. 676; Hovey v. Foster, 118 Ind. 508, 21 N. E. 39; Wickelhausen v. Willett, 10 Abb. Pr. 164.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

These are appeals; on the one side, from an order of the circuit court directing the appellants, Harriman and Kahn, to answer certain questions put during an investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and, on the other, from a denial of a like order as to two other questions, answers to which the Commission had required.

In November, 1906, the Interstate Commerce Commission, of its own motion, and not upon complaint, made an order reciting the authority and requirements of the act to regulate commerce (Feb. 4, 1887, chap. 104, 24 Stat. at L. 379, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), and proceeding as follows: "And whereas it appears to the Commission that consolidations and combinations of carriers subject to the act, and the relations now and heretofore existing between such carriers, including community of interests therein, and the practices and methods of such carriers affecting the movement of interstate commerce, the rates received and facilities furnished therefor, should be made the subject of investigation by the Commission to the end that it may be fully informed in respect thereof, and to the further end that it may be ascertained whether such consolidations, combinations, relations, community of interests, practices, or methods result in violations of said act or tend to defeat its purposes,—it is ordered that a proceeding of investigation and inquiry into and concerning the matters above stated be, and the same is hereby, instituted." A time and place was set for the first hearing, and the inquiry thus begun was continued for about two months, resulting in the report of July, 1907, entitled "Consolidations and Combinations of Carriers," etc. 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 277.

In the course of the inquiry the appellant Harriman was called by the Commission and testified as a witness. At the time of the transactions referred to he was a director and also the president and the chairman of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company. The relations between the Union Pacific and other connecting roads, parallel or not, were under investigation and are set forth in the Commission's report. It is enough to say that the Union Pacific Railroad Company is incorporated under the laws of Utah, and, as has been asserted and assumed, has power under the state laws to purchase the stock of other railroads,—a power that it has exercised[415 on a large scale. Among other things, it bought 103,401 shares of the preferred stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company. These shares had been deposited with bankers, Kuhn, Loeb, & Company, by their owners, under an agreement authorizing the bankers to sell them to any purchaser at such price and upon such terms as should be approved by Messrs. Stewart, Mitchell, and the witness, Harriman. He was asked whether he owned any of the stock so deposited, and how much, if any. These questions, under the advice of counsel, he declined to answer.

Next he was asked with regard to stock of the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fé Railroad Company, bought by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, another Utah corporation, the stock of which was owned by the Union Pacific, whether it was a part of the stock that had been acquired previously by him and two others, and whether it or any part of it was owned by any of the three. After answering the first question, "I think not," he was stopped by his counsel and refused to answer further. Again, it appearing that the Union Pacific, in July, 1906, purchased 90,000 shares of Illinois Central Railroad stock from Messrs. Rogers, Stillman, and the witness, he was asked whether that stock was acquired by a pool of the three, whether it was acquired with a view of selling it to the Union Pacific, and whether it or any part of it was bought at a much lower price than $175 a share with the intent just mentioned. These questions the witness declined to answer. It appearing further that Kuhn, Loeb, & Company, who were the fiscal agents of the Union Pacific, had sold to it 105,000 shares of the Illinois Central stock on the same date, he was asked if he had any interest in these shares, and whether they were acquired by a pool for the purpose of selling them to the Union Pacific. These questions the witness declined to answer. Again, it appearing that the Union Pacific had purchased stock of the St. Joseph & Grand Island Railroad Company from the witness since the last-mentioned date, he was asked when he acquired the stock and what he paid for [416]it, and again declined *to answer. Finally, after it had been shown that since July, 1906, the Union Pacific had bought a large amount of New York Central Railroad stock, the witness was asked whether any of the directors of the Union Pacific were interested, directly or indirectly, in this stock at the time when it was sold. An answer to this question also was declined. All these refusals to answer were persisted in after a direction to answer from the Commission. The circuit court ordered them to be answered and Harriman appealed.

The petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission set forth two other questions which the witness refused to answer, and on which it asked the order of the circuit court. One was a general one, whether he was interested in any stocks bought between the 19th of July and the 17th of August that appreciated, and another, more specific, was whether he or any director bought any Union and [or] Southern Pacific in anticipation of a certain dividend, the suggestion being that announcement of the dividend was delayed for the directors to profit by their secret knowledge and that they did so. With regard to these the petition was denied, and the Interstate Commerce Commission appealed.

The appellant Kahn was a member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb, & Company. He also was asked whether any of the directors of the Union Pacific were the real owners of any of the shares of the Chicago & Alton Railroad deposited, as has been stated, with Kuhn, Loeb, & Company, and sold to the Union Pacific. He was asked further in various forms whether the before-mentioned 105,000 shares of Illinois Central stock, or any part of them, really belonged to or were held for any of the directors of the Union Pacific. And again, whether, at the same time that he bought these shares, he bought for Messrs. Harriman, Rogers, and Stillman the stocks they sold at the same time that he sold his. Finally he was asked whether the 105,000 shares, and the 90,000 shares turned in by Stillman Rogers, and Harriman, were all bought through his instrumentality for a pool of which they and he [417]were members, that *was operating in Illinois Central stocks for some months before July, 1906. All these questions he was directed by the Commission to answer, but refused. The circuit court ordered him to answer, and he appealed.

Many broad questions were discussed in the argument before us, but we shall confine ourselves to comparatively narrow ground. The contention of the Commission is that it may make any investigation that it deems proper, not merely to discover any facts tending to defeat the purposes of the act of February 4, 1887, but to aid it in recommending any additional legislation relating to the regulation of commerce that it may conceive to be within the power of Congress to enact; and that in such an investigation it has power, with the aid of the courts, to require any witness to answer any question that may have a bearing upon any part of what it has in mind. The contention necessarily takes this extreme form, because this was a general inquiry started by the Commission of its own motion, not an investigation upon complaint, or of some specific matter that might be made the object of a complaint. To answer this claim it will be sufficient to construe the act creating the Commission, upon which its powers depend.

Before taking up the words of the statute the enormous scope of the power asserted for the Commission should be emphasized and dwelt upon. The legislation that the Commission may recommend embraces, according to the arguments before us, anything and everything that may be conceived to be within the power of Congress to regulate, if it relates to commerce with foreign nations or among the several states. And the result of the arguments is that whatever might influence the mind of the Commission in its recommendations is a subject upon which it may summon witnesses before it and require them to disclose any facts, no matter how private, no matter what their tendency to disgrace the person whose attendance has been compelled. If we qualify the statement and say only legitimately influence the mind of the Commission in the opinion of the court called in aid, still it will be seen *that the power, if it exists, is unpar-[418]alleled in its vague extent. Its territorial sweep also should be noticed. By § 12 of the act of 1887, the Commission has authority to require the attendance of witnesses "from any place in the United States, at any designated place of hearing." No such unlimited command over the liberty of all citizens ever was given, so far as we know, in constitutional times, to any commission or court.

How far Congress could legislate on the subject-matter of the questions put to the witnesses was one of the subjects of discussion, but we pass it by. Whether Congress itself has the unlimited power claimed by the Commission, we also leave on one side. It was intimated that there was a limit in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 478, 479, 38 L. ed. 1047, 1057, 1058, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125. Whether it could delegate the power, if it possesses it, we also leave untouched, beyond remarking that so unqualified a delegation would present the constitutional difficulty in most acute form. It is enough for us to say that we find no attempt to make such a delegation anywhere in the act.

Whatever may be the power of Congress, it did not attempt, in the act of February 4, 1887, chap. 104, 24 Stat. at L. 379, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154, to do more than to regulate the interstate business of common carriers, and the primary purpose for which the Commission was established was to enforce the regulations which Congress had imposed. The earlier sections of the statute require that charges shall be reasonable, prohibit discrimination and pooling of freights, require the publication of rates, and so forth, in well-known provisions. Then, by § 11, the Interstate Commerce Commission is created, and by § 12, as amended by later acts, the Commission has "authority to inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, and shall keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the same is conducted, and shall have the right to obtain from such common carriers full and complete information necessary to enable the Commission to perform the duties and carry out the objects for which it was created; and the Commission 419] is hereby authorized and required *to execute and enforce the provisions of this act." District attorneys to whom the Commission may apply are to institute and prosecute all necessary proceedings for the enforcement of the act and for the punishment of violations of it; and "for the purposes of this act the Commission shall have power to require, by subpoena, the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of all books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements, and documents relating to any matter under investigation." [26 Stat. at L. 743, chap. 128, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3162.] Then comes the provision to which we already have called attention, by which a witness could be summoned from Maine to Texas, and then follow clauses for enforcing obedience to the subpoena by an order of court and for taking depositions, which do not need statement.

The Commission, it will be seen, is given 53 L. ed.

power to require the testimony of witnesses "for the purposes of this act." The argument for the Commission is that the purposes of the act embrace all the duties that the act imposes and the powers that it gives the Commission; that one of the purposes is that the Commission shall keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the business of the carriers is conducted, as required by § 12; that another is that it shall recommend additional legislation under § 21, to which we shall refer again, and that for either of these general objects it may call on the courts to require anyone whom it may point out to attend and testify if he would avoid the penalties for contempt.

We are of opinion, on the contrary, that the purposes of the act for which the Commission may exact evidence embrace only complaints for violation of the act, and investigations by the Commission upon matters that might have been made the object of the complaint. As we already have implied, the main purpose of the act was to regulate the interstate business of carriers, and the secondary purpose, that for which the Commission was established, was to enforce the regulations enacted. These, in our opinion, are the purposes referred to; in other words, the power to require testimony is limited, as it usually is in English-speaking countries, at least, to the only cases where the sacrifice *of privacy is neces- 420 sary—those where the investigations concern a specific breach of the law.

That this is the true view appears, we think, sufficiently from the original form of § 14. That section made it the duty of the Commission, "whenever an investigation shall be made," to make a report in writing, which was to "include the findings of fact upon which the conclusions of the Commission are based, together with its recommendation as to what reparation, if any, should be made by the common carrier to any party or parties who may be found to have been injured; and such findings so made shall thereafter, in all judicial proceedings, be deemed prima facie evidence as to each and every fact found." As this applied, in terms, to all investigations, it is plain that at that time there was no thought of allowing witnesses to be summoned except in connection with a complaint for contraventions of the act, such as the Commission was directed to "investigate" by § 13, or in connection with an inquiry instituted by the Commission, authorized by the same section, "in the same manner and to the same effect as though complaint had been made." Obviously such an inquiry is limited to matters that might have been the object of a complaint.

The plain limit to the authority to institute an inquiry given by § 13, and the duty to make a report with findings of facts, etc., in the section next following, with hardly a word between, hang together, and show the purposes for which it was intended that witnesses should be summoned. They quite exclude the inference of broader power from the general words in § 12, as to inquiring into the management of the business of common carriers subject to the provisions of the act, the Commission keeping itself informed, etc. They equally exclude such an inference from § 21, the other section on which most reliance is placed. That, as it now stands, requires an annual report, containing "such information and data collected by the Commission as may be considered of value in the determination of questions connected with the regulation of commerce, together with such recommendations as to additional legislation *relating thereto as the Commission may deem necessary." Act of March 2, 1889, chap. 382, § 8. 25 Stat. at L. 555, 862, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3158, 3170.

It is true that, in the latest amendment of § 14, findings of fact are required only in case damages are awarded. Act of June 29, 1906, chap. 3591, § 3, 34 Stat. at L. 584, 589, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, pp. 892, 899. But there is no change sufficient to affect the meaning of the words in § 12, as already fixed. If, by virtue of § 21, the power exists to summon witnesses for the purpose of recommending legislation, we hardly see why, under the same section, it should not extend to summoning them for the still vaguer reason that their testimony might furnish data considered by the Commission of value in the determination of questions connected with the regulation of commerce. If we did not think, as we do, that the act clearly showed that the power to compel the attendance of witnesses was to be exercised only in connection with the quasi judicial duties of the Commission, we still should be unable to suppose that such an unprecedented grant was to be drawn from the counsels of perfection that have been quoted from §§ 12 and 21. We could not believe, on the strength of other than explicit and unmistakable words, that such autocratic power was given for any less specific object of inquiry than a breach of existing law, in which, and in which alone, as we have said, there is any need that personal matters should be revealed.

In §§ 15 and 16 are further provisions for the enforcement of the act, not otherwise material than as showing the main purpose that Congress had in mind. The only other section that is thought to sustain the argument for the Commission is § 20, amended by act of June 29, 1906, chap. 3591, § 7, 34 Stat. at L. 584, 593, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, pp. 892, 906. This authorizes the Commission to require annual reports from all the carriers concerned, with details of what is to be shown, to which the Commission may add in certain particulars, and further, "to require from such carriers specific answers to all questions upon which the Commission may need information." The Commission may require certain other reports, and is to have access to all accounts, records, and memoranda. The section now deals at length with this matter and how accounts *shall be kept and the like. It [422 seems to us plain that it is directed solely to accounts and returns, and is imposing a duty on the common carrier only from whom the returns come.

All that we are considering is the power, under the act to regulate commerce and its amendments, to extort evidence from a witness by compulsion. What reports or investigations the Commission may make without that aid, but with the help of such returns or special reports as it may require from the carrier, we need not decide. Upon the point before us we should infer from the later action of Congress with regard to its resolution of March 7, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 823), directing the Commission to investigate and report as to railroad discrimination and monopolies in coal and oil, that it took the same view that we do. For it thought it advisable to amend that resolution on March 21 by adding a section giving the Commission the same power it then had to compel the attendance of witnesses in the investigation ordered. 34 Stat. at L. 824. The mention of the power then possessed obviously is intended simply to define the nature and extent of the power by reference to § 12 of the original act. The passage of the amendment indicates that without it the power would be wanting. The case is not affected by the provision of § 9 of the act of June 29, 1906, chap. 3591, 34 Stat. at L. 595, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 910, extending the former acts relating to the attendance of witnesses and the compelling of testimony to "all proceedings and hearings under this act." If we felt more hesitation than we do, we still should feel bound to construe the statute not merely so as to sustain its constitutionality, but so as to avoid a succession of constitutional doubts, so far as candor permits. Knights Templars' & M. Life Indemnity Co. v. Jarman, 187 U. S. 197. 205. 47 L. ed. 139, 145, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108.

Order in 315 and 316 reversed.

Order in 317 affirmed.

Petition denied.

Mr. Justice Moody, not having been present at the argument, took no part in the decision.

423] *Mr. Justice Day, dissenting:

I am constrained to dissent from the opinion of the court in this case. It seems to me that too narrow a construction has been given to the act of Congress conferring power upon the Interstate Commerce Commission to conduct investigations into the affairs of corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

The court, in the prevailing opinion, has not placed its decision upon the want of power in Congress to legislate concerning the subject-matter of investigation in this case. The decision is based wholly upon the construction of the act of Congress; and, as I am unable to concur in the view taken in the opinion, I will state the grounds upon which my dissent rests.

The reports of committees which accompanied the enactment of the interstate commerce law in its original form show that importance was attached to the power conferred upon the Commission to make investigation as well as to make orders relating to specific complaints as to practices affecting the conduct of interstate commerce and the instrumentalities by which the same is carried on. It was to have a power of investigation, such as had been conferred upon similar bodies in the states and in the English acts regulating the subject, with a view to eliciting information important to be had, in order to lay the basis for intelligent and efficient action in the legislative branch of the government to which the Constitution has delegated power to regulate commerce among the states and with foreign nations.

In speaking of this power, Judge Cooley, the eminent chairman of the Commission, in its first annual report, said:

"This is a very important provision, and the Commission will no doubt have frequent occasion to take action under it. It will not hesitate to do so in any case in which a mischief of public importance is thought to exist, and which is not likely to be brought to its attention on complaint of a private prosecutor."

424] *In numerous instances investigations have been conducted by the Commission having in view the exercise of its authority to afford information as to the manner and methods in which corporations engaged in interstate commerce are conducting their business. These investigations have been undertaken upon the initiative of the Commission; witnesses have been subpœnaed; and testimony has been taken without objection from those interested that the power of the Commission conferred by the acts of Congress had been exceeded. While these considerations are not determinative of the extent of the powers conferred in the act, they are suggestive of the practical construction which those interested have put upon it.

The act itself makes provision for two kinds of investigation,—the one under § 12, upon the initiative of the Commission without written complaint; the other under § 13, where investigation and orders are made upon complaint.

We are concerned in this case with an investigation undertaken upon the initiative of the Commission under § 12 of the act. That section, so far as pertinent, provides:

"That the Commission hereby created shall have authority to inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, and shall keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the same is conducted, and shall have the right to obtain from such common carriers full and complete information necessary to enable the Commission to perform the duties and carry out the objects for which it was created; and the Commission is hereby authorized and required to execute and enforce the provisions of this act; and, upon the request of the Commission, it shall be the duty of any district attorney of the United States to whom the Commission may apply to institute in the proper court and to prosecute under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States all necessary proceedings for the enforcement of the provisions of this act and for the punishment of all violations thereof; and the costs and expenses of such prosecution shall be paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of the courts of the United States; [425 and, for the purposes of this act, the Commission shall have power to require, by subpœna, the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of all books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements, and documents relating to any matter under investigation.

"Such attendance of witnesses, and the production of such documentary evidence, may be required from any place in the United States, at any designated place of hearing. And, in case of disobedience to a subpœna, the Commission, or any party to a proceeding before the Commission, may invoke the aid of any court of the United States in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents under the provisions of this section." [As amended by act of Feb. 10, 1891, 26 Stat. at L. 743, chap. 128, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3162.]

The plain reading of this section is that, for the purposes of the act, the Commission shall have power to require, by subpoena, the attendance and testimony of witnesses, and the production of books, papers, contracts, tariffs, agreements, and documents relating to any matter under investigation. Notwithstanding the broad language used by Congress, it is now held that the power of the Commission to require testimony embraces only subjects stated in complaints for the violation of the act, or investigations by the Commission upon matters which might have been the subject of complaint. I am unable to follow the reasoning which thus cuts down the expressed words of the act, which enables the Commission to require testimony for all purposes of the act. The complaints under the act may relate to unreasonable rates, to discriminating practices, to the management of the affairs of the carrier as involved in or connected with the conduct of interstate commerce, to the relations of interstate carriers with each other, and the like matters, directly affecting corporations and individuals engaged in interstate commerce. These things are within the purposes of the act, but no more so, in my judgment, than the declared purpose of the act to endow the Commission with investigating powers, having in view the ascertainment of the manner in which interstate commerce business is conducted [426]*and managed, with a view to intelligent action upon these important subjects.

For the purposes of the act this power to require the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, tariffs, contracts, etc., relating to any matter under investigation, is specifically conferred by Congress. To make the act read that the power shall be conferred only for the purposes of laying the ground for redress of specific complaints, or things which might be the subject-matter of complaints, narrows its provisions from the broad power conferred in the language used by Congress to powers limited to the execution of only a part of the act. It seems to me that the restricted construction given in the opinion has the effect to entirely reform the act of Congress, substituting for it, by judicial construction, a much narrower act than Congress intended to pass, and did, in fact, pass.

In § 12, which requires the district attorneys under the direction of the Attorney General to take all necessary proceedings for the enforcement of the act, and empowers the Commission, for the purposes of the act, to issue subpoenas and require the production of books, papers, etc., there is in terms conferred, as the basis of this judicial action and this power to summon witnesses, authority to inquire into the management of the business of corporations subject to the provisions of the act, in order that the Commission may keep itself informed as to the manner and methods in which the same is conducted, and to obtain from common carriers thus engaged full and complete information to enable the Commission to prevent bad practices and to perform the duties and carry out the objects for which it was created.

Nor are the purposes of the act for which the power to subpoena witnesses, require the production of books, papers, etc., alone defined in § 12. In § 20 of the act, in order to enable the Commission to make its reports, it is authorized to require from common carriers specific answers upon all questions upon which the Commission may need information, such reports to *contain a [427 showing of the amount of the capital stock, the amount paid therefor, the manner of payment for the same, etc., and § 21 of the act requires the Commission to make an annual report which shall contain such information and data collected by the Commission as may be considered of value in the determination of questions concerning the regulation of commerce, together with such recommendation as to additional legislation relating thereto as the Commission may deem necessary. These things are "purposes of the act" no less than the hearing of complaints and making orders touching the same. For all these purposes § 12 conferred the power which was sought to be exercised in this case. That inquiries might take a wide range is shown in the acts of Congress giving immunity to persons required to testify, and providing that no person shall be excused from attendance and testifying, or from producing books, papers, etc., before the Interstate Commerce Commission for the reason that his answers or the production of such testimony may tend to criminate him, and granting immunity from prosecution because of such compulsory testimony.

The function of investigation which Congress has conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission is one of great importance; and while, of course, it can only be exercised within the constitutional limitations which protect the individual from unreasonable searches and seizures and unconstitutional invasions of liberty, the act should not be construed so narrowly as to defeat its purposes.

In the case of Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 474. 38 L. ed. 1047, 1056, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 515, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125, this court had under consideration the provisions of § 12, authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to conduct an investigation upon its own motion, and in that case this court said:

"An adjudication that Congress could not establish an administrative body with authority to investigate the subject of interstate commerce, and with power to call witnesses before it, and to require the production of books, documents, and *papers relating to that subject, would go far towards defeating the object for which the people of the United States placed commerce among the states under national control. All must recognize the fact that the full information necessary as a basis of intelligent legislation by Congress from time to time upon the subject of interstate commerce cannot be obtained, nor can the rules established for the regulation of such commerce be efficiently enforced, otherwise than through the instrumentality of an administrative body representing the whole country, always watchful of the general interests, and charged with the duty not only of obtaining the required information, but of compelling, by all lawful methods, obedience to such rules."

And in Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 506, 42 L. ed. 255, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896, this court said:

"It [the Commission] is charged with the general duty of inquiring as to the management of the business of railroad companies, and to keep itself informed as to the manner in which the same is conducted, and has the right to compel complete and full information as to the manner in which such carriers are transacting their business."

In the case of Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S., at page 438, 51 L. ed. at page 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. at page 354, this court said:

"The Commission was endowed with plenary administrative power to supervise the conduct of carriers, to investigate their affairs, their accounts, and their methods of dealing, and generally to enforce the provisions of the act."

In the case last cited it was held that a rate filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission could only be attacked for unreasonableness by a proceeding before the Commission, with a direct view to a change in the rate. The power thus invested in the Commission, no less than the power conferred in this case, affected shippers from Maine to Texas, and required a shipper making complaint against a common carrier for carriage in a remote part of the country to obtain redress for unreasonable rates only by a proceeding before the Interstate Commerce Commission, which ordinarily sits in 429] the capitol at *Washington. Legislative power vested in Congress over interstate 53 L. ed.

commerce embraces the whole country; and while it may be extremely inconvenient to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of the papers, etc., throughout a domain so large as ours, that consideration does not detract from the power of Congress over the subject-matter.

Assuming, for the purposes of this case and the construction of the statute, that the relations of directors in a corporation engaged in interstate commerce to the sales of stock to such corporation may be the subject of inquiry when Congress confers such power upon the Commission, I think that in this act Congress has conferred such power. If such is the proper construction of the act, it follows that the Commission had a right to propound the questions which the circuit court directed to be answered. In my view the judgment of the circuit court should be affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice McKenna concur in this dissent.

Mr. Justice Harlan also dissents in No. 317.

CLINTON J. HUTCHINS, Trustee, Appt.,
v.
WILLIAM W. BIERCE, LIMITED, a Corporation.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 429-432.)

Appeal — final judgment below.

There is no final judgment below to sustain an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from the supreme court of the territory of Hawaii in a case in which the latter court has pursued the usual course upon exceptions, and has not entered or directed a judgment.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 447.]

Argued November 9, 10, 1908. Decided December 14, 1908.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review the action of that court in overruling exceptions from the Circuit Court of the First Circuit in that territory in an action of replevin which resulted in a judgment in favor of NOTE.—As to what judgments or decrees are final for purposes of review—see notes to Brush Electric Co. v. Electric Improv. Co. 2 C. C. A. 379; Central Trust Co. v. Madden, 17 C. C. A. 238; Prescott & A. C. R. Co. v. Atehison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 C. C. A. 482; Gibbons v. Ogden, 5 L. ed. U. S. 302; and Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001.

plaintiff. Dismissed for lack of final judgment.

See same case below, 18 Haw. 511.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. David L. Withington and Aldis B. Browne argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. R. Castle, Alexander Britton, and J. W. Cathcart, filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Charles H. Aldrich argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry S. McAuley and Henry W. Prouty, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case has been before this court once already. 205 U. S. 340, 51 L. ed. 828, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524. It was an action of replevin and was tried by a judge without a jury. The judge found that the allegations of the complaint were proved, and that the plaintiff, William W. Bierce, Limited, was entitled to recover. He also made a series of findings in detail, establishing the plaintiff's case and excluding certain defenses. These findings were excepted to on various grounds; among others, that they were not warranted by the evidence; and the whole evidence was attached to the bill of exceptions. Two of the findings were that the plaintiff had not waived a condition precedent to the passing of title to the property replevied, and that it had not elected against its right to bring this action. The case went to the supreme court of Hawaii on the exceptions, and there, of course, the question was whether it appeared, as matter of law, that the finding for the plaintiff and the judgment rendered upon it were unwarranted. The supreme court held that an election appeared as matter of law, sustained the exceptions, and made the usual order sending the case back for further proceedings in the lower court; but afterwards, on the plaintiff's motion, coupled with an affidavit that it would have no more evidence to offer at a second trial, it ordered judgment for the defendant. Thereupon the plaintiff brought the case here. It was held that the error relied on was not made out against the findings of the trial court, and the judgment of the supreme court of the territory was reversed.

In the discussion here it was assumed that [431] the supreme *court of the territory had power under the local procedure to order judgment as it did, and so to lay a foundation for the appeal. But the difficulties incident to such a course in cases subject to appeal are made manifest by this case. If the supreme court had the power to order judgment, obviously the scope of its inquiry before rendering judgment was not enlarged by the subsequent appeal or by the liability to it. When it rendered judgment it was confined to the questions of law presented by the bill of exceptions and the record. Logically, on appeal in such a case this court would be confined in the same way. At the broadest, the only questions would be whether it appeared from the record, as matter of law, that the judgment for the defendant ordered by the supreme court, or the judgment for the plaintiff in the court of first instance, or both of them, were wrong. It would be anomalous if the supreme court could make the statement of facts which is contemplated by the statutes and which it was said in our former opinion should have been made, in such form as to open questions on which the supreme court itself had had no power to pass before entering judgment, and so to present to this court grounds for decision which the supreme court of Hawaii could not have taken into account. On the other hand, a statement that should present the questions passed upon and no more would simply have presented the record, even if possibly somewhat abridged, or modified by concessions of which there was some trace in the opinion of the court. So not unnaturally, at the subsequent stage, the supreme court found itself a little perplexed.

Whatever might have been open, in our former decision the only question actually dealt with was whether the judgment of the supreme court could be sustained. There were some subordinate exceptions to the admission of evidence and the allowance of an amendment that were not considered here. When the case went back these were taken up and overruled by the supreme court. It then made a statement of facts in deference to what was said in our decision, and the defendant *appealed to this court. But [432] this time the supreme court did not order judgment, and it may be that, in its present opinion, the former judgment was unwarranted in point of procedure. Meheula v. Pioneer Mill Co. 17 Haw. 91. It is unnecessary to consider whether our former decision left anything open, in view of the technical scope of the appeal on the one side and the limited inquiry to which our attention was directed on the other. The statement of facts cannot affect that question, nor can it affect the defendant's right to be here. It is enough that the supreme court of Hawaii has pursued the usual course upon exceptions, and has not entered or directed a judgment. Therefore, as was decided a few days ago, in Cotton v. Hawaii [211 U. S. 162, ante, 131, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85], an appeal does not lie.

Appeal dismissed.

WILLIAM McCORQUODALE, Plff. in Err.,
v.
STATE OF TEXAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 432-437.)

Error to state court — raising Federal question on rehearing.

An order of the highest court of a state, on a motion for rehearing, which recites that the cause came on to be heard on such motion, and, "the same being considered by the court, said motion is overruled," does not show that the court passed on the Federal question first raised by such petition, so as to sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1292-1310, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 38.]

Argued and submitted December 3, 1908.
Decided December 21, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Court of Criminal Appeals of the State of Texas to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of murder in the District Court of Brazos County of that state. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below (Tex. Crim. App.) 98 S. W. 879.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Sam Streetman argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas H. Ball and Andrews, Ball, & Streetman, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Robert V. Davidson and Felix J. McCord submitted the cause for defendant in error.

433] Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Plaintiff in error, on March 10, 1905, was indicted by the grand jury of the district court of Brazos county, Texas, for the murder of one Henry Spell. He was brought to trial and convicted of murder in the first degree, the jury fixing his punishment at imprisonment for life in the penitentiary.

The judgment, after stating the number and title of the case, the arraignment of the defendant (plaintiff in error), his plea, the impaneling of the jury, the trial of the case, the presence of the defendant throughout all of the proceedings, the retirement of the jury to consider of their verdict, recites that the jury "afterwards, on April 1st, were brought into open court by the proper officers, the defendant and his counsel being present, and in due form of law returned in open court the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree, and assess his punishment at confinement in the state penitentiary for life.

J. H. White, Foreman.'"

The following is the sentence:

"April 15th, 1905.

"This day this cause being again called, the state appeared by her district attorney, and the defendant, William McCorquodale, was brought into open court in person, in charge of the sheriff, his counsel also being present, for the purpose of having the sentence of the law pronounced against him in accordance with the verdict and judgment herein rendered and entered against him on a former day of this term; and thereupon the defendant, William McCorquodale, was asked by the court whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced against him, and he answered nothing in bar thereof, whereupon the court proceeded, in the presence of the said defendant, William McCorquodale, to pronounce sentence against him, as follows:

"It is the order of the court that the defendant, William *McCorquodale, who[434] has been adjudged to be guilty of murder in the first degree, and whose punishment has been assessed by the verdict of the jury at confinement in the penitentiary for life, be delivered by the sheriff of Brazos county, Texas, immediately to the superintendent of the penitentiaries of the state of Texas, or other person legally authorized to receive such convicts, and the said William McCorquodale shall be confined in said penitentiaries for life, in accordance with the provisions of the law governing the penitentiaries of said state, and the said William McCorquodale is remanded to jail until said sheriff can obey the direction of this sentence.'"

The judgment was affirmed by the court of criminal appeals. 98 S. W. 879. A motion for rehearing was made by plaintiff in error and denied. Subsequently a motion was made by the state as follows:

"Now comes the state, by the assistant attorney general, and would show the court that the judgment in this cause was affirmed at Tyler, and the appellant's motion for rehearing was overruled at the Dallas term;

"That since which time it has been discovered, and this court's attention is now called to the fact, that the transcript does not contain a complete judgment against appellant, though the sentence is contained in the transcript:

NOTE.—On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

As to when the Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts—see note to Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 49 L. ed. U. S. 414.

53 L. ed.

"Wherefore, the state prays that the court order the transcript and all papers transferred from Tyler to the Austin branch of the court, to the end that this court may determine its jurisdiction of this appeal, and whether or not the judgment should be reformed and affirmed, or whatever action this court deems necessary.

"Respectfully submitted."

The motion to transfer was granted. The defendant, by his counsel, excepted, and opposed the state's motion to reform and affirm the judgment, on the following grounds: (1) The motion was not disposed of at the term at which it was filed; (2) It was not such a motion as is contemplated 435]by law, is not *a motion for rehearing, nor a motion for the court to correct its own judgment, but it is a motion to enter an original judgment, which the lower court alone has the power to do at the proper time, and that the court of criminal appeals has no power to so do. The latter ground was repeated in many ways, and it was alleged, with much repetition, that the court had no jurisdiction to grant the motion of the state, and it was prayed that the motion be denied in so far as it sought to have a judgment entered, or supplied, or to supply the want of the property judgment in the court below, and in so far as it sought to have the court of criminal appeals make any other order than to issue its mandate in accordance with its opinion theretofore rendered.

The court granted the motion of the state, holding that the judgment was in the ordinary form and complete, so far as it went, but that it did not comply with certain requirements of the Code of Criminal Procedure of the state, in that it did not declare, as provided in subdivisions 9 and 10 of art. 831, that it was considered by the court that the defendant be adjudged guilty of the offense as found by the jury, and that the defendant be punished as determined by the jury. The court further held that it had the power to reform and correct the judgment so as to bring it into accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The court, after reciting the proceedings and reviewing prior cases, concluded its opinion as follows:

"Reform" means to correct; to make anew; to rectify. Rapalje, Law Dict. p. 1083. Here we have all of the foundation of the judgment, including the verdict of the jury, which is the basic rock on which the judgment is formulated. We have, following this, the final judgment of the court, which is the sentence. This itself adjudicates the guilt of appellant and sentences him, in accordance with the verdict and judgment. From this data certainly we can do that which the court a quo, in due order, should have done. We accordingly hold that the judgment of the court below should be reformed and corrected, *so as to make[436 it read, in connection with the judgment as entered, and following the verdict, as follows, to wit:

"It is therefore considered, ordered, and adjudged by the court that 'the defendant, William McCorquodale, is guilty of the offense of murder in the first degree, as found by the jury, and that he, the said William McCorquodale, be punished, as has been determined by the jury, by imprisonment for life in the penitentiary; and it is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed by the court that the state of Texas do have and recover of and from the defendant, William McCorquodale, all costs of this prosecution, for which execution may issue; and that the said defendant is now remanded to jail to remain in custody to await the further order of the court.'

"The state's motion to reform is accordingly granted; the judgment is reformed and corrected, as above indicated, and, as reformed and corrected, the judgment is affirmed in accordance with the previous opinion of this court."

In answer to the motion of the state, the defendant did not set up that the action invoked by the state would, if granted, contravene the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. He, however, presented a petition for, to quote from the petition, "a rehearing upon the state's motion to 'reform and affirm,'" and urged as one of the grounds thereof the following:

"This court's said opinion is further erroneous in that it, in effect, deprives appellant of that due process of law guaranteed him by the Constitution of the state of Texas, and that of the United States, in this: that it is in effect the rendering of a judgment against him in his absence, and the authorization of sentence against him without a judgment."

The other grounds of the motion for rehearing were repetitions of the grounds urged in the answer to the state's motion and other grounds based on the local procedure, the basis of all being the want of jurisdiction in the court.

The order of the court on the motion for a rehearing was as follows:

"*This cause came on to be heard on[437 appellant's motion for a rehearing, and, the same being considered by the court, said motion is overruled."

This court has decided many times that it is too late to raise a Federal question for the first time in a petition for rehearing in the court of last resort of a state after that court has pronounced its final decision. Locber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 585, 37 L. ed. 856, 859, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Pim v. St. Louis, 165 U. S. 273, 41 L. ed. 714, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322. It is true that we have also decided that, if the court entertains the motion and passes on the Federal question, we will review its decision. But it must appear that the court has done so. Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 79, 48 L. ed. 623, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Corkran Oil & Development Co. v. Arnaudet, 199 U. S. 182, 193, 50 L. ed. 143, 149, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 192, 49 L. ed. 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; McMillen v. Ferrum Min. Co. 197 U. S. 343, 49 L. ed. 784, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533. It can hardly be said to so appear in the case at bar. The order of the court is nothing more than a denial of the motion. In other words, it expresses no more than would be implied from a simple denial of the motion.

Writ of error dismissed.

L. L. McCANDLESS, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JAMES W. PRATT,† Commissioner of Public Lands of the Territory of Hawaii.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 437-445.)

Appeal — who may maintain — necessity of personal interest.

A property owner and taxpayer has no such personal interest in a suit brought by him to restrain territorial officers from exchanging certain public lands of the territory of Hawaii for other lands as will sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of the territorial supreme court, denying the relief sought, where the suit is grounded on the theory that the proposed exchange is illegal under the territorial laws because the lands sought to be exchanged are under lease and are in parcels of more than 1,000 acres.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2385-2428, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 109.]

Argued November 6, 9, 1908. Decided December 21, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court of the First Judicial Circuit in that territory, overruling a demurrer to a bill which †Substituted as party in place of George R. Carter.

53 L. ed.

seeks to enjoin an exchange of public lands by territorial officers. Dismissed.

See same case below, 18 Haw. 221, 269.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Aldis B. Browne argued the cause, and, with Messrs. A. G. M. Robertson and Alexander Britton, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

If the plaintiff in error is right in his contention upon the law, the transaction is illegal. Property injury is not essential to support the power of equity to give relief.

Winn v. Shaw, 87 Cal. 637, 25 Pac. 968; Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 19, 50 L. ed. 348, 352, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; 2 High, Inj. § 1241; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. §§ 906-922; Lucas v. American-Hawaiian Engineering & Constr. Co. 16 Haw. 80.

Mr. A. G. M. Robertson also filed a separate brief for plaintiff in error:

If the writ is in proper form and the court has jurisdiction, all questions touching the right of complainant to the relief sought should await the hearing on the merits.

Sparrow v. Strong, 3 Wall. 97, 105, 18 L. ed. 49, 50.

Under the practice of this jurisdiction it is not necessary for a complainant who is moving purely in the interests of the public to prevent misfeasance in office, or to protect public property from loss through the mistake, incompetence, or worse, of public officers, to show special injury.

Castle v. Kapena, 5 Haw. 27; Lucas v. American-Hawaiian Engineering & Constr. Co. 16 Haw. 80; Castle v. Atkinson, 16 Haw. 769.

The rule adopted in Hawaii is based on decisions of this court.

Union P. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 343, 23 L. ed. 428; Crampton v. Zabriskie, 101 U. S. 601, 25 L. ed. 1070.

It should make no difference as to this point that the exchange contemplated by the governor and the commissioner of public lands was to be for lands of equal value. In the numerous reported cases in which the courts have held in favor of the right of a taxpayer to an injunction to prevent the illegal expenditure of public money, the right has not been maintained on the ground that the public was not to receive a quid pro quo, but on the ground of the lack of legal authority to make the proposed expenditure.

Winn v. Shaw, 87 Cal. 631, 25 Pac. 968; Nelson v. Garfield County, 6 Colo. App. 279, 40 Pac. 474; Stratford v. Greensboro, 124 N. C. 127, 32 S. E. 394; Times Pub. Co. v. Everett, 9 Wash. 518, 43 Am. St. Rep. 865, 37 Pac. 695; Stevens v. St. Mary's Training School, 144 Ill. 336, 18 L.R.A.

832, 36 Am. St. Rep. 438, 32 N. E. 962; State ex rel. Hayes v. Gallagher, 22 Nev. 87, 35 Pac. 485.

Messrs. Charles R. Hemenway and Henry E. Cooper argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Equity will restrain violations of law only when accompanied by violations of property rights; and the courts take cognizance of suits only when it is apparent that the complaining party is suffering wrong or is likely to suffer wrong.

Smith v. Indiana, 191 U. S. 138, 48 L. ed. 125, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 232; Charles v. Marion, 98 Fed. 166; Allison v. Corson, 32 C. C. A. 12, 60 U. S. App. 387, 88 Fed. 581; Indianapolis Gas Co. v. Indianapolis, 82 Fed. 245; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; McCord v. Pike, 2 Am. St. Rep. 85, and note, 121 Ill. 288, 12 N. E. 259; Brown v. Ohio Valley R. Co. 79 Fed. 176; Boston & M. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 177 Mass. 230, 83 Am. St. Rep. 275, 58 N. E. 689; State ex rel. Cranmer v. Thorson, 9 S. D. 149, 33 L.R.A. 582, 68 N. W. 202; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 116, 44 L. ed. 392, 396, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284.

The cases in Hawaii holding that a taxpayer may enjoin acts of executive officers are not in conflict with the rule, but, on the contrary, recognize and are based upon it; for in each case it is apparent that injury would have resulted to plaintiff if the acts complained of had been found to be illegal.

Castle v. Kapena, 5 Haw. 27; Lucas v. American-Hawaiian Engineering & Constr. Co. 16 Haw. 80; Castle v. Atkinson, 16 Haw. 769.

And in the decisions of this court upon which the Hawaiian decisions were based, it is apparent that the right of a complainant to maintain such a suit is dependent upon the fact that some injury will be done property rights.

Crampton v. Zabriskie, 101 U. S. 601, 25 L. ed. 1070; Union P. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U. S. 343, 23 L. ed. 428.

Messrs. Charles R. Hemenway, Henry E. Cooper, William L. Whitney, and Charles F. Clemons also filed a brief for defendant in error:

The law is settled in Hawaii, as in other jurisdictions, that a taxpayer may have his remedy by injunction against official acts which involve the misuse or waste of public funds.

Crampton v. Zabriskie, 101 U. S. 601, 609, 25 L. ed. 1070, 1071; Castle v. Kapena, 5 Haw. 27; Lucas v. American-Hawaiian Engineering & Constr. Co. 16 Haw. 80; Castle v. Atkinson, 16 Haw. 769.

It is also a settled rule of law that it must appear affirmatively from the pleadings that injury, and substantial injury, will be sustained by plaintiff from the acts complained of, before such acts will be enjoined.

Smith v. Indiana, 191 U. S. 138, 146, 48 L. ed. 125, 126, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51; Caffrey v. Oklahoma, 177 U. S. 346, 348, 44 L. ed. 799, 800, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 118, 44 L. ed. 392, 396, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Red River Valley Nat. Bank v. Craig, 181 U. S. 548, 558, 45 L. ed. 994, 1000, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, 314, 26 L. ed. 1044, 1051; Ludeling v. Chaffe, 143 U. S. 301, 304, 36 L. ed. 313, 314, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439; Giles v. Little, 134 U. S. 645, 650, 33 L. ed. 1062, 1063, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Owings v. Norwood, 5 Cranch, 344, 348, 3 L. ed. 120, 121; Montgomery v. Hernandez, 12 Wheat. 129, 132, 6 L. ed. 575, 576; Henderson v. Tennessee, 10 How. 311, 322, 13 L. ed. 434, 439; Hale v. Gainces, 22 How. 144, 160, 16 L. ed. 264, 269; Long v. Converse, 91 U. S. 105, 23 L. ed. 233.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, who was plaintiff in the court below, and whom therefore we shall refer to as plaintiff, brought this suit in the circuit court of the first judicial circuit, territory of Hawaii, at chambers, to enjoin George R. Carter, governor of the territory, and the defendant, commissioner of public lands of the territory, from exchanging certain lands of the territory for other lands.

The governor promulgated, on 29th of November, 1906, the following order:

"Lanai Lands.—Notice is hereby given that, having decided an exchange of the public lands of the island of Lanai to be advisable, the commissioner of public lands is prepared to receive offers of other lands that are equal in value to those of Lanai, and of greater immediate service to the territorial government, from any responsible person, up to and including Saturday, the 15th day of December, 1906."

The island of Lanai contains a total area of 86,400 acres, of which the territory owns 47,679 acres. The lands owned by the territory are divided into five tracts, and are under lease to one Charles Gay for annual rentals which amount in all to *the sum [441 of $1,600. These facts are alleged in the bill, and that the tracts are of great value,—one containing 8,000 acres of land, which is good grazing land, and has 3 miles of sea frontage, and extends inland 6 miles, being worth $40,000. Another tract, it is alleged, is of the same kind of land, and has a sea frontage of 5½ miles and an inland depth of 6 miles, and is worth $37,000. The other tracts are of the value of $5,000.

It is alleged that Pratt, as commissioner, threatens to and will exchange such lands for other lands if he receives an offer therefor from a responsible person, and that the governor will consent and approve the exchange unless he and Pratt be enjoined. It is further alleged that Pratt has no legal right to make the exchange nor the governor to approve it.

It is further alleged that the intended and proposed exchange of lands "is not proposed by way of compromise or equitable settlement of the rights of any claimants, nor by way of exchange for parcels of lands acquired for any road or roads, nor for a site or sites of a government building or buildings, nor for any other governmental purpose or purposes."

An injunction was prayed against the exchange and against issuing land patents for the lands received in exchange. A temporary injunction was granted, which, upon the motion of the governor, was dissolved, and the bill dismissed as to him. Pratt demurred to the bill, and urged as grounds thereof that the bill was insufficient, that it did not appear that he, as commissioner, was doing or about to do any act in violation of law, that plaintiff had no legal capacity to sue, that no injury was threatened or otherwise to plaintiff, that he was not sufficiently interested to be entitled to an injunction or to any relief in a court of equity, that the complaint was not properly verified, and that the allegation that the defendant, as commissioner, had no legal authority to exchange public lands, was a conclusion of law.

The demurrer was overruled, the court holding that the plaintiff had the right to bring [442] and maintain the suit, and that "the proposed exchange of lands was 'unlawful, illegal, and unwarranted.'" Ten days were given to further plead, and, in default of which, the injunction was to be made permanent. The decree was reversed by the supreme court of the territory. 18 Haw. 221. This writ of error was then sued out and George R. Carter, governor, named therein as a defendant, but the writ was subsequently dismissed as to him, on motion of his successor, the present governor.

The supreme court of Hawaii assumed, without definitely deciding, that the plaintiff had a right to maintain the suit. The question of the validity of the exchange it decided against the contention of the plaintiff, holding that the commissioner had the power to make the exchange. Of the right of plaintiff to sue, the court said that it had been adjudicated in that court that a citizen and taxpayer had a right to obtain an injunction against official acts involving unauthorized use of public funds. To sustain this view the court cited Castle v. Kapena, 5 Haw. 27; Lucas v. American Hawaiian Engineering & Constr. Co. 16 Haw. 80; Castle v. Atkinson, 16 Haw. 769. It is an implication, from the comment of the court, that the ground of those decisions was the pecuniary loss that would come to the taxpayer from the action sought to be restrained. But the court, however, went farther, and said that perhaps the right of the taxpayer to "restrain official acts affecting public property ought not to be based on the pecuniary loss, howsoever trivial or conjectural, but on the broad ground that any citizen may obtain a judicial inquiry into the validity of such acts, and an injunction against them if found to be unauthorized." The court remarked, however, that, on account of the view it entertained of the validity of the acts of the officers, it would not decide the question of the right of the plaintiff to sue. On neither question are we called upon to pass, nor are we required to decide whether the land laws of the territory are Federal statutes by virtue of § 83 of its organic act, which provides that its laws "relating to public lands shall continue in force until Congress shall otherwise *provide," and that therefore a [143] Federal question is involved in the case. We have held that the jurisdiction of this court can only be invoked by a party having a personal interest in the litigation. Smith v. Indiana, 191 U. S. 138, 148, 48 L. ed. 125, 126, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 51.

The plaintiff has not such an interest. He sues as a property owner and taxpayer, and the relief he asks is an injunction against the commissioner of public lands, to restrain him from exchanging the lands described in the bill for other lands. It is contended that such action is illegal, because that officer has no power to exchange lands under lease, nor has he power to exchange lands except in parcels of not over 1,000 acres. The contention is based on the proviso of § 276 of the Revised Laws of Hawaii. We give the section in the margin,† *and also §§ 252 and 254, which [444]

†Sec. 252. "The commissioner of public lands or superintendent of public works, as the case may be, by and with the authority of the governor, shall have power to lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of the public lands and other property, in such manner as he may deem best for the protection of agriculture, and the general welfare of the territory, subject, however, to such restric-must be considered in connection with it. The argument to support the contention is that the proviso must be understood in the strict technicality of limiting or qualifying the preceding subject-matter, and to the carving out therefrom some special matter, and, it is insisted, giving the proviso that purpose, the specially carved-out matter "is the requirement of an auction sale in the case of the exchange of land," leaving as applicable to such exchange all the other limitations. The supreme court of the territory, as we have seen, decided against the contention. Let 445]us grant, arguendo*, that the decision may be disputed, what injury has plaintiff shown that he must suffer by the exchange? What injury, indeed, has he shown, either to the territory or to any taxpayer of the territory?

The plaintiff alleges that he is a taxpayer, but does not allege anything from which it can be inferred that he will be injured as a taxpayer, subject to a burden as such. It is true it is alleged that the lands which are offered for exchange are under lease for terms varying from twenty-five to thirty-five years, at a rental of $1,600. But it is also alleged that the purpose formed by the governor and commissioner, and the purpose advertised by them, was to get for the lands other lands of equal value and of greater immediate service to the territorial government. The suit was brought to restrain the execution of that purpose. Benefit, therefore, not injury, apparently may result from the exchange, and, so far as we are informed by the record, it may be even a benefit to the policy which plaintiff declares it is the purpose of the land laws of the territory to promote, and upon which he, in part, bases his interpretation of them,—the policy of encouraging "the settlement and homesteading of public lands," and the "parceling out" of them "in limited areas on favorable terms." The plaintiff takes pains to justify this inference, for he avers that the exchange is not proposed for settlement of rights or claims, nor for the use of roads, nor for the site or sites of the government building or buildings, nor for any other government purpose. Therefore, as plaintiff has no personal interest in the matter in litigation, the writ of error is dismissed.

tions as may, from time to time, be expressly provided by law."

Sec. 254. "The provisions of § 253 shall not extend or apply to cases where the government shall, by quitclaim, or otherwise, dispose of its rights in any land, by way of compromise or equitable settlements of the rights of claimants, nor to cases of exchange or sales of government lands in return for parcels of land acquired for roads, sites of government buildings, or other government purposes."

Sec. 276. "The commissioner may, with the consent of the governor, sell public lands not under lease, in parcels of not over 1,000 acres, at public auction for cash. Upon any such sale and the payment of the full consideration therefor, a land patent shall be issued to the purchaser.

"And he may, with such consent, sell public lands not under lease in parcels of not over 600 acres, at public auction, upon part credit and part cash, and deliver possession under an agreement of sale containing conditions of residence on or improvement of the premises sold, or of payment by instalments or otherwise of the purchase price, or all or any of such conditions.

"And in case of default in the performance of such conditions, the commissioner may, with or without legal process, and without notice, demand, or previous entry, take possession of the premises and thereby determine the estate created by such agreement. In case of such forfeiture, such land shall be sold at auction, either as a whole or in parcels, for cash or on terms of time payments, in the discretion of the commissioner; and if such sale shall result in an advance on the original price, the original purchaser shall receive therefrom the amounts of his payments to the government on account of purchase, without the interest, and a pro rata share in such advance in proportion to the amounts of his payments. If such sale shall result, however, in a less price than the original, the amount returnable to him shall be charged with a pro rata amount of such decrease, proportioned to the amounts of his payments. The treasurer is hereby authorized to pay the amount returnable to the outgoing tenant, upon the requisition of the commissioner, out of any funds available for such purpose.

"Which agreement shall entitle the purchaser to a land patent of the premises upon the due performance of its conditions.

"The commissioner shall have authority to fix any upset price for all such sales for cash or part credit and part cash.

"All such sales shall be held in Honolulu, or in the district where the land to be sold is situated. Any person designated by the commissioner may act as auctioneer at such sales without taking out an auctioneer's license.

"Provided, however, that land patents may be issued in exchange for deeds of private lands or by way of compromise upon the recommendation of the commissioner and with the approval of the governor without an auction sale, and further provided, that the governor may, in his discretion, upon such recommendation and approval, execute quitclaim deeds for perfecting the titles of private lands where such titles are purely equitable, or where such lands are suffering under defective titles, or in cases of claims to use of lands upon legal or equitable grounds."

446]*TIMOTHY F. PADDELL, Plff. in Err.,
v.
CITY OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 446-452.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — equal protection of the laws — taxation of mortgaged property.

Land subject to a mortgage may be assessed at its full value for taxation without violating U. S. Const., 14th Amend., although the mortgage debt is not deducted from the owner's personal estate.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 528-540, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 42.]

Argued December 7, 1908. Decided December 21, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the First Judicial Department, affirming a judgment of the Supreme Court in and for the County of New York, sustaining a demurrer to the complaint in a suit to enjoin municipal taxation. Affirmed.

See same case below in Court of Appeals, 187 N. Y. 552, 80 N. E. 1114.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Everett V. Abbot argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The general property tax, as customarily administered in our American commonwealths, involves the assessment and taxation of fictitious values,—that is, of alleged values which demonstrably have no existence whatever.

Cooley, Taxn. 1st ed. 159, 160, 2d ed. p. 220, 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 387; Seligman, Taxn. 1st ed. 101; Wells, Theory & Pr. of Taxn. (1900) 474-477.

The nearest approach to a decision that taxation by fiction is unconstitutional is to be found in cases that relate, not to fiction of fact, but to fiction of law; and in those cases this court has refused to allow the fiction to be employed. Thus, the maxim, Mobilia sequuntur personam, has been declared to be a fiction, and not to justify a state in taxing tangible personal property situated outside of its borders.

Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 493.

Again, the common-law doctrine that the situs of a chose in action consisting of a specialty, such as a promissory note, is the place where the specialty is to be found, has been declared to be a fiction, and not to prevent a state from taxing the real value at its real situs, the home of the debtor.

Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, 205 U. S. 395, 51 L. ed. 853, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499.

The California courts began by holding that the mortgagee could not complain of the tax on his mortgage, and ended by holding that he could complain.

People v. McCreery, 34 Cal. 432; Lick v. Austin, 43 Cal. 590; Savings & Loan Soc. v. Austin, 46 Cal. 483; People v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. 51 Cal. 243, 21 Am. Rep. 704.

The final conclusion of the California courts, that the mortgagee should be excused from taxation, has been expressly repudiated by other courts of last resort (Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Lott, 54 Ala. 499; State v. Carson City Sav. Bank, 17 Nev. 146, 30 Pac. 703; Lamar v. Palmer, 18 Fla. 147; New Orleans v. Mechanics' & T. Ins. Co. 30 La. Ann. 876, 31 Am. Rep. 232), and even in California has been overruled by constitutional amendment.

See also the following cases in which the mortgagee's efforts to avoid taxation have met defeat:

State, Vanatta, Prosecutor, v. Runyon, 41 N. J. L. 98; People v. Rhodes, 15 Ill. 304; Augusta Bank v. Augusta, 36 Me. 255; People v. Worthington, 21 Ill. 171, 74 Am. Dec. 86; Griffin v. Board of Review, 184 Ill. 275, 56 N. E. 397; Appeal Tax Ct. v. Rice, 50 Md. 302; Savings & L. Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 421, 42 L. ed. 803, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392; Morrison v. Manchester, 58 N. H. 538.

In these and other cases in which the mortgagee is plaintiff it is frequently said that real estate may be taxed to a mortgagor in possession while the mortgagee is taxed for the money secured by the mortgage; and these provisions are not considered as subjecting property to double taxation, and this supposed statement of the law has passed into the text books.

State v. Darcy, 2 L.R.A. 350, note; 1 Desty, Taxn. 203; 1 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 391, 392; Gray, Taxn. § 1370.

This doctrine, however, has never been announced in any case to which the mortgagor has been a party, and it is, or should be, clear that casual remarks about the rights of the mortgagor, uttered in legal proceedings to which he is not even a party, are hardly conclusive adjudications that he has no such rights, and that these cases are

NOTE—On due process of law in tax proceedings—see note to Read v. Dingess, 8 C. C. A. 395.

53 L. ed.

not therefore to be taken as, in any sense, precedents for the case at bar.

The right of the mortgagee is a legal interest in the land itself.

United States v. Commonwealth Title Ins. & T. Co. 193 U. S. 651, 48 L. ed. 830, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 546; Savings & L. Soc. v. Multnomah County, supra.

The interest of the mortgagor is limited to that which remains over and above the legal interest of the mortgagee; i. e., is limited to the so-called equity.

Everson v. McMullen, 113 N. Y. 293, 4 L.R.A. 118, 10 Am. St. Rep. 445, 21 N. E. 52.

The mortgagor's taxable property interest in the land is restricted to the contingent interest over and above the liquidated interest of the mortgagee.

People ex rel. Weber Piano Co. v. Wells, 180 N. Y. 62, 72 N. E. 626.

Strangely enough, there seems to be only one reported case in which the constitutionality of taxing A on the property of B has ever been decided. In that case the question was raised and decided in favor of the taxpayer; such a tax was held to offend against the 14th Amendment.

Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385.

Mr. David Rumsey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Francis K. Pendleton, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Both the legislature and the courts have recognized the probability of error in human judgment in determining that most elusive of all facts,—the fact of value; and have sanctioned an extreme conservatism in valuation of real property, by which assessors are supported in appraising at a percentage substantially less than full value.

People ex rel. Equitable Gaslight Co. v. Barker, 144 N. Y. 99, 39 N. E. 13; People ex rel. Warren v. Carter, 109 N. Y. 576, 17 N. E. 222; People ex rel. Stewart v. Feitner, 95 App. Div. 481, 88 N. Y. Supp. 774; Greater New York Charter, § 906.

Neither a court of law nor a court of equity will disturb assessments of real property unless it is made to appear that the complainant's property has been assessed at more than its value or more than the prevailing ratio of assessment to value.

Greater New York Charter, § 906; People ex rel. Warren v. Carter, supra; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 172 N. Y. 35, 64 N. E. 756.

No discrimination in the burden of taxation is shown to exist as between persons similarly situated; and a system of taxation by which an equal burden is imposed upon all in the same class is not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States.

Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 464, 42 L. ed. 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 245, 50 L. ed. 744, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459; Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 194 U. S. 618, 48 L. ed. 1142, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 295, 42 L. ed. 1043, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 104, 24 L. ed. 616, 619; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

The property taxed is unquestionably in existence, and the plaintiff's claim, when analyzed, amounts to a contention that it was excessively valued.

Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

*Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the [448] opinion of the court:

This is a bill to prevent the city of New York from completing the levy of a tax and thereby creating a cloud upon the plaintiff's title. The plaintiff owns lots numbered 592, 594, and 596 on Seventh avenue, subject to mortgages for $70,000 and $45,000, given by him. The premises have been valued, as the first step toward taxation, at $160,000, and it is alleged upon information and belief that this valuation makes no deduction for the mortgages. The ground of the bill, so far as it is before us, is that the tax, if completed, will be contrary to the 14th Amendment. Some criticism might be made and was made on the form of the allegations, but we will take them as presenting what we believe they were intended to present,—the question whether, consistently with the Constitution of the United States, a man owning land subject to a mortgage can be taxed for the full value of the land, while, at the same time, the mortgage debt is not deducted from his personal estate. A demurrer to the bill was sustained by the courts below.

The plaintiff has many difficulties in his way. In the first place, the mode of taxation is of long standing, and, upon questions of constitutional law, the long-settled habits of the community play a part as well as grammar and logic. If we should assume that, economically speaking, the present system really taxes two persons for the same thing, the fact that the system has been in force for a very long time is of itself a strong reason against the belief that it has been overthrown by the 14th Amendment, and for leaving any improvement that may be desired to the legislature.

The weight of the plaintiff's argument is that he is taxed for what he does not own. The bill seems to have been drawn on the dominant notion of a right attached specifically to the mortgaged property,—that is to say, the notion that the property represents so many units of value, from which the mortgage subtracts so many, leaving only the remainder subject to be taxed; and this is the plaintiff's view. But there is a subordinate ⁴⁴⁹ averment that the plaintiff has not been assessed for taxes in respect of personal property, and the allegation seems to convey, by indirection, that no deduction of the mortgage debt has been made from personal property, and to admit that such a deduction would have set the city right. As to the former notion, it will be observed that the mortgages were given by the plaintiff, and therefore charged him, as well as his land. If he should die, by the law of New York his personal property would have to exonerate the realty, so far as it would go. If he lives, and remains solvent, the chances are that he will pay the mortgages out of personalty. Therefore, the true deduction is not the amount of the mortgages, but the speculative chance that the land may have to be sold for the debt,—a chance that would be insured at different rates to different persons. The other theory regards the mortgage debt as a deduction from total riches, to be compensated by an allowance to them indifferently, either in the valuation of the land or by a deduction from personal estate. And this logically leads to the conclusion that no scheme of taxation is constitutional that does not make allowance for all obligations and debts,—a conclusion that the plaintiff seems to accept, while he does not make it plain that he does not receive, both in law and in fact, such an allowance by a deduction of debts from personal estate.

It cannot matter to the plaintiff's argument whether the obligation is directed to a specific object or to the whole mass of objects owned by the party bound. In the one case, as much as in the other, the obligation will take certain units of value from his riches when, under the compulsion of the law, it is performed. But it is an amazing proposition of constitutional law that the law cannot fix its eye on tangibles alone and tax them by present ownership without regard to obligations that, when performed, would make some of them change hands; for instance, that, under the 14th Amendment, a man having a thousand sheep as his only property could not be taxed for their full value without allowance for an unsecured debt of $5,000, even if his creditors should be left untaxed, ⁴⁵⁰—a matter that hardly would concern ^{53 L. ed.}

him. Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 237, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 464, 42 L. ed. 236, 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; People ex rel. Bijur v. Barker, 155 N. Y. 330, 333, 49 N. E. 940. Undoubtedly he would be taxed for more than he owned if his total riches were computed on the footing that the law would keep its promise and make him pay, and that what would be done should be treated as done. If he owned other property, still there would be the chance that the sheep might be seized on execution, and, as we have said, the liability of the mortgaged land is no more, although the chance may be greater. It is a sufficient answer to say that you cannot carry a constitution out with mathematical nicety to logical extremes. If you could, we never should have heard of the police power. And this is still more true of taxation, which, in most communities, is a long way off from a logical and coherent theory. And it may perhaps be doubted whether there is even a logical objection to the sovereign power giving notice to all persons who may acquire property within its domain that, when it comes to tax, it will not look beyond the tangible thing, and that those who buy it must buy it subject to that risk.

The plaintiff's contention that the mortgage must be deducted from the land, whether the mortgage is taxed or not, stated a little differently, is that he was entitled to an apportionment of the tax to his interest, and that, if the title to a lot is split up, the government cannot tax it as a whole. To this we cannot agree, although it should be mentioned that the Greater New York charter permits the owner of any interest to redeem it separately. § 920. We have assumed so far that the tax on this real estate is a debt that might be collected by a personal suit against the plaintiff. As a matter of fact, it is not collected in that way, and we gather from what was said and admitted at the argument that it is doubtful at least whether such an action would lie. See Durant v. Albany County, 26 Wend. 66; Rochester v. Gleichauf, 40 Misc. 446, 82 N. Y. Supp. 750. Suppose that the tax law should operate only in rem, against a lot defined by the limits ^{[451} of a separate title, and should simply give notice by sufficient means to all the world that it would be sold unless, within a certain time, some party in interest should see fit to pay a certain sum. Notwithstanding the position of the plaintiff, it cannot be doubted that such a proceeding would be as valid as the imposition of a personal liability upon individuals according to their interest. See Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. 210, 217, 18 L. ed. 339, 342; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 681, 682, 42 L. ed. 622, 625, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229. But the notion of a proceeding in rem is at the bottom of the usual tax on land, even where, as in Massachusetts, there is a personal liability superadded. This is shown by the doctrine that a valid tax sale cuts off all titles and starts a new one. Hefner v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 123 U. S. 747, 751, 31 L. ed. 309, 311, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Emery v. Boston Terminal Co. 178 Mass. 172, 184, 86 Am. St. Rep. 473, 59 N. E. 763. Of course, there is no question of allowances or deductions upon a proceeding in rem. All interests are proceeded against at once.

If there is no personal liability in New York, the levy of a tax is a proceeding in rem, whatever requirements may be made for notice by naming parties in interest, and even if naming them is a condition to the validity of the tax. Indeed, it may be assumed that primarily it is such a proceeding in any event, and, as a proceeding in rem, might be sustained, even if the personal liability failed. A tax on special interests is not unknown (Baltimore Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Baltimore, 195 U. S. 375, 381, 49 L. ed. 242, 244, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50), but the usual course is to tax the land as a whole, and that we understand to be the way in New York. "In all cases the assessment shall be deemed as against the real property itself, and the property itself shall be holden and liable to sale for any tax levied upon it." Laws of 1902, chap. 171, § 1. See Greater New York charter of 1901, §§ 1017, 1027.

More might be said, but we will add only that while in order to meet the plaintiff's arguments we have taken his bill as presenting the question that we believe it was intended to present, the assumption hardly could be made if our opinion otherwise was on his side. It does not appear that he has [452] not received *an allowance for his mortgage debt except by a conjectural inference. Among the matters that we do not consider is whether the plaintiff has any remedy except proceedings for an abatement, when he admits that he was liable to a tax, and disputes only the amount.

Judgment affirmed.

ALONZO BAILEY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF ALABAMA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 452-459.)

Error to state court — questions reviewable.

Questions respecting the validity, under

U. S. Const., 13th and 14th Amendments, of the provision of Ala. Gen. Acts 1907, p. 636, creating a presumption of criminal intent from the refusal of an employee to perform service without refunding money or property obtained from his employer, are not open on a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to review a judgment of the highest court of the state, affirming the refusal of an inferior court to discharge the accused on habeas corpus, where all that appears from the record is that the accused is held to await trial on a charge of having obtained money from his employer under a written contract, with intent to defraud. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2070-2256, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 538.]

Submitted November 12, 1908. Decided December 21, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Montgomery City Court, in that state, denying relief by habeas corpus. Affirmed.

See same case below (Ala.) 48 So. 498.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward S. Watts argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Troy, Watts, & Letcher, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Fred S. Ball also argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Alexander M. Garber argued the cause, and, with Mr. Thomas W. Martin, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Attorney General Bonaparte (by special leave) argued the cause and, with Mr. Robert A. Howard, filed a brief as amicus curiæ.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to reverse a judgment of the supreme *court of [453 Alabama (Ala.) 48 So. 498, affirming a judgment of a judge of the Montgomery city court, which denied a discharge on habeas corpus to the plaintiff in error. At the hearing on the writ in the city court it appeared that, after a preliminary trial before a justice of the peace, the plaintiff in error was committed for detention on a charge of obtaining $15 under a contract in writing, with intent to injure or defraud his employer. At this stage the writ was issued.

If the supreme court had affirmed the denial of the discharge on the ground that the proper course was to raise the objections relied upon at the trial of the principal case on the merits, and to take the question up by writ of error, it would have adopted the rule that prevails in this court, and there would be nothing to be said. But the supreme court of the state dealt with the objections, and, as the matter is one of local procedure, it is not to be criticized for taking a different course. The unsatisfactoriness of such attempts to take a short cut will appear, however, we think, in a moment.

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

We gather from the opinion of the supreme court that the plaintiff in error is proceeded against under a law of 1907 (General Acts 1907, p. 636), amending the Code of 1896, § 4730. This section of the Code made it an offense punishable like larceny to enter into a contract in writing for service with intent to injure or defraud the employer, and, after thereby obtaining money or personal property from such employer, with such intent, without just cause, and without refunding the money or paying for the property, to refuse to perform the service. The amendment, embodying and enlarging an earlier one, makes the refusal or failure without just cause prima facie evidence of the intent; makes the penalty a fine in double the damage suffered, one half to go to the party injured, and creates a similar offense with regard to persons making contracts in writing "for the rent of land." It is contended that the statute as it now stands is unconstitutional under the 13th and 14th Amendments. The presumption is said to be artificial, and not 454] drawn from the facts of life. *When coupled with the local rule that the party cannot testify to his actual intent, it is said practically to make a crime out of a mere departure from service, which, it is said, and it seems to have been conceded by the supreme court of Alabama, could not be done.

The trouble in dealing with this contention is due to the meager facts on which this case comes before us at this stage. If the principal case had been tried it is imaginable that it might appear that a certain class in the community was mainly affected, and that the usual course of events, including the consequences in case of inability to pay the fines, was such that, in view of its operation and intent, the whole statute ought to be held void. It may be, although presumptions of intent from somewhat remote subsequent conduct are not unknown to the common law (Com. v. Rubin, 165 Mass. 453, 43 N. E. 200), that the amendment creates a presumption that cannot be upheld. But we cannot deal with these questions now. All that appears from the record with regard to the foundation of the case against him is that the plaintiff in error is held on a charge of having obtained money under a written contract with intent to defraud. There is no doubt that such conduct may be made a crime. It may be questioned whether we ought to assume that the proceeding is under the statute, although it is admitted on all hands. But, if we do assume it, there is nothing as yet to show that the section of the Code, apart from the amendments, is bad. The amendments are separable, as is sufficiently shown by the fact that the rest of the enactment originally stood without them. When the case comes to trial it may be that the prosecution will not rely upon the statutory presumption, but will exhibit satisfactory proof of a fraudulent scheme, so that the validity of the addition to the statute will not come into question at all. It is true that it appears that the plaintiff in error was held for trial on the statutory evidence, and with no other proof of fraudulent intent. But, if that evidence was insufficient, it hardly will be contended that this court should require the state courts to * release all persons held for trial. [455] where, in its opinion, the evidence fails to show probable cause. We repeat, the trouble with the whole case is that it is brought here prematurely by an attempt to take a short cut. And, as the supreme court of the state would have been warranted in denying the writ on that ground, perhaps we have done a work of supererogation in giving further reasons for affirming its judgment.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

The plaintiff in error, Bailey, was arrested and held for trial on the charge of having obtained from his employer, with the intent to injure him, the sum of $15. Having been taken into custody, he sued out a writ of habeas corpus from a subordinate court of Alabama, alleging that the statute under which he was arrested and deprived of his liberty was in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

The statute of Alabama referred to is as follows: "6845.—Any person who, with intent to injure or defraud his employer, enters into a contract in writing for the performance of any act or service, and thereby obtains money or other personal property from such employer, and with like intent, and without just cause, and without refunding such money or paying for such property, refuses or fails to perform such act or service, must, on conviction, be punished by a fine in double the damage suffered by the injured party, but not more than $300, one half of said fine to go to the county and one half to the party injured; and any person who, with intent to injure or defraud his landlord, enters into any contract in writing for the rent of land, and thereby obtains any money or other personal property from such landlord, and with like intent, without just cause, and without refunding such money or paying for such property, refuses or fails to cultivate such land, or to comply with his contract relative thereto, must, on 456]conviction, be *punished by a fine in double the damage suffered by the injured party, but not more than $300, one half of said fine to go to the county and one half to the party injured. And the refusal of any person who enters into such contract to perform such act or service, or to cultivate such lands, or refund such money, or pay for such property, without just cause, shall be prima facie evidence of the intent to injure his employer or landlord, or to defraud him." Ala. Code 1907.

It appears that, at the hearing of the application for habeas corpus, the accused contended that the statute was in violation (1) of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, in that it deprived him of his liberty without due process of law and denied him the equal protection of the laws; (2) of the 13th Amendment, in that its effect was to subject him to involuntary servitude (not as a punishment for crime) if he failed to pay a debt preferred against him.

These contentions were overruled, and, the discharge of the accused having been refused, he prosecuted an appeal to the supreme court of Alabama. That court considered upon its merits every question presented by the record, and affirmed the order under which the accused was held in custody. From that order the case was brought here by Bailey from that court upon writ of error granted by its chief justice.

Speaking generally, the statute has been assailed by the accused, as well as by the Attorney General of the United States (who, with the consent of this court, has filed a brief as amicus curiæ), as establishing and maintaining, and as intended to establish and maintain, as to laborers or employees in Alabama, a system of peonage, in violation of the Constitution and the laws of the United States. The statute of Alabama, the Attorney General contends, is in violation of the act of Congress of March 2d, 1867, chap. 187, 14 Stat. at L. 546, now § 1990 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1266), which provides that "all acts, laws, resolutions, orders, regulations, or usages of the territory of New Mexico, or of any other territory or state, . . . by virtue of which any attempt shall hereafter be made to establish, maintain, or enforce, directly or *indirect-[457]ly, the voluntary or involuntary service or labor of any persons as peons in liquidation of any debt or obligation, or otherwise, are declared null and void."

The supreme court of Alabama, by its final order, overruled the objections which the accused urged, on constitutional grounds, against the statute, and refused to direct his discharge from custody. If that statute is repugnant to the Constitution and laws of the United States it is void, and the accused is deprived of his liberty in violation of Federal law. That everyone will admit. But this court refuses, although the case is before it upon writ of error, regularly sued out by the defendant, to consider and determine that question. It affirms the judgment of the state court and leaves the accused in custody upon the ground—if I correctly interpret the opinion—that he took a "short cut" when seeking, upon habeas corpus, to be discharged from custody in advance of his trial. If the accused, in advance of his trial, had sought a discharge on a writ of habeas corpus sued out from a circuit court of the United States, that might have been deemed a "short cut." For it is well established that, "in the light of the relations existing under our system of government between the judicial tribunals of the Union and of the states, and in recognition of the fact that the public good requires that those relations be not disturbed by unnecessary conflict between courts equally bound to guard and protect rights secured by the Constitution," the courts of the United States will not, except in certain cases of urgency, and in advance of his trial, discharge, upon habeas corpus, one who is alleged to be held in custody by the state, in violation of the Constitution or the laws of the United States. Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 29 L. ed. 868, 871, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 501, 45 L. ed. 639, 640, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455, and the authorities there cited. But whether the accused, in seeking his discharge by the state court, adopted a mode of procedure authorized by the local law, was for the Alabama courts, not for this court, to determine. The state court recognized the proceeding by habeas corpus to be in accordance with the local law; for the supreme court of Alabama, *without[458] even intimating that the accused took a "short cut," or pursued the wrong method to obtain his discharge, entertained his appeal and passed upon the constitutionality of the statute under which he was held in custody. As the state court, by its final order, held that the detention of the accused by the state authorities was not inconsistent with any privilege secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States, he was entitled, of right, to bring the case here upon writ of error and have this court determine the question, distinctly raised, whether the statute of Alabama, as applied to his case, did not infringe privileges belonging to him under the Constitution and laws of the United States. We say, of right, because § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), expressly authorizes a writ of error to re-examine the final judgment of the highest court of a state, which denies a title, right, privilege, or immunity, specially set up or claimed under the United States. This is a right of great value. I submit that this court cannot properly refuse or fail to meet the constitutional question decided by the state court and plainly raised by the present writ of error for its consideration. Such refusal or failure cannot, I submit, be justified except on the ground that an order of the highest court of a state, rendered on a formal appeal, which affirms that the accused is not held in custody in violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States, is not a final judgment within the meaning of § 709,—a proposition which this court does not announce, and which I cannot believe it will ever announce. The course pursued in the disposition of this case by the court has not, so far as I am aware, any precedent in its history. If it was the right and duty of the state court to determine by its final order whether the accused was constitutionally deprived of his liberty or was subjected to involuntary servitude or labor, not in punishment for crime, but really in liquidation of a debt, it is then the right, and, I think, the duty, of this court, upon the present writ of error, regularly brought by the accused, to re-examine that judgment, and decide the question whether he is deprived 459] of his liberty *in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States. It is a curious condition of things if this court must remain silent when the question comes before it regularly, whether the final judgment of the highest court of a state does not deprive the citizen of rights secured to him by the supreme law of the land.

For the reasons stated I dissent from the opinion and judgment of the court.

Mr. Justice Day also dissented.

53 L. ed.

LILLIAN S. BUTLER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JOHN D. FRAZEE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 459-468.)

Master and servant — assumption of risk.

An experienced operator of full age and intelligence must be deemed, as a matter of law, to assume the risk of injury because of the excessive height above the feed board at which the finger-guard rail of a laundry mangle is adjusted, where she has worked for some months at this machine, during all of which time the guard rail has remained in the same position.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 36.]

Argued December 3, 1908. Decided December 21, 1908.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, entered upon a directed verdict in favor of defendant in an action to recover damages for personal injuries. Affirmed.

See same case below, 25 App. D. C. 392. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John C. Gittings argued the cause, and, with Mr. Justin Morrill Chamberlin, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The court below erred in holding, as matter of law, that plaintiff in error had assumed the risk.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Swearingen, 196 U. S. 51, 49 L. ed. 382, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

Whether a guard rail attached to a mangle for the purpose of protecting the hand of the operator from being caught and drawn into the machine was properly attached and placed in position is a question for the court or jury.

Fronk v. J. H. Evans City Steam Laundry Co. 70 Neb. 75, 96 N. W. 1053; Stager v. Troy Laundry Co. 38 Or. 480, 53 L.R.A. 459, 63 Pac. 645.

NOTE.—On servant's assumption of risk—see notes to O'Maley v. South Boston Gas-light Co. 47 L.R.A. 161; Southern P. Co. v. Seley, 38 L. ed. U. S. 391; and Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hennessey, 38 C. C. A. 314.

Assumption of risk of injury from defective laundry machinery, where danger is imperfectly appreciated.

In harmony with BUTLER v. FRAZEE is Counter v. Union Laundry Co. 34 Mont. 590, 87 Pac. 973, where the assumption of the

Mr. Leonard J. Mather argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles A. Keigwin, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The defects complained of were open and obvious to the plaintiff in error, who, giving no notice thereof, thereby assumed them.

Hayzel v. Columbia R. Co. 19 App. D. C. 369; Ciriack v. Merchants' Woolen Co. 151 Mass. 152, 6 L.R.A. 733, 21 Am. St. Rep. 438, 23 N. E. 829; Connolly v. Eldredge, 160 Mass. 566, 36 N. E. 469; Berger v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 39 Minn. 78, 38 N. W. 814; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 672, 42 L. ed. 1191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 224, 25 L. ed. 617; Tuttle v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 122 U. S. 189, 30 L. ed. 1114, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1166; Way v. Illinois C. R. Co. 40 Iowa, 341; Murphy v. Rockwell Engineering Co. 70 N. J. L. 374, 57 Atl. 444; Schofield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 114 U. S. 615, 29 L. ed. 224, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Kohn v. McNulta, 147 U. S. 241, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298; District of Columbia v. McElligott, 117 U. S. 621, 29 L. ed. 946, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 884; Richardson v. Cooper, 88 Ill. 270; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. § 209a; Hickey v. Taaffe, 105 N. Y. 26, 12 N. E. 286; Ogley v. Miles, 139 N. Y. 458, 34 N. E. 1059; Gaudet v. Stansfield, 182 Mass. 451, 65 N. E. 850; Hoyle v. Excelsior Steam Laundry Co. 95 Ga. 34, 21 S. E. 1001; Blom v. Yellowstone Park Asso. 86 Minn. 237, 90 N. W. 397; Keenan v. Waters, 181 Pa. 247, 37 Atl. 342; Jones v.

Roberts, 57 Ill. App. 56; Hanson v. Hammell, 107 Iowa, 171, 77 N. W. 839; Crowley v. Pacific Mills, 148 Mass. 228, 19 N. E. 344; Greif Bros. v. Brown, 7 Kan. App. 394, 51 Pac. 926.

That she herself says that she had no reason to suppose that the finger-guard rail had been adjusted so high as that it would permit her hands going underneath is meaningless; for she was an intelligent, capable, and experienced young woman.

Northern C. R. Co. v. Medairy, 86 Md. 168, 37 Atl. 796; Northern P. R. Co. v. Freeman, 174 U. S. 379, 384, 43 L. ed. 1014, 1016, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 763.

Even where the master has neglected to provide safeguards required by statute, the servant cannot recover if he used the machine in its unprotected condition and could see the danger.

Knisley v. Pratt, 148 N. Y. 372, 32 L.R.A. 367, 42 N. E. 986; Keenan v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 159 Mass. 379, 34 N. E. 366.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error brought an action against the defendant *in error in the [462] supreme court of the District of Columbia, in which she sought to recover damages for injuries suffered by her while in the defendant's employ. The injuries were incurred while the plaintiff was operating a mangle in the defendant's steam laundry. The function of the machine was to iron and dry clothes by drawing them between a risk as a matter of law was imputed to an experienced operator of full age, who was injured because the guard rail on a laundry mangle was bent or sprung, permitting her hand to pass under and be caught in the roller, she having testified that she was aware of the defect and knew the danger.

The same ruling was made in Daffron v. Majestic Laundry Co. 41 Wash. 65, 82 Pac. 1089, where an experienced operator had her hand entangled and pulled over the top of the guard, and between the feed roller and cylinder, there having been a bona fide effort on the part of the employer to comply with the factory act, a violation of which would have prevented him from availing himself of the defense of assumed risk.

Assumption of the risk as matter of law was also imputed in Kupkofski v. John S. Spiegel Co. 135 Mich. 7, 97 N. W. 48, to an intelligent girl, seventeen years old, who had worked in a laundry a year, and about two weeks on the machine by which she was injured, and whose hand was caught under the roller of a shirt-bosom ironer which was operating jerkily by reason of a loose driving belt, the condition being open to observation and known to her.

But, in a very similar case, the question of assumed risk was held to be one for the jury where an experienced operator of an ironing machine had her hand drawn in between the roller and the ironing table or board, which she was endeavoring to steady and prevent from going too far, although she knew that the machine was running in an unsteady and jerky manner, and that the mechanism for the automatic return of the board was out of order, but had but an imperfect knowledge of the construction of the machine, the known defects in which did not indicate the possibility of the accident which actually happened. Tuckett v. American Steam & Hand Laundry, 30 Utah, 273, 4 L.R.A.(N.S.) 990, 116 Am. St. Rep. 832, 84 Pac. 500. Distinguishing Kupkofski v. John S. Spiegel Co., supra, the court said: "So far as the question of assumed risk is concerned, there is an all-important difference between the facts in the Michigan case and in the case at bar. In the former case the plaintiff observed the precise defect that caused the injury. She knew that the belt was loose, and that, when the friction became unusual, the machine would slow down, and, as the belt moved again to perform its office, the machine would start up again, so that she cylinder and a series of rollers. The cylinder was of steel, 4 feet in diameter and 8 feet long and heated by steam. Above and in contact with it were five rollers. When in motion the cylinder and the rollers revolved inwardly. In front of the cylinder and closely fitted to it was a feed board, 12 to 15 inches wide and 8 feet long. It was the duty of the operator of the machine to spread the damp article to be ironed upon the feed board and push it forward until it touched the cylinder, by whose motion it was drawn upward to the point of engagement between the cylinder and the first roller, thereby being drawn through between the cylinder and the rollers. For the safety of the operator the machine was equipped with a finger guard, which was a bar of steel 8 feet long, 3 inches wide, and $\frac{1}{8}$ of an inch thick, extending from side to side of the machine, and about 4 inches distant from the revolving cylinder. The guard was painted red. It was adjustable and could be set at a height above the feed board of from $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch to 4 inches, depending upon the thickness of the clothes to be ironed. On this mangle the guard had always been adjusted at a height of $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches above the feed board. The various parts of the machine described and their relation to each other and the mode of operation were in plain view of the operator. The plaintiff was twenty-two years of age, apparently of full intelligence, and before entering the employ of the defendant had had two years' experience in the operation of mangles in other establishments. She testified that those mangles were equipped with finger guards, which prevented the operator's hands from coming into contact with the steam cylinder, and that she had never known of any injury happening to an operator by contact with the cylinder. [463] She received no instructions or warning of any danger. When she was set to work upon the mangle in October, 1902, the feed board was loose, thereby permitting clothing occasionally to drop between its edge and the steam cylinder. This condition continued unchanged until the time of the plaintiff's injury, and it was not reported or complained of by her. In the following December she was injured. The only testimony as to how the injury occurred was given by the plaintiff herself, and was stated in the bill of exceptions as follows:

A. Why, the morning of the accident nearly every piece we put in the mangle, Miss Cumberland's end would go in before mine and I would have to push, and my hand caught on. . . . A. The morning of the accident nearly every piece would catch on Sidney's side before it would catch on mine; and the table cloth would take my hand right on up with it. It dropped down between the board and the cylinder, and when it caught, it carried my hand right on up with it. . . . A. Well, the linen would drop down between the board and the cylinder and you had to push it up.

Q. Do you mean us to understand that you put your hand deliberately inside this knew exactly what to expect when the machine stopped. On the contrary, in the case at bar, the plaintiff only knew that the machine ran in a jerky, unsteady fashion. There was no defect apparent to her, like a loose belt, which indicated in any manner that the machine would, at any time, run faster than ever before. In the former case the court could well say that the plaintiff should have realized the danger,—that she was not ignorant of it,—whereas, in the present case, it is impossible for the court to so say."

So, in Stager v. Troy Laundry Co. 38 Or. 480, 53 L.R.A. 459, 63 Pac. 645, which is signally like BUTLER V. FRAZEE in its facts, a servant operating a mangle in a laundry was held not to have assumed, as a matter of law, the risk that her hand might pass under the guard rail into the rollers, where such rail was so adjusted by the employer as to afford some protection, the employee was forbidden to interfere with the adjustment, and it was not obvious that such adjustment was improper.

And in Bradford v. Taylor, 85 Miss. 409, 37 So. 812, an experienced laundry hand who was, however, a novice in the operation of machinery, and was ignorant of, and without experience in the use of, the particular defective machine, was held not to have assumed, as matter of law, the risk of injury, while cleaning an ironing machine, because of the absence of a fender in front of the roller.

An operator of mature years and some experience was also held, in Thomas v. Excter, H. & A. Street R. Co. 73 N. H. 1, 58 Atl. 838, not to have assumed, as matter of law, the risk of injury from a sudden swaying of the mangle towards her, owing, among other things, to defective gearings and insufficiency of the machine's supports, where there was no evidence tending to show that she was aware of the absence of a suitable foundation for the machine, or of the state of repair of the gearing and axle boxes, or of the effect of these several conditions upon the running of the machine, the vibrations in the machine and the irregularity in the motion of the cylinders which she had noticed in her prior experience with it not having been of such magnitude as to direct her attention to the causes, or to warn her of the possibility of a considerable swaying of the machine, or of any danger arising specially from the vibrations and irregularity.

finger guard and down into the space between the feed board and the cylinder?

A. No, sir.

Q. How did the linen drop?

A. The linen instead of going in would drop down between the board and the cylinder and you would push it up, and the young lady working on the other side, hers would catch before mine.

Q. You had to get hold of the end in some way to push it up?

A. No, sir; you had to push it up the feed board.

Q. If the edge of the linen you were feeding had dropped down between the feed board and the cylinder, how could you push it up?

A. You could push it up and it would come down wrinkled.

Q. If it had dropped down between the feed board and the cylinder, how could you push it up?

A. It dropped down between the feed board and the cylinder, and when you pushed it up and it came out of the mangle it would come out wrinkled.

Q. You did not hold the table cloth as it 464] fed into *the machine?

A. Yes, I had hold of the table cloth.

Q. You pushed the table cloth over the feed board; but you could not catch hold of it, as a matter of fact?

A. I had hold of the table cloth and was pushing it up and it dropped. And this day it was worse; every piece we put in, it dropped down and we had to push it up; and as I pushed it up in some way or other it took my hand with it.

Q. You say it was getting worse?

A. Yes. We had to sprinkle the clothes every day, and this day we had to sprinkle the clothes more than ever.

Q. And that is the only day you put your hand inside the finger guard?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you put your hand inside then?

A. I didn't put my hand inside. The table cloth pulled it in. My hand was on the table cloth pushing it up, and the table cloth caught and it caught my hand with it.

Q. On this particular occasion even you didn't push your hand inside the finger guard?

A. No, sir; I didn't put my hand under the finger guard until the table cloth pulled it under.

Q. So the table cloth had hold of your hand before your hand had gotten past the finger guard?

A. The table cloth dropped and I gave it another push to make it catch, and after it dropped it caught it on the cylinder and carried my hand right with it.

Q. So that your hand had gone past the finger guard before the table cloth caught it and carried it into the mangle?

A. The table cloth took my hand right along with it.

Q. What I want to find out is the exact time that this table cloth became wrapped around your hand in such a way as to take it into that mangle?

A. The table cloth dropped. Sidney's end had gone in and my end had dropped, and I pushed it and it caught. As soon as the table cloth — it caught, and, after it caught, in some way it took my hand right up with it.

Q. Where did it drop? Between the feed board and the cylinder?

A. Between the feed board and the cylinder.

Q. And it was not until after it dropped that your hand was caught?

A. It dropped between the feed board and the cylinder, and I had my hand on the feed board to make it catch, and my hand caught and went right up with it.

*The plaintiff offered the testimony[465 of expert witnesses, who said that no kind of laundry work required the finger guard to be more than $\frac{1}{2}$ an inch above the feed board. Apart from the extent of the injuries, this was all the evidence tending to sustain plaintiff's cause of action. The presiding judge directed a verdict to be returned for the defendant. Upon exceptions this ruling was sustained by the court of appeals, and the case was brought here by writ of error.

The evidence tended to show that, in one respect, at least, the machine operated by the plaintiff was out of repair. The feed board was loose, thereby permitting the fabric to be ironed sometimes to drop between it and the steam cylinder. How far this was a cause contributing to the injury does not clearly appear, and at the bar it was not relied upon as the cause of the plaintiff's injury. This was the prudent attitude, because the ill-repair of the machine in this respect, and the effect upon its operation, were in existence from the first and well known to the plaintiff, and she failed to report or complain of the defect to her employer. Washington & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 135 U. S. 554, 570, 34 L. ed. 235, 241, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1044. The single ground upon which the plaintiff's right to recover was rested was that the guard rail was adjusted at an excessive height, so that it would permit the plaintiff's hand to be drawn between it and the feed board up to the point of engagement between the revolving cylinder and rollers. The judgment of the court below went against the plain-ti^o, upon the theory that she assumed the risk of this danger, and that is the question to be considered. One who understands and appreciates the permanent conditions of machinery, premises, and the like, and the danger which arises therefrom, or, by the reasonable use of his senses, having in view his age, intelligence, and experience, ought to have understood and appreciated them, and voluntarily undertakes to work under those conditions and to expose himself to those dangers, cannot recover against his employer for the resulting injuries. Upon that state of facts the law declares that he assumes the risk. The rule is too well settled to warrant an *extensive discussion of it or an attempt to analyze the different reasons upon which it has been held to be justified. The rule of assumption of risk has been thought by many a hard one when applied to the complicated conditions of modern industry, so largely conducted by the aid of machinery propelled by irresistible and merciless mechanical power, and the criticism frequently has been made that the imperative need of employment leaves to the workman no real freedom of choice, such as the rule assumes. That these considerations have had an influence is shown by the notorious unwillingness of juries to apply the rule, and by the legislative modifications of it which, from time to time, have been made, as, for instance, by Congress in the safety appliance law. Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407. But the common law in this regard has not been modified in the District of Columbia, and we have no other duty than to enforce it. No question has been made in the case at bar that the rule prevails and is relevant to the facts of this case. The contention, however, is that, as the plaintiff testified in substance that she did not know and appreciate the danger which she was encountering, that testimony, with the other facts in the case, raised an issue for the jury, and that it could not be said, as matter of law, that the risk had been assumed. This contention is sustained by a well-considered case. Stager v. Troy Laundry Co. 38 Or. 480, 53 L.R.A. 459, 63 Pac. 645. See Frunk v. J. H. Evans City Steam Laundry Co. 70 Neb. 75, 96 N. W. 1053.

Where the elements and combination out of which the danger arises are visible it cannot always be said that the danger itself is so apparent that the employee must be held, as matter of law, to understand, appreciate, and assume the risk of it. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Swearingen, 196 U. S. 51, 49 L. ed. 382, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Fitzgerald v. Connecticut River Paper Co. 155 Mass. 155, 31 Am. St. Rep. 537, 29 N. E. 53 L. ed.

464. The visible conditions may have been of recent origin, and the danger arising from them may have been obscure. In such cases, and perhaps others that could be stated, the question of the assumption of the risk is plainly for the jury. But *where[467 the conditions are constant and of long standing, and the danger is one that is suggested by the common knowledge which all possess, and both the conditions and the dangers are obvious to the common understanding, and the employee is of full age, intelligence, and adequate experience, and all these elements of the problem appear without contradiction, from the plaintiff's own evidence, the question becomes one of law for the decision of the court. Upon such a state of the evidence a verdict for the plaintiff cannot be sustained, and it is the duty of the judge presiding at the trial to instruct the jury accordingly. Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275, and cases there cited. The case at bar falls within this class.

The plaintiff was a person of mature years, intelligent, and of adequate experience. She had worked for some months upon this particular machine, and during that time it was always in exactly the same condition in which it was upon the day of the injury. The elements out of which the danger arose were plainly visible to her. The employer had no duty, statutory or otherwise, to use a rail to guard against so obvious a danger as that arising out of two cylinders in contact with each other and seen to be revolving inwardly. Hickey v. Taaffe, 105 N. Y. 26, 12 N. E. 286. We see nothing in the manner of the adjustment of the guard rail which constituted an allurements or was calculated to blind the plaintiff to the danger. The adjustment of the parts of the machine was continually before her eyes. The danger of being drawn between the cylinder and the rollers by contact with the cylinder was illustrated to her every minute of the day by the drawing in of the clothes to be ironed by contact with the revolving cylinder. The distance between the guard rail and the feed board was constant, and its relation to the thickness of her hand was apparent. She must have understood that if her hand became inextricably entangled with the clothes, as seems from the rather vague testimony of the plaintiff was the case here, it would be drawn between the cylinder and receive the injuries which unhappily occurred. *We[468 think that it must be said, as matter of law, that she voluntarily assumed the risk of the danger. Tuttle v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 122 U. S. 189, 30 L. ed. 1114, 7 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 1166; Crowley v. Pacific Mills, 148 Mass. 228, 19 N. E. 344; Gleason v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 159 Mass. 68, 34 N. E. 79; Connolly v. Eldredge, 160 Mass. 566, 36 N. E. 469; Lemoine v. Aldrich, 177 Mass. 89, 58 N. E. 178; Burke v. Davis, 191 Mass. 20, 4 L.R.A.(N.S.) 971, 114 Am. St. Rep. 591, 76 N. E. 1039.

Judgment affirmed.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
EX REL. ABRAHAM KOPEL, Plff. in Err.,

v.

THEODORE A. BINGHAM, Police Commissioner of the City of New York.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 468-476.)

Extradition — requisition by governor of Porto Rico.

1. Precisely the same power to issue a requisition for the return of a fugitive criminal as is possessed under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597, by the governor of any organized territory, is given the governor of Porto Rico by the provisions of the Foraker act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 80, chap. 191), § 14, that the laws of the United States not locally inapplicable shall be in force and effect in Porto Rico, and of § 17, that the governor of Porto Rico shall have all the powers of governors of the territories of the United States that are not locally inapplicable.

Extradition — fugitive criminals from Porto Rico.

2. Porto Rico is a territory, within the meaning of the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5278, authorizing the executive authority of any state or territory to make requisition for the extradition of fugitive criminals.

[No. 167.]

Argued October 26, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which had affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the First Department, affirming a judgment of the Supreme Court in and for the County of New York, dismissing a writ of habeas corpus. Affirmed.

See same case below in Appellate Division, 117 App. Div. 411, 102 N. Y. Supp. 878; in Court of Appeals, 189 N. Y. 124, 81 N. E. 773.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Alfred R. Page argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Page & Booth, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Extradition between states, territories, and countries subject to the jurisdiction of the United States depends solely on the provisions of the Constitution of the United States and the acts of Congress.

People ex rel. Corkran v. Hyatt, 172 N. Y. 183, 60 L.R.A. 774, 92 Am. St. Rep. 706, 64 N. E. 825, affirmed in 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. ed. 657, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

Porto Rico is not a territory of the United States.

Re Lane, 135 U. S. 443-447, 34 L. ed. 219-221, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760; Ex parte Morgan, 20 Fed. 304; People ex rel. Kopel v. Bingham, 189 N. Y. 125, 81 N. E. 773.

In the territories of the United States the residents are citizens of the United States, and entitled to all the protection and guaranties of the Constitution of the United States.

Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 346, 42 L. ed. 1061, 1065, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

The constitutional safeguards do not extend, ex proprio vigore, to the people of the island of Porto Rico.

Dorr v. United States, 195 U. S. 138-143, 49 L. ed. 128-130, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 697.

The United States internal revenue laws do not apply.

Goetze v. United States, 103 Fed. 79; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 279, 45 L. ed. 1088, 1103, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

In addition to states and territories, it is a well-recognized fact that there exists territory occupied by and under the jurisdiction of the United States which is not covered by either the designation of a state or territory.

Downes v. Bidwell, supra; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787; Dorr v. United States, 195 U. S. 138, 49 L. ed. 128, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 697.

The states and territories are communities of people who are citizens of the United States, and who enjoy the rights and perform the duties of citizens.

Ex parte Morgan, 20 Fed. 306.

Mr. Alfred R. Page also filed a separate brief for plaintiff in error:

A criminal statute cannot be extended by construction or implication. The accused must be brought within the express provisions of the law.

United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 5 L. ed. 37; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; Mackin v. United States, 117 U. S. 348, 29 L. ed. 909, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Sarlls v. United States, 152

U. S. 570-576, 38 L. ed. 556-558, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; France v. United States, 164 U. S. 676-683, 41 L. ed. 595-597, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 310, 44 L. ed. 780, 782, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

Porto Rico, in an international sense, is domestic territory of the United States because it is subject to the jurisdiction and control thereof.

De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 1041, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

It is foreign to the United States in a domestic sense, because the island has not been incorporated into the United States, but is merely appurtenant thereto as a possession.

Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 341, 342, 45 L. ed. 1088, 1127, 1128, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

Mr. Robert C. Taylor argued the cause, and, with Mr. Robert S. Johnstone, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The power to extradite fugitive criminals as between a state and a territory is as complete as between one state and another.

Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148.

The power of Congress to provide for the surrender of fugitives from justice as between a state and a territory was derived not from the extradition clause of the Constitution, but from the clause which provides that "the Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States."

2 Moore, Extradition, § 535.

Porto Rico was described as a "territory" by the treaty of Paris.

Ortega v. Lara, 202 U. S. 339, 342, 50 L. ed. 1055, 1056, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 339, 340, 45 L. ed. 1126, 1127, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

The effect of the ratification of the treaty was to make the island "territory of the United States, although not an organized territory in the technical sense of the word." The "organization" of the territory was subsequently effected by the Foraker act.

De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 196, 45 L. ed. 1056, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

Porto Rico has been described as a "territory" by government officials.

23 Ops. Atty. Gen. pp. 634-636.

Porto Rico has been repeatedly referred to as a "territory" in the opinions of this court.

De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 1041, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Goetze v. United States, 182 U. S. 221, 45 L. ed. 1065, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Dooley v. United States, 182 U. S. 222, 45 L. ed. 1074, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762; Armstrong v. United States, 182 U. S. 243, 45 L. ed. 1086, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Dooley v. United States, 183 U. S. 151, 46 L. ed. 128, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Fourteen Diamond Rings v. United States (The Diamond Rings), 183 U. S. 176, 46 L. ed. 138, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59; Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U. S. 1, 48 L. ed. 317, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 49 L. ed. 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 655; Dorr v. United States, 195 U. S. 138, 49 L. ed. 128, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 697; Rasmussen v. United States, 197 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 862, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 514; Perez v. Fernandez, 202 U. S. 80, 50 L. ed. 942, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; Ortega v. Lara, 202 U. S. 339, 50 L. ed. 1055, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 64, 51 L. ed. 369, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Pearcy v. Stranahan, 205 U. S. 257, 51 L. ed. 793, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345; Romeu v. Todd, 206 U. S. 358, 51 L. ed. 1093, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; United States v. Heinszen, 206 U. S. 370, 51 L. ed. 1098, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 688; Garzot v. Rios de Rubio, 209 U. S. 283, 52 L. ed. 794, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

If it should be argued that this consistent and persistent description of Porto Rico as a "territory" does not amount to an adjudication, nevertheless it bespeaks a practical interpretation of the word by public officers—executive, legislative, and judicial—who have been required to construe it. Such a practical construction by public officers is given great weight by the courts.

Burrow-Giles Lithographic Co. v. Sarony, 111 U. S. 53, 28 L. ed. 349, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 286, 45 L. ed. 1088, 1106, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

Porto Rico is an "organized" territory of the United States.

Ex parte Morgan, 20 Fed. 305; Re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 34 L. ed. 219, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760; 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 57; Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U. S. 15, 48 L. ed. 322, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177.

Even if Porto Rico is not technically a "territory," yet the Foraker act, §§ 14, 17, justify Kopel's extradition.

Re Kopel, 148 Fed. 508.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

September 11, 1906, Kopel was taken into custody by defendant in error, Bingham, who is the police commissioner of the city of New York. The arrest was made in pursuance of a rendition warrant issued by the governor of the state of New York, which recited that Kopel was charged with having committed embezzlement in Porto Rico; that he had fled therefrom and taken refuge in New York; and that his return had been lawfully demanded by the governor of Porto Rico.

Kopel thereupon sued out a writ of habeas corpus from the supreme court of the [472]state of New York. Bingham made *return to the writ, and set up the rendition warrant as his authority for detaining the prisoner. Kopel demurred to the return as insufficient in law, and that the governor's warrant had been issued without authority, etc. The matter coming on at special term before Truax, J., the demurrer was overruled and the writ dismissed, and the police commissioner directed to deliver Kopel to the agent of Porto Rico, to be conveyed back to Porto Rico.

From this order Kopel appealed to the appellate division of the supreme court in the first department, and the order of Judge Truax was unanimously affirmed.

Kopel then appealed to the court of appeals, which affirmed the order below. The record was remitted to the supreme court, to be proceeded upon according to law, and thereupon the order of the court of appeals was made the order of the supreme court, whereby it was ordered that the original order of the supreme court, which had been affirmed, should be enforced and carried into execution and effect. To this order, upon the remittitur, this writ of error is addressed.

The questions involved are whether the governor of Porto Rico had power and authority to make a requisition upon the governor of the state of New York for the arrest and surrender of the fugitive criminal of Porto Rico who had taken refuge in the state of New York, and whether the governor of the state of New York had power and authority to honor such requisition and to issue his rendition warrant for the arrest and surrender of such fugitive.

Section 5278 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597) reads as follows:

"Whenever the executive authority of any state or territory demands any person as a fugitive from justice, of the executive authority of any state or territory to which such person has fled, and produces a copy of an indictment found or an affidavit made before a magistrate of any state or territory, charging the person demanded with having committed treason, felony, or other crimes, certified as authentic by the governor or chief magistrate of the state or territory from whence the *person so[473 charged has fled, it shall be the duty of the executive authority of the state or territory to which such person has fled to cause him to be arrested and secured, and to cause notice of the arrest to be given to the executive authority making such demand, or to the agent of such authority appointed to receive the fugitive, and to cause the fugitive to be delivered to such agent when he shall appear."

By § 827 of the Code of Criminal Procedure of New York it is provided:

"It shall be the duty of the governor, in all cases where, by virtue of a requisition made upon him by the governor of another state or territory, any citizen, inhabitant, or temporary resident of this state is to be arrested as a fugitive from justice . . . to issue and transmit a warrant for such purpose to the sheriff of the proper county . . . (except in the city and county of New York, where such warrant shall only be issued to the superintendent or any inspector of police) . . . Before any officer to whom such warrant shall be directed or intrusted shall deliver the person arrested into the custody of the agent or agents named in the warrant of the governor of this state, such officer must, unless the same be waived, as hereinafter stated, take the prisoner or prisoners before a judge of the supreme court or a county judge, who shall, in open court, if in session, otherwise at chambers, inform the prisoner or prisoners of the cause of his or their arrest," and that he or they may have a writ of habeas corpus upon filing an affidavit to the effect that he or they are not the person or persons mentioned in said requisition.

By § 14 of the organic act of Porto Rico, commonly called the Foraker act, it is provided that "the statutory laws of the United States not locally inapplicable, except as hereinbefore or hereinafter otherwise provided, shall have the same force and effect in Porto Rico as in the United States, except the internal revenue laws," etc. 31 Stat. at L. 80, chap. 191.

Section 17 provides that the governor "shall, at all times, faithfully execute the laws, and he shall in that behalf have *all the powers of governors of the[474 territories of the United States that are not locally inapplicable."

Among the powers of governors of territories of the United States is the authority to demand the rendition of fugitives from justice under § 5278 of the Revised Statutes, and we concur with the courts below in the conclusion that the governor of Porto Rico has precisely the same power as that possessed by the governor of any organized territory to issue a requisition for the return of a fugitive criminal. People ex rel. Kopel v. Bingham, 189 N. Y. 124, 81 N. E. 773, affirming 117 App. Div. 411, 102 N. Y. Supp. 878. It was so held by Judge Hough, of the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York, in passing upon a similar application by the same relator. Re Kopel, 148 Fed. 505.

Subdivision 2 of § 2 of article 4 of the Federal Constitution refers in terms to the states only, but the act of Congress of February 12, 1793 [1 Stat. at L. 302, chap. 7, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3597], carried forward into § 5278 of the Revised Statutes, made provision for the demand and surrender of fugitives by the governors of the territories as well as of the states; and it was long ago held that the power to extradite fugitive criminals, as between state and territory, is as complete as between one state and another. Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 650, 29 L. ed. 250, 252, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148. If § 5278 does not apply, no other statute does. And as to §§ 14 and 17 of the Foraker act, no contention is made that they are locally inapplicable, except as it is argued that § 5278 of the Revised Statutes is not applicable at all, because Porto Rico is not a "territory," as that word is used therein. We quite agree with Judge Hough that "to allege that the only existing law under which a Porto Rican fugitive from justice can be returned thereto from the United States is 'locally inapplicable' would be making a jest of justice."

It is impossible to hold that Porto Rico was not intended to have power to reclaim fugitives from its justice, and that it was intended to be created an asylum for fugitives from the United States.

In the case of Ex parte Morgan, 20 Fed. 475]298, 305, the* question involved was the right of the governor of Arkansas to honor a requisition for the surrender of a fugitive criminal, received from the principal chief of the Cherokee Nation, and the court, in holding that the governor was not authorized to honor such a requisition, for the reason that the chief of the Cherokee Nation was not the executive authority of any "state" or "territory," inasmuch as the Cherokee Nation or Indian territory was not an organized government, with an executive, legislative, and judicial system of its own, but was exclusively under the jurisdiction of the United States, defined a territory within the meaning of the extradition statute as follows:

"A portion of the country not included within the limits of any state, and not yet admitted as a state into the Union, but organized under the laws of Congress with a separate legislature, under a territorial governor and other officers appointed by the President and Senate of the United States."

In the case of Re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 34 L. ed. 219, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760, the accused was charged with the commission of an offense "within that part of the Indian territory commonly known as Oklahoma." He was tried and convicted upon an indictment, found under an act of Congress which excepted the "territories" from its operation; and it was claimed that Oklahoma, which was then a part of the Indian territory, was a territory, and came within the exemption of the act. But the court, Miller, J., said:

"But we think the words 'except the territories' have reference exclusively to that system of organized government, long existing within the United States, by which certain regions of the country have been erected into civil governments. These governments have an executive, a legislative, and a judicial system. They have the powers which all these departments of government have exercised, which are conferred upon them by act of Congress, and their legislative acts are subject to the disapproval of the Congress of the United States. They are not, in any sense, independent governments; they have no Senators in Congress and no Representatives in the lower *house of that body, except what are [476 called 'Delegates,' with limited functions. Yet they exercise nearly all the powers of government, under what are generally called 'organic acts,' passed by Congress, conferring such powers on them. It is this class of governments, long known by the name of 'territories,' that the act of Congress excepts from the operation of this statute, while it extends it to all other places over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction.

"Oklahoma was not of this class of territories. It had no legislative body. It had no government. It had no established or organized system of government for the control of the people within its limits, as the territories of the United States have and have always had. We are therefore of opinion that the objection taken on this point by the counsel for prisoner is unsound."

Oklahoma was given a territorial government by the act of May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 81, chap. 182, § 1).

In Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U. S. 15, 48 L. ed. 322, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177, the court unanimously held that a citizen of Porto Rico was not an alien immigrant, and, among other things, an opinion of Attorney General Knox, relating to a Porto Rican named Molinas, was quoted from as follows:

"He [i. e., Molinas] is also clearly a Porto Rican; that is to say, a permanent inhabitant of that island, which was also turned over by Spain to the United States. As his country became a domestic country, and ceased to be a foreign country within the meaning of the tariff act above referred to [30 Stat. at L. 151, 203, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1626, 1690], and has now been fully organized as a country of the United States by the Foraker act, it seems to me that he has become an American, notwithstanding such supposed omission."

It may be justly asserted that Porto Rico is a completely organized territory, although not a territory incorporated into the United States, and that there is no reason why Porto Rico should not be held to be such a territory as is comprised in § 5278.

Order affirmed.

477] *LUCIUS H. BEERS et al., Executors of Franklin B. Lord, Deceased, et al.,
v.

MARTIN H. GLYNN, Comptroller of the State of New York, Deft. in Err.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 477-485.)

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — inheritance tax.

The equal protection of the laws is not denied by the imposition of the inheritance tax provided for by N. Y. Laws 1887, chap. 713, upon certain bequests of personalty by a nonresident decedent owning both real and personal property within the state because, under that statute, as construed by the state courts, the tax could not be collected if the only property belonging to the decedent situated within the state was personalty.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 328-335, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 45.]

Argued December 9, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Surrogate's Court of the County of New York in the State of New York to review a judgment entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of NOTE.—As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to taxes on succession and collateral inheritance—see notes to Re Howe, 2 L.R.A. 825; Wallace v. Myers, 4 L.R.A. 171; Com. v. Ferguson, 10 L.R.A. 240; Re Romaine, 12 L.R.A. 401; and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

Appeals of that state, which affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in and for the First Judicial Department, which affirmed in part and reversed in part an order of the Surrogate's Court, imposing a collateral inheritance tax. Affirmed.

See same case below in Appellate Division, 111 App. Div. 152, 97 N. Y. Supp. 553; in Court of Appeals, 186 N. Y. 549, 79 N. E. 1110.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Lucius H. Beers argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The act of 1887 did not authorize any tribunal or officer to assess the tax on property of nonresident decedents except in cases where the nonresident had owned land in New York.

Re Embury, 19 App. Div. 214, 45 N. Y. Supp. 881, affirmed in 154 N. Y. 746, 49 N. E. 1096.

Such being the provision of the act, it follows, under familiar decisions of this court, that the act was unconstitutional with respect to the large class of nonresident decedents who did not own real estate, because it sought to deprive the persons interested in such estates of their property without due process of law.

Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 710, 28 L. ed. 569, 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 355, 356, 31 L. ed. 763, 767, 768, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 669, 33 L. ed. 772, 776, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 328, 35 L. ed. 419, 425, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 157, 41 L. ed. 369, 388, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Bauman v. Ross, 167 U. S. 548, 590, 42 L. ed. 270, 288, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 966; Carson v. Brockton Sewerage Comrs. 182 U. S. 398, 401, 45 L. ed. 1151, 1153, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860.

The tax was special.

Re Enston (People v. Sherwood) 113 N. Y. 174, 3 L.R.A. 464, 21 N. E. 87; Re Vassar, 127 N. Y. 1, 27 N. E. 394; Re Stewart, 131 N. Y. 274, 14 L.R.A. 836, 30 N. E. 184; Re Swift, 137 N. Y. 77, 18 L.R.A. 709, 32 N. E. 1096; Re Fayerweather, 143 N. Y. 114, 38 N. E. 278.

The principles by which the equality clause of the 14th Amendment is to be applied have been repeatedly declared.

Minnesota Iron Co. v. Kline, 199 U. S. 593, 598, 50 L. ed. 322, 325, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 237, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 582, 32 L. ed. 544, 546, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co.

v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 29, 32 L. ed. 585, 586, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 293, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 104, 43 L. ed. 909, 912, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. May, 194 U. S. 267, 269, 48 L. ed. 971, 972, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; St. John v. New York, 201 U. S. 633, 636, 50 L. ed. 896, 898, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554, 5 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 909.

If the classification is upheld, it must be because it rests upon some difference which bears a reasonable and just relation to the act in respect to which the classification is proposed.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Re New York, 190 N. Y. 360, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 335, 83 N. E. 299; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

The classification does not meet the simple, primary test of reasonableness.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 705; State v. Endom, 23 La. Ann. 663; State v. South Carolina R. Co. 4 S. C. 376; Sims v. Jackson Parish, 22 La. Ann. 440; Hamilton v. Wilson, 61 Kan. 511, 48 L.R.A. 238, 59 Pac. 1069; Russell v. Croy, 164 Mo. 69, 63 S. W. 849; Re New York, 190 N. Y. 350, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 335, 83 N. E. 299.

Mr. D. Cady Herrick argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The power of the legislature of the state of New York to impose an inheritance tax upon personal property within the state of New York belonging to nonresidents has been upheld both by the courts of New York and this court.

Re Romaine, 127 N. Y. 83, 12 L.R.A. 401, 27 N. E. 759; Re Whiting, 150 N. Y. 29, 34 L.R.A. 232, 55 Am. St. Rep. 640, 44 N. E. 715; Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 582, 46 L. ed. 700, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515.

This court has held that the 14th Amendment in no wise undertakes to control the power of a state to determine by what process legal rights may be asserted or legal obligations be enforced, provided the method of procedure adopted for these purposes gives reasonable notice, and affords fair opportunity to be heard before the issues are decided.

53 L. ed.

Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 393, 40 L. ed. 469, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344.

Whenever, by the laws of the state or by state authority, a tax or assessment is imposed upon property for the public use, and those laws provide for a mode of confirming or contesting the charge thus imposed, in the ordinary courts of justice, with such notice to the person or such proceedings in regard to the property as is appropriate to the nature of the case, the judgment in such proceedings cannot be said to deprive the owner of his property without due process of law.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 104, 24 L. ed. 619; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 157, 41 L. ed. 388, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 87, 48 L. ed. 626, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

Due process of law has been afforded litigants when they have had an opportunity to question the validity or the amount of an assessment or charge before the amount thereof is finally determined, or at any subsequent proceedings to enforce its collection, or at any time before final judgment is entered.

Gallup v. Schmidt, 183 U. S. 300-307, 46 L. ed. 207-213, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 162; Security Trust & S. V. Co. v. Lexington, 203 U. S. 323, 51 L. ed. 204, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Central R. Co. v. Wright, 207 U. S. 127-138, 52 L. ed. 134-141, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47.

The statute itself provides the same proceedings as to the personal property of residents and nonresidents. In the proceedings themselves the plaintiffs in error have been accorded the same rights and privileges as residents of the state, and cannot claim that they have not received the equal protection of the law.

Eldridge v. Trezevant, 160 U. S. 469, 40 L. ed. 499, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345.

The state may, if it chooses, entirely exempt certain classes of property from any taxation at all. It may impose different specific taxes upon different pursuits in life; it may make different rates upon different properties; it may tax real estate and personal property in different manners; it may tax physical property only, and not tax securities; it may allow deductions from taxes of indebtedness, or not allow them. These are all within the discretion of the state legislature.

Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 236, 238, 33 L. ed. 894, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

Diversity of taxation, both in respect to the amount imposed and the various species of property selected, either from bearing its burden or for being exempt from it, is not inconsistent with a perfect uniformity and equality of taxation in the proper sense of those terms.

Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 351, 35 L. ed. 1035, 1039, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250.

Whatever the reason may have been, whether wise or unwise, unless it was a mere arbitrary discrimination against a class, as such, it was a matter resting solely in the discretion of the legislature whether it would or would not make such exemption.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 287-299, 42 L. ed. 1040-1044, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 47, 50 L. ed. 65, 79, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 381.

Inequality of taxation presents no question for review under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution.

Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 464, 42 L. ed. 236, 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Connecticut, 185 U. S. 372, 46 L. ed. 954, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

The plaintiffs in error cannot assert the alleged defect in the law, because not affected by it.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 232; Lee v. New Jersey, 207 U. S. 67, 52 L. ed. 106, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 152, 160, 51 L. ed. 415, 422, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented in this case is the validity of a collateral inheritance tax on certain property bequeathed to plaintiffs in error by Emily M. Lord, deceased. The testatrix and her husband had lived for many years at Morristown, New Jersey. She died there January 18, 1892. At the time of her death she owned real estate situate in the state of New York, and certain personal property on deposit in a safe deposit company in the city of New York. The inheritance tax was claimed under chap. 713, of the Laws of the State of New York for 1887, entitled, "An Act to Amend Chap. 483 of the Laws of 1885, Entitled, 'An Act to Tax Gifts, Legacies, and Collateral Inheritances in Certain Cases.'"

That act has twenty-six sections. It is sufficient, however, to refer to a part of § 1 and § 15:

"Sec. 1. After the passage of this act all property which shall pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state, from any person who may die seised or possessed of the same while a resident of this state, or if such decedent was not a resident of this state at the time of death, which property, or any part thereof, shall be within this state, . . . shall be and is *subject to a [482 tax of $5 on every $100 of the clear market value of such property."

"Sec. 15. The surrogate's court in the county in which the real property is situate of a decedent who was not a resident of the state, or in the county of which the decedent was a resident at the time of his death, shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions in relation to the tax arising under the provisions of this act, and the surrogate first acquiring jurisdiction hereunder shall retain the same, to the exclusion of every other."

It appears that the husband of the testatrix died in Morristown only ten days before his wife, but, as he owned no real estate situate in the state of New York, no inheritance tax was collected from his estate. In claiming the equal protection of the law under the 14th Amendment, counsel for plaintiffs in error, after pointing to the discrimination between the two cases, contend that—

"The act of 1887, in so far as it applied to the property of nonresidents, was not capable of verbal separation as between provisions relating to the property of nonresidents who owned land in the state and provisions relating to the property of nonresidents who did not own land in the state, nor can the legislature have intended that it should apply to the former and not to the latter. Being unconstitutional under the 14th Amendment as to the property of such nonresidents as did not own land in New York, in that it takes their property without due process of law, it was therefore unconstitutional as to the property of all nonresidents."

Also that—

"The imposition of a tax under the act of 1887 on the property bequeathed to these plaintiffs in error cannot be made without such a discrimination as will deny to them the equal protection of the laws."

We do not understand that the court of appeals of the state of New York has decided that the state has no power to collect an inheritance tax where the only property belonging *to the decedent situate [483 within the state of New York is personalty, but simply that no provision has been made for reaching such a case.

Both parties refer to Re Embury, 19 App. Div. 214, 45 N. Y. Supp. 881, which was decided in June, 1897, by the first department, and affirmed by the court of appeals on the authority of the opinion of the appellate division (154 N. Y. 746, 49 N. E. 1096). In that case it appears from the opinion in the appellate division that Philip Embury was a citizen and resident of New Jersey, and died at West Orange, in that state, after the passage of the act of 1887. He had no real estate in New York, but only certain personal property. He left a will, which was duly probated in the county of his residence, and thereupon the executors withdrew the personal property from New York to New Jersey, and settled up the estate in accordance with the terms of the will. The opinion, after referring to § 15 of the act of 1887, said (pp. 216, 217):

"The statute, therefore, only conferred on the surrogate jurisdiction in the case of such nonresident decedents as should die seized of real estate within the surrogate's county. . . . In other words, the statute of 1885, as amended by the act of 1887, declared such of Embury's property as was in New York taxable, but omitted to give the surrogate's court jurisdiction to impose the tax,—a situation to which an expression of the court of appeals in Re Stewart, 131 N. Y. 284, 14 L.R.A. 836, 30 N. E. 184, is applicable: 'It is not enough for the legislature to declare that such interests are taxable. If no mode is provided for assessing and collecting the tax, the law is imperfect and cannot, as to such interests, be executed.' A tax cannot be legally imposed unless the statute, in addition to creating the tax, provided for an officer or tribunal who shall appraise and assess the property on notice to the owner. Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 188, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Remsen v. Wheeler, 105 N. Y. 575, 12 N. E. 564. The principle decided in the cases cited applies to the transfer tax as well as to assessments for public improvements. Re McPherson, 104 N. Y. 321, 58 Am. Rep. 502, 10 N. E. 685. . . . It is apparent, 484]therefore, *that when the executors took the deposits and the bank stock out of the state for distribution, no tax had been imposed upon such property, and there was no method provided by law by which a tax could legally be imposed upon it. What they did they had not only the right, but it was their duty, to do. The legal title to the property in this state vested in them as the personal representatives of their testator by force of the laws of New Jersey. Re Bronson, 150 N. Y. 1, 34 L.R.A. 238, 55 Am. St. Rep. 632, 44 N. E. 707. They were bound to take possession of it and make distribution according to the decree of the court having jurisdiction of the estate. Had a tax been imposed on the property, or had a statute providing for its imposition been in force, it would have been their duty to have paid it or to have requested the imposition of the tax, as the case might be, before removing the property."

Subsequently the court of appeals, in Re Fitch, 160 N. Y. 87, 90, 54 N. E. 701, 702, said, referring to the Embury Case, that it "held by an affirmance on the opinion below . . . that while the statute declared such of Embury's property to be taxable as was situated in the city of New York, nevertheless, as it omitted to authorize the surrogate to impose the tax, the order made by that officer was without jurisdiction."

Under this condition an inheritance tax may be collected where the decedent owns both personal and real property within the state of New York, and not where the only property belonging to the decedent situate within the state is personalty. But though the operation of the statutes creates a difference, this, even if intentional, is not of itself sufficient to invalidate the tax. The power of the state in respect to the matter of taxation is very broad, at least, so far as the Federal Constitution is concerned. It may exempt certain property from taxation while all other is subjected thereto. It may tax one class of property by one method of procedure and another by a different method. Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 238, 33 L. ed. 892, 895, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 464, 42 L. ed. 236, 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Travellers' Ins. Co.* [485 v. Connecticut, 185 U. S. 364, 46 L. ed. 949, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 245, 50 L. ed. 744, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459. The right of exemption has been applied to succession taxes (Magon v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 299, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1044, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, 600), in which this court said:

"Nor do the exemptions of the statute render its operation unequal within the meaning of the 14th Amendment. 'The right to make exemptions is involved in the right to select the subjects of taxation and apportion the public burdens among them, and must consequently be understood to exist in the lawmaking power wherever it has not in terms been taken away. To some extent it must exist always, for the selection of subjects of taxation is, of itself, an exemption of what is not selected.' Cooley, Taxn. 200. See also the remarks of Mr. Justice Bradley in Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533."

Indeed, it may be laid down as a general rule that mere inequalities or exemptions in the matter of state taxation are not forbidden by the Federal Constitution.

There is no error in the rulings of the courts of the state of New York, and the judgment is affirmed.

LOUIS KNOP and Joseph L. Rock, Individually and as Gaugers of Coal and Coke, Appts.,

v.

MONONGAHELA RIVER CONSOLIDATED COAL & COKE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 485-488.)

Direct appeal from circuit court — validity of state statute.

1. The contention that, properly construed, the provisions of La. Acts 1904, p. 201, for gauging coal, apply to sales by weight and measurement, and, if so construed, violate the Federal Constitution, does not present a Federal question which will sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 488, 549), § 5, from a decree of a Federal circuit court enjoining the state gaugers from proceeding under the state statute except as to coal sold or intended for sale by boat or barge load or some aliquot part thereof, where the statute, construed as applying to boat and barge loads, has been declared valid by the Federal Supreme Court, and appellee does not contend that the statute is invalid, but only that it is inapplicable to the facts.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Direct appeal from circuit court — construction or application of Federal Constitution.

2. The construction or application of the Federal Constitution is not involved so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, from a decree of a circuit court enjoining state gaugers from proceeding under La. Acts 1904, p. 201, to gauge coal except as to coal sold or intended for sale by boat or barge loads or some aliquot part thereof, unless there is a question as to the relation between some provision of the Federal Constitution and the state statute. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 449.]

Argued December 18, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

APPÉAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana to review a decree enjoining state gaugers from gauging coal except where sold or intended for sale by boat or barge load or some aliquot part thereof. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

The appellants are gaugers of coal and coke, appointed by the state of Louisiana. The appellee is a corporation organized under the laws of Pennsylvania, engaged in mining bituminous coal outside the state of Louisiana and transporting it to that and other states for sale. The transportation to Louisiana is in coal boats or barges. For some years the sales were largely in bulk by the boat or barge load, but within a year or two prior to the commencement of this suit, in consequence of the introduction and general use of fuel oil, the sale in boat or barge loads had been reduced to some thirty-five or forty loads per annum, although the appellee was transporting to Louisiana from 800 to 1,000 loaded boats and barges. By far the bulk of the sales were thus by barrel or weight, and not by boat or barge load, and the amount of each sale was fixed and determined by actual measurement or weighing at the time of delivery to the purchaser.

An act was passed by the state of Louisiana, in 1888, in respecting to gauging. Laws 1888, chap. 147, p. 207. The validity of this statute was challenged in the state courts, but sustained by the supreme court. State v. Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. 41 La. Ann. 465, 6 So. 220. That court, refusing a rehearing, said (p. 473):

"Nothing in this application shakes our conviction of the correctness of our interpretation of the statute as making the gauging of coal boats and barges, before sale, compulsory. We may remark, however, that the act applies exclusively to sales of boat loads or barge loads of coal, and not to sales of a particular number of barrels of coal from a boat or barge."

The case was brought to this court and the ruling of the supreme court of Louisiana sustained, it appearing that the sales were "to dealers, planters, and other purchasers, but in no quantity less than a boat or barge load." Subsequent legislation *was had [487 in Louisiana. Acts 1894, page 172, act 137; Acts 1902, page 81, being an amendment of the act of 1894, and Acts 1904, page 201, an amendment of the act of 1888. The only difference between the later legislation and the act of 1888 which is material is that, in the act of 1888, § 8, it is provided "no boat load of coal or coke shall be sold in this city or state until it has been inspected, as provided for by this act;" while § 3 of the act of 1904 reads, "no boat load of coal or coke, nor any part thereof, shall be delivered to the purchaser thereof, whether the sale was made within or without the state, until it has been inspected, as provided for in this act."

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of circuit or district courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

On December 10, 1906, the appellee filed its bill in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Louisiana to restrain the gaugers of coal from proceeding under the acts except as to coal sold or intended for sale by boat or barge load. On June 11, 1908, a decree was entered for the plaintiff, in accordance with the prayer of the bill, the court, in its opinion, saying:

"The title of the act of 1902, and of the act of 1904, is 'An Act to Compel the Weighing or Gauging in the State of all Bituminous or Anthracite Coal or Coke Sold in Louisiana by Boat, Barge, or Car Load.' The act of 1904, § 8, reads, 'No boat load of coal or coke, or any part thereof, shall be delivered to the purchaser;' and in the next sentence reads, 'And any person, partnership, firm, or corporation who shall sell or deliver in this state a boat load or a barge load of coal or coke, or any part thereof.' Construing the word 'part' with reference to the object of the statute and with reference to the words that immediately precede it, I do not see how there can be any doubt that the part meant is an aliquot fraction of a load."

From this decree of the circuit court the appellants appealed directly to this court.

Mr. E. Howard McCaleb, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Mr. Walter Guion, filed a brief for appellants.

Mr. Charles S. Rice argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

488] *Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

An appeal was taken under § 5 of the act creating the circuit court of appeals. 26 Stat. at L. 826, 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 488, 549. The mere construction of a state statute does not of itself present a Federal question. But the contention of appellants is that the circuit court improperly construed the act of 1904; that, correctly construed, it applies not merely to sales by boat or barge load, or some aliquot part thereof, but also to sales by weight or measurement; and that, under such construction, a question is presented of a conflict between it and the Federal Constitution.

But the difficulty with this contention is, first, that the statute construed, as applied to boat and barge loads, has been declared valid by this court; and, further, that there is no claim by the appellee of any invalidity in the statute, but only of its inapplicability to the facts. In the face of the decision of this court and the claim of the appellee, it is difficult to see how there can be any question of a conflict between the legislation and the Federal Constitution. After a final decision, it is going too far to hold that there still remains an undecided question, and that when we have held that a statute of a state is valid there remains a controversy as to its validity, and this is emphatically true when neither party challenges that decision. Nor, for like reason, does there appear any ground for holding that there is a question as to the construction or application of the Constitution. While in § 10 of article 1 of the Federal Constitution there is a recognition of the power of the state to pass inspection laws, yet, to justify a holding that the application of the Federal Constitution is involved, there should be a question as to the relation between some constitutional provision and the state statute.

Under these circumstances we are of opinion that this court has no jurisdiction, and the appeal must be dismissed.

*JOSEPH A. LEMIEUX, Plff. in Err., [489
v.

JAMES M. YOUNG, Trustee.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 489-496.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — police power — regulating sales in bulk.

1. Due process of law is not denied retail dealers by the provisions of Conn. Gen. Laws, §§ 4868, 4869, avoiding, as against creditors, sales by such dealers of their entire stock at a single transaction, and not in the regular course of business, unless notice of intention to make such sale be recorded seven days before its consummation, but such statute is a valid exercise of the police power of the state.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — police power — regulating sales in bulk.

2. Retail dealers are not denied the equal protection of the laws by the provisions of Conn. Gen. Laws, §§ 4868, 4869, avoiding, as against creditors, sales by such dealers

NOTE.—Validity of statutes regulating sales in bulk.

Statutes regulating the sale of an entire stock of merchandise or a large part thereof at a single transaction, not in the regular course of business, exist in a large number of states. Their validity has not passed unchallenged, though perhaps the weight of authority upholds the constitutionality of such legislation. The statutes of the different states differ somewhat in their proviof their entire stock at a single transaction, and not in the regular course of business, unless notice of intention to make such sale be recorded seven days before its consummation, but such statute is a valid exercise of the police power of the state.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 48.]

Argued December 9, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of New London County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action by a trustee in bankruptcy to replevy a stock of goods sold in bulk. Affirmed.

See same case below, 79 Conn. 434, 65 Atl. 436, 600, 8 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 452.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John J. Phelan and Charles F. Thayer argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The amended statute interferes not only with the liberty and property of the vendor, but its provisions are inexcusably oppressive upon him, the vendee, inasmuch as the alleged protection of the vendor's creditors may, in a measure, appear publicly worthy, whilst in his case there appears no sufficient excuse or good reason for imposing a purchase prohibition that interferes and hinders him from trading with, and lawfully acquiring from, a retail dealer property he could un-restrictedly acquire from any other person than a retail dealer.

Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 52 Am. Rep. 34, 2 N. E. 29; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L.R.A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285.

A statutory device in aid of wholesale dealers as a class, in the collection of accounts from their customers, is not a public necessity.

Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 137, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 188, 60 Am. St. Rep. 609, 47 N. E. 302.

No legislative enactment can impute a crime under the guise of police power to any person whilst pursuing the exercise of a constitutional right.

People ex rel. Tyröler v. Warden, 157 N. Y. 116, 43 L.R.A. 264, 68 Am. St. Rep. 763, 51 N. E. 1006; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L.R.A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126; Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354; State v. Goodwill, supra; Ramsey v. People, 142 Ill. 380, 17 L.R.A. 853, 32 N. E. 364; State v. Missouri Tie & Timber Co. 181 Mo. 536, 65 L.R.A. 588, 103 Am. St. Rep. 614, 80 S. W. 933, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 119; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; People ex rel. Rodgers v. Coler, 166 N. Y. 1, 52 L.R.A. 814, 82 Am. St. Rep. 605, 59 N. E. 716; State v. Dalton, 22 R. I.

sions, but such differences do not account for the diversity of opinion as to their validity.

In several of the states the statutes require that an inventory be made a specified time before the sale, that certain inquiries be made of the seller by the purchaser respecting the former's creditors, and that a notice be given them of the proposed sale. The constitutionality of statutes of such character has been upheld as against attacks founded chiefly on the idea that rights of liberty or property were infringed or that the enactments amount to class legislation. John P. Squire & Co. v. Tellier, 185 Mass. 18, 102 Am. St. Rep. 322, 69 N. E. 312; Spurr v. Travis, 145 Mich. 721, 116 Am. St. Rep. 330, 108 N. W. 1090, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 250; Musselman Grocer Co. v. Kidd, D. & P. Co. 151 Mich. 478, 115 N. W. 409; Thorpe v. Pennock Mercantile Co. 99 Minn. 22, 108 N. W. 940, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 229; Neas v. Borches, 109 Tenn. 398, 97 Am. St. Rep. 851, 71 S. W. 50.

Similar statutes have been declared unconstitutional in New York and Illinois. Wright v. Hart, 182 N. Y. 330, 2 L.R.A. (N.S.) 338, 75 N. E. 404, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 263; Off v. Morehead, 235 Ill. 40, 85 N. E. 264.

The Ohio and Utah statutes are of the same general character, but, in addition, penalize failure to comply with their provisions. These statutes are held to infringe rights of liberty and property, and, in addition, to be objectionable as class legislation. Re Davis, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189; Miller v. Crawford, 70 Ohio St. 207, 71 N. E. 631, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 558; Block v. Schwartz, 27 Utah, 387, 65 L.R.A. 308, 101 Am. St. Rep. 971, 76 Pac. 22, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 550.

The inclusion of a penalty clause in the Oklahoma statute did not, however, render that act unconstitutional. Williams v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 15 Okla. 477, 2 L.R.A. (N.S.) 334, 82 Pac. 496, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 970.

It should be noticed that the Oklahoma and Massachusetts statutes and perhaps those of other states expressly except from their operations judicial sales and sales by personal representatives and other like officers, while the failure of the Utah statute to make any such exception was unfavorably commented upon by the Utah supreme court in passing upon its validity.

The Pennsylvania statute omits the requirement as to the inventory, and its validity has been sustained in Wilson v. Ed-

77, 48 L.R.A. 775, 84 Am. St. Rep. 818, 46 Atl. 234; People ex rel. Cossey v. Grout, 179 N. Y. 417, 72 N. E. 464, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 39.

A class of cases exists which appear to involve the precise principles upon which our statute is based.

Block v. Schwartz, 27 Utah, 387, 65 L.R.A. 308, 101 Am. St. Rep. 971, 76 Pac. 22, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 550; Wright v. Hart, 182 N. Y. 330, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 338, 75 N. E. 404, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 263; Neas v. Borches, 109 Tenn. 398, 97 Am. St. Rep. 851, 71 S. W. 50.

Various cases may be cited in opposition to these authorities, but, on an examination, it will be found that they are either based on statutes different in their effect, or else the constitutional question was not raised, or the constitutional provisions which were considered were different from those on which we rely, or the cases were not well considered.

McDaniels v. J. J. Connelly Shoe Co. 30 Wash. 549, 60 L.R.A. 947, 94 Am. St. Rep. 889, 71 Pac. 37; John P. Squire & Co. v. Tellier, 118 Mass. 18, 102 Am. St. Rep. 322, 69 N. E. 312; Williams v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 15 Okla. 477, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 344, 82 Pac. 496, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 970; Walp v. Mooar, 76 Conn. 515, 57 Atl. 277.

The amended statute violates § 1 of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States because it denies to the plaintiff in error, as the vendee of said Hendrick, and to persons placed in a position similar to that of the plaintiff in error, the equal wards, 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 295, and Feingold v. Steinberg, 33 Pa. Super. Ct. 39.

Even where a statute, in addition to requiring the purchaser to secure a list of the seller's creditors, compels the purchaser to see that the purchase money is applied to the payment of their claims, and makes the furnishing of a false list perjury, it has been sustained as against the objection that it deprives persons of their property without due process of law and is class legislation. McDaniels v. J. J. Connelly Shoe Co. 30 Wash. 549, 60 L.R.A. 947, 94 Am. St. Rep. 889, 71 Pac. 37.

And the same objections have unsuccessfully been urged against the validity of Ga. act 1903, p. 92, which avoids sales in bulk as to creditors unless the purchaser ascertains the creditors of the seller and gives them notice of the proposed sale, and makes it a misdemeanor for the vendor knowingly or wilfully to furnish the purchaser with a false statement, or fail to include the names of all his creditors in the statement furnished. Jaques & T. Co. v. Carstarphen Warehouse Co. (Ga.) 62 S. E. 82.

The Indiana statute makes the usual requirements as to inventory, ascertaining the seller's creditors, and giving them notice of the proposed sale, but confines the protection 53 L. ed.

protection of the laws of Connecticut, and abridges their respective privileges and immunities as citizens of the United States.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31, 28 L. ed. 923, 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Ruhrstrat v. People, 185 Ill. 133, 49 L.R.A. 181, 76 Am. St. Rep. 30, 57 N. E. 41; Gulf C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 159, 41 L. ed. 666, 669, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Re Pell, 171 N. Y. 48, 57 L.R.A. 540, 89 Am. St. Rep. 791, 63 N. E. 789; People ex rel. McPike v. Van DeCarr, 178 N. Y. 425, 66 L.R.A. 189, 102 Am. St. Rep. 516, 70 N. E. 965; Ballard v. Mississippi Cotton Oil Co. 81 Miss. 507, 62 L.R.A. 407, 95 Am. St. Rep. 476, 34 So. 533; Block v. Schwartz, supra; Miller v. Crawford, 70 Ohio St. 207, 71 N. E. 631, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 558.

Mr. Donald G. Perkins argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The need or wisdom of such legislation is a matter of legislative discretion, and this court will not consider that question.

Statutes upon the same subject, but with much more rigorous and burdensome conditions, have been held to be constitutional.

John P. Squire & Co. v. Tellier, 185 Mass. 18, 102 Am. St. Rep. 322, 69 N. E. 312.

The fact that property may be destroyed through the enforcement of a statute, and of the act to creditors of the seller who have sold goods or loaned money for the continuance of the business and makes the purchaser liable to pay their claims in case of noncompliance with the statute. This statute was held unconstitutional in McKinster v. Sager, 163 Ind. 671, 68 L.R.A. 273, 106 Am. St. Rep. 268, 72 N. E. 854, as denying other creditors the equal protection of the laws.

The Connecticut statute, the validity of which is sustained in LEMIEUX v. YOUNG, has also been upheld in Re Paulis, 144 Fed. 472.

An earlier Connecticut statute only required a sale to be acknowledged and recorded within one day after the sale. This statute was upheld in Walp v. Mooar, 76 Conn. 515, 57 Atl. 277.

The Illinois statute held invalid makes sales in violation of its provisions only presumptively fraudulent, while the Georgia, Massachusetts, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Washington statutes whose validity is upheld makes such sales absolutely void, which effectually disposes of the suggestion which might be drawn from Thorpe v. Pennock Mercantile Co. 99 Minn. 22, 108 N. W. 940, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 229, that the cases might be distinguished on that line.

the right of contract either prohibited or restricted, is not decisive on the question of constitutionality.

Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 165, 39 L. ed. 658, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 709, 28 L. ed. 1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 429, 46 L. ed. 626, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, 47 L. ed. 323, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 650, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765; Ah Sin v. Wittman, 198 U. S. 500, 49 L. ed. 1142, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 318, 50 L. ed. 209, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100.

Legislative acts under the police power must necessarily be oppressive, work hardships, and either interfere with or destroy rights of property and the right to contract, and the only principle upon which this court will act and declare a statute unconstitutional is when the court can reach and is forced to the conclusion that the statute enacted professedly to protect the public morals has no real or substantial relation to that object, but is a clear, unmistakable infringement of rights secured by the fundamental law.

California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, supra; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 470, 471, 24 L. ed. 527-530; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 136, 38 L. ed. 385, 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Atkin v. Kansas, 191 U. S. 207, 223, 48 L. ed. 148, 158, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 27, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765.

And even in considering this question, the benefit of the doubt is always given to the constitutionality of the statute.

Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 608, 47 L. ed. 327, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Whether the following provisions of the general laws of Connecticut are repugnant to the 14th Amendment because wanting in due process of law and denying the equal protection of the laws is the question for decision:

"Sec. 4868, as amended by chapter 92 of the public acts of Connecticut of 1903. No person who makes it his business to buy commodities and sell the same in small quantities, for the purpose of making a profit, shall, at a single transaction, and not in the regular course of business, sell, assign, or deliver the whole, or a large part of his stock in trade, unless he shall, not less than seven days previous to such sale, assignment, or delivery, cause to be recorded in the town clerk's office in the town in which such vendor conducts his said business, a notice of his intention to make such sale, assignment, or delivery, which notice shall be in writing, describing in general terms the property to be so sold, assigned, or delivered, and all conditions of such sale, assignment, or delivery, and the parties thereto.

"Sec. 4869. All such sales, assignments, or deliveries of commodities which shall be made without the formalities required by the provisions of § 4868 shall be void as against *all persons who were creditors[492 of the vendor at the time of such transaction."

The controversy thus arose. Philip E. Hendrick conducted a retail drug store at Taftville, Connecticut. While engaged in such business, in August, 1904, he sold his stock in bulk to Joseph A. Lemieux, his clerk, for a small cash payment and his personal negotiable notes. The sale was made without compliance with the requirements of the statute above quoted. Subsequently Hendricks was adjudicated a bankrupt, and the trustee of his estate commenced this action against Lemieux and replevied the stock of goods. Among other grounds the trustee based his right to recover upon the noncompliance with the statutory requirements in question. In the trial one of the grounds upon which Lemieux relied was the assertion that the statute was void for repugnancy to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, because wanting in due process of law and denying the equal protection of the laws. The trial court adjudged in favor of the trustee, and his action in so doing was affirmed by the supreme court of errors of Connecticut, to which the case was taken on appeal. 79 Conn. 434, 65 Atl. 436, 600, 8 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 452. The cause was then brought to this court.

The supreme court of errors, in upholding the validity of the statute, decided that the subject with which it dealt was within the police power of the state, as the statute alone sought to regulate the manner of disposing of a stock in trade outside of the regular course of business, by methods which, if uncontrolled, were often resorted to for the consummation of fraud, to the injury of innocent creditors. In considering whether the requirements of the statute were so onerous and restrictive as to be repugnant to the 14th Amendment, the court said:

"It does not seem to us, either from a consideration of the requirements themselves of the act, or of the facts of the case before us, that the restrictions placed by the legislature upon sales of the kind in question are such as will cause such serious inconvenience to those affected by them 493] as will amount to any *unconstitutional deprivation of property. A retail dealer who owes no debts may lawfully sell his entire stock without giving the required notice. One who is indebted may make a valid sale without such notice, by paying his debts, even after the sale is made. Insolvent and fraudulent vendors are those who will be chiefly affected by the act, and it is for the protection of creditors against sales by them of their entire stock at a single transaction, and not in the regular course of business, that its provisions are aimed. It is, of course, possible that an honest and solvent retail dealer might, in consequence of the required notice before the sale, lose an opportunity of selling his business, or suffer some loss from the delay of a sale, occasioned by the giving of such notice. But a 'possible application to extreme cases' is not the test of the reasonableness of public rules and regulations. Com. v. Plaisted, 148 Mass. 375, 382, 2 L.R.A. 142, 12 Am. St. Rep. 566, 19 N. E. 224. 'The essential quality of the police power as a governmental agency is that it imposes upon persons and property burdens designed to promote the safety and welfare of the general public.' Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, 47 Neb. 549, 564, 41 L.R.A. 481, 53 Am. St. Rep. 557, 66 N. W. 624."

That the court below was right in holding that the subject with which the statute dealt was within the lawful scope of the police authority of the state, we think is too clear to require discussion. As pointed out by Vann, J., in a dissenting opinion delivered by him in Wright v. Hart, 182 N. Y. 350, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 338, 75 N. E. 404, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 263, the subject has been, with great unanimity, considered not only to be within the police power, but as requiring an exertion of such power. He said:

"Twenty states, as well as the Federal government in the District of Columbia, have similar statutes, some with provisions more stringent than our own, and all aimed at the suppression of an evil that is thus shown to be almost universal. California: Civil Code, § 3440, as amended March 10, 1903 (Stat. 1903, chap. 100, p. 111). Colorado: Sess. Laws 1903, chap. 110, p. 225. Connecticut: Pub. Acts 1903, chap. 72, p. 49. Delaware: Laws 1903, chap. 387, p. 748. District of Columbia: 33 Stat. at L. 555, 494]*chap. 1809; Acts 58th Cong. April 28, 1904. Georgia: Laws 1903, p. 92, No. 457. Idaho: Laws 1903, p. 11, H. B. 18. Indiana: Acts 1903, chap. 153, p. 276. Kentucky: 53 L. ed.

Acts 1904, chap. 22, p. 72. Louisiana: Acts 1896, p. 137, No. 94. Maryland: Laws 1900, chap. 579, p. 907. Massachusetts: Acts and Resolves 1903, chap. 415, p. 389. Minnesota: Gen. Laws 1899, chap. 291, p. 357. Ohio: Laws 1902, p. 96, H. B. 334. Oklahoma: Sess. Laws 1903, chap. 30, p. 249. Oregon: Bellinger & C. Anno. Codes & Statutes, chap. 7, p. 1479. Tennessee: Acts 1901, chap. 133, p. 234. Utah: Laws 1901, chap. 67, p. 67. Virginia: Acts approved January 2, 1904; Acts 1902-1904, chap. 554, p. 884. [Va. Code 1904, p. 1217, § 2460a]. Washington: Laws 1901, chap. 109, p. 222. Wisconsin: Laws 1901, chap. 463, p. 684. A statute with the same object attained by a similar remedy has been held valid by the highest courts in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Tennessee, and Washington. John P. Squire & Co. v. Tellier, 185 Mass. 18, 102 Am. St. Rep. 322, 69 N. E. 312; Walp v. Mooar, 76 Conn. 515, 57 Atl. 277; Neas v. Borches, 109 Tenn. 398, 97 Am. St. Rep. 851, 71 S. W. 50; McDaniels v. J. J. Connelly Shoe Co. 30 Wash. 549, 60 L.R.A. 947, 94 Am. St. Rep. 889, 71 Pac. 37. An act declaring such sales presumptively fraudulent was assumed to be valid by the courts of last resort in Wisconsin and Maryland. Fisher v. Herrmann, 118 Wis. 424, 95 N. W. 392; Hart v. Roney, 93 Md. 432, 49 Atl. 661. On the other hand, a statute with more exacting conditions was held unconstitutional in Ohio (Miller v. Crawford, 70 Ohio St. 207, 71 N. E. 631, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 558), and a similar act met the same fate in Utah, where a violation of the statute was made a crime (Block v. Schwartz, 27 Utah, 387, 65 L.R.A. 308, 101 Am. St. Rep. 971, 76 Pac. 22, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 550)."

To the cases thus cited may be added Williams v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 15 Okla. 477, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 334, 82 Pac. 496, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 970, where a statute was sustained, which made sales in bulk presumptively fraudulent when the requirements of the statute were not observed.

The argument here, however, does not deny all power to pass a statute regulating the subject in question, but principally insists that the conditions exacted by this particular statute are so arbitrary and onerous as to cause the law to be repugnant to the 14th Amendment. To support this view in many forms of statement it is reiterated that the conditions *imposed by the 495 statute so fetter the power to contract for the purchase and sale of property of the character described in the statute as to deprive of property without due process of law; and, moreover, because the conditions apply only to retail dealers, it is urged that the necessary effect of the statute is, as to such dealers, to give rise to a denial of the equal protection of the laws. We think it is unnecessary to follow in detail the elaborate argument by which it is sought to sustain these propositions. Their want of merit is demonstrated by the reasoning by which the court below sustained the statute, as partially shown by the excerpt which we have previously quoted from the opinion announced below. Indeed, the court below, in its opinion, pointed out that the statute did not cause sales which were made without compliance with its requirements to be absolutely void, but made them simply voidable, at the instance of those who were creditors at the time the sales were made. Moreover, the unsoundness of the contentions is additionally shown by the number of cases in state courts of last resort, sustaining statutes of a similar nature, which we need not here cite, as they are referred to in the excerpt heretofore made from the opinion of Vann, J., in Wright v. Hart, supra.

Much support in argument was sought to be deduced from the opinion in Wright v. Hart; Miller v. Crawford; and Block v. Schwartz,—supra. It is true that in those cases statutes dealing with the subject with which the one before us is concerned were decided to be unconstitutional. But we think it is unnecessary to analyze the cases or to intimate any opinion as to the persuasiveness of the reasoning by which the conclusion expressed in them was sustained. This is said because it is apparent from the most casual inspection of the opinions in the cases in question that the statutes there considered contained conditions of a much more onerous and restrictive character than those which are found in the statute before us.

As the subject to which the statute relates [496] was clearly *within the police powers of the state, the statute cannot be held to be repugnant to the due process clause of the 14th Amendment, because of the nature or character of the regulations which the statute embodies, unless it clearly appears that those regulations are so beyond all reasonable relation to the subject to which they are applied as to amount to mere arbitrary usurpation of power. Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. ed. 623, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425. This, we think, is clearly not the case. So, also, as the statute makes a classification based upon a reasonable distinction, and one which, as we have seen, has been generally applied in the exertion of the police power over the subject, there is no foundation for the proposition that the result of the enforcement of the statute will be to deny the equal protection of the laws.

Affirmed.

ALEXANDRE MILLER, Plff. in Err.,

v.

NEW ORLEANS ACID & FERTILIZER
COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 496-507.)

Error to state court — Federal question — decision on non-Federal ground.

1. The decision of the highest state court that a trustee of a bankrupt partnership can avoid a preference under the state law arising out of a sale by an individual partner of his individual property, and that such preference may be avoided without previously ascertaining the existence of creditors of the individual estate, does not rest upon a non-Federal ground broad enough to sustain the judgment, so as to defeat the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court, because the state court applied the state law in testing the existence of the preference.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1465-1528, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — avoiding preference under state law — continuing pending suit.

2. A pending action brought by creditors of an insolvent partnership to avoid, as an unlawful preference, a sale by an individual partner of his individual property, may be prosecuted to final judgment by the trustee in bankruptcy of the partnership estate, even although the cause of action arose from the state law, and the application of that law is essential to secure the relief sought, provided only that such trustee is properly authorized, conformably to the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418), § 67, subd. f, empowering a court of bankruptcy to direct the trustee to preserve liens for the benefit of the bankrupt estate.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — avoiding preference under state laws — partnership and individual assets.

3. Establishing the existence of other individual creditors is not essential to the prosecution by the trustee of a bankrupt partnership of a pending suit to avoid, as constituting a preference under the state law, a sale by an individual partner of his individual property, where, under such law, partnership and individual creditors have a coequal right to payment out of his individual estate, although, if the preferred creditor proves to be the only individual creditor, he will be entitled, by way of distribution under the bankrupt act of July 1,

NOTE.—On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

1898, § 5, subd. f, to have the full amount paid in by him returned.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 32.]

Argued December 1, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the Sixteenth Judicial District Court for the Parish of St. Landry, in that state, held invalid, as constituting a preference under the state laws, certain sales by an individual member of a bankrupt partnership of his individual property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 117 La. 821, 42 So. 329.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. E. B. Dubutsson argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

From the time when the trustee intervened in the lower court, down to the final decree of the supreme court, this was an action to set aside a preference by and on behalf of a trustee in bankruptcy, and the controversy should have been determined by the United States bankruptcy law, and not by the state law.

Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 196, 4 L. ed. 548; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 210, 211, 6 L. ed. 73, 74; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 242, 243, 16 L. ed. 247; Es-canaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 683, 27 L. ed. 445, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 23, 49 L. ed. 649, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765.

A Federal question was raised by plaintiff in error and decided adversely to him.

Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 285, 10 L. ed. 966; Grand Gulf R. & Bkg. Co. v. Marshall, 12 How. 167, 13 L. ed. 939; Cousin v. Labatut, 19 How. 207, 15 L. ed. 604; Graham v. Bayne, 18 How. 61, 15 L. ed. 266; San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 180, 47 L. ed. 765, 768, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Montana ex rel. Haire v. Rice, 204 U. S. 291, 51 L. ed. 490, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 19, 50 L. ed. 348, 352, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Reetor v. City Deposit Bank Co. 200 U. S. 405, 411, 413, 50 L. ed. 527, 529, 530, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

Mr. William J. Sandoz argued the cause, and, with Mr. G. L. Dupre, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The writ should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, because the asserted Federal question (the provisions of the bankrupt law as to the right of individual creditors to be first paid out of individual assets) was not raised in the trial court by any pleading or exception, nor was the question properly raised in the state supreme court.

Claassen v. United States, 142 U. S. 140, 35 L. ed. 966, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 169; 2 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 661; Taylor, Jurisdiction, §§ 244, 248; Holmgren v. Werner, 51 La. Ann. 1476, 26 So. 384; Abat v. Michel, 1 Mart. N. S. 240; 2 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 662, 664, 669-671, 676, g; Butler v. Gage, 138 U. S. 52, 34 L. ed. 869, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395, 32 L. ed. 487, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Kirchoff, 169 U. S. 103, 42 L. ed. 677, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260.

The writ should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction for the further reason that where the highest court of a state having jurisdiction of a subject decided a Federal question in rendering a judgment, and also decides against the plaintiff in error upon an independent ground not involving a Federal question, and broad enough to maintain the judgment, the writ of error will be dismissed without considering the Federal question.

Kennebec & P. R. Co. v. Portland & K. R. Co. 14 Wall. 23, 20 L. ed. 850; Hammond v. Johnston, 142 U. S. 73, 35 L. ed. 941, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Taylor, Jurisdiction, § 240.

The decision of a state court as to what should be deemed a fraudulent conveyance by a bankrupt does not present any Federal question; nor does the application by the court of the evidence in reaching that decision raise one.

McKenna v. Simpson, 129 U. S. 511, 32 L. ed. 773, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

The provisions of the bankrupt law cannot be applied to a suit to set aside as fraudulent a conveyance by an insolvent to one of his creditors under the provisions of a state law, filed three months prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy.

5 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 346, note 58.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The law of Louisiana considers the property of the debtor as the common pledge of all his creditors. Civil Code, 1969. As a general rule, therefore, it contemplates an equality of right in all creditors as to all the property of the debtor, existing at the time an obligation against the debtor arises, unless a creditor, as the result of some lawful contract, or from the particular nature of the debt to which the law gives a preference, has acquired a higher and privileged right to payment than that which belongs to the general mass of creditors. Civil Code, 1968. Under that law the creditors of a partnership are preferred as to the partnership assets over the individual creditors of the members of the firm. Civil Code, 2823. This privilege does not, however, conversely exist, since it has been held from an early day in that state that individual creditors of members of the firm have no preference on the individual assets of the estate of the members of a firm, and therefore the partnership creditors and the individual creditors have a concurrent right to payment out of the individual estates. Morgan v. His Creditors, 8 Mart. N. S. 599, 20 Am. Dec. 262; Flower v. Their Creditors, 3 La. Ann. 189.

As a result of the common pledge which all creditors are presumed to have upon the property of their debtors, the law of Louisiana gives to every creditor an action to revoke any contract made in fraud of their 498]common right of pledge. Civil *Code, 1970-1977. As a consequence it is permissible to attack, even collaterally, any mere fraudulent and simulated (that is, fictitious and unreal) transfer of his property by a debtor. See authorities collected in 2 Hennen's Digest, verbo "Obligations," 7, p. 1031. This right, however, even in case of bad faith, does not enable a creditor to avoid a real contract of a debtor unless the act has operated to the injury and prejudice of creditors who were such at the time the act sought to be revoked was done. Civil Code, 1937. Every contract, however, is deemed to have been in fraud of creditors and prejudicial to their rights "when the obligee knew that the obligor was in insolvent circumstances, and when such contract gives to the obligee, if he be a creditor, any advantage over other creditors of the obligor." Civil Code, 1984. From this rule are excepted sales of property or other contracts made in the usual course of business, and all payments of a just debt in money. Civil Code, 1986. But this exception does not include the giving "in payment to one creditor, to the prejudice of the others, any other thing than the sum of money due." Civil Code, 2658.

In 1903 the commercial firm of O. Guillory & Company, composed of Olivrel Guillory, Olivrel E. Guillory, and Ambrois Lafleur, carried on business in the state of Louisiana. In 1904 the senior member, Olivrel Guillory, sold various parcels of real estate, which were his individual property, as follows: One sale to J. A. Fontenot, another to Alexandre Miller, and a third to John A. and Samuel Haas. All these sales were, apparently, on their face not susceptible of being assailed by creditors, because in form they were embraced within the excepted class to which we have referred.

On February 2, 1905, three corporations—which, for the sake of brevity, we shall designate as the wooden ware, the fertilizing, and the elevator companies—sued in a state district court the firm of O. Guillory & Company, the senior member, O. Guillory, individually, and the purchasers at the respective sales above mentioned. As to the first company, the cause of action was based upon an alleged open account for the purchase *price of goods sold to the firm[499 prior to the making of the sales by the senior partner of his individual property above mentioned. As to the two other corporations, the action was based upon notes held by the corporations, signed by the individual members of the firm, and averred to have been given for the price of merchandise bought, also prior to said sales, from the corporations by the firm, it being alleged that the notes signed by the individual members had been received by the corporations as cumulative, and not in any wise as a novation of the firm obligation to pay the price of the goods by it bought. The sales were attacked as fraudulent simulations, or, if not unreal, as subject to be revoked, because they were made at a time when the firm was notoriously embarrassed or insolvent, to the knowledge of the purchasers, and were not within the excepted class, because they were, in substance, not what they purported to be, but were givings in payment of the individual property of O. Guillory in order to prefer the purchasers.

The prayer was for a judgment for the amount of the debts, for a revocation of the sales, for a direction that they be sold by judicial decree to pay the judgments to be rendered, the payments to be made by preference out of the proceeds arising from the sale.

The cause was put at issue by general denials filed for the firm, for O. Guillory individually, and for the purchasers. Before trial, in consequence of an adjudication in bankruptcy as to Guillory & Company, made on April 28, 1905, a petition was filed in the cause by W. J. Sandoz, alleging himself to be "the duly appointed and qualified trustee of the bankrupt estate of O. Guillory & Company." It was alleged that "since the institution of this suit the said O. Guillory & Company have made application for and been adjudged bankrupts in the district court of the United States for the western district of Louisiana." And it was further averred that, under the bankrupt law of the United States, "the trustee succeeds to the rights of the creditors who may have brought actions to annul any transactions affecting the property of the bank-[500 rupts, and the law makes it his duty to prosecute the same for the benefit of the said bankrupt estate in his capacity as trustee." The prayer of the petition was that Sandoz, as trustee, "be made a party plaintiff in this suit and duly authorized to prosecute the same to final judgment for the benefit of said bankrupt estate of O. Guillory & Company." The state court, after notice to the parties, entered an order substituting Sandoz as party plaintiff in his capacity "as trustee of the estate of O. Guillory & Company" . . . with authority to prosecute the same to final judgment for the benefit of said bankrupt estate."

Sandoz, trustee, was thereafter the sole plaintiff, and prosecuted an appeal to the supreme court to reverse a judgment of the trial court sustaining the sales. The supreme court, for reasons given in an elaborate opinion, held the sale to Fontenot to have been simulated, and sustained the validity of the Haas and Miller sales. It was found that Olivrel Guillory had made the sales of his individual property principally for the purpose of assisting the firm, which was embarrassed as the result of a decline in the price of cotton held by the firm; that, at the time, Guillory had no individual debts whatever, except one of $3,000, due to Miller, and another of $6,000, which was assumed and provided for in the Haas sale. Granting a rehearing asked by trustee Sandoz, a different conclusion was reached as to the Miller sale. The court found that, when that sale was made, Guillory owed Miller $3,000, and although the price of $7,500 was actually paid to Guillory, yet, as immediately after the sale Guillory had paid the three thousand dollar debt which he owed to Miller, "the transaction was an indirect preference of the son-in-law (Miller) over other creditors by a disguised giving in payment." 117 La. 821, 42 So. 329. This writ of error sued out by Miller was allowed by the chief justice of the state court.

By the assignments of error it is contended, first, that the court erred in testing, at the instance of Sandoz, trustee, the 501] validity of the sale to Miller by the state law instead of by the bankrupt law of the United States, which was alone controlling; second, under the bankrupt law of the United States the court erred in holding that the transfer by Guillory of his individual property to pay Miller, his individual creditor, was revocable, although there was no other individual creditor to be prejudiced thereby; and, third, that, in any event, the court erred in holding that prejudice could have resulted under the bankrupt law to individual creditors by the sale to Miller without ascertaining whether there were such creditors who could have been prejudiced. In other words, that the court erred in decreeing the sale to Miller to the extent of $3,000 to be revocable as a prejudicial preference, and, at the same time, relegating to the bankruptcy court the determination of whether there were any individual creditors who could have been prejudiced; thus decreeing a preference and yet declining to determine a question which was essential to be ascertained before a preference could be adjudged.

Our jurisdiction is challenged, first, because it is urged no Federal question was set up or claimed in the trial court, and therefore no such question was cognizable by the supreme court; second, because no Federal question was raised in or decided by the supreme court; third, even if incidentally a Federal question may have been passed upon below, nevertheless the court based its conclusions upon a non-Federal ground, broad enough to sustain its judgment. The first question is involved in the second, because, if the court below decided a Federal question, we may not decline to review its action in so doing upon the assumption that the court transcended its powers under the state law by passing on a question which it had no right to examine, because not raised in the trial court. The second contention embraces an irrelevant element,—that is, that no Federal question was raised in the court below,—since, if such a question was expressly decided by the court, our duty to review may likewise not be avoided by assuming that the court decided a question not raised in the cause.

*The proposition, therefore, reduces[502 itself to this: Did the court below expressly decide a Federal question adversely to the plaintiff in error?

In its opinion on the rehearing the court said:

"The trustee in bankruptcy was, on his own petition, made a party plaintiff, and was authorized by order of court to prosecute the suit to final judgment for the benefit of the bankrupt estate. Neither the capacity of the trustee nor his right to stand in judgment have been questioned. It is argued, however, by counsel for Miller, that the partnership alone was adjudged a bankrupt, and not the members as individuals, and that, as Miller, under the bankrupt act of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418], is entitled to be paid by preference over partnership creditors out of the net proceeds of the individual estate of O. Guillory, plaintiffs were not prejudiced by the payment of the note held by Miller out of the individual assets of the debtor. The answer to this contention is that the petition of the bankrupt shows that O. Guillory filed schedules of his individual debts and of his individual property. 'Where a firm goes into bankruptcy, it is a proceeding against each and every member; and both the firm and individual assets must be administered in bankruptcy.' Collier Bankr. p. 60. Hence, all rights of preference must be determined by the court having jurisdiction of the insolvency."

In view of the statement that no question was raised "as to the capacity of the trustee and his right to stand in judgment," and the fact that the record does not contain the full proceedings had in the bankruptcy court, and the further fact that no question as to the capacity of the trustee is raised in the assignment of errors, we take it that the intimation made by the court concerning the effect of the adjudication of a firm as being also an adjudication of the individual estates of the members was but a method of reasoning resorted to by the court to sustain its decision concerning the right of the trustee to avail of the state law under the circumstances of the case, irrespective of the rule as to preferences provided in the 503]bankrupt *law, and, further, to support its conclusion that it was its duty to abstain from determining whether there were individual creditors who were prejudiced, and to remit that question to the court in which the bankruptcy proceedings were pending.

But thus limiting the passage referred to, it nevertheless results that the court below both considered and necessarily decided two distinct Federal questions: First, the right of the trustee to avoid a preference under the state law, although it was contended that the exertion of such power was in conflict with the bankrupt law; and, second, that the preference might be avoided under the state law at the instance of the trustee without establishing that there were creditors of the individual estate. So far as the third contention concerning jurisdiction, it is apparent from what we have just said that it is without merit. While it is true that the court applied the state law in testing the existence of the preference, such application of that law is obviously not alone broad enough to sustain its conclusion that the trustee, under the bankrupt law, had the right to avail of the preference under the state law, and this is also true concerning the ruling that there was power to determine the preference under the state law without previously ascertaining the existence under the bankrupt act of individual creditors.

We come, then, to the merits. Eliminating, as we have done, the expressions of the court below as to the effect of the adjudication in bankruptcy of the partnership upon the estates of the individual members, we need not approach the very grave question which would arise for consideration if that subject had been decided by the court below. Re Stokes, 106 Fed. 312; Dickas v. Barnes, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 654, 72 C. C. A. 261, 140 Fed. 849; Re Bertenshaw, 157 Fed. 363.

While § 5 of the bankrupt act expressly authorizes an adjudication in bankruptcy against a firm, the controlling provisions following are the direct antithesis of the rule prevailing in the state of Louisiana.

Thus, subdivision f of § 5 commands that "the net proceeds of the partnership property shall be appropriated to the payment of the partnership debts, and the net[504] proceeds of the individual estate of each partner to the payment of his individual debts. Should any surplus remain of the property of any partner after paying his individual debts, such surplus shall be added to the partnership assets and be applied to the payment of the partnership debts." To enforce these provisions the act compels (subdiv. d) the keeping of separate accounts of the partnership property and of the property belonging to the individual partners; the payment (subdiv. e) of the bankrupt expenses as to the partnership and as to the individual property proportionately; and permits (subdiv. g) the proof of the claim of the partnership estate against the individual estate, and vice versa, and directs the marshaling of the assets of the partnership estate and the individual estates, "so as to prevent preferences and secure the equitable distribution of the property of the several estates."

Now, by § 60 of the bankruptcy law, as amended by the act of 1903 [32 Stat. at L. 799, chap. 487, § 13, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 1031], it is provided that a person shall be deemed to have given a preference "if, being insolvent, he has, within four months before the filing of the petition, or after the filing of the petition, and before the adjudication, . . . made a transfer of any of his property, and the effect of the enforcement of such . . . transfer will be to enable any one of his creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class." It is obvious that if, at the time of the alleged preferential transfer to Miller, there were no other creditors of the individual estate of Guillory than Miller, under the rule laid down by the bankrupt act, the transfer to him of assets of the individual estate, in payment of an individual debt, did not constitute a preference. That it might have constituted a preference under the state law results from the difference in the classification made by the state law, on the one hand, and the bankruptcy law on the other. So, also, it is evident, having regard to the separation between the partnership and individual estates made by the bankrupt act and the method of distribution of those estates, *that, if there were no individual creditors, and the sum paid to Miller was returned to the estate as a preference, it would be his right to at once receive back, by way of distribution, that which he was obliged to pay in upon the theory that it was a preference.

The questions, then, to be decided, are these: 1st, was the trustee authorized by the bankrupt law to avoid the sale to Miller to the extent of the $3,000 which constituted the giving in payment under the state law? And, 2d, if so, was it incumbent on the trustee, under the bankrupt act, to such recovery to show the existence of individual creditors at the time the giving in payment to Miller took place, who were prejudiced thereby; and, if not, was the trustee obliged to show the existence of individual creditors at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy, who would be prejudiced in the distribution of the bankrupt estate if the giving in payment to Miller was not annulled?

As the suit by the creditors was brought within four months before the adjudication in bankruptcy, their right to a lien or preference arising from the suit was annulled by the provisions of subdivision f of § 67 of the bankrupt law. But that section authorized the trustee, with the authority of the court, upon due notice, to preserve liens arising from pending suits for the benefit of the bankrupt estate, and to prosecute the suits to the end for the accomplishment of that purpose. First Nat. Bank v. Staake, 202 U. S. 141, 50 L. ed. 967, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580. It is inferable that the parties proceeded upon the erroneous conception that the state court, where the suit was pending, was competent to authorize the trustee; but, as no question on that subject was made below or is here raised, we may not reverse the judgment in favor of the trustee because of the absence of authority from the bankrupt court, when presumably the want of authority would have been supplied had its absence been challenged. Assuming, therefore, that the trustee was properly authorized, it follows that he was entitled to preserve and enforce the privilege or lien which arose in favor of the creditors, 506] *resulting from their pending action, even although the cause of action arose from the state law, and the application of that law was essential to secure the relief sought. To the accomplishment of this end the bankrupt law was cumulative and did not abrogate the state law. See Keppel v. Tiffin Sav. Bank, 197 U. S. 356, 49 L. ed. 790, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443.

Undoubtedly, the trustee, in prosecuting the suit to judgment, was obliged to prove the existence of the facts which were essential under the state law, since, to hold otherwise, would be but to decide that he could recover without proof of his right to do so. But as, under the state law, creditors of the partnership had a coequal right to payment with the individual creditors of a member of the firm out of his individual estate, it follows that, even if there had been no individual creditor but Miller, recovery was justified because of the prejudice suffered by the partnership creditors as the result of the giving in payment made by Guilory to Miller. In view of the distinction between the estates of partnerships and the estates of the members of the firm, which is made by the bankrupt law, and the method of distribution for which that law provides, of course the trustee will hold the fund as an asset of the estate of the individual member, and primarily for the benefit of his creditors. Although, on proof of the claims against such individual estate, if it be that Miller is the only individual creditor, he will be entitled, by way of distribution, to the full amount paid in by him because of the method of distribution ordained by the bankrupt law, that fact does not establish that there was a necessity, in order to avoid the preference under the state law, to make proof that, at the time of the alleged giving in payment, there were other individual creditors who were prejudiced. While the power in the state court to pass on the question of preference involved the duty of deciding whether, at the time of the assailed transaction, there were creditors to be prejudiced, that duty did not involve ascertaining what creditors at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy, were entitled to participate in the distribution. The one was within the province of the state court for the purpose 507 of the case before it; the other was a different question, depending on independent considerations exclusively cognizable in the bankruptcy court. The state court was, therefore, right in so deciding.

Affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

EDGAR M. BIGGS, Charles H. Freeman, Charles D. McPhee, and John J. McGinnity.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 507-522.)

Appeal — in criminal case — review on behalf of government.

1. Interpretation is included in the term

NOTE.—On the right of the state to appeal in a criminal case—see note to People ex rel. Hodson v. Miner, 19 L.R.A. 342.

"construction," as used in the act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1246, chap. 2564, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 209), authorizing a writ of error on behalf of the government from the Federal Supreme Court to review the judgment of a district or circuit court sustaining a demurrer to an indictment when based upon the construction of the statute upon which such indictment is founded.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — by government in criminal case — scope of review.

2. The action of the court below as to the mere construction of the indictment is not open to review on the writ of error authorized by the act of March 2, 1907, on behalf of the government, to review a judgment of a district or circuit court sustaining a demurrer to an indictment on the ground of the construction of the statute upon which the indictment is founded.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public lands — timber and stone lands — agreement to convey after patent.

3. An entryman who has made an application under the timber and stone act of June 3, 1878 (20 Stat. at L. 89, chap. 151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545), as amended by the act of Aug. 4, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 348, chap. 375, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545), in good faith, and for his exclusive use and benefit, is not prohibited from subsequently agreeing to convey the land covered by his application to another, and to perfect his entry for the purpose, after patent, of fulfilling his contract, by the provision of the statute forbidding an entryman or applicant from making an application ostensibly in his own name, but in reality for, and on behalf of, another.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, I. f, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Conspiracy — to defraud United States.

4. A conspiracy to induce entrymen who have made application under the timber and stone act of June 3, 1878, as amended by the act of Aug. 4, 1892, to agree to convey after patent, is not one to defraud the United States "in any manner or for any purpose," within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5440, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676, since the former statute not only does not expressly prohibit an entryman from making such an agreement, but impliedly sanctions it.

[For other cases, see Conspiracy, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — by government in criminal case — scope of review.

5. Every question of the character referred to in the act of March 2, 1907, authorizing a writ of error on behalf of the government from the Federal Supreme Court, to review certain judgments of the Federal district and circuit courts in criminal cases, need not be decided by the Supreme Court when, by the decision of one of such questions, the case is completely disposed of and the other questions have become irrelevant.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 289.]

Argued December 16, 17, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States. Affirmed.

See same case below, 157 Fed. 264.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Attorney General Bonaparte argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The words "make entries" include the making of applications.

Chotard v. Pope, 12 Wheat. 586, 6 L. ed. 737; Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 545, 38 L. ed. 545, 547, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680; Standard Dict. "Entry;" Century Dict. "Entry."

When the conspiracy was formed no application had been made for the lands which were to be obtained. In order to carry out the conspiracy it would, therefore, be necessary to have applications made. It follows that when defendants conspired to procure others to "make entries," as charged, they necessarily contemplated the making of applications. Reasonable implications from facts clearly charged may be indulged in to ascertain the true meaning of an indictment.

United States v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 8 L. ed. 636; Rosen v. United States, 161 U. S. 30, 33, 40 L. ed. 606, 607, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434, 480; Clement v. United States, 79 C. C. A. 243, 149 Fed. 305; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 448, 39 L. ed. 214, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144; Ex parte Pierce, 155 Fed. 665.

A conspiracy to defraud is sufficiently charged, although the conspiracy did not embrace the making of false and fraudulent applications.

United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 163, 36 L. ed. 384, 387, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

The end, fraud, being unlawful, it was unnecessary to set out in these indictments, in detail, the means of indirection contemplated by the conspiracies.

Dealy v. United States, 152 U. S. 539, 543, 38 L. ed. 545, 546, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680; Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 372, 50 L. ed. 1057, 1067, 26 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 688, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 362; Thomas v. United States, 17 L.R.A.(N.S.) 720, 84 C. C. A. 477, 156 Fed. 906; United States v. Grunberg, 131 Fed. 137; Thomas v. People, 113 Ill. 531; People v. Bird, 126 Mich. 631, 86 N. W. 127.

Messrs. Clyde C. Dawson and Charles J. Hughes, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The courts have long distinguished between "interpretation" and "construction."

Bloomer v. Todd, 3 Wash. Terr. 612, 1 L.R.A. 111, 19 Pac. 138; Morris Aqueduct v. Jones, 36 N. J. L. 206; State ex rel. Hastings v. Smith, 35 Neb. 22, 16 L.R.A. 791, 52 N. W. 700; People ex rel. Twenty-third Street R. Co. v. Tax Comrs. 95 N. Y. 559.

There is no room for construction where the statute is unambiguous.

Deane v. State, 159 Ind. 313, 64 N.E. 916; Terre Haute & L. R. Co. v. Erdel, 158 Ind. 347, 62 N. E. 706; Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 366; McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 601; People ex rel. Wood v. Sands, 102 Cal. 16, 36 Pac. 404; Gilbert v. Dutruit, 91 Wis. 665, 65 N. W. 511; Swarts v. Siegel, 54 C. C. A. 405, 117 Fed. 13; State v. Duggan, 15 R. I. 403, 6 Atl. 787; United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385, 396, 18 L. ed. 830, 832; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670, 671, 32 L. ed. 1060, 1063, 1064, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Yerke v. United States, 173 U. S. 439, 442, 43 L. ed. 760, 761, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 421, 44 L. ed. 219, 222, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Webber v. St. Paul City R. Co. 38 C. C. A. 84, 97 Fed. 140; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 54 C. C. A. 511, 117 Fed. 462; United States v. Fisher, 2 Craneh, 358, 399, 2 L. ed. 304, 318; United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 96, 5 L. ed. 37, 42.

Lord Denman's antithesis that a criminal conspiracy consisted in the combination for accomplishing an unlawful end or lawful end by unlawful means (R. v. Jones, 4 Barn. & Ad. 345) was not intended by him as a definition of what combinations are criminal.

R. v. Peck, 9 Ad. & El. 686.

And it, while misleading, may only be justified by using the words "unlawful" and "unlawfully" as synonyms for "criminal" and "criminally."

Mulcahy v. R. L. R. 3 H. L. 317; 3 Greenl. Ev. § 90a, conspiracy; Wright, Criminal Conspiracies & Agreements, § 14, p. 48; Pettibone v. United States, 148 U. S. 197, 203, 37 L. ed. 419, 422, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 558, 23 L. ed. 588, 593; Quinn v. Leathem [1901] A. C. 529.

If the defendants herein persuaded various proper and competent persons to make entries of timber lands, even furnishing the money with which such entries were to be made, on a promise that thereby they could realize a profit in the future, but carefully avoiding every form of agreement to purchase the property until after the application, or, at most, the entries were complete, and then showing the parties how they might make the expected profit by selling the lands, they would not be guilty under this statute.

United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 163, 36 L. ed. 384, 387, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; Olson v. United States, 67 C. C. A. 21, 133 Fed. 852; Ex parte Black, 147 Fed. 832; Van Gesner v. United States, 82 C. C. A. 180, 153 Fed. 46.

The only thing which the Congress of the United States attempted to prevent is the making of contracts before the making of applications to purchase, whereby the entryman binds himself to convey the title which he shall require from the government to some other person.

Hussey v. Smith, 99 U. S. 20, 25 L. ed. 314; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. 307, 314, 21 L. ed. 759, 761; Gaines v. Molen, 30 Fed. 29; Southerland v. Whittington, 46 Ark. 289; Arnold v. Christy, 4 Ariz. 19, 33 Pac. 619; McKennon v. Winn, 1 Okla. 327, 22 L.R.A. 501, 33 Pac. 582; Snow v. Flannery, 10 Iowa, 323, 77 Am. Dec. 120; Lipscomb v. Nichols, 6 Colo. 294; Fideleer v. Norton, 4 Dak. 258, 30 N. W. 135, 32 N. W. 57; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. 291, 296, 297, 20 L. ed. 562, 563; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 515-517, 48 L. ed. 769, 771, 772, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163, 177.

The making of false representations, if alleged, in violation of a Land-Department regulation imposing on the entryman a condition not contained in the law, would constitute no offense.

Williamson v. United States, supra; United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677, 687, 688, 36 L. ed. 591, 594, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764; United States v. Maid, 116 Fed. 650; United States v. Blasingame, 116 Fed. 654; Anchor v. Howe, 50 Fed. 366; United States v. Howard, 37 Fed. 666; Hoover v. Salling, 49 C. C. A. 26, 110 Fed. 43; United States v. Manion, 44 Fed. 801; United States v. Hoover, 133 Fed. 950; United States v. Matthews, 146 Fed. 306; United States v. United Verde Copper Co. 196 U. S. 207, 49 L. ed. 449, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

It is adequate to an understanding of the questions which are here necessary to be decided in general terms to say that the indictment against the defendants in error charged them with conspiracy in violation of the 2d clause of § 5440, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676), which makes it criminal to conspire to defraud the United States "in any manner or for any purpose." The means by which it was contemplated that the United States should be defrauded was charged in the indictment to have been the unlawful obtaining by purchase under the timber and stone act of public land of the United States in excess of the quantity authorized by law to be acquired. The timber and stone act, when originally enacted, in June, 1878, related solely to public lands within particular states. 20 Stat. at L. chap. 151, p. 89, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545. In 1892, however, that act was amended by striking out the designation of particular states, thus causing the act to apply to "surveyed public lands of the United States within the public-land states." 27 Stat. at L. 348, chap. 375, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545. As it is essential to have that act in mind we excerpt from the opinion of the court below a succinct but comprehensive and accurate statement of its provisions:

"This act in its 1st section specifies the qualifications of purchasers or entrymen thereunder, and limits the amount of land which each may acquire to 160 acres. The 2d section provides that the applicant, at the time of his application, shall file a written statement in duplicate under oath with the register, describing the land which he desires to purchase and its quality, that he has made no other application under this act, and that he does not apply to purchase the same on speculation, but in good faith to appropriate it to his own exclusive use and benefit, and that he has not, directly or 515] indirectly, made any agreement or *contract in any way or manner, with any person or persons whatsoever, by which the title which he might acquire from the government of the United States should inure, in whole or in part, to the benefit of any person except himself. It then provides that, if he swears falsely, he shall be guilty of perjury and forfeit the money which he paid for said lands, and all right and title to the same, and any grant or conveyance which he may have made, except in the hands of bona fide purchasers, shall be null and void. The 3d section provides that, on the filing of the applicant's statement, the register shall post a notice of the application in his office for a period of sixty days, and that the applicant shall publish the same notice in a newspaper nearest the location of the premises for a like period of time, and after the expiration of said sixty days, if no adverse claim shall have been filed, the party desiring to purchase shall furnish to the register of the land office satisfactory evidence, 'first, that said notice of the application prepared by the register as aforesaid was duly published in a newspaper, as herein required; secondly, that the land is of the character contemplated in this act, unoccupied, and without improvements,' etc., 'and, upon payment to the proper officer of the purchase money of said land, together with the fees of the register and receiver,' etc., 'the applicant may be permitted to enter said land,' and a patent shall issue thereon. It further provides that any person having a valid claim to any portion of the land may object in writing to the issuance of the patent, and evidence shall be taken thereon as to the merits of said objection." [157 Fed. 266.]

The indictment contained one count, supported by averments of fourteen overt acts.

The accused after moving to quash on the ground of the illegality of the organization of the grand jury, demurred to the indictment on a number of technical grounds, and upon the contentions that the facts stated in the indictment were insufficient to charge an offense within any statute of the United States, and that, as the indictment had not been found *within three years of the com-[516 mission of the acts therein alleged, the right to prosecute for the same was barred by the statute of limitations. The court held the indictment stated no offense against the United States, and, sustaining the demurrer upon that ground, discharged the accused without day. It was also held that, if the indictment was construed as embracing but one offense, the three years' bar of the statute of limitations was controlling; but that, if it were held that the indictment stated more than one offense, thus saving one of the offenses from the operation of the statute of limitations, the indictment would be void for duplicity.

The reasons which caused the court to reach the conclusions just stated were expounded in an opinion. Therein, in order to determine whether the indictment stated an offense against the United States, the court came first to construe it in the light of the provisions of the timber and stone act. In doing so the court said:

"We find that the indictment sets in where the 2d section of the timber and stone act leaves off. It charges that the purpose of the conspiracy was to 'hire and under agreements' with entrymen have them pay for the lands with moneys of the corporation and have them make entries. It does not charge the date on which such hiring and agreements to make entries were to be made, nor that the entrymen were hired to make applications, nor that said hiring and agreements were prior to any application. The indictment appears to attempt to challenge some acts done by the entrymen under the provisions of § 3 of said act, to wit: The hiring of and agreement with entrymen (who had made application before that under § 2 of the act) to make entries and pay for the lands with moneys furnished by the corporation. . . . But it is said the indictment charges a violation of § 1 of the act in the acquisition of more land by the corporation than there limited. When it comes to that, the indictment does not charge that the several entrymen 517] were disqualified as such, *nor that, when they made application, they had outstanding contracts to sell, or were then acting under agreements or hire for said defendants or said corporation. A compliance with the timber and stone act, by the entrymen, in both its spirit and letter, prior to and at time of application, is not challenged by the indictment."

Having thus construed the indictment, it was then considered whether any offense was therein stated against the United States. In deciding that no offense was stated, it was held that, although it were conceded that the timber and stone act prohibited an entryman or applicant from making an application ostensibly in his own name, but in reality for and on behalf of another, that, if an applicant or entryman made an application in good faith, for his own exclusive use and benefit, the statute contained no prohibition, express or implied, against the right of the entryman, after his application, and before the final action thereon, to sell to another the claim to the land which had arisen from his application. It was therefore decided that such applicant was at liberty to contract with another to convey the land covered by the application and to perfect his entry for the purpose of fulfilling his contract to convey the land after patent. In reaching this conclusion the court was controlled by the decision in Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. ed. 769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512, giving a like construction to the timber culture act of June 14, 1878 (chap. 190, 20 Stat. at L. 113). Having thus decided that the indictment as construed charged the doing of no unlawful act, but simply the exercise of a lawful act, not in any way prohibited, but, on the contrary, impliedly sanctioned, by the statute, it was decided that, under no possible construction, could the acts charged constitute an unlawful conspiracy within the 2d clause of § 5440, Rev. Stat. And for additional reasons expressed in the opinion the conclusions of the court concerning the bar of the statute of limitations and the duplicity of the indictment, if it were so construed as to save it from the statute, were fully expressed.

*This writ of error, direct from this [518 court, is prosecuted by the United States under the authority of the act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1246, chap. 2564, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 209).

Our right to review the decision below is questioned by the defendants in error on the ground, first, that the court below did not construe, but simply interpreted, § 5440, Rev. Stat., and the provisions of the timber and stone act; and, second, because, although it applied the bar of the statute of limitations, the court did not do so by way of sustaining a plea in bar, but simply incidentally passed upon that question in deciding the demurrer.

The want of merit in the first contention is established by United States v. Keitel, No. 286 of this term, 211 U. S. 370, ante, 230, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123.

As therefore we have, in any event, jurisdiction to review the action of the trial court in construing the timber and stone act and in fixing the meaning of § 5440, Rev. Stat., in the light of that construction, we presently pass the consideration of the ruling made by the court in respect to the statute of limitations. We do this because, if it be found that the court below was right in its conclusions as to the construction of the timber and stone act and of § 5440, Rev. Stat., its judgment quashing the indictment will be sustained, and its action concerning the statute of limitations will become irrelevant, and will not require examination, unless it be our duty under the act of 1907, which we shall also hereafter consider, to pass upon that question, although its decision will have become wholly unnecessary.

It is also settled by United States v. Keitel, supra, that the right given to the United States to obtain a direct review from this court of the rulings of the lower court on the subjects embraced within the statute of 1907 does not give authority to revise the action of the court below as to the mere construction of an indictment, and therefore, in the exercise of our power to review on this record, we must accept the construction of the indictment made by the lower court, and test its construction of the statute in that aspect.

*While not questioning this general [519 rule, the United States insists that the case here presented is an exception to that rule, because of the contention that the construction given by the court below to the indictment was but the necessary result of the misconstruction which the court applied to the timber and stone act, and hence that a review of the construction given to the indictment is necessarily involved in the determination of the correctness of the construction given by the court to the statute. Conceding the premise, for the sake of argument, the deduction by which it is sought to apply it to the case in hand is, we think, without foundation. It proceeds upon a subtle separation of particular words or phrases in the indictment from the context of that pleading, and the affixing to the words thus separated a penetrating, but, nevertheless, too narrow, significance for the purpose of establishing the proposition relied upon. On the contrary, we think the conclusion cannot be escaped that the construction given by the court below to the indictment was the result merely of the analysis which the court made of the indictment as an entirety, of its appreciation of the nature and character of the acts therein referred to, and of the overt acts alleged, the whole read in the light of the elementary canons of construction applicable to criminal pleadings, and elucidated, as the court expressly stated, by the entire absence of anything in the indictment tending to show that the pleader contemplated alleging the existence of any conspiracy to induce the making of applications to purchase.

Coming to consider the construction given by the court to the timber and stone act as applied to the allegations of the indictment, as interpreted by the court, the correctness of the construction given by the court below to the statute is established beyond controversy by the decision in Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163, announced since the decision below was rendered.

The Williamson Case was a prosecution for a conspiracy in violation of § 544Q, Rev. 520] Stat., to procure the commission of *the crime of subornation of perjury by causing certain affidavits to be made for the purpose of acquiring land under the timber and stone act. At the trial, over exceptions, affidavits as to the bona fides of a number of applicants and of the purpose of each, in making his application, to acquire only for himself, were offered in evidence, and like affidavits which were required by the rules and regulations of the Land Department at the time of the final entry were also offered in evidence. The government insisted that the papers were admissible because the indictment charged a conspiracy to suborn perjury, not only at the time of the application to purchase, but also in the subsequent stage of making the final entry; and that, even if this were not the case, the affidavits made after application were admissible for the purpose of showing the motive which existed at the time the application was made. It was decided that the indictment only charged subornation of perjury at the time of the application. Passing on the alleged contention as to motive, it was held that, in view of the requirements as to an affidavit exacted by the statute to be made at the time of the application, as to the bona fides of the applicant and his intention to buy for himself alone, and the absence of any such requirement in the statute as to the final entry, that the prohibition of the statute applied only to the condition of things existing at the time of the application to purchase, and did not restrict an entryman, after said application was made, from agreeing to convey to another, and perfecting his entry for the purpose, after patent, of transferring the land in order to perform his contract. It was, therefore, held, that the affidavits made at the final stage of the transaction were not admissible to show motive at the time of the applications to purchase, and that any requirements contained in the rules and regulations of the Land Department making an affidavit essential to show bona fides, etc., at the final stage, were ultra vires and void. In passing upon the subject the ruling to the like effect concerning the timber culture act, made in Adams v. Church, supra, was *reiterated and approved, [521 and declared to be applicable to the timber and stone act, despite immaterial differences in the phraseology of the two acts. The court, after approvingly referring to Adams v. Church, and after reviewing the timber and stone act, and calling attention to the entire omission of all requirement that statement as to the purpose and intention of the entryman should be made at the date of the final step in the acquisition of the land, said (p. 460): "Indeed, we cannot perceive how, under the statute, if an applicant has, in good faith, complied with the requirements of the 2d section of the act, and, pending the publication of notice, has contracted to convey, after patent, his rights in the land, his so doing could operate to forfeit his right."

It is insisted by the government that, however conclusive may be this ruling as to the power of the applicant to sell after application and to perfect his entry for the purpose of enabling him to perform such contract, that such ruling does not conclude the contention that a conspiracy formed to induce an entryman who has made his application to purchase subsequently to agree to convey his interest in the land would be a violation of the statute. But we are constrained to say that this is a mere distinction without a difference. The effect of the ruling in the Williamson Case was to hold that the prohibition of the statute only applied to the period of original application, and ceased to restrain the power of the entryman to sell to another and perfect his entry for the purpose of transferring the title after patent. This being concluded by the decision in the Williamson Case, the distinction now sought to be made comes to this,—that it is unlawful under the statute to conspire to have that done which the statute did not prohibit, and, on the contrary, by implication recognized could be lawfully done without prejudice or injury to the United States in any manner whatever. This also serves to demonstrate that no error was committed by the court below in holding that, under § 5440, Rev. Stat., the acts charged in the indictment could not possibly have 522] constituted a defrauding *of the United States in any manner or for any purpose within the intendment of that section.

It remains only to notice the ruling of the court below as to the bar of the statute of limitations. While the act of 1907 gives authority to come directly here to obtain a review of the construction of a statute under the circumstances which the act enumerates, and also authorizes us to review a "decision or judgment sustaining a special plea in bar, when the defendant has not been put in jeopardy," we consider that the power given is coincident with the purpose for which it was conferred; that is, to have determined, in a case within the statute, the question whether or not the government is entitled to further prosecute the case, and therefore does not, of course, call upon us to decide every question of the character referred to in the statute, when, by the decision of one of such questions, the case is completely disposed of and the other questions have become so irrelevant as to cause it to be, in our opinion, unnecessary to consider and determine them. Of course, under these circumstances, we intimate no opinion whatever concerning the correctness of the construction adopted by the court below in respect to the statute of limitations.

Affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.

ALEXANDER T. SULLENBERGER, James S. Hatcher, Ellis M. Hampton, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 522-525.)

This case is governed by the decision in United States v. Biggs, ante, 305.

[No. 290.]

Argued December 16, 17, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment quashing an indictment for a conspiracy to defraud the United States. Affirmed.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Attorney General Bonaparte argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence, filed a brief for plaintiff in error. For their contentions, see their brief as reported in United States v. Biggs, ante, 305.

Mr. Edmund F. Richardson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Horace N. Hawkins, filed a brief for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

In this case the United States seeks the reversal of the action of the court below in quashing an indictment, the writ of error being prosecuted directly from this court upon the assumption that the case comes within the act of March 2, 1907. [34 Stat. at L. 1246, chap. 2564, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 209.] The indictment charged a conspiracy in violation of § 5440, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3676), to unlawfully acquire land of the United States under the timber and stone act. The court gave to the indictment the same construction which it affixed to the indictment in the case of United States v. Biggs, No. 289 [211 U. S. 507, ante, 305, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181], which we have just decided, and applied the same principles which it expounded in the opinion in that case. Disregarding mere immaterial differences in the form of the pleadings, *this case is [525 like the Biggs Case, and is disposed of by the opinion which we have just announced in that case.

Affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CHARLES H. FREEMAN, Edgar M. Biggs, and Welch W. Nossaman.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 525.)

This case is governed by the decision in United States v. Biggs, ante, 305.

[No. 288.]

Argued December 16, 17, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment quashing an indictment for a conspiracy to defraud the United States. Affirmed.

Solicitor General Hoyt and Attorney General Bonaparte argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edwin W. Lawrence, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Clyde C. Dawson and Charles J. Hughes, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error.

For contentions of counsel, see their briefs as reported in United States v. Biggs, ante, 305.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

In this case the court below quashed an indictment, and a writ of error direct from this court is prosecuted on behalf of the United States, upon the theory by which it prosecuted the writ in the case of United States v. Biggs, No. 289, just decided. [211 U. S. 507, ante, 305, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181] the case presented by the record, omitting references to irrelevant distinctions in the form of the pleadings is like that in the Biggs Case, and is controlled and disposed of by the opinion just announced therein. Affirmed.

ALBERT H. RUSCH, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JOHN DUNCAN LAND & MINING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 526-529.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — equal protection of the laws — tax titles.

The grantee in a tax deed cannot claim to have been denied due process of law or the equal protection of the laws by Mich. Pub. Laws 1897, act No. 229, requiring the giving of notice to the original owners in order to cut off the right of redemption, on the theory that, by the proceedings under the tax laws, the state acquired an absolute title, which it conveyed by the tax deed, and that the statute operated to divest such title and transfer it to another, where the highest state court holds that, whatever

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

On due process of law in tax proceedings—see note to Read v. Dingess, 8 C. C. A. 398.

title the state held, it sold only an interest which was subject to redemption.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. a, 4; IV. b, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 53.]

Argued December 14, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court of Gogebic County, in that state, dismissing the bill in a suit to remove a cloud on title caused by a tax deed. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. O. H. Reed argued the cause, and, with Mr. E. C. Chapin, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. J. F. Carey argued the cause, and, with Mr. C. C. Lancaster, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity, brought by defendant in error, hereinafter called the land and mining company, against plaintiff in error, in the circuit court for the county of Gogebic, state of Michigan, to remove a cloud from the title to certain lands, caused by a tax deed held by plaintiff in error, and to compel a reconveyance to that company of the land described therein.

The foundation of the suit and the questions in it depend upon the tax laws of the state.

The bill alleged that the land and mining company was the owner in fee simple of the lands, and that Albert H. Rusch, the plaintiff in error here, held a tax deed therefor, issued by the auditor general of the state, for delinquent taxes for the years 1889 to 1901, both inclusive, for which plaintiff in error paid the sum of $648.74. That the deed was issued after the provisions of act No. 229 of the Laws of 1897 went into effect, and that the notice given by plaintiff in error to the owners of the land of the sale to him did not comply with the provisions of the tax law. It was alleged that plaintiff in error claimed absolute title to the land by virtue of the tax deed and the notice which he claimed to have served upon the then owners of the lands, because the six months allowed for redemption had expired and no redemption had been made. An offer by the land and mining company to refund the amount paid by plaintiff in error, with the percentage and costs required by the laws, is alleged.

The answer of plaintiff in error admitted certain of the allegations of the bill, denied others, and set up, with a recitation of circumstances, the sufficiency of the notice to cut off the right of redemption of the owners of the lands. And it alleged that the act No. 229 of the Public Laws of 1897, with the amendments thereto, violated certain sections of the Constitution of the state of Michigan and the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

After proofs taken, the circuit court dismissed the bill. The court held that the notice given by plaintiff in error to the predecessors in title of the land and mining company of the sale of the lands for taxes and the issuing of deeds therefor was sufficient, under the statute, to cut off the right of redemption, and considered that, in view of such holding, it was not necessary to pass on the constitutionality of act No. 229. The supreme court of the state, however, decided that the notice was insufficient and reversed the decree of the circuit court. Plaintiff in error then sued out this writ of error, asserting jurisdiction in this court, because he contends a question under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States is presented.

It will be observed that the circuit court held that the notice of the tax sale was sufficient and that the supreme court decided that it was insufficient. Of course, the decision of the supreme court is determinative, and equally, of course, if there is nothing else in the case but a matter of statutory construction, we have nothing to do with it. And that such is the case a brief statement will demonstrate.

528] *In August, 1902, plaintiff in error purchased from the state, under the provision of its statutes, tax titles to the lands involved in this case, receiving two deeds therefor, one conveying a portion of the lands and the other conveying the remainder. Each deed contained the following proviso: "Provided, however, that this indenture is subject to the relevant conditions imposed by act No. 229 of the Public Acts of 1897, as amended." That act requires the grantee in a tax deed, before instituting proceedings to obtain possession, to serve upon the original owner, as shown by the records in the office of the register of deeds, a notice, giving such original owner a period of six months from the time of service of the notice in which he may redeem the property by paying to the owner of the tax title the amount invested therein, and 100 per cent in addition thereto, and the further sum of $5 for each description of land contained in the tax deed. Plaintiff in error attempted to give that notice, and its sufficiency constituted the controversy in the state courts.

The trial court held it sufficient, as we have seen; the supreme court held it insufficient. The decision of the supreme court would seem to settle the meaning of the statute, and, to get rid of the effect of the decision, plaintiff in error attacks the constitutionality of the statute. He is put thereby in the dilemma of attacking the law upon which he relies for title. The argument by which this anomaly is sought to be sustained is somewhat involved, but, as we understand it, its ultimate reliance is the contention that, by the proceedings under the tax laws, the state acquired the absolute title to the lands, and conveyed that title to plaintiff in error, and that the aim of act No. 229 is to divest such title and transfer it to another; and therefore it is further contended the property of the plaintiff in error is taken without due process of law. There is also a contention, based upon the construction of the laws, that they are unequal in their operation.
53 L. ed.

If the title was taken subject to redemption, it cannot be said to be divested without due process of law if redemption *was[529 exercised according to law. And how redemption should be exercised and how it could be cut off depended upon the provisions of the statute; and, therefore, the best answer to the assumption of plaintiff in error, that he acquired an indefeasible title, is the answer given by the supreme court of the state, whose province it is to pronounce the meaning of the statutes of the state without question by this court. The court said: "The deeds which the defendant received from the state are expressly made subject to the relevant conditions imposed by act No. 229, Public Acts of 1897, as amended. Whatever the title which the state held, it sold to defendant [plaintiff in error] an interest in the lands which was liable to be divested." And the court sustained the bill and ordered a decree to be entered in accordance with its prayer.

Judgment affirmed.

OSCAR REID, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 529-539.)

Error to district court — amount in dispute.

The limitation with reference to the amount in dispute, prescribed by the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 754), for appeals from or writs of error to a Federal district court sitting as a court of claims,

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of circuit or district courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

remains in force, notwithstanding the provision of the circuit courts of appeals act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488), § 14, that "all acts and parts of acts relating to appeals or writs of error inconsistent with the provisions for review by appeals or writs of error in the preceding §§ 5 and 6 of this act are hereby repealed." [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. 1, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 552.]

Argued December 11, 14, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment dismissing a suit against the United States for pay alleged to be due to the petitioner as an enlisted man in the regular Army. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 161 Fed. 469.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Chase Mellen argued the cause, and, with Mr. Francis Woodbridge, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. George B. Davis, Judge-Advocate-General of United States Army, filed a brief as amicus curiæ.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit for $122.26, alleged to be due to the plaintiff in error as an enlisted man in the regular Army from November 16, 1906, to July 18, 1907, when his term of service expired. The plaintiff in error was one of the members of Companies B, C, and D, of the First Battalion of the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry, who were discharged without honor by order of the President on the forme^d date, without trial, after certain disturbances in Brownsville, Texas, in which the order averred members of those companies to have participated. The petition alleges that the plaintiff in error had no part in the disturbance and no knowledge as to who was concerned in it, and denies the power of the President to make such a discharge. The answer, after certain preliminaries, suggests for a second defense that the district court has no jurisdiction, by reason of the act of March 3, 1887, chap. 359, § 2, 24 Stat. at L. 505, as amended by the act of June 27, 1898, chap. 503, § 2, 30 Stat. at L. 494, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 753, which provides that the jurisdiction conferred "shall not extend to cases brought to recover fees, salary, or compensation for official services of officers of the United States," etc. For a third defense the answer alleges the investigations that were made, the reported impossibility of identifying the culprits unless the soldiers would take it in hand or turn state's evidence, the President's belief that the crimes under consideration were committed by a considerable group of the members of the regiment, and that the greater part of the regiment must know who were the guilty men, and the issuing of the order in consequence, not as a punishment, but for the good of the service; and affirms that it was in accordance with precedent. The third defense was demurred to, the demurrer was sustained, the petition was dismissed on the merits, and this writ of error was brought.

*As the case comes here on the merits, [537 and not on a certificate under the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, § 5, 26 Stat. at L. 827, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549, the first question that we have to consider is the jurisdiction of this court; and, on this point, without going further, we must yield to the argument submitted, although not urged, on behalf of the United States. The jurisdiction of the district court is derived from the act of March 3, 1887, chap. 359, § 3, 24 Stat. at L. 505, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 754, by which it is made concurrent with that of the court of claims when the amount of the claim does not exceed $1,000, and that of the circuit court is made concurrent for amounts between one thousand and ten thousand dollars. By § 4, the right of appeal "shall be governed by the law now in force," and by § 9, the plaintiff or the United States, in any suit brought under the provisions of the act, "shall have the same rights of appeal or writ of error as are now reserved in the statutes of the United States in that behalf made." This meant the same right of appeal as was given from the court of claims (United States v. Davis, 131 U. S. 36, 33 L. ed. 93, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657); so that it hardly admits of doubt that, when that statute went into effect, an appeal or writ of error under it by a claimant demanding less than $3,000 would have been dismissed. Rev. Stat. § 707, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 574. See Strong v. United States, 40 Fed. 183.

The real question is whether this limitation is done away with or qualified by the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, §§ 5, 6, and 14, 26 Stat. at L. 826, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488. By § 14, "all acts and parts of acts relating to appeals or writs of error inconsistent with the provisions for review by appeals or writs of error in the preceding sections five and six of this act are hereby repealed." By § 5, writs of error may be taken from the district courts direct to this court when the jurisdiction of the court is in issue, the question of jurisdiction alone being certified; in which case no other question is open. United States v. Larkin, 208 U. S. 333, 340, 52 L. ed. 517, 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417. That clause does not apply here. The only other clauses of § 5 that are or could be relied upon are, "in any case that involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States." "In any case in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States . . . is drawn in question." The latter may be dismissed as having no bearing, although it was mentioned, so that the possible application of § 5, and the consequent inference that the former limitations on the right to come to this court are repealed, so far as this case is concerned, depend on the suggestion in the petition that, by his discharge, the plaintiff was deprived of his property without due process of law.

We shall not discuss that suggestion, because we are of opinion that, in any event, the repealing words that we have quoted do not apply to the special jurisdiction of the district court sitting as a court of claims. Suits against the United States can be maintained, of course, only by permission of the United States, and in the manner and subject to the restrictions that it may see fit to impose. Kawananakoa v. Polyblank, 205 U. S. 349, 353, 51 L. ed. 834, 836, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526. It has given a restricted permission, and has created a pattern jurisdiction in the court of claims, with a limited appeal. The right to take up cases from that court by writ of error still is limited as heretofore. It would not be expected that a different rule would be laid down for other courts that, for convenience, are allowed to take its place, when originally the rule was the same. It does not seem to us that Congress has done so unlikely a thing. The act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, 26 Stat. at L. 826, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488, is dealing with general, not special, jurisdiction. It has been decided in some cases of special jurisdiction that there is an implied exception to almost equally broad words in the same act. United States v. Dalcour, 203 U. S. 408, 51 L. ed. 248, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58. Congress, when its mind was directed to the specific question, determined for all courts what the amount must be before the grace of the sovereign power would grant more than one hearing. It has not changed that amount for the usual case. A change looking to the ordinary business of the courts should not be held to embrace that, merely on the strength of words general enough to include it, when the policy of the repealing law, and the policy of the law alleged to be repealed, have such different directions, and when it appears that the general policy of the latter still is maintained. The limitation with reference to amount unquestionably remains in force for the district court in cases outside of the act of 1891, § 5, as well as for the court of claims. In our opinion, the act of 1891, § 5, was not intended to create exceptions, when no such exceptions exist for the court of claims.

We observe that the plaintiff in error gives a hint at dissatisfaction with the government for raising this point. But jurisdiction is not a matter of sympathy or favor. The courts are bound to take notice of the limits of their authority, and it is no part of the defendant's duty to help in obtaining an unauthorized judgment by surprise.

Writ of error dismissed.

JOHN McLEAN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF ARKANSAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 539-552.)

Constitutional law — liberty of contract — police power.

1. The liberty of contract secured by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., against state invasion, is not infringed by the provision of Ark. Acts 1905, chap. 219, § 1, under which miners employed at quantity rates are prevented from contracting for wages upon the basis of screened coal instead of the weight of the coal as originally produced in the mine, but such statute is a valid exercise of the police power.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 605-607, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — classification.

2. The exemption of coal mines not employing ten or more men from the operation of Ark. Acts 1905, chap. 219, § 1, under which miners employed at quantity rates are prevented from contracting for wages upon the basis of screened coal instead of the weight of the coal as originally produced in the mine, does not render such statute invalid under U. S. Const., 14th Amend., as denying the equal protection of the laws.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

As to the constitutionality of statutes restricting contracts and business—see note to State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 340-342, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 29.]

Argued and submitted November 30, 1908.

Decided January 4, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Circuit Court of Sebastian County, in that state, for screening coal before it has been weighed and credited to the miner sending it to the surface. Affirmed.

See same case below, 81 Ark. 304, 98 S. W. 729, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 72.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Daniel B. Holmes argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The act violates the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution by restricting the right to contract, by taking property without due process of law, by unlawful discrimination, and by denying to certain operators and workers in coal mines the right of civil liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L.R.A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Re Morgan, 26 Colo. 415, 47 L.R.A. 52, 77 Am. St. Rep. 269, 58 Pac. 1072; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; State v. Haun, 61 Kan. 146, 47 L.R.A. 369, 59 Pac. 340; Ramsey v. People, 142 Ill. 380, 17 L.R.A. 853, 32 N. E. 364; State v. Wilson, 61 Kan. 32, 47 L.R.A. 71, 58 Pac. 981; Re House Bill No. 203, 21 Colo. 27, 39 Pac. 432; Whitebreast Fuel Co. v. People, 175 Ill. 51, 51 N. E. 853; Kellyville Coal Co. v. Harrier, 207 Ill. 624, 99 Am. St. Rep. 240, 69 N. E. 927; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 316, 21 L.R.A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L.R.A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L.R.A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; Ex parte Kubach, 85 Cal. 274, 9 L.R.A. 482, 20 Am. St. Rep. 226, 24 Pac. 737; Massie v. Cessna (Oct. 26, 1908; Ill.) People ex rel. Tyroler v. Warden, 157 N. Y. 116, 43 L.R.A. 264, 68 Am. St. Rep. 763, 51 N. E. 1011; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 757, 28 L. ed. 591, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Lochner

v. New York, 198 U. S. 57, 49 L. ed. 941, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1133; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Live Stock Dealers' & Butchers' Asso. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 1 Abb. (U. S.) 388, Fed. Cas. No. 8,408; Re Aubrey, 36 Wash. 308, 104 Am. St. Rep. 952, 78 Pac. 900, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 927; Horwich v. Walker-Gordon Laboratory Co. 205 Ill. 497, 98 Am. St. Rep. 254, 68 N. E. 938; Crescent Liquor Co. v. Platt, 148 Fed. 902; Ruhstrat v. People, 185 Ill. 133, 49 L.R.A. 181, 76 Am. St. Rep. 30, 57 N. E. 41; Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. State, 160 Ind. 379, 62 L.R.A. 136, 66 N. E. 1005; Frank L. Fisher Co. v. Woods, 187 N. Y. 90, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 707, 79 N. E. 837.

The act is clearly unconstitutional and void because of the classification which it adopts of operators and laborers in mines where ten or more men are employed underground, leaving operators and laborers in all other coal mines free to make their own bargains and contracts for labor therein.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; State v. Haun, supra; State ex rel. Wyatt v. Ashbrook, 154 Mo. 375, 48 L.R.A. 265, 77 Am. St. Rep. 765, 55 S. W. 627.

Mr. James Brizzolara submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. Henry L. Fitzhugh and William F. Kirby were on the brief:

Legislation for the prevention of fraud in weights and measures dates from the earliest period of English history.

Freund, Pol. Power, §§ 272-275.

The Arkansas screen law is substantially the same as, we might say almost identical with, the statutes of several other states. The same law has been enforced for many years in Missouri, Kansas, Indiana, West Virginia, and in several other states.

State v. Peel Splint Coal Co. 36 W. Va. 802, 17 L.R.A. 385, 15 S. E. 1000; State v. Wilson, 61 Kan. 34, 47 L.R.A. 71, 58 Pac. 981; Woodson v. State, 69 Ark. 521, 65 S. W. 465.

The purpose of these statutes being to furnish a reliable means upon which to base the miner's compensation, and to protect him in the payment for all coal he mines, he not only has the right to have it justly and honestly weighed in the original form in which he loaded it, but he has the right also to have a true record kept of it.

Snyder, Mines, § 1675.

Many statutes which go much further than this in abridging the liberty of contract have been sustained by courts of last resort.

Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. ed. 1002, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821; Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 46 L. ed. 55, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Re Considine, 83 Fed. 157; Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 39 L. ed. 657, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Pierce v. Kimball, 9 Me. 54, 23 Am. Dec. 537; State v. Moore, 104 N. C. 714, 17 Am. St. Rep. 696, 10 S. E. 143.

If the Arkansas screen law was passed for the purpose of preventing fraud, or to secure some reliable means upon which to base the minor's compensation, or to promote the public convenience or the general prosperity, and has a tendency to accomplish all or any of such purposes, it is a valid exercise of the police power, though not purporting to deal with the public health, morals, or safety.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175; Bacon v. Walker, 204 U. S. 311, 51 L. ed. 499, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

The legislature has the right to discriminate between different classes of corporations and individuals.

Freund, Pol. Power, §§ 721-738; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Budd v. New York, 143 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 247, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Mason v. State, 179 U. S. 328, 45 L. ed. 214, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Fidelity & C. Co. v. Freeman, 54 L.R.A. 680, 48 C. C. A. 692, 109 Fed. 847; Ford v. Chicago Milk Shippers' Asso. 155 Ill. 166, 27 L.R.A. 298, 39 N. E. 651; Harding v. American Glucose Co. 182 Ill. 551, 64 L.R.A. 738, 74 Am. St. Rep. 189, 55 N. E. 577; Re Oberg, 21 Or. 406, 14 L.R.A. 577, 28 Pac. 130; State ex rel. Chandler v. Main, 16 Wis. 399; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 606, 29 L. ed. 229, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989; Sullivan v. Haug, 82 Mich. 548, 10 L.R.A. 263, 46 N. W. 795; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; 53 L. ed.

New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 391, 38 L. ed. 757, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Lowe v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 81, 41 L. ed. 78, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 133, 24 L. ed. 86.

Equal protection is not denied where the law operates alike upon all persons similarly situated.

Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; State v. Schlemmer, 42 Ia. Ann. 1166, 10 L.R.A. 135, 8 So. 307; State v. Moore, supra; Ex parte Swann, 96 Mo. 44, 9 S. W. 10; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 32, 28 L. ed. 925, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 709, 28 L. ed. 1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 585, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Kentucky R. Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 282, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

Plaintiff in error would argue that it is just as important for the protection of employees that the hoisting ropes used in mines employing nine men should be examined daily as in one employing eleven men. The same argument could be made with reference to fencing shafts and covering cages. These statutes have all been sustained as a legitimate exercise of the police power of the state for the protection of the employees.

Hancock v. Yaden, 121 Ind. 366, 6 L.R.A. 576, 16 Am. St. Rep. 396, 23 N. E. 253; Smith v. State, 90 Tenn. 575, 18 S. W. 248; Consolidated Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

The legislature must decide when the exigency exists, and the courts cannot set aside a statute for the reason that it may be, in their opinion, unwise or unnecessary.

Dow v. Beidelman and Bacon v. Walker, supra.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This proceeding is brought to review the judgment of the supreme court of Arkansas (81 Ark. 304, 98 S. W. 729), affirming a conviction of the plaintiff in error for violation of a statute of the state of Arkansas, entitled "An Act to Provide for the *Weigh-[543] ing of Coal Mined in the State of Arkansas as It Comes from the Mine, and before It Is Passed over a Screen of Any Kind." The act provides:

"Sec. 1. It shall be unlawful for any mine owner, lessee, or operator of coal mines in this state, where ten or more men are employed underground, employing miners at bushel or ton rates, or other quantity, to pass the output of coal mined by said miners over any screen or any other device which shall take any part from the value thereof, before the same shall have been weighed and duly credited to the employee sending the same to the surface, and accounted for at the legal rate of weights fixed by the laws of Arkansas; and no employee, within the meaning of this act, shall be deemed to have waived any right accruing to him under this section by any contract he may make contrary to the provisions thereof, and any provisions, contract, or agreement between mine owners, lessees, or operators thereof, and the miners employed therein, whereby the provisions of this act are waived, modified, or annulled, shall be void and of no effect, and the coal sent to the surface shall be accepted or rejected; and, if accepted, shall be weighed in accordance with the provisions of this act; and right of action shall not be invalidated by reason of any contract or agreement; and any owner, agent, lessee, or operator of any coal mine in this state, where ten or more men are employed underground, who shall knowingly violate any of the provisions of this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $200 nor more than $500 for each offense, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not less than sixty days, nor more than six months, or both such fine and imprisonment; and each day any mine or mines are operated thereafter shall be a separate and distinct offense; proceedings to be instituted in any court having competent jurisdiction." (Acts 1905, chap. 219, § 1.)

The case was tried upon an agreed statement of facts, as follows:

544] "That the Bolen-Darnall Coal Company is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of Missouri, and is also doing business under the laws of the state of Arkansas, and has complied with the laws of Arkansas permitting foreign corporations to transact and do business within said state.

"It is further agreed that John McLean, defendant, is the managing agent of the said Bolen-Darnall Coal Company, and, as such, has charge of the coal mine of said company situated near Hartford, in Sebastian county, Arkansas.

"It is further agreed that the said Bolen-Darnall Coal Company employs more than ten men to work underground in its mine situated near Hartford, of which the said John McLean is agent and manager.

"It is further agreed that the said Bolen-Darnall Coal Company, by and through said John McLean, as its agent and manager, did, on the 19th day of June, 1906, in Greenwood district of said Sebastian county, employ one W. H. Dempsey and others, coal miners, to mine coal underground in said mine by the ton at the rate and price of 90 cents per ton for screened coal, and that the said John McLean, in the said district and county, did knowingly pass the output of coal, so mined and sent up from underground by the said W. H. Dempsey and others, over a screen, according to and as provided by a contract between it and the said Dempsey and others, and paid the said Dempsey and others for only the coal that passed over said screen, according to and as provided under the contract, and paid or allowed them nothing for the coal which passed through said screen, part of the value of said coal having passed through said screen, which part of said coal was not weighed or accredited to the said Dempsey and others, and for which they received no pay; said coal not having been weighed or accredited to the said Dempsey or others before the same was passed over said screen, as provided for by the statutes of Arkansas.

It is further agreed that more than ten men were employed and did work under said employment underground in mining coal for the said Bolen-Darnall Coal Company, in said mine aforesaid, at said time; and it is also agreed that there are coal mines in said state and county operated by both corporations and individuals in which less than ten men are employed underground by the ton and bushel rates.

"It is further agreed that the said John McLean did violate the provisions of § 1, act No. 219, duly passed by the legislature of Arkansas in 1905, which law went into operation and became effective on the 1st day of April, 1906, as hereinabove set out, and the only question herein raised being the validity of said act of the legislature aforesaid, under the law and facts herein."

The objections to the judgment of the state supreme court of a constitutional nature are twofold: First, that the statute is an unwarranted invasion of the liberty of contract secured by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States; second, that the law, being applicable only to mines where more than ten men are employed, is discriminatory, and deprives the plaintiff in error of the equal protection of the laws, within the inhibition of the same Amendment.

That the Constitution of the United States, in the 14th Amendment thereof, protects the right to make contracts for the sale of labor, and the right to carry on trade or business, against hostile state legislation, has been affirmed in decisions of this court, and we have no disposition to question those cases in which the right has been upheld and maintained against such legislation. Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277. But, in many cases in this court, the right of freedom of contract has been held not to be unlimited in its nature, and when the right to contract or carry on business conflicts with laws declaring the public policy of the state, enacted for the protection of the public health, safety, or welfare, the same may be valid, notwithstanding they have the effect to curtail or limit the freedom of contract. It would extend this opinion beyond reasonable limits to make reference to all the cases in this court in which qualifications 546] of the right of freedom of contract have been applied and enforced. Some of them are collected in Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383, in which it was held that the hours of work in mines might be limited.

In Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 46 L. ed. 55, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, it was held that an act of the legislature of Tennessee, requiring the redemption in cash of store orders or other evidences of indebtedness issued by employers in payment of wages due to employees, did not conflict with any provisions of the Constitution of the United States, protecting the right of contract.

In Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 39 L. ed. 657, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586, the act of Congress prohibiting attorneys from contracting for a larger fee than $10 for prosecuting pension claims was held to be a valid exercise of police power.

In Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730, a statute of California, making it unlawful for employees to work in laundries between the hours of 10 P. M. and 6 A. M. was sustained.

The statute fixing maximum charges for the storage of grain, and prohibiting contracts for larger amounts, was held valid. Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77.

In Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 47 L. ed. 1002, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821, this court held that an act of Congress making it a misdemeanor for a shipmaster to pay a sailor any part of his wages in advance was held to be valid.

In Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633, this court summarized the doctrine as follows:

"Regulations respecting the pursuit of 53 L. ed., a lawful trade or business are of very frequent occurrence in the various cities of the country, and what such regulations shall be and to what particular trade, business, or occupation they shall apply, are questions for the state to determine, and their determination comes within the proper exercise of the police power by the state; and, unless the regulations are so utterly unreasonable and extravagant in their nature and purpose that the property and personal rights of the citizen are unnecessarily, and in a manner wholly arbitrary, interfered with or destroyed *without due[547 process of law, they do not extend beyond the power of the state to pass, and they form no subject for Federal interference."

In Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 49 L. ed. 643, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765, this court said:

"The liberty secured by the Constitution of the United States to every person within its jurisdiction does not import an absolute right in each person to be, at all times, and in all circumstances, wholly freed from restraint. There are manifold restraints to which every person is necessarily subject for the common good."

It is, then, the established doctrine of this court that the liberty of contract is not universal, and is subject to restrictions passed by the legislative branch of the government in the exercise of its power to protect the safety, health, and welfare of the people.

It is also true that the police power of the state is not unlimited, and is subject to judicial review; and, when exerted in an arbitrary or oppressive manner, such laws may be annulled as violative of rights protected by the Constitution. While the courts can set aside legislative enactments upon this ground, the principles upon which such interference is warranted are as well settled as is the right of judicial interference itself.

The legislature, being familiar with local conditions, is, primarily, the judge of the necessity of such enactments. The mere fact that a court may differ with the legislature in its views of public policy, or that judges may hold views inconsistent with the propriety of the legislation in question, affords no ground for judicial interference, unless the act in question is unmistakably and palpably in excess of legislative power. Jacobson v. Massachusetts, supra; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 320, 34 L. ed. 455, 458, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Atkin v. Kansas, 191 U. S. 207, 223, 48 L. ed. 148, 158, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124.

If the law in controversy has a reasonable relation to the protection of the public health, safety, or welfare, it is not to be set aside because the judiciary may be of opinion that the act will fail of its purpose, or 548]because it is thought to be an *unwise exertion of the authority vested in the legislative branch of the government.

We take it that there is no dispute about the fundamental propositions of law which we have thus far stated; the difficulties and differences of opinion arise in their application to the facts of a given case. Is the act in question an arbitrary interference with the right of contract, and is there no reasonable ground upon which the legislature, acting within its conceded powers, could pass such a law? Looking to the law itself, we find its curtailment of the right of free contract to consist in the requirement that the coal mined shall not be passed over any screen where the miner is employed at quantity rates, whereby any part of the value thereof is taken from it before the same shall have been weighed and credited to the employee sending the same to the surface; and the coal is required to be accounted for according to the legal rate of weights, as fixed by the law of Arkansas, and contracts contrary to this provision are invalid. This law does not prevent the operator from screening the coal before it is sent to market; it does not prevent a contract for mining coal by the day, week, or month; it does not prevent the operator from rejecting coal improperly or negligently mined, and shown to be unduly mingled with dirt or refuse. The objection upon the ground of interference with the right of contract rests upon the inhibition of contracts which prevent the miner employed at quantity rates from contracting for wages upon the basis of screened coal instead of the weight of the coal as originally produced in the mine.

If there existed a condition of affairs concerning which the legislature of the state, exercising its conceded right to enact laws for the protection of the health, safety, or welfare of the people, might pass the law, it must be sustained; if such action was arbitrary interference with the right to contract or carry on business, and having no just relation to the protection of the public within the scope of legislative power, the act must fail.

While such laws have not been uniformly 549]sustained when *brought before the state courts, the legislatures of a number of the states have deemed them necessary in the public interests. Such laws have been passed in Illinois, West Virginia, Colorado, and perhaps in other states. In Illinois they have been condemned as unconstitutional. Ramsey v. People, 142 Ill. 380, 17

L.R.A. 853, 32 N. E. 364. The same conclusion has been reached in Colorado, citing and following the Illinois case, Re House Bill No. 203, 21 Colo. 27, 39 Pac. 431.

In West Virginia, while at first sustained by a unanimous court, such an act was afterwards, upon rehearing, maintained by a divided court. State v. Peel Splint Coal Co. 36 W. Va. 802, 17 L.R.A. 385, 15 S. E. 1000.

We are not disposed to discuss these state cases. It is enough for our present purpose to say that the legislative bodies of the states referred to, in the exercise of the right of judgment conferred upon them, have deemed such laws to be necessary.

Conditions which may have led to such legislation were the subject of very full investigation by the industrial commission authorized by Congress by the act of June 18, 1898. 30 Stat. at L. 476, chap. 466. Volume 12 of the report of that commission is devoted to the subject of "Capital and Labor Employed in the Mining Industry." In that investigation, as the report shows, many witnesses were called and testified concerning the conditions of the mining industry in this country, and a number of them gave their views as to the use of screens as a means of determining the compensation to be paid operatives in coal mines. Differences of opinion were developed in the testimony. Some witnesses favored the "run of the mine" system, by which the coal is weighed and paid for in the form in which it is originally mined; others thought the screens useful in the business, promotive of skilled mining, and that they worked no practical discrimination against the miner. A number of the witnesses expressed opinions, based upon their experience in the mining industry, that disputes concerning the introduction and use of screens had led to frequent and sometimes heated controversies between the operators and the miners. This condition was *testified to have been[550 the result, not only of the introduction of screens as a basis of paying the miners for screened coal only, but, after the screens had been introduced, differences had arisen because of the disarrangement of the parts of the screen, resulting in weakening it, or in increasing the size of the meshes through which the coal passed, thereby preventing a correct measurement of the coal as the basis of paying the miner's wages.

We are unable to say, in the light of the conditions shown in the public inquiry referred to, and in the necessity for such laws, evinced in the enactments of the legislatures of various states, that this law had no reasonable relation to the protection of a large class of laborers in the receipt of their just dues and in the promotion of the harmonious relations of capital and labor engaged in a great industry in the state.

Laws tending to prevent fraud and to require honest weights and measures in the transaction of business have frequently been sustained in the courts, although, in compelling certain modes of dealing, they interfere with the freedom of contract. Many cases are collected in Mr. Freund's book on "Police Power," wherein that author refers to laws which have been sustained, regulating the size of loaves of bread when sold in the market; requiring the sale of coal in quantities of 500 pounds or more, by weight; that milk shall be sold in wine measure, and kindred enactments. § 274.

Upon this branch of the case it is argued for the validity of this law that its tendency is to require the miner to be honestly paid for the coal actually mined and sold. It is insisted that the miner is deprived of a portion of his just due when paid upon the basis of screened coal, because, while the price may be higher, and theoretically he may be compensated for all the coal mined in the price paid him for screened coal, that practically, owing to the manner of the operation of the screen itself, and its different operation when differently adjusted, or when out of order, the miner is deprived of payment for the coal which he has actually 551]mined. It is not denied that the *coal which passes through the screen is sold in the market. It is not for us to say whether these are actual conditions. It is sufficient to say that it was a situation brought to the attention of the legislature, concerning which it was entitled to judge and act for itself in the exercise of its lawful power to pass remedial legislation.

The law is attacked upon the further ground that it denies the equal protection of the law, in that it is applicable only to mines employing ten or more men. This question is closely analogous to one that was before this court in the case of Consolidated Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616, wherein an inspection law of the state was argued to be clearly unconstitutional by reason of its limitation to mines where more than five men are employed at any one time, and in that case, as in this, it was contended that the classification was arbitrary and unreasonable,—that there was no just reason for the discrimination. Of that contention this court said (p. 207):

"This is a species of classification which the legislature is at liberty to adopt; provided it be not wholly arbitrary or unreasonable, as it was in Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30, in which an act defining what should constitute public stock yards, and regulating all charges connected therewith, was held to be unconstitutional, because it applied only to one particular company, and not to other companies or corporations engaged in a like business in Kansas, and thereby denied to that company the equal protection of the laws. In the case under consideration there is no attempt arbitrarily to select one mine for inspection, but only to assume that mines which are worked upon so small a scale as to require only five operatives would not be likely to need the careful inspection provided for the larger mines, where the workings were carried on upon a larger scale or at a greater depth from the surface, and where a much larger force would be necessary for their successful operation. It is quite evident that a mine which is operated by only five men could scarcely have passed the experimental stage, or that precautions necessary in the operation *of coal mines of ordi- [552 nary magnitude would be required in such cases. There was clearly reasonable foundation for a discrimination here."

This language is equally apposite in the present case. There is no attempt at unjust or unreasonable discrimination. The law is alike applicable to all mines in the state employing more than ten men underground. It may be presumed to practically regulate the industry when conducted on any considerable scale. We cannot say that there was no reason for exempting from its provisions mines so small as to be in the experimental or formative state, and affecting but few men, and not requiring regulation in the interest of the public health, safety, or welfare. We cannot hold, therefore, that this law is so palpably in violation of the constitutional rights involved as to require us, in the exercise of the right of judicial review, to reverse the judgment of the supreme court of Arkansas, which has affirmed its validity. The judgment of that court is affirmed.

Dissenting: Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Peckham.

B. H. HARDAWAY and R. P. Prowell, Doing Business as Hardaway & Prowell, Appts.,

v.

NATIONAL SURETY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 552-562.)

Bonds — of public contractor — subcontractor — sureties.

1. Persons who, in view of the financial embarrassment of a public contractor, un-undertake to superintend the completion of a public work and to furnish the necessary funds, for which they are to be paid by an assignment of the reserve fund in the hands of the government and by checks or payments under the original contract, are not subcontractors furnishing labor and materials for the fulfilment of such original contract, so as to be entitled to the protection of the bond executed pursuant to the act of August 13, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 280, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523), conditioned for the prompt payment by the original contractors to all persons supplying them with labor or materials in the prosecution of the work.

[For other cases, see Bonds, II. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bonds — of public contractor — extent of surety's liability.

2. A surety on the bond of a public contractor is not liable on a claim for labor and materials furnished by the assignees of the contract, where the contract of assignment obligates the assignor only to assign the reserve fund in the hands of the government, and to turn over the checks or payments under the original contract.

[For other cases, see Bonds, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Subrogation — right of surety.

3. The right of a surety for a government contractor to be subrogated, in case of loss, to the contractor's right to the reserve fund in the hands of the government, representing work done prior to an assignment of the contract, is superior to any rights of the assignees.

[For other cases, see Subrogation, IV. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 44.]

Argued December 8, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Kentucky, denying a recovery against the surety on a bond to secure the performance of a public contract. Affirmed.

See same case below, 80 C. C. A. 283, 150 Fed. 465.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Temple Bodley and John Bryce Baskin argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. Manly Foster and W. B. Oliver, filed a brief for appellants:

NOTE.—As to the right of sureties on contractor's bond, who perform contract on abandonment by contractor, to moneys unpaid on contract, as against assignees or creditors of contractors—see case note to Labbe v. Bernard, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 457.

On the doctrine of subrogation generally—see note to German Bank v. United States, 37 L. ed. U. S. 564.

Agreeing to pay the cost of the work plus 15 per cent instead of a lump sum does not destroy the subcontract feature of the arrangement.

Wetzel & T. R. Co. v. Tennis Bros. Co. 75 C. C. A. 266, 145 Fed. 458, 7 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 426.

Superintending the work was supplying labor.

Flagstaff Silver Min. Co. v. Cullins, 104 U. S. 176, 26 L. ed. 704; Central Trust Co. v. Richmond, N. I. & B. R. Co. 54 Fed. 728; Tennis Bros. Co. v. Wetzel & T. R. Co. 140 Fed. 193.

Money loaned to a contractor to be used in procuring labor and materials, and so used, may be recovered from the contractor's surety.

Prairie State Nat. Bank v. United States, 164 U. S. 227, 41 L. ed. 412, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Henningsen v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. 74 C. C. A. 484, 143 Fed. 812.

The construction placed upon an ambiguous contract by the parties is an aid which may always be called in.

Knox County v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 100, 37 L. ed. 96, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267.

Even if the contract of February 5, 1901, be treated as an assignment to Coyne of the government contract, or as substituting him for his firm, the surety is still bound.

United States use of Hill v. American Surety Co. 200 U. S. 197, 50 L. ed. 437, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; City Trust, S. D. & Surety Co. v. United States, 77 C. C. A. 397, 147 Fed. 155; United States use of Vermont Marble Co. v. Burgdof, 13 App. D. C. 506; Adams v. Haigler, 123 Ga. 659, 51 S. E. 638; Kaufmann v. Cooper, 46 Neb. 645, 65 N. W. 796; Abbott v. Morrisette, 46 Minn. 10, 48 N. W. 416; Leader Printing Co. v. Lowry, 9 Okla. 89, 59 Pac. 242; Drumheller v. American Surety Co. 30 Wash. 530, 71 Pac. 25.

Where contractors engage a subcontractor, and labor and materials are supplied to him, this is the same in effect as supplying labor and materials to the chief contractors. That is to say, the labor thus supplied to the contractor, being by or through the remote procurement of the chief contractors, must be deemed to have been supplied to such chief contractors.

United States use of Hill v. American Surety Co. supra.

Where labor and materials are furnished by third parties, though not subcontractors, with the consent of the chief contractors, it is the same in effect as supplying the chief contractors.

Mullin v. United States, 48 C. C. A. 677, 109 Fed. 819.

Messrs. William W. Watts and Henry Flitts argued the cause, and, with Mr. William J. Griffin, filed a brief for appellee:

Hardaway & Prowell's agreement with Coyne expressly eliminated the financial resources of Willard and Cornwell, as a barrier between the surety and ultimate loss. In event of loss, appellants agreed to stand without recourse as against at least two of the three principals in the bond. That this novation released the surety is elementary.

1 Brandt, Suretyship, 3d ed. p. 286; 1 Lindley, partn. 2d Am. ed. pp. 245, 267; Child. Suretyship & Guaranty, p. 209; Byers v. Hickman Grain Co. 112 Iowa, 451, 84 N. W. 500; Prior v. Kiso, 81 Mo. 250; State v. Boon, 44 Mo. 254; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bowler, Holmes, 263, Fed. Cas. No. 3,106; Cremer v. Higginson, 1 Mason, 323, Fed. Cas. No. 3,383; Bill v. Barker, 16 Gray, 62.

The surety for the performance of the engagement of a firm is released if there be any change in its membership unless he agrees to remain bound.

1 Brandt, Suretyship, p. 829; Crescent Brewing Co. v. Handley, 90 Ala. 486, 7 So. 912; White sewing Mach. Co. v. Hines, 61 Mich. 423, 28 N. W. 157; Parham Sewing Mach. Co. v. Brock, 113 Mass. 194; Dupee v. Blake, 143 Ill. 453, 35 N. E. 867.

Recovery against the surety is unconscionable.

United States use of Heise v. American Bonding & T. Co. 89 Fed. 921.

If appellants were subcontractors, they were such for a fixed price, which has been paid.

Prairie State Nat. Bank v. United States, 164 U. S. 227, 41 L. ed. 412, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Henningsen v. United States Fidelity & G. Co. 74 C. C. A. 484, 143 Fed. 810.

This claim is an analogy to the claim of the bank which lent money for the purpose of paying for work and material, and even, under the arrangement, went so far as to pay money direct to the laborer, and to take up the labor check as evidence of payment. That bank was held not to be protected by the terms of the bond.

United States use of Fidelity Nat. Bank v. Rundle, 52 L.R.A. 505, 46 C. C. A. 251, 107 Fed. 227.

The object of the bond is to require the surety to secure the payment for the visible material that was furnished for direct use and incorporated in that work, and the payment of wages to the men whose services were directly employed in doing the work. Thereby the surety had a direct conception of his liability. He was not compelled to see to it that money borrowed or advanced to aid in the prosecution of the work should be repaid.

United States v. Kimpland, 93 Fed. 406.

While the bond creates an obligation in personam, and not a right in rem; and rights under it are to be worked out under principles fixing or discharging personal liability (Sears v. Mahoney, 66 Fed. 860), yet, in determining what persons are intended to be made obligees in the second aspect of the bond, we may inquire to what persons the mechanics' lien is extended.

It has been uniformly held that no lien can be had for money loaned, with which material was purchased, or labor paid, in favor of the lender.

20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 349; Godeffroy v. Caldwell, 2 Cal. 489, 56 Am. Dec. 360; Williams v. Bradford (N. J. Ch.) 21 Atl. 331; International Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Fortassain (Tex. Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 496; Gaylord v. Loughridge, 50 Tex. 573; First Municipality v. Bell, 4 La. Ann. 121; Hamilton v. Stillwaugh, 11 Ohio C. C. 182.

Nor can a lien be had in favor of one who lends his credit to another to enable him to purchase materials.

20 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 349.

A person who advances money to a vendee to pay for land is not entitled to the vendor's lien, even though the vendee may have promised him such, or he may have taken a mortgage or a note reciting the alleged existence of such lien.

29 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 749; Chapman v. Abrahams, 61 Ala. 108; Jones v. Kennedy, 138 Ala. 502, 35 So. 465.

A statutory lien on steamboats for work done or material furnished does not extend to a claim for money loaned to the master, to be applied by him in discharge of debts which were a statutory lien upon the vessel.

The James Battle v. Waring, 39 Ala. 180.

An officer of a corporation, who, without any obligation on his part, and merely to befriend laborers employed by the company, advances the amount of their wages without an assignment of their claims, cannot be subrogated to such liens. Nor will a merchant who pays store orders given to workmen for their wages be subrogated to a preferred claim for wages, conferred upon such workmen by statute.

27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 257.

A person who advances rent on land to a tenant will not be subrogated to the landlord's lien in the absence of any agreement for subrogation.

Gerson v. Norman, 111 Ala. 433, 20 So. 453; Bostick v. Ammons, 63 S. C. 302, 41 S. E. 310.

A person advancing money to a married woman for the purchase of necessities is not subrogated to the favored position of the person furnishing such necessities.

Skinner v. Tirrell, 159 Mass. 474, 21 L.R.A. 673, 38 Am. St. Rep. 447, 34 N. E. 692.

While the doctrine of subrogation has been evolved from the judicial conscience for the purpose of putting one man in another's place, to avoid certain conditions of hardship, this doctrine has never been applied to a mere volunteer in paying another's debts or lending another money; such volunteer having suffered no hardships from the universality of the common law.

Prairie State Nat. Bank v. United States, supra; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Middleport, 124 U. S. 534, 31 L. ed. 537, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Greenville Sav. Bank v. Lawrence, 22 C. C. A. 646, 42 U. S. App. 179, 76 Fed. 545; Sheldon, Subrogation, § 240. See also Central Trust Co. v. Bridges, 6 C. C. A. 539, 16 U. S. App. 115, 57 Fed. 774.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, affirming a decree of the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Kentucky, whereby the appellants Hardaway and Prowell were denied the right to recover against the appellee, the National Surety Company, as surety for the faithful performance of a certain contract entered into on September 28, 1899, between the United States and a firm of contractors composed of James E. Willard, Charles L. Cornwell, and Joseph Coyne, doing business as Willard & Cornwell. The contract was for the construction of a lock and dam No. 4, in the Black Warrior river, near Tuscaloosa, Alabama. Bond was given in accordance with the requirements of the act of Congress approved August 13, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 278, chap. 280, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2523), in order to secure the faithful performance of the contract.

The contract has been kept so far as the United States is concerned, and the surety is relieved from obligation in that respect. The contention in this case involves the construction and application of that condition 554] of the bond which requires *the contractors to "promptly make full payment to all persons supplying them labor or materials in the prosecution of the work, provided for in said contract."

The question for consideration here is, under the circumstances of the case, can Hardaway and Prowell recover upon the bond on their claim as for labor done and material furnished within the terms thereof? The record discloses that the original contractors carried on the work until February 5, 1901, when they made an agreement between themselves and Coyne, by which agreement Coyne was to pay the debts of the firm, to make all future purchases in his own name, and to receive all profits from the contract. After February 5, 1901, Coyne carried on the work. The government made the checks payable to Willard and Cornwell as before, in accordance with the terms of the contract. On June 2, 1903, Coyne, having become financially unable to complete the contract, made a contract in writing with Hardaway and Prowell, which we shall hereinafter set out in full, concerning the work.

Owing to freshets and washouts, as is contended by appellants, it became necessary to do over much of the work, and after its completion appellants made a claim for $32,757.34 interest included to March 1, 1906, and included therein $7,556, being 15 per cent of the cost expended on the contract with Coyne.

On October 24, 1904, the National Surety Company, appellee, filed a bill in the United States court at Louisville, averring the insolvency of the contractors, and that there would be a loss for labor and material which it would be compelled to pay as surety on the bond, asking for an injunction and the appointment of a receiver. On November 8, 1904, an order was made, referring the case to a special master, and providing that parties having claims for labor and materials might prove the same, with the right to contest them, and to take the proofs thereof as in equity cases. The order provided that appellee, the surety company, should pay into court, in satisfaction of the claims and costs of action, such *a sum as might be required after the[555 government payments were exhausted.

The claim of Hardaway and Prowell was filed. A special master allowed the claim. Upon error, the circuit court disallowed the same, and, upon appeal to the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, the decree was affirmed. 80 C. C. A. 283, 150 Fed. 465. The case then came here.

The case turns upon the construction of the contract between Coyne and Hardaway and Prowell. The contract reads as follows:

State of Alabama, Tuscaloosa county:

This contract, made this 2d day of June, 1903, by and between B. H. Hardaway and R. P. Prowell, hereinafter called Hardaway & Prowell, as parties of the first part, and Joseph Coyne, as party of the second part, witnesseth:

That, whereas, Willard & Cornwell, a firm composed of J. E. Willard, C. R. Cornwell and the said Joseph Coyne, did, heretofore on, to wit, the — day of —, 1899, enter into a contract with the United States for the construction of lock No. 4 in the Black Warrior river above Tuscaloosa, Alabama, and whereas, shortly after the beginning of the work upon said lock the said Joseph Coyne, by an arrangement between him and his copartners, undertook to complete and finish said lock according to the specifications of the contract of said firm with the United States, and, in consideration of such an undertaking, acquired the beneficial interest of said firm in said contract, and was to receive all amounts paid by the United States in consideration of such contract, and whereas said lock is still uncompleted, and the said Joseph Coyne cannot, on account of his inability to procure the necessary financial aid, and on account of the disorganization of his labor forces, and for various and sundry other reasons, complete and finish the said work in accordance with the said contract, and whereas said contract is a valued asset to the said Joseph Coyne if the said work can be prosecuted to 556]its *completion under the terms of said contract, there being held in reserve by the government, under the terms of said contract, about $8,300, which has already been earned by said Coyne, and whereas, by reason of his said inability to finish said work, the said contract is about to be forfeited, and the said Coyne is in imminent danger of losing, not only what profits may be made upon the completion of the work, but the entire reserve fund also retained by the government, and whereas the said Joseph Coyne, for the purpose of preventing the forfeiture of said contract, has made overtures to the said Hardaway & Prowell to take up said work and complete it, and the said Hardaway & Prowell have agreed to do so upon the terms and stipulations hereinafter set forth; now, therefore,

1. The said Hardaway & Prowell do hereby undertake and agree with the said Joseph Coyne to superintend the completion of the said lock and dam No. 4 and to furnish the necessary finances for the completion thereof, and to put in charge of said work a competent superintendent, and to properly organize the work for an energetic prosecution thereof to completion, for which services they are to receive an agreed compensation of 15 per cent upon the total cost of completing said contract, which total cost shall be construed to include all amounts necessarily expended and expenses incurred by Hardaway & Prowell in the completion of said work and all amounts necessarily paid and expenses incurred by them to effect a settlement with and an acceptance of said lock and dam by the United States.

53 L. ed.

2. The said Joseph Coyne agrees to the above compensation for Hardaway & Prowell, and further agrees to turn over to them entire charge of the completion of said work, and not to interfere with them in any way in the prosecution of said work to completion, and further agrees to turn over to the said Hardaway & Prowell the entire outfit of machinery, tools, etc., which he now has at said lock and dam and the quarries where he is getting stones, and to give the use of the same to them for the completion of said work, free of any charge.

*3. The said Joseph Coyne further[557 agrees to have all checks for each estimate upon said work forwarded by the government to the said Hardaway & Prowell, and to properly indorse such checks, so that they may be collected by Hardaway & Prowell.

4. It is further agreed by all parties hereto that, out of the proceeds of the checks referred to in the next foregoing paragraph, the obligations shall be paid preferentially in the following order:

1. The compensation of the said Hardaway & Prowell, as herein agreed, for their services.

2. All moneys advanced by Hardaway & Prowell, and used in the prosecution of said work.

3. All debts necessarily incurred by the said Hardaway & Prowell for the prosecution of said work, other than debts for labor and material.

4. All debts incurred by said Hardaway & Prowell for labor and material or moneys advanced by them in payment for labor or material debts.

5. The said Joseph Coyne, for the completion of said work and for the securing to the said Hardaway & Prowell all amounts that they shall have to pay, on whatever account, for the completion of said lock and dam, and for a settlement with the United States and acceptance of said lock and dam by the proper authorities of the government, does hereby assign and set over to the said Hardaway & Prowell all his interest in the amount, aggregating, as aforesaid, about $8,300, retained and now held in reserve by the government under the said contract for the building of said lock and dam, which shall be applied by the said Hardaway & Prowell in the following order:

1. To the payment of all debts for labor and material incurred in the building of said lock and dam.

2. Any balance that may be due to said Hardaway & Prowell for their compensation under this contract.

3. All other necessary debts incurred in the prosecution *of the said work by[558 Hardaway & Prowell, and all amounts, including expenses, which they shall have to pay in order to effect a settlement with the government, and acceptance by it of said lock and dam.

4. Any balance to be paid to the said Joseph Coyne.

6. It is understood and agreed by all parties hereto that if the said Joseph Coyne should, at any time, fail or be unable to turn over to the said Hardaway & Prowell the checks for estimates on said work, properly indorsed, so that Hardaway & Prowell can collect them, or should fail to secure the collection of them by the said Hardaway & Prowell, then the said Hardaway & Prowell shall, in that event, have the option of annulling said contract, and stopping work without notice to the said Joseph Coyne, or to any other parties whomsoever; but, in said event, the said Hardaway & Prowell shall have a claim against the said Joseph Coyne for all moneys furnished by them and expenses incurred by them upon any account whatsoever in the prosecution of said work, and which shall not have been repaid to them, and for all compensation earned under this contract, and not paid to them, and such claim shall be due and payable at once upon their termination of the contract.

In witness whereof the said parties of the first and second parts have hereunder set their hands and seals in duplicate this, the day and year first above written.

B. H. Hardaway.

R. P. Prowell.

Attest: C. B. Verner. Joseph Coyne.

It is said that the master sustained the claim of Hardaway and Prowell upon authority of the case of United States v. American Surety Co. 200 U. S. 197, 50 L. ed. 437, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168. In that case this court held that the obligation of a bond similar to the one here in suit, when construed in the light of the statute requiring its execution, and looking to the protection of those who supply labor and materials provided for in the original contract, [559] was broad enough to include *laborers who had performed work for a subcontractor who furnished labor or material which the original contractor had obligated himself to furnish. It was held that, in such a case, the original contractor, who employed a subcontractor, who bought materials or hired labor with which to carry out and fulfil the engagement of the original contract for the construction of a public building, was thereby supplied with materials and labor for the fulfilment of his contract as effectually as if he had directly hired the labor or bought the materials. We are unable to see how that case controls the one at bar; nor can we reach the conclusion that Hardaway and Prowell were subcontractors furnishing labor or materials to the original contractor, or furnishing such labor or materials to subcontractors which enabled the original contract to be fulfilled, thereby bringing themselves within the principles of the Hill Case. As we read this contract, Hardaway and Prowell, in view of Coyne's financial and other difficulties, undertook to do certain things in relation thereto. They undertook to superintend the completion of the lock and dam, and, to that end, to furnish the necessary finances for the completion of the work; for this they were to receive an agreed percentage upon the total cost upon the completion of the contract.

Coyne, on his part, agreed that such compensation should be paid, and agreed to turn over the charge of the work to Hardaway and Prowell, and not to interfere therewith in any way, and to give them the use of his outfit and tools, etc., and the quarries from which he was taking stone for the construction of the lock and dam. He agreed to have the checks given by the government, upon estimates, forwarded to Hardaway and Prowell, and to properly indorse such checks so as to make them collectible by them.

The manner in which Hardaway and Prowell should distribute the money received from such checks is specifically provided in paragraph 4 of the contract. By the fifth paragraph Coyne assigned to Hardaway and Prowell for the completion of the work, and for security to Hardaway & Prowell, *for the amount which they should [560] have to pay on all accounts for the completion of the work and for a settlement with the United States and acceptance of said lock and dam by the proper authorities, all of his interest in $8,300, retained and held in reserve by the government under the contract, which was to be applied by Hardaway and Prowell, 1st, for the payments of debts for labor and materials; 2d, any balances due to Hardaway and Prowell for their compensation under the contract; 3d, all other necessary debts incurred in the prosecution of the work by Hardaway and Prowell, and all amounts which they shall be obliged to pay in order to effect a settlement with the government, and acceptance by it of said lock and dam; 4th, any balance to go to Coyne.

The sixth paragraph of the contract made provision for the possibility that Hardaway and Prowell should not receive payment of the checks coming from the government, in which event they should have the right, at their option, of annulling the contract and stopping the work. In that contingency they should have a claim against Coyne for money furnished by them on account of the prosecution of the work, and for all compensation earned under the contract.

Hardaway and Prowell bound themselves to furnish superintendence and to furnish the money to complete the work which Coyne had undertaken to do. These things were all that Hardaway and Prowell undertook to do; they were not subcontractors, in our view, who undertake to furnish labor and materials upon a contract with the original contractor. The extent of the agreement was to furnish funds to complete the work, and to superintend it. For this they were to be paid by the assignment of the reserve funds in the hands of the government and the checks or payments under the original contract. There was no undertaking on the part of the surety company that the contract should be profitable to its principal or to any other substituted in the contract by assignment or otherwise. The surety did agree, by the terms of the bond, that the original contractors should make 561] full payment to all persons *supplying them with labor and materials in the prosecution of the work. This was for the protection of the subcontractors and others supplying such labor and materials for the fulfillment of the original agreement, as we held in the Hill Case.

We agree with the circuit court of appeals that Coyne entered into no agreement to pay Hardaway and Prowell beyond the assignment of the checks from the government and the assignment of the reserved $8,300. This is shown by the terms of the agreement, read in the light of the circumstances surrounding the parties at the time the contract was made. Coyne had failed to complete the contract, and was financially embarrassed. Hardaway and Prowell looked to the assignment of the reserve fund from Coyne and the payments from the government for their commissions, not to the personal liability of Coyne. Coyne was to be personally liable only in the event that Hardaway and Prowell should fail to realize on the government checks, as provided in paragraph 6 of the contract. As the claim of Hardaway and Prowell set up in this case must be worked out against the surety because of the liability of the principal in the bond to them, and as there is no such liability either from Willard and Cornwell or Coyne to them, there can be no recovery against the surety on the bond.

Nor do we think that Hardaway and Prowell can complain of the disposition of the $8,300 (exactly $8,161.75), reserved payments under the contract. This sum was paid into court for work done previous to the making of the contract of June 2, 1903. 80 C. C. A. 291, 150 Fed. 473. The circuit 53 L. ed.

court of appeals held that this sum, thus paid into court, should be credited upon the $13,261.76, which the surety company had been directed to pay into court for the satisfaction of labor claims which had been proved and allowed in the case. The right of the surety to be subrogated had attached to the fund, and was superior to any rights which Hardaway and Prowell had as assignees of Coyne. Prairie State Nat. Bank v. United States, 164 U. S. 227, 41 L. ed. 412, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142. *We think[562 this was the correct view. We find no error in the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the same is affirmed.

EDWARD MURPHY, 2d, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JOHN HOFMAN COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 562-574.)

Bankruptcy — conflicting jurisdiction — possession of res.

1. Goods in the possession of a receiver in bankruptcy cannot be seized on a writ of replevin from a state court on the theory that the receiver is holding the goods as an individual, and not as receiver, where the only circumstance tending to support such theory is that, pending the settlement of a dispute over the title, and for no other reason than that the dispute existed, the goods in question were not included in the schedule of the property of the bankrupt filed by the receiver.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — conflicting jurisdiction — possession of the res.

2. The vacation by a court of bankruptcy of its order enjoining any interference under process from a state court with certain property then in the possession of the receiver in bankruptcy cannot be deemed an abandonment by the court of bankruptcy of its possession of the property, and a turning over of such property to be dealt with by the state court, where, in the meantime, there had been various dealings with the property by the bankruptcy court, including a sale by the trustee in bankruptcy. [For other cases, see Bankruptcy, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 33.]

Argued December 1, 2, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

NOTE.—On the exclusiveness of jurisdiction acquired by the appointment of a receiver—see note to Re Schuyler's Steam Towboat Co. 20 L.R.A. 391.

On jurisdiction as affected by possession of the subject-matter—see notes to Adams v. Mercantile Trust Co. 15 C. C. A. 6, and Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 356.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of New York to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of that state, Fourth Department, affirming a judgment of the Supreme Court in and for the County of Monroe, in favor of plaintiff in an action of replevin. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 187 N. Y. 548, 80 N. E. 1111.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Herbert D. Bailey argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The bankrupt's actual possession of this property at the inception of the bankruptcy proceedings, and its delivery thereof to the receiver, as a part of its property, rendered it the duty of the receiver not only to take, but to hold, the property pending an order of the Federal court as to its disposition.

Re Schermerhorn, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507; White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1007, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; Sharpe v. Doyle, 102 U. S. 686, 26 L. ed. 277, reversing 74 N. Y. 156; Re Rochford, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; Whitney v. Wenman, 198 U. S. 539, 49 L. ed. 1157, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45; Re Leeds Woolen Mills, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136; Gluck & B. Receivers, 389, 390; Alderson, Receivers, 329; Stanley v. Schwalby, 147 U. S. 508, 37 L. ed. 259, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

The Federal court having found the property in the possession of the bankrupt, who claimed it, had exclusive jurisdiction, and having by its orders disposed specifically of the property prior to October 11, 1904, on notice to the Hofman Company, its disposition was effectual and conclusive. The state court was without jurisdiction to review, modify, or disturb the disposition made by the Federal court.

White v. Schloerb and Whitney v. Wenman, supra; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. ed. 841; Riggs v. Johnson County (United States ex rel. Riggs v. Johnson County) 6 Wall. 166, 18 L. ed. 768; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union, S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. ed. 257; Rio Grande R. Co. v. Gomila (Rio Grande R. Co. v. Vinet) 132 U. S. 478, 33 L. ed. 400, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Dowell v. Aplegate, 152 U. S. 327, 38 L. ed. 463, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Covell v. Heyman, 111

U. S. 176, 28 L. ed. 390, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 15 L. ed. 1028; Re Watts, 190 U. S. 1, 47 L. ed. 933, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Wiswall v. Sampson 14 How. 52, 14 L. ed. 322; Feibelman v. Packard, 109 U. S. 421, 27 L. ed. 984, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Sharpe v. Doyle, 102 U. S. 686, 26 L. ed. 277; Ex parte City Bank, 3 How. 292, 11 L. ed. 603.

Mr. John A. Barhite argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The bankruptcy act nowhere gives exclusive jurisdiction to the United States courts to determine questions between receivers and trustees in bankruptcy and adverse claimants. The right of the United States court to administer property which comes into its possession must rest upon the principle, where it applies, that property once in the possession of a court will be administered by that court, and not taken from its possession by some other court.

Cook v. Whipple, 55 N. Y. 150, 14 Am. Rep. 202; Peck v. Jenness, 16 N. H. 516, 43 Am. Dec. 581; State v. University, 65 N. C. 719; Clafin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130, 134, 23 L. ed. 833, 837; Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, 525, 23 L. ed. 403, 405; Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 537, 44 L. ed. 1175, 1181, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000; Sharpe v. Doyle, 102 U. S. 686, 26 L. ed. 277; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. ed. 257.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to review a final judgment of the court of appeals of the state of New York in an action of replevin. The writ was allowed to the plaintiff in error, Murphy, but denied to the party joined with him, by the chief judge of that court while the record was still in its possession, and before it had been remitted [565] to the supreme court, in accordance with the practice of the state. A clear understanding of the questions before this court will be aided by a relation of the facts out of which the litigation arose. Such of them as do not bear upon the Federal questions may either be omitted or stated in a very general way.

The Dodge Dry Goods Company, a corporation, had contracted with the John Hofman Company, the defendant in error, for the construction and installation in the store of the Dodge Company of a lot of show cases. Shortly after the installation of the show cases, and before the contract price was paid, proceedings in bankruptcy against the Dodge Company were begun in the district court of the United States, and, on August 18, 1903, Edward Murphy, 2d, the plaintiff in error, was appointed by that court temporary receiver of the property of the alleged bankrupt. Thereupon the Hofman Company took the position that the show cases had never been accepted by the bankrupt, and that, although they had been used for some time in the business, title to them had not passed from the vendor. Accordingly, the Hofman Company, on August 20, 1903, demanded in writing the possession and delivery of the show cases from "Edward Murphy, 2d, Receiver, etc., of Dodge Dry Goods Company." Murphy declined to deliver up the property, saying that he was in possession as receiver. The order of the district court appointing the receiver recites the filing of the petition and affidavit, and directs the alleged bankrupt to show cause on the 6th of October, 1903, why a permanent receiver should not be appointed, and then directs that, pending the return of the order, the "alleged bankrupt be, and it hereby is, enjoined and restrained from making any transfer of any of its property and . . . all persons are enjoined and restrained from instituting and from prosecuting any and all suits and proceedings in any court against said alleged bankrupt and against any of its property . . . that 566]Edward Murphy, *2d, . . . be, and he hereby is, appointed temporary receiver of all the property, real and personal, and rights of action and demands due said alleged bankrupt, with power to collect and receive same and continue the business with the present employees." The order further directs that the receiver shall take immediate possession of the property of the bankrupt and carry on the business. On August 21, 1903, Murphy notified the president of the Dodge Company that he had been appointed receiver, and demanded possession of the property of the alleged bankrupt. The keys of the store were given to the receiver, and he took possession of the property in it, including the show cases, and continued the business. At that time the show cases were filled with goods, and they thenceforth were used by the receiver in the conduct of the business. Nothing at the time was said specifically about them, but shortly afterward the president of the Dodge Company informed the receiver that the title to the store was in the Century Mercantile Company, another corporation, and that, by the terms of the lease to the Dodge Company, the fixtures, including the show cases, became the property of the landlord on the bankruptcy of the tenant. The receiver then entered into negotiations with the counsel of the Century Mercantile Company, and it was agreed that the show cases should be omitted from the receiver's inventory, and the dispute as to the title to them between the receiver and the Century Mercantile Company should be referred to the decision of the bankrupt court. The situation then was this: The receiver was in possession of the stock of goods, engaged in conducting the business, and using the show cases in the business, claiming the right to do so because they were the property of the bankrupt. The receiver had been informed that there were two outstanding conflicting claims to the title of the show cases: first, that of the John Hofman Company, who manufactured and installed them, and claimed that the title had not passed to the bankrupt, but remained in the vendor; second, that of the Century Mercantile Company, who claimed that the title had *passed to the bank-[567 rupt, and that afterwards, by virtue of the terms of the lease of the store, title had been vested in it. The receiver disputed both claims, and, as we shall see hereafter, the dispute with the Century Mercantile Company was settled by the bankruptcy court in favor of the receiver. The John Hofman Company, however, failed to resort to the bankruptcy court for the adjudication of its claim, and began an action against "Edward Murphy, 2d, and Century Mercantile Company," by the service, on the 6th day of October, 1903, of a summons "to answer the complaint in this action," together with an affidavit in replevin and a requisition to replevy the show cases and a copy of an undertaking from the plaintiff accepted by the sheriff. It will be observed that Murphy was not described in the summons as receiver. On that day the sheriff went to the store, identified the show cases, and said with respect to each one, "I replevy this show case." He was requested by both defendants not to take them away. He did not move them, or lock up the store, or put a keeper in charge, and went away, leaving the show cases exactly as they were when he came in. On the 9th of October, 1903, the judge of the bankruptcy court, on the petition of the receiver, enjoined all further proceedings in the action of replevin until the further order of the court; enjoined the sheriff from executing any requisition in replevin of property in the possession of the receiver, and enjoined the sheriff and all other persons from interfering in any manner with the property then in the possession of the receiver. The John Hofman Company applied for an order vacating this injunction. The application remained pending for a year, owing to the illness of the district judge, and on October 11, 1904, the order of injunction was vacated. Three days later, on October 14, 1904, the sheriff removed the show cases from the store. In the meantime they had been sold at a trustee's sale of the property of the bankrupt.

Thereafter the defendants severally filed answers. Murphy set up in defense that at 568] the time of the service of summons *upon him he was in possession of the property as the receiver of the bankrupt; that he remained in possession as receiver until the adjudication of bankruptcy and the appointment of himself as a trustee, and that as trustee, under the order of the bankruptcy court, he sold the property, and the sale was duly confirmed. The issue made by the pleadings was this: The plaintiff in replevin demanded the property in dispute from Murphy as an individual. Murphy, on the other hand, asserted that he had no concern with the property except in his capacity as receiver; that is to say, as an officer of the court of bankruptcy. The burden rested upon the plaintiff to show, first, that the title had not passed from it to the Dodge Company,—a question purely of state cognizance; and, second, that the possession of Murphy of the show cases was not a possession as receiver in bankruptcy,—a question ultimately for Federal cognizance. There was a trial before a jury and a verdict for the plaintiff, without damages, which was successively affirmed by the appellate division of the supreme court and by the court of appeals. Neither court rendered an opinion.

Before going further it is well to ascertain the principles of law which are applicable to the situation. The bankrupt act of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418], as originally enacted, did not confer jurisdiction on the district courts of the United States over suits brought by trustees in bankruptcy to assert title to property as assets of the bankrupt, or to set aside transfers made by the bankrupt in fraud of the creditors or by way of preference, unless by consent of the defendant. Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 44 L. ed. 1175, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000; Frank v. Vollkommer, 205 U. S. 521, 51 L. ed. 911, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 596. The act, however, preserves the jurisdiction, otherwise existing by statute, of the courts of the United States, though it is limited to courts where the bankrupt himself could have prosecuted the action. Bush v. Elliott, 202 U. S. 477, 50 L. ed. 1114, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 668. But, where the property in dispute is in the actual possession of the court of bankruptcy, there comes into play another principle, not peculiar to courts of bankruptcy, but applicable to all courts, Federal 569] or state. Where a court of competent jurisdiction has taken property into its possession, through its officers, the property is thereby withdrawn from the jurisdiction of all other courts. The court, having possession of the property, has an ancillary jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions respecting the title, possession, or control of the property. In the courts of the United States this ancillary jurisdiction may be exercised, though it is not authorized *by any statute. The jurisdiction in such cases arises out of the possession of the property, and is exclusive of the jurisdiction of all other courts, although otherwise the controversy would be cognizable in them. Wabash R. Co. v. Adelbert College, 208 U. S. 38, 54, 52 L. ed. 379, 386, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182. Accordingly, where property was in the possession of the bankrupt at the time of the appointment of a receiver, it was held that the bankruptcy court had jurisdiction to determine the title to it as against an adverse claimant, and that the receiver had no right to deliver it to him without the order of the court. Whitney v. Wenman, 198 U. S. 539, 49 L. ed. 1157, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778. On the day the opinion in the Bardes Case was announced the same justice delivered the opinion of the court in White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1007, a case in which the facts were essentially those of the case at bar. Certain persons, copartners in trade, were adjudicated bankrupts and the case was sent to a referee in bankruptcy. They had a stock of goods in a store, the entrance to which was locked by the referee. Certain other persons claimed title to part of the stock of goods as obtained from them by a fraudulent purchase, which had been rescinded. After the adjudication, these persons brought an action of replevin of the goods against the bankrupt in a state court, which was executed. It was held that replevin would not lie in the state court, and that the district court had jurisdiction by summary proceedings to compel the return of the property seized. The court said: "The goods were then in the lawful possession of and custody of the referee in bankruptcy, and of the bankruptcy court, whose representative and substitute he was. Being thus in the custody of a court of the United States, they *could not be taken out of [570 that custody upon any process from a state court." The last two cases cited proceed upon and establish the principle that when the court of bankruptcy, through the act of its officers, such as referees, receivers, or trustees, has taken possession of a res, as the property of a bankrupt, it has ancillary jurisdiction to hear and determine the adverse claims of strangers to it, and that its possession cannot be disturbed by the process of another court. And see Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 85, 86, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885, 77 N. E. 790, and Frank v. Vollkommer, which, by implication, approve the same principle.

We think this principle was lost sight of in the trial of the case before us. We must assume in favor of the plaintiff in replevin that the replevin was completed on the 6th of October, 1903, when the sheriff identified the goods and, at the request of the defendant, left them in place in the store, and delivered to the defendants the undertaking, which apparently was accepted by them as good. If, at this time, the show cases were in the possession of the court of bankruptcy, that is to say, were in the possession of Murphy, as the receiver appointed by the court of bankruptcy, then, according to principle and in obedience to the express authority of White v. Schloerb, supra, the action of replevin in the state court cannot be maintained. Upon the undisputed facts, as they appeared at the trial, it is impossible to suppose that Murphy had any possession except as receiver. He had no personal interest in the affairs of the bankrupt, and no relation to its property except that created by his appointment to that office. There is but a single circumstance which points the other way, and to that circumstance reference presently will be made. The demand of the plaintiff in replevin for the delivery of the goods was made upon "Edward Murphy, 2d, Receiver," etc. The plaintiff introduced no evidence tending to show that Murphy had any possession except as receiver. When the evidence for the defendant came to be introduced the nature of Murphy's possession was more fully explained. James E. Dodge, president *of the Dodge Dry Goods Company, and manager of its business, testified that on the 21st day of August, 1903, Murphy called at the store and notified him of his (Murphy's) appointment as receiver, and demanded the possession of the assets of the Dodge Dry Goods Company. He says: "The property that I gave him possession of at that time was merchandise and fixtures in the store, also supplies and book accounts; all the property of the Dodge Dry Goods Company. And all the property that was in possession of the Dodge Dry Goods Company. And among the things I turned over to him were included these show cases that are the subject of this action. There was no exception made of the show cases.

. . . I handed him the keys of the store, and I told him its contents were the property of the Dodge Dry Goods Company. And these show cases were part of the contents at that time. There was no special mention made of the show cases at that time." Murphy testified that, at this interview, Dodge turned over to him the keys of the building, and showed him the property of the Dodge Dry Goods Company,—stock, dry goods, and merchandise,— complete store equipment, consisting of show cases, counters, etc. The show cases were then on the ground floor, and the goods were in them when they were turned over to him as receiver, and he continued to use the show cases in the performance of his duty as receiver, and claimed them as the property of the bankrupt. The defendant offered in evidence the order of the court of bankruptcy, made August 18, 1903, appointing him as receiver, and offered to show that it was exhibited to the sheriff at the time of the replevin. This order, which hereinbefore has been fully set forth, appointed Murphy "temporary receiver of all the property, real and personal," of the bankrupt, directed him to take immediate possession of all the property, and to carry on the business. This evidence was excluded, and we think the exclusion was clearly erroneous.

The plaintiff in replevin lays much stress upon one circumstance, as tending to show that Murphy was not in possession *of [572 the property as receiver, but as bailee of the Century Mercantile Company, and to that circumstance more particular attention must now be given. Murphy testified upon cross-examination that he did not include the show cases in the schedule filed by him as receiver, but this testimony must be considered in connection with the explanation which accompanied it. Dodge originally had owned the store and had leased it to the Dodge Dry Goods Company, of which he was president. The lease contained a provision that, upon the bankruptcy of the dry goods company, the fixtures, including the show cases, should become the property of the owner of the store. The store subsequently was conveyed to the Century Mercantile Company, of which Dodge was also president. After the stock in trade, including the show cases, had been turned over to Murphy as receiver, Dodge, acting in behalf of the Century Mercantile Company, made a demand upon him for the fixtures and show cases, basing his demand upon the provision in the lease. Just how long after the delivery of possession to Murphy this demand was made is not clear, but it is enough to say that the demand was subsequent to the delivery. Murphy declined to yield to this demand, and agreed with counsel for the Century Mercantile Company that the dispute should be decided by the court of bankruptcy. The defendant offered to show that subsequently the court decreed that the provision in the lease was void, and that the fixtures, including the show cases, were the property of the bankrupt. This evidence was excluded, and, we think, erroneously. It tended, in connection with other evidence, to show the nature of Murphy's possession, and that he was insisting upon his right as receiver, and had not accepted the goods personally as bailee of the Century Mercantile Company. Pending the settlement of the dispute, and for no other reason than that the dispute existed, the show cases were omitted from the inventory. The facts which have been recited deprived this omission of all significance as showing that Murphy had any other possession than as receiver.

573] *At the trial Murphy relied upon his possession as receiver to defeat the action. His answer had set up that defense, and in many ways, which it would be unprofitable to set forth in detail, he sought to avail himself of it. It is enough to say that, at the conclusion of the evidence, the court was requested to direct a verdict for the defendant Murphy, upon the grounds, among others, "that the plaintiff has not shown itself entitled to possession at the time of the commencement of the action, but has shown that the then present right of possession was in the United States court;" and "the plaintiff has not shown that the property was in the possession of the defendant Murphy, but that it was in the possession of the United States court;" and "this court had no jurisdiction over the subject-matter of this action when it was commenced." The judge presiding at the trial refused, under exception, to give any of these instructions, and submitted the case to the jury in a charge which made no reference to the rights of Murphy as receiver, or to the possession of the property by him as an officer of the court of bankruptcy, other than to say, "as the case then stood, Mr. Murphy was claiming this property as the receiver of the Dodge Company." The judge instructed the jury that, if they should find that the show cases furnished by the Hoffman Company had not been accepted by the Dodge Company, then the title failed to pass and the verdict must be for the plaintiff. Thus the whole Federal question, so far as it was a question of fact, was withdrawn from the consideration of the jury. Subsequently, after a colloquy with the defendant's counsel, in which he stated that Murphy made no claim as an individual to the property in dispute, and did not ask its return to him, the judge, against the objection and under the exception of Murphy, peremptorily directed a verdict for the plaintiff. We do not set forth that colloquy in full, although it is much relied upon by the defendant in error. While the statements of counsel were confused, we think that what was said by him amounted to nothing more than an assertion that Murphy had had no relation to the property 574]*except as receiver, and that his possession as receiver entitled him to claim for the property thus possessed and controlled an immunity from the process of the state court.

But one other question needs any attention. It has been seen that the injunction against proceedings in the state court in this case, granted by the judge of the bankruptcy court on October 9, 1903, was vacated about a year later. The reason for this does not appear in the record. The Hofman Company, however, relies upon this vacation of the order of injunction as an abandonment by the court of bankruptcy of its possession of the property, and a turning over of it to be dealt with by the state court. We cannot give to the order vacating the injunction this meaning. If it has any tendency whatever to show an abandonment of possession, it is fully explained by much evidence of a dealing with the property by the bankruptcy court, some of which was excluded at the trial.

On the whole case, we are of the opinion that the seizure of these goods on a writ of replevin from another court was an unlawful invasion of the possession of the court of bankruptcy, which cannot be justified by the assertion, entirely unsupported by the evidence, that Murphy was then holding the goods, not as an officer of the court, but as an individual. For this reason the judgment is reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

*E. J. PAGE and Robert Markert, Ex-[575 ecutors of Thomas Merriam, Deceased, Appts.,

v.

H. F. ROGERS, Trustee of I. B. Merriam, Bankrupt.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 575-581.)

Appeal — review of facts — concurrent findings.

1. Concurrent findings of facts of the two courts below in a suit in equity will be accepted by the Federal Supreme Court, on appeal, unless error is clearly shown.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4931-4959, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — unlawful preference.

2. The avoidance, as an unlawful preference, of a conveyance by an insolvent debtor to a creditor in satisfaction of the debts due the latter, or those for which he is liable, cannot be defeated on the theory that such conveyance was in performance of an agreement between the parties, antedating the bankruptcy proceedings by more than four months, where the contract in fact was merely an agreement on the part of the bankrupt and his co-owner to sell, and, on the part of the creditor and another, to buy, at a named price, and such contract and a deed drawn in pursuance of its terms were never delivered, but were deposited in escrow, and never became operative instruments.

NOTE.—On avoidability of a transfer within four months' period, pursuant to executory agreement antedating that period—see note to Godwin v. Murchison Nat. Bank, 17 L.R.A. (N.S.) 935.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — unlawful preference.

3. A trust deed never delivered as a present, valid, and subsisting obligation cannot excuse a payment by the grantor on the indebtedness covered by such deed, which payment otherwise would be invalid under the bankruptcy law as an unlawful preference. [For other cases, see Bankruptcy, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — provable claims — effect of compulsory surrender of preference.

4. A creditor of a bankrupt, who has been compelled to surrender an unlawful preference, is entitled to prove his claim, and to receive a dividend on it upon an equality with the other creditors.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, 349-357, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — amount — compelling surrender of unlawful preference.

5. A court of bankruptcy, in entering judgment compelling a creditor to surrender an unlawful preference, should permit the creditor to prove his claim against the bankrupt estate, and deduct from the amount of the preference which he is required to surrender the dividend which the court finds is coming to him.

[Amount of judgment, see Judgment, II. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 39.]

Argued December 3, 4, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee, compelling the surrender of a preference received by a creditor in violation of the bankruptcy law. Reversed and remanded to the District Court with directions to modify the amount of the judgment.

See same case below, 79 C. C. A. 153, 149 Fed. 194.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frank Spurlock argued the cause, and, with Messrs. E. J. Page, Louis L. Waters, and Foster Brown, filed a brief for appellants.

Mr. J. B. Sizer argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George D. Laneaster and Robert Pritchard, filed a brief for appellee.

53 L. ed.

*Mr. Justice Moody delivered the [576] opinion of the court:

This is an appeal in equity from a decree of the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit. The suit was begun by the appellee, the trustee of the estate of I. B. Merriam, a bankrupt, against Thomas Merriam, to recover a preference alleged to have been received by the latter in violation of the bankruptcy law. During the pendency of the suit the defendant died, and the executors of his will were admitted to defend. The plaintiff had a decree, which was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. There were findings of fact by the district court, concurred in by the circuit court of appeals. These findings, together with the undisputed facts, may be condensed and stated in narrative form.

I. B. Merriam had been engaged in business for some years as a wholesale grocer at Chattanooga, Tennessee. On the 1st day of June, 1903, he was considerably indebted and insolvent, and the defendant knew it. Much the larger portion of his indebtedness was to his brother, the defendant, Thomas Merriam, or to persons holding claims which Thomas Merriam had guaranteed by indorsement or otherwise. I. B. Merriam then had no assets of much value, with the exception of an undivided half interest in certain coal lands situated in Tennessee. On that day he conveyed his interest in the coal lands to Thomas Merriam, who agreed to pay therefor $65,000 in money and stock of the par value of $20,000 in the Tennessee Lumber & Coal Company, a corporation, to which Thomas Merriam immediately sold and conveyed the land. The purchase money, after the deduction of $7,400, used for the purpose of extinguishing encumbrances on the land, in pursuance of an agreement made at the time, was mainly devoted to the payment of the debt then due directly from I. B. Merriam to Thomas Merriam, and to the payment of other debts of I. B. Merriam for which Thomas Merriam was liable. At the same time, and as part of the same transaction, Thomas Merriam caused to be advanced to I. B. Merriam $10,000 additional upon the pledge of his stock in the Tennessee Lumber & Coal Com-[577] pany. The net result of the transaction was that I. B. Merriam received, as the consideration for the conveyance of his interest in the coal lands, $75,000 in cash and an equity of redemption of the pledged shares in the corporation. Of this $75,000, $61,000, by agreement, was applied either to the payment of the debt due to Thomas Merriam, or, on his demand, to the payment of debts for which he was liable. At the time of the conveyance and the making of the agreement stated Thomas Merriam had reasonable cause to believe that thereby his brother intended to give him a preference. The purpose and effect of the transfer was to give Thomas Merriam a greater percentage of his debt than could be obtained by other creditors of the same class. Indeed, the purpose and effect of the transfer was to pay Thomas Merriam in full and to exonerate him from all liability as guarantor, and its effect was to leave all other creditors with substantially nothing to meet their claims. Within a very few days after this transaction was completed I. B. Merriam filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt.

Upon the foregoing statement of facts it is indisputable that Thomas Merriam received a preference to the extent of $61,000, forbidden by the bankrupt law, and that it could be avoided and recovered by the trustee. We do not understand counsel for the defendant as disagreeing with this conclusion. Conceding it, however, counsel urged with great earnestness that the findings of fact in the two courts below were erroneous, and we were invited to consider the evidence again in that view. But the rule is well established that where two courts have concurred in findings of facts in a suit in equity, this court will accept those findings, unless clear error is shown. Dun v. Lumbermen's Credit Asso. 209 U. S. 20, 52 L. ed. 663, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335.

We are unable to discover any such error. On the contrary, every fact essential to constitute a preference was substantiated by the evidence. That being so we decline to subject to minute scrutiny the language of the court employed in discussing questions of fact. There is no reason for a re-578] view of the *evidence in detail. The circuit court of appeals has reviewed it satisfactorily in a convincing opinion, and we do not feel called upon to repeat the discussion.

There, however, should be a brief reference to two contentions of the defendant,—that the findings were influenced by erroneous views of the law. It is first said that there was error in law in confounding the individual debts of I. B. Merriam with the partnership debts of I. B. Merriam & Son, with the result that I. B. Merriam was found to be insolvent as an individual, while really he was solvent, as his individual assets exceeded his individual indebtedness. But there was no real partnership. I. B. Merriam & Son was simply the name under which I. B. Merriam conducted the whole-sale grocery business. The son was only an employee, receiving a salary, and had no interest whatever in the business. All the assets were owned and all the debts were owed by I. B. Merriam alone.

It is further said that I. B. Merriam agreed in writing, on November 15, 1902, to convey the coal lands to Thomas Merriam in satisfaction of the debts due to him or for which he was liable. It is, therefore, argued that, as the conveyance, on June 1, 1903, was in performance of this agreement, which antedated the bankruptcy proceedings by more than four months, it cannot be regarded as a preference.

The facts, however, do not raise the question which was argued. Upon a proper interpretation of the evidence we need not determine whether an insolvent debtor may make an agreement to convey a substantial portion of his assets to a favored creditor, keep that agreement secret for more than four months, and then execute it in fraud of the rights of his other creditors, in favor of a creditor who then has reasonable cause to believe that he is receiving a preference. Re Broadway Sav. Trust Co. 81 C. C. A. 58, 152 Fed. 152, and see Wilson Bros. v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 46 L. ed. 147, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74.

What actually occurred was that a contract in writing was made in November, 1902, between I. B. Merriam and his co-owner, parties of the first part, and Thomas Merriam and another, *parties of the[579 second part, whereby the parties of the first part agreed to sell and the parties of the second part agreed to buy the coal lands for a named price. Nothing whatever in this contract required that I. B. Merriam's share of the consideration should be paid to Thomas Merriam or on debts for which he was liable. Moreover, the contract, and a deed which was drawn in pursuance of its terms, were not delivered, but were deposited in escrow with a bank in Syracuse, New York, and never became operative instruments. Nothing more need be said of them, or of the question supposed to be raised.

When Thomas Merriam came to file his answer in the suit, he alleged, in substance, that several years before the conveyance, which has been referred to, and the adjudication in bankruptcy, which followed, I. B. Merriam had executed and delivered, for an expressed consideration of $35,000, a trust deed of the coal lands, which was intended to be a security to Thomas Merriam for loans which he had made or might make to his brother, up to that amount. This trust deed, as subsequently appeared by the evidence, was executed, but not registered. A registration of the deed was not required by the law of the state of Tennessee to make it a valid instrument inter partes. The defendant therefore contended that, so far as the payments from the purchase money of the coal lands were applied to the indebtedness secured by the trust deed, they were payments for the extinguishment of a valid, subsisting lien upon the land, fixed upon it more than four months before bankruptcy, and therefore not a preference. It may be assumed, without decision, that the payment within four months of bankruptcy of a mortgage older than four months, and valid inter partes, though unrecorded, cannot be a preference. There is no such case here. The trust deed was not delivered unconditionally, and the parties to it intended that it should go into effect as a lien only when it was registered, which was never done. The instrument, though actually written, was never delivered as a present, valid, and subsisting obligation. It was executed and 580] held in the possession of *the grantor, to be delivered and to become operative as a conveyance at some future time, which never arrived. It was written and held ready for instant use, but never actually used until brought forward to excuse a payment which otherwise would be an unlawful preference. In other words, the paper was not as much as an unrecorded deed; it was not a deed at all. Such, in effect, was the finding of both courts below, and we think it was warranted by the evidence. As has been said, the first reference to this paper was made by the defendant's answer, wherein it was alleged that the paper was a deed, executed and delivered. The plaintiff's general replication put in issue at least the existence of the deed and no amendment to the bill was needed.

The alternative ruling that the trust deed was invalid for want of good faith, and because it was agreed to be withheld from record to mislead and defraud creditors, may be disregarded. Therefore we need not consider whether the bill should have been amended to permit an attack on the deed as fraudulent.

What has been said disposes of every question made in the case, except one, which may be considered more advantageously after the form of the decree is noticed. There were two decrees in the cause. Their effect, taken together, as we understand them, is to order the defendant to pay into the court of bankruptcy the $61,000 received as a preference on June 1, 1903, with interest to the date of the rendition of the final decree, making the total amount to be paid $70,891.54. The theory upon which the decree proceeded was, that no greater sum should be required of the defendant than would be needed to meet the amount of the claims proved or provable against the bankrupt and the cost and expenses of the administration of the bankrupt estate, including fees of counsel for the trustee. As this amount exceeded that received by the defendant by way of preference, the decree exacted of him all that he had received. In computing the amount required to meet the expenses of administration a fee of $15,000, of counsel for the *trustee for their services to him in all[581 matters, including this litigation, was included. The defendant complains that this fee is exorbitant. It certainly appears to be large. It seems, however, that the proper place to raise this question would be in the bankruptcy court. In any event, we would be unwilling to reverse the judgment of the lower courts upon this question, in view of the fact that they have a much more intimate acquaintance with the services than we can possibly have. All that has been said would naturally lead to an affirmance of the decree. Nevertheless, we are of the opinion that it ought to be modified, for a reason not dwelt upon in argument. Now that this litigation has come to an end, and the defendant has been compelled to surrender the preference which he received, he is entitled to prove his claim and to receive a dividend on it upon an equality with other creditors. Keppel v. Tiffin Sav. Bank, 197 U. S. 356, 49 L. ed. 790, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443. In view of the fact that this suit was brought in the bankruptcy court itself, and a final decree is to be entered by the judge of that court, it is entirely practicable to avoid the circuitous proceeding of compelling the defendant to pay into the bankruptcy court the full amount of the preference which he has received, and then to resort to the same court to obtain part of it back by way of dividend. The defendant may be permitted, if he shall be so advised, to prove his claim against the estate of the bankrupt, and the bankruptcy court then may settle the amount of the dividend coming to him, and the final decree may direct him to pay over the full amount of his preference, with interest, less the amount of his dividend. Solely for the purpose of accomplishing this result, the final decree in the case is reversed and the case remanded to the district court to take proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Decree reversed.

*GREEN COUNTY, Kentucky, Petitioner,
v.

MARY AMIS QUINLAN, Executrix of the Last Will and Testament of Leonard Q. Quinlan, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 582-598.)

Bonds — railway aid — condition precedent.

1. A condition imposed by a vote of a county, authorizing a bond issue in aid of railroads, that such bonds shall not be issued until the county shall be exonerated from a prior subscription to the stock of another railway company, is a condition precedent to the lawful issue of the bonds. [For other cases, see Bonds, V. c. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — presumption — performance of condition precedent to issue of municipal bonds.

2. A presumption, though not a conclusive one, that there has been a compliance with the condition precedent to the issuance of county bonds in payment of a subscription to the capital stock of a railway company, that the county should first be exonerated from a prior subscription to the stock of another railroad company, arises from the mere fact of subscription and issuance by the officer charged with the duty of issuing the bonds upon the performance of the condition precedent.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 479-481, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bonds — railway aid — conditions.

3. The provision in a vote authorizing an issue of county bonds in payment of a subscription for railroad stock "upon condition" that the railroad company shall locate and construct the railroad through the county and within 1 mile of a named town in such county, and shall expend the amount so subscribed within the county limits, will not be deemed to impose a condition upon the lawful issue of the bonds or upon the obligation of the county to pay them to the legal holders and owners, where the vote, in dealing with the question of exoneration from a prior subscription to the stock of another railway company, explicitly makes such exoneration a condition precedent to the lawful issue of the bonds, and where to hold otherwise would make unsalable a bond issue evidently designed for the market.

[For other cases, see Bonds, V. c. in Digest Sup. Ct. Rep. 1908.]

[No. 351.]

Argued December 17, 18, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Kentucky, dismissing the petition in an action on county bonds and coupons, and directed judgment for plaintiff. Modified by directing the Circuit Court to exclude coupons barred by the statute of limitations, and, as modified, affirmed.

See same case below, 84 C. C. A. 537, 157 Fed. 33.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Ernest Macpherson argued the cause, and, with Mr. John W. Lewis, filed a brief for petitioner:

The court of appeals erred in holding that the so-called conditions were merely covenants, and that it was in contemplation of the original parties to the contract that the remedy for its breach should be only an action by the county against the railroad for damages.

Hopper v. Covington, 118 U. S. 148, 30 L. ed. 190, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1025; Independent School Dist. v. Stone, 106 U. S. 187, 27 L. ed. 91, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Green County v. Shortell, 116 Ky. 108, 75 S. W. 251.

Subscription becomes absolute only when the condition is performed.

McMillan v. Maysville & L. R. Co. 15 B. Mon. 218, 61 Am. Dec. 181; 2 Thomp. Corp. § 1335; Henderson & N. R. Co. v. Leavell, 16 B. Mon. 359; Taggart v. Western Maryland R. Co. 24 Md. 563, 89 Am. Dec. 760; Burke v. Smith (Putnam v. New Albany & S. C. Junction R. Co.) 16 Wall. 390, 21 L. ed. 361; Galt v. Swain, 9 Gratt. 633, 60 Am. Dec. 311; Jewett v. Lawrenceburgh & U. M. R. Co. 10 Ind. 539.

The law in respect to recitals has really no place in the discussion of this case. There are no recitals in these bonds. The bare fact that a bond is issued by the official having power to issue bonds does not shut off defenses.

Coloma v. Eaves, 92 U. S. 484, 23 L. ed. 579.

The general principle running through all the cases is that, in the absence of a recital, there is no estoppel of any kind.

See especially Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Perry County, 156 U. S. 701, 39 L. ed. 589, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 547; Carroll County v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556, 28 L. ed. 517, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539; Hopper v. Covington, supra; Crow v. Oxford, 119 U. S. 222, 30 L. ed. 390, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 180; Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. 683, 19 L. ed. 1042; Merchants' Exch. Nat. Bank v. Bergen County, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 432, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88.

There being no recitals, the case should be decided according to the general principles of the laws of agency. It is thoroughly settled as principles of general commercial law that an agent of a municipal corporation must keep strictly within his powers of attorney at all times, and that the authority of all agents in executing commercial papers will be rigidly construed.

Chisholm v. Montgomery, 2 Woods, 584, Fed. Cas. No. 2,686; Baltimore v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 1, 83 Am. Dec. 535; Snow v. Warner, 10 Met. 136, 43 Am. Dec. 417; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611;

211 U. S.

Eaton & G. Com. Paper, p. 81; Tiedeman, Com. Paper, p. 139; Lewis v. Bourbon County, 12 Kan. 216.

Messrs. Edmund F. Trabue and George DuRelle argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John J. McHenry, John C. Doolan, and Atilla Cox, Jr., filed a brief for respondent:

These bondholders are entitled to all the presumptions and entitled to full value of their bonds, whether by payment from the county or by realization of the price thereof obtainable from purchasers; and accordingly entitled to have their vendees, or purchasers, obtain all the rights and remedies to which they would be entitled, for otherwise their market would be destroyed without their fault; and they are entitled to their market as well as to their action at law.

Scotland County v. Hill, 132 U. S. 107, 33 L. ed. 262, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; May v. Chapman, 16 Mees. & W. 355.

Covenants are independent, and one not a condition precedent as to the other, where the time of performance and of payment are not made coincident, nor performance required to be anterior to payment.

Pordage v. Cole, 1 Wms' Saund. 320, note 1; Cutter v. Powell, 1 Smith. Lead. Cas. 14, note 1; Goldsborough v. Orr, 8 Wheat. 217, 5 L. ed. 600; Loud v. Pomona Land & Water Co. 153 U. S. 564, 578, 38 L. ed. 822, 828, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 928.

The question whether the performance of a stipulation in a contract is a condition precedent to the performance of other stipulations in it depends upon the order in which the parties intend the several stipulations to be performed. The calling of provisions or stipulations a condition is not conclusive, and if, from the contract or other circumstances, it is seen that it was not the intention of the parties that its performance should be a condition precedent, it will not be held to be such.

Stanley v. Colt, 5 Wall. 119, 18 L. ed. 502; Union Stockyards Co. v. Nashville Packing Co. 72 C. C. A. 195, 146 Fed. 701; Sohler v. Trinity Church, 109 Mass. 1; Greene v. O'Connor, 18 R. I. 56, 19 L.R.A. 262, 25 Atl. 692; Scovill v. McMahon, 62 Conn. 378, 21 L.R.A. 58, 36 Am. St. Rep. 350, 26 Atl. 479; Hartung v. Witte, 59 Wis. 285, 18 N. W. 175; Bucksport & B. R. Co. v. Brewer, 67 Me. 295.

Conditions are not favored, and a provision will not be construed as such unless the intention is clear.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 502; Clapham v. Moyle, 1 Lev. 155; Shep. Touch. 122; Huff v. Nickerson, 27 Me. 106; Paschall v. Passmore, 15 Pa. 307.

53 L. ed.

*Mr. Justice Moody delivered the [583] opinion of the court:

The record and proceedings in this cause are in this court by virtue of a writ of certiorari issued to the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit. The action was brought in the circuit court of the United States by Quinlan against Green county on certain bonds and coupons attached thereto, purporting to have been issued by Green county. The jurisdiction was based upon diversity of citizenship.

The petition alleged that the plaintiff was "the holder and owner" of the bonds named; that the bonds and coupons were duly executed and issued, were due and unpaid, and prayed judgment for their face value with interest.

The defendant filed a plea in abatement to the jurisdiction, alleging, in substance, that the plaintiff was not the real holder and owner of the bonds, and that the jurisdiction of the court was invoked fraudulently. Certain allegations contained in this plea were, on motion, stricken therefrom, and no exception was taken to the order. A reply to the plea was filed, denying its allegations. Thereupon it was agreed that the issues of law and fact should be tried by the court without a jury, and that the plea should be deemed a part of the answer, which was that day filed. In addition to the facts alleged in the plea the answer set up in defense (1) a denial of all the allegations of the petition; (2) that there was no consideration for the bonds; (3) that they were obtained by fraud; (4) that recovery upon some of the coupons was barred by the statute of limitations; (5) that the bonds were issued in payment of a subscription to the stock of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad upon two conditions, namely, that the railroad should be constructed in a certain designated manner, and that the county first should be exonerated from a prior subscription to the bonds of another railroad company, neither of which conditions had been performed. The plaintiff filed a reply, denying the allegations of the answer. There were further pleadings, which are unimportant here. After trial, the court rendered the following judgment:

*"This action by a stipulation in [584] writing, having been heretofore submitted to the judgment of the court without the intervention of a jury, and the court having heard the evidence and the arguments of counsel, and being now sufficiently advised, makes part of this judgment the following:

Finding of Fact.

"1. The court finds that the plaintiff is a citizen of the state of New York, and was so when this action was instituted on the 28th day of March, 1899, and that the plaintiff was then the bona fide holder for value of the bonds and coupons sued on, and fully entitled to sue the defendant thereon in this court.

"2. That the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of Kentucky, with power to receive a subscription to its capital stock from the defendant, Green county, and said county was authorized, conformably to law, to make a subscription to said capital stock, and to pay for the same in the bonds of said county.

"3. That, on June 17th, 1869, there was, as appears from the records thereof, presented to the Green county court, by the commissioners of said railroad company, the following request:

"We, the undersigned, commissioners of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company, hereby request that the county court of Green county submit to a vote of the qualified voters of said county the question: "Whether said court shall subscribe, for and on behalf of said county, and in pursuance of the provisions of the charter of said railroad company, $250,000 to the capital stock of said company, payable in the bonds of said county, having twenty years to run and bearing 6 per cent interest from date, upon the condition that said company shall locate and construct said railroad through Green county and within 1 mile of the town of Greensburg in said county, and shall expend the amount so subscribed within the limits of Green county; and also upon the further conditions that said bonds shall not be issued or said county pay any 585]part of either principal or interest *on said amount subscribed as aforesaid until said county of Green shall be fully and completely exonerated from the payment of the capital stock subscribed for by the county court of said county, for and on behalf of said county, to the Elizabethtown & Tennessee Railroad Company."

"4. That on the same day, namely, on June 17th, 1869, the county judge of Green county, acting alone and as the county court, entered an order in said court in the following language:

"Present: Thos. R. Barnett, Judge.

"Whereas the commissioners of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company, by virtue of the authority delegated to them by the charter of said company, have requested the county court of Green county to order an election in the said county of Green, and to submit to the qualified voters of said county the question whether said county court shall subscribe, for and on behalf of said county, $250,000 to the capital stock of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company, and payable in the bonds of said county, having twenty years to run and bearing 6 per cent interest from date, and upon condition that said company shall locate and construct said railroad through the said county of Green, and within 1 mile of the town of Greensburg, in said county, and shall expend the amount so subscribed within the limits of Green county; and also upon the further condition that said bonds shall not be issued or said county pay any part of the principal or interest on said amount subscribed to said Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company, until said county of Green is fully and completely exonerated from the payment of the capital stock voted by said county, and authorized to be subscribed by said Green county court to the Elizabethtown & Tennessee Railroad, or any part of the interest thereon. It is therefore ordered by the court that an election by the qualified voters of Green county, at the voting places in said county, be held and conducted by the several officers as prescribed by law for holding elections, on the 3d *day of July, 1869, to vote on the ques-[586 tion as to whether or not the said county court shall, for and on behalf of said county, subscribe $250,000 to the capital stock of the said Cumberland & Ohio Railroad, conditioned and to be paid, as above stated."

"5. That at the election held pursuant to said order there were cast in favor of said proposition and subscription a majority of the votes of the qualified voters of said county, and this fact, upon being duly ascertained, was certified by the proper officers, as required by law.

"6. That on the 3d day of June, 1870, the county judge of said county, acting alone and as the county court of said county, entered an order in said court as follows:

"Present: Thomas R. Barnett, Judge.

"Whereas, in pursuance of an order of this court, made on the 17th day of June, 1869, an election was held in the said county of Green, on the 3d day of July, 1869, at the several precincts of said county, and it appearing that a majority of the qualified voters at said election decided that the county of Green should subscribe for $250,000 of the capital stock of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company; now, it further appearing that said election was held in conformity with the law, and in conformity with the provisions of the charter of said company, now, therefore, I, Thomas R. Barnett, the presiding judge of the Green county court, by virtue of the authority in me vested by law, and to carry out the wishes of said voters, do hereby subscribe for $250,000 of the capital stock of said Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company, for and on behalf of said county of Green, which subscription is to be paid in the bonds of said county as prescribed in said order of submission; and this subscription is made with the conditions set out in the order of this court, ordering said election, and now of record in the office of this county.'

"7. That on the 12th day of October, 1871, the said county judge of said county, acting alone and as the county court of 587]*said county, entered an order in said court in the following language:

"Present: Thomas R. Barnett, Judge.

"On motion of E. H. Hobson, director of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad, it is ordered that Z. F. Smith, president of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad, be, and he is hereby, authorized to have printed for the county of Green bonds to the amount of $250,000, the amount of the subscription of Green county to the said railroad, in the following denominations, to wit, the same to be conditioned as specified in the order submitting the vote of the said county:

125 bonds at $1,000	$125,000
200 bonds at 500	100,000
250 bonds at 100	25,000

250,000'

"8. That pursuant to all that was done, as aforesaid, the defendant, Green county, issued and delivered to the said Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company $250,000 of its bonds of the description aforesaid, except that the said conditions were not stated therein, in payment of said subscriptions to said capital stock, and thereupon there was delivered to said county, in payment thereof, and said county received, and has ever since held and owned, the certificates of the said railroad company for the 2,500 shares of $100 each of its capital stock so paid for by said bonds.

"9. That the $47,509 of bonds and coupons sued on in this action were part of the bonds thus issued and delivered to said railroad company in payment for said stock.

"10. That while the proposed line of said railroad was located through said county from its northern line to its southern line, and within 1 mile of Greensburg, yet that only about 5 miles of said railroad has ever been constructed or attempted to be constructed in said county, the part thus constructed extending from the northernmost 588]line of said county *to the town of Greensburg, the county seat; that town is located about 15 miles from the southernmost line of the county, and about as distant from any other line of the county except the northern line.

"11. That only $150,000 of the bonds thus issued, or the proceeds thereof, were expended within the limits of Green county.

53 L. ed.

No other part of said bonds was expended in said county.

"12. That with said $150,000 of said bonds the grading, bridging, and tunneling on the track of said railroad was done and paid for over the 5 miles aforesaid, but no further, and when this was done the work on the railroad was suspended for some years. Afterwards the rails and ties and superstructure generally were put upon the track theretofore graded and the railway was completed from the northernmost line of the county to Greensburg, under the terms of its lease, by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, at its own expense, and not with any of the bonds issued as aforesaid by the defendant.

"13. That on the 15th day of August, 1872, at a called term of the Green county court, over which Thomas R. Barnett, county judge, presided, and no justice of the peace being present, the following order was entered by said court:

"Present: Thos. R. Barnett, Judge.

"Application was this day made to the presiding judge of the county court of Green county, by the president and board of directors of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company to issue the balance of the bonds of said county to the amount of the subscriptions of said county of Green to said Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company, and, the court being sufficiently advised, it is ordered by the court that the balance of said bonds be and they are hereby ordered to be issued, the same to be signed by the judge of said county court of Green county, and countersigned by the clerk of said court, as required by the charter of said company.'

"14. That except as to the number of the bonds and the *amount agreed to be[589 paid therein, the bonds sued on were each of the following, namely:

"United States of America,

"County of Green, State of Kentucky, $500.00.

"For the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad.

"Twenty years after date, the county of Green, in the state of Kentucky, will pay to the holder of this bond the sum of five hundred dollars with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable semiannually upon presentation of the proper coupons hereto attached, the principal and interest being payable at the Bank of America, in the city of New York.

"In testimony whereof, the judge of said county of Green has hereunto set his hands and affixed the seal of said county on the first day of April, A. D. 1871, and caused the same to be attested by the county clerk, who has also signed the coupons hereto attached.

[Green county seal.]

T. R. Barnett, Judge.

D. T. Towles, Clerk.'

"As appears on the face of each of said bonds, there was no recital therein of any of the facts herein found to be true.

"15. That the plaintiff knew, when he purchased the bonds sued on, that the railroad had not been constructed in Green county otherwise than as herein found to be the fact; namely, from the northern line of said county to the town of Greensburg, but no further.

"16. That, in the year 1868, upon a proposition therefor being submitted to the vote of the qualified voters of Green county, the majority of said qualified voters voted in favor of a proposition to subscribe for $300,000 of the capital stock of the Elizabethtown & Tennessee Railroad Company, and, upon the said result of the election being properly ascertained and certified, the county judge of Green county, sitting alone and as the county court of said county, made and entered of record in said court the following orders:

590] "1868. Green County Court, May Called Term, 1868, 20th Day of May.

"Present: T. R. Barnett, Judge.

"This day, T. R. Barnett, Presiding Judge, and D. T. Towles, Clerk of the Green county court, this day produced their certificate in words and figures as follows, viz.: We, T. R. Barnett, Presiding Judge, and D. T. Towles, Clerk of the Green county court, duly authorized to compare the poll book of Green county, certify that an election held in said county at the various voting places in said county, on the 16th day of May, 1868, on the question whether the county court of Green county shall, for and on behalf of said county, subscribe for 3,000 shares in capital stock of Elizabethtown & Tennessee Railroad Company, to be paid for in the bonds of said county, payable in twenty years, and bearing 6 per cent interest, payable semiannually in the city of New York, with interest coupons attached thereto, and that 586 votes were cast for said subscription and 204 against said subscription.

"May 20th, 1868.

T. R. Barnett.

D. T. Towles.

"It is therefore ordered by the court that the said vote be, and is now, entered of record, as follows, to wit: 586 votes cast for said subscription, and 204 votes were cast against said subscription, showing that there is a majority for said subscription of 382 votes.

"It is now, therefore, ordered that the clerk of this court, for and on behalf of the county of Green, make said subscription on the terms specified in the order submitting the question to a vote, as aforesaid.'

"17. That no formal or express exoneration of said county from the payment of said last-named subscription was ever made or attempted, but nothing further has, up to this date, ever been done in respect to it, and neither bonds by the county nor stock by the said last-named railroad company have ever *been issued or deliv-[591 ered in execution of said orders or under the terms of said subscription.

"Upon consideration of the facts hereinbefore found to be true, and of the opinion of the court of appeals, in the case of Green County v. Shortell, 116 Ky. 108, 75 S. W. 251, the court, in deference to said opinion, has recorded the following "Conclusions of Law.

"1. That the plaintiff is not entitled to recover because the conditions upon which the subscription for the capital stock of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company was made, and upon which the bonds sued on were issued, have not been performed or complied with; and

"2. That the failure to recite in the bonds any of the facts herein found to be true, or any of the conditions upon which the bonds were issued, is immaterial as against the defense that there was a failure to perform the said conditions.

"Judgment.

"In consideration of the premises it is considered and adjudged by the court that the plaintiff's petition be, and it is, dismissed, and that the defendant recover of the plaintiff its costs herein expended, and it may have execution therefor."

The defendant filed no exception or objection to the findings of fact, but the plaintiff excepted to the judgment, and sued out a writ of error to the circuit court of appeals, which, after the response by this court to a question certified to it (205 U. S. 410, 51 L. ed. 860, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505), reversed the judgment of the circuit court, with direction to enter a judgment for the plaintiff. The question to be determined is whether, on the findings of fact, the court of appeals erred in ordering judgment for the plaintiff.

We think, although the defendant contends to the contrary, that the findings of fact, which accompanied the judgment of the circuit court, afford ample foundation for a final judgment. They were not objected to by the defendant at the time, and it was content to submit the case for judg-592]ment upon *them. Nor has anything been advanced in argument which leads us to doubt their accuracy, or to desire that they should be more complete.

The defendant's counsel has not confined his argument to the questions presented by the record. It seems expedient, therefore, simply to determine the questions deemed to arise on the record, and stop there.

When the case was here before it was decided that the county had the power to issue the bonds, upon the approval of the qualified voters, and that (following the ruling of the highest court of Kentucky in this respect) the voters might impose conditions upon the issue. The approval was given, and the conditions imposed were expressed in the vote, as follows:

" . . . upon condition that said company shall locate and construct said railroad through the said county of Green, and within 1 mile of the town of Greensburg, in said county, and shall expend the amount so subscribed within the limits of Green county; and also upon the further condition that said bonds shall not be issued or said county pay any part of the principal or interest on said amount subscribed to said Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company until said county of Green is fully and completely exonerated from the payment of the capital stock voted by said county and authorized to be subscribed by said Green county court to the Elizabethtown & Tennessee Railroad."

Bonds to the amount of $250,000 were issued, and delivered pursuant to the vote, to the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company, and some of them have come to be legally owned by the plaintiff. There was consideration for them in 25,000 shares of the stock of the company, which were delivered to the county and have been held by it up to the present time. There is not the slightest evidence of fraud in their issue.

The real defense is that the bonds were void because the conditions expressed in the vote, which are said to be indispensable prerequisites to their validity, have 593]not been fulfilled. *The conditions relied on in defense are two, and they are subject to different considerations.

The condition that the bonds should not be issued until the county had been "exonerated" from a subscription theretofore authorized to be made to the stock of the Elizabethtown & Tennessee Railroad is a condition precedent to the lawful issue of the bonds. As these bonds contained no recital importing that the conditions had been performed, it was open to the county to show, even against a purchaser for value, 53 L. ed.

before maturity, without notice, that the conditions had not been performed. But the issue of bonds in payment of a subscription to railroad stock by an officer charged with the duty of ascertaining whether the conditions indispensable to the lawful issue had been fulfilled raises a presumption of their fulfillment prior to the issue. A lawful holder of the bonds is entitled to rely upon this presumption, although he incurs the danger that the presumption will be overcome by evidence. If he wishes absolute security in this respect, he must insist upon a recital. This much was determined by the decision of this court when the case was here before. 205 U. S. 410, 51 L. ed. 860, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505. That case did not decide that there was a presumption of performance arising out of the length of time during which no claim was made in respect of the Elizabethtown & Tennessee Railroad subscription, but that there was a presumption of performance before the issue of the bonds. When we come to look at the facts found by the circuit court there is nothing to rebut this presumption. On the contrary, everything tends to support it. Even the wide range of the argument for the defendant did not suggest a single fact which could, to the slightest extent, control the presumption. The conclusion follows that the exoneration from the prior subscription had happened before the issue of the bonds to the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company. That condition has been performed, and is not available as a defense.

We must next consider the effect of the provision in the vote, that the subscription to the stock, payable in bonds, shall *be "upon condition that said company[594 shall locate and construct said railroad through the said county of Green, and within 1 mile of the town of Greensburg, in said county, and shall expend the amount so subscribed within the limits of Green county." If this part of the vote imposes a condition upon the lawful issue of the bonds or upon the obligation of the county to pay them, the defense must prevail, for the condition has not been performed. Only $150,000 have been expended within the limits of the county, and the railroad, though constructed to Greensburg, a distance of 5 miles, was not carried further, although it was located from north to south through the county, a distance of 20 miles. It is not conclusive that the obligation thus imposed upon the railroad company is called a condition. It frequently has been the case that the word "condition" has been used in written instruments in a looser and broader sense than the law attaches to it. In ascertaining the true meaning of instruments in writing, courts do not confine their attention to single words, phrases, or sentences. The meaning is sought from the whole instrument, viewed in the light of the subject with which it deals. This general rule of interpretation often makes it manifest that that which is called a condition is really but a covenant or agreement, to be performed independently of the counter obligation with which it is associated. When such an intent is discovered the courts have no difficulty in giving it effect, though the result be to disregard the technical meaning of the word "condition." Stanley v. Colt, 5 Wall. 119, 18 L. ed. 502; Sohier v. Trinity Church, 109 Mass. 1; Episcopal City Mission v. Appleton, 117 Mass. 326; Cassidy v. Mason, 171 Mass. 507, 50 N. E. 1027; Clapp v. Wilder, 176 Mass. 332, 50 L.R.A. 120, 57 N. E. 692; Post v. Weil, 115 N. Y. 361, 5 L.R.A. 422, 12 Am. St. Rep. 809, 22 N. E. 145; Clark v. Martin, 49 Pa. 289; Watrous v. Allen, 57 Mich. 362, 58 Am. Rep. 363, 24 N. W. 104; Scovill v. McMahon, 62 Conn. 378, 21 L.R.A. 58, 36 Am. St. Rep. 350, 26 Atl. 479; Hartung v. Witte, 59 Wis. 285, 18 N. W. 175.

A consideration of the vote of the county leaves no doubt that that part of it which prescribed the nature of the railroad construction was not a condition. It would have been easy *to have postponed the obligation to pay the bonds until the construction had been completed, as desired by the county. Such a provision as that in Provident Life & T. Co. v. Mercer County, 170 U. S. 594, 42 L. ed. 1156, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788, would have been enough. Indeed, the draftsman need not have looked afield. Nothing need have been done except to use the same language with reference to construction which he used in this vote with reference to exoneration from the prior subscription to the stock of another railroad. There he said that the subscription should be "upon the further condition that said bonds shall not be issued or said county pay any part of the principal or interest" until the exoneration had happened. The studied omission of this apt, clear, and emphatic language from the part of the vote dealing with the construction of the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad is of controlling significance. If the question rested upon this comparison of language alone, it would be quite enough to warrant the inference that it was not intended that the condition which was imposed in the one case should be equally imposed in the other. This conclusion is confirmed by a consideration of the subject-matter with which the vote dealt.

It would have defeated the very purpose for which the bonds were issued if the obligation to pay them had been made conditional upon the completion of the construction desired. The railroad to whose stock the county was authorized to subscribe, was not constructed, and needed the proceeds of the bonds to complete the work of construction. By accepting bonds upon the terms proposed, it came under the obligation to expend the amount subscribed within the limits of the county. As the subscription to the stock was to be paid for by the bonds, the amount subscribed was the amount of the bonds. The bonds which the county was authorized by the legislature to issue were described in the law as "payable to bearer, with coupons attached, bearing any rate of interest not exceeding 6 per cent per annum, payable semiannually in the city of New York, payable at such times as they may designate, not exceeding thirty years from date." The bonds thus *described were evidently designed for [596 the market. They could pass from hand to hand, since they were payable to bearer. The interest was represented by detachable coupons, and was payable at the chief money center of the country. It is manifest that the bonds were intended to be issued and delivered to the railroad company before the construction began. It would require the very strongest words in the vote to convince us that it was intended to attach to such bonds a condition which would destroy their obligation, if, after a term of years, it should appear that the construction had not been completed in the manner designated. Bonds with such a condition would be unsalable; and it is inconceivable that they could be issued with any expectation that they could be used. We cannot doubt that the county, in its anxiety to secure the building of the railroad, was content to rest upon the agreement of the company to construct it in the manner desired, and that the only technical condition to the validity of the bonds was that which referred to the exoneration from a prior subscription. As it turned out, it would have been very much wiser for the county to have declined to issue the bonds until the construction was completed, or to have taken some security for the performance of the agreement with reference to the construction. But courts cannot make for the parties better agreements than they themselves have been satisfied to make. The records of this court show that prudence has not been a marked characteristic in the issue of municipal bonds in aid of the construction of railroads.

Our conclusion upon the whole case is that, with the exception of the condition which has been performed, the bonds were issued upon a good consideration and unconditionally, and were a valid obligation of the county in whosoever hands they subsequently lawfully came.

We have examined with attention and respect the case of Green County v. Shortell, 116 Ky. 108, 75 S. W. 251, wherein the court of appeals of the state arrived at a different conclusion, and regret that we are unable to concur in its reasoning.

597] *The finding of the circuit court was that the plaintiff, at the time of beginning his action, which was after the bonds were overdue, was the bona fide holder, for value of the bonds and coupons sued on. In view of the conclusion at which we have arrived it seems unnecessary to dwell upon the exact terms of this finding. In any event, the plaintiff was the legal holder and owner of the bonds. This is not disputed. Assuming that any defense is open of which the holder might have had notice by inspecting the law, vote, and the records of the county court, it would come to nothing, because such an inspection would have shown that no defense to the payment of the bonds existed.

We need not consider what would have been the situation if the bonds were still in the hands of the railroad and it were bringing action upon them, and an attempt had been made to set up against their amount the damages resulting from the railroad's failure to perform the agreement with respect to construction. The bonds here are not in the hands of the railroad nor is any such defense set up. The defense is, that the bonds are null and void, and, as has been shown, that defense is without merit.

It appears that a recovery upon some of the coupons declared upon is barred by the statute of limitations. This is conceded by the plaintiff, who says that the judgment of the circuit court of appeals, in view of the state of the pleadings, does not require that there should be a recovery upon the coupons thus barred. It is better, however, that this question be freed from doubt and the judgment be modified so as to require the circuit court to ascertain what coupons are barred by the statute of limitations and to enter judgment for the remainder, and for the principal of the bonds, of course, with interest in both cases. Thus modified, the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

GREEN COUNTY, Kentucky, Petitioner,
v.

MARY AMIS QUINLAN, Executrix of the Last Will and Testament of Leonard Q. Quinlan, Deceased. [No. 351.]

GREEN COUNTY, Kentucky, Petitioner,
v.

THOMAS, Executor. [No. 352.]

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

I quite agree with Judge Lurton of the circuit court of appeals, *that common[598 justice requires that there should not be now any judgment upon the merits in these cases. He correctly said that the findings of fact do not adequately cover all the issues, and upon those to which they are responsive they are neither definite nor full enough to justify a judgment in favor of the plaintiff. Without expressing at this time any views upon the merits of these cases, I am of opinion that the judgment in each case should be reversed and the cases remanded with an order for a new trial, when all the facts may be more fully disclosed and sufficient findings made.

GREEN COUNTY, Kentucky, Petitioner,
v.

JOHN THOMAS'S EXECUTOR, Henry Knippenberg, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 598-603.)

Writ of error — parties — amendment — dismissal.

1. The circuit court of appeals is justified in allowing an amendment to correct a writ of error which, owing to the illness of counsel, does not set forth accurately the parties plaintiff, and in denying a motion to dismiss the writ, founded upon such mistake.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 3067-3089, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — amount in dispute — joint interests.

2. The undivided interests of the joint owners and holders of the bonds and coupons on which suit is brought may be united for the purpose of making up the amount necessary to give jurisdiction to a Federal circuit court.

[For other cases, see Courts, 908-914, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On amendments of writ of error, citation, or notice of proceedings for review—see note to Thomas v. Green County, 77 C. C. A. 490.

On the jurisdiction of Federal courts as affected by the amount in dispute—see notes to Rich v. Bray, 2 L.R.A. 225; Auer v. Lombard, 19 C. C. A. 75; and Tennent-Stirling Shoe Co. v. Roper, 36 C. C. A. 459.

On certiorari in Federal courts—see note to Clark v. Hackett, 17 L. ed. U. S. 69.

Appeal — rendering final judgment for plaintiff in error.

3. Final judgment in favor of plaintiff in error may be entered by the appellate court where the findings of the court below are full and adequate, and protect every substantial right of the party in whose favor the judgment originally was entered.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IX. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Certiorari — scope of review.

4. The scope of review on certiorari will not be broadened so as to include, in addition to the questions which the petitioner has properly raised, technical questions tending to embarrass the progress and delay the final ending of an action, the merits of which are with the respondents.

[For other cases, see Certiorari, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 352.]

Argued December 17, 18, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

ON WRIT OF Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Kentucky, dismissing the petition in an action on county bonds and coupons, and directed the entry of a judgment for plaintiffs. Affirmed.

See same case below, 159 Fed. 339.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Ernest Macpherson argued the cause, and, with Mr. John W. Lewis, filed a brief for petitioner.

Messrs. Edmund F. Trabue and George DuRelle argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander Pope Humphrey and Alexander C. Ayers, filed a brief for respondents:

Whether these are conditions or not depends entirely upon the construction of the whole instrument.

Episcopal City Mission v. Appleton, 117 Mass. 326; Scovill v. McMahon, 62 Conn. 378, 21 L.R.A. 58, 36 Am. St. Rep. 350, 26 Atl. 479; Hartung v. Witte, 59 Wis. 285, 18 N. W. 175; Stanley v. Colt, 5 Wall. 119, 166, 18 L. ed. 502, 509.

Courts have been almost unanimous in construing provisions similar to these as covenants, and not as conditions.

1 Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 78; Chamberlain v. Painesville & H. R. Co. 15 Ohio St. 225; North Missouri R. Co. v. Winkler, 29 Mo. 318; Swartwout v. Michigan Air Line R. Co. 24 Mich. 389; Pittsburgh & S. R. Co. v. Biggar, 34 Pa. 455; Paducah & M. R. Co. v. Parks, 86 Tenn. 554, 8 S. W. 842; Morrow v. Nashville Iron, Steel & Charcoal Co. 87 Tenn. 262, 3 L.R.A. 37, 10 Am. St. Rep. 658, 10 S. W. 495;

344

McMillan v. Maysville & L. R. Co. 15 B. Mon. 218, 61 Am. Dec. 181; Miller v. Pittsburg & C. R. Co. 40 Pa. 237, 8 Am. Dec. 570.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

This case relates to the same issue of bonds referred to in the one preceding, and is governed by it, unless there is something to prevent in the questions following.

There were several plaintiffs, including three corporations. In the petition they alleged that they were "jointly the owners and holders" of sixty-seven bonds, whose aggregate face value exceeded the jurisdictional amount. Diversity of citizenship was duly alleged. By leave of court, on suggestion of the death of one of the plaintiffs, and that his personal representatives had been discharged, his heirs were made parties plaintiff. No objection was made to this amendment by the defendant at the time. The defendant's answer denied that the plaintiffs were "jointly the owners or holders" of the bonds. Certain interrogatories to each of the plaintiffs were attached to the answer, which prayed that plaintiffs be compelled to answer them on oath. These interrogatories were directed to the subject of the acquisition and ownership of the bonds by the plaintiffs. The answers disclosed that the bonds in suit were taken from the Cumberland & Ohio Railroad Company by the Indianapolis Rolling Mill Company in payment for iron to be used in building the railroad through Green county, were by the mill company turned over to its stockholders. (who were *the plaintiffs, or[600 represented by them) as dividends, and that they, fifteen years before, agreed to become joint owners and holders of all the bonds in certain named proportions. And it was stated that each plaintiff owned an undivided interest in all the bonds and coupons in suit. The defendant then suggested the death of two of the plaintiffs, but no action appears to have been taken thereon by the court.

The defendant was permitted to file an amended answer, which alleged that, after the distribution of the bonds by way of dividends, each distributee owned a separate and distinct interest which were joined together to give the court jurisdiction, which, in the case of certain plaintiffs, it would otherwise lack on account of the insufficient value of their respective interests, and concluded by averring that the court was without jurisdiction.

The defendant moved the court for a rule on the plaintiffs to furnish dates of the deaths of the parties plaintiff named in the pleadings, who had died since the institution of the action, and to show cause why the action should not be dismissed for failure to revive within the time prescribed by law. This motion was denied and defendant excepted.

On the 22d day of March 1905, the defendant moved the court to dismiss the action on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs, and for want of jurisdiction of such of the plaintiffs whose claims were separately less than $2,000. On the same day the parties stipulated that the issues of fact might be tried and determined by the court without the intervention of a jury.

On the 1st day of June 1905, the circuit court ordered judgment for the defendant, with the same findings of fact and conclusions of law which were made in the preceding case. The plaintiffs, each and all, excepted to the judgment and to each part of it, and filed a petition for a writ of error to the circuit court of appeals, with assignment of errors. The defendant did not object or except to the findings of fact, or request any rulings of law, or file any writ of error or assignment of errors, or any bill of exceptions, or take any other step whatever which would carry to the appellate court any questions of law different from those contained in the plaintiffs' assignment of errors. Throughout the record, up to this point, the defendant appears to have been content to raise questions of law without attempting in any form to save any of its rights upon the resulting rulings of the court.

On the 1st day of May, 1906, the plaintiffs in error moved the court of appeals to amend the writ of error by striking out certain persons named therein as plaintiffs and by inserting the names of certain other persons. On the same day the defendant in error moved the court to dismiss the writ of error because some of the plaintiffs against whom judgment had been rendered in the court below had failed to prosecute the writ of error without a summons and severance, and because certain persons who were never parties to the action were named in the writ of error. These cross motions seem to have raised the same questions. It appeared that, owing to illness of counsel for the plaintiffs in error, the petition for a writ did not set forth accurately the parties plaintiff. The error was a pure accident, and we think the court below was entirely justified in allowing the amendment and in denying the cross motion to dismiss. Rev. Stat. § 1005, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 714.

The court of appeals reversed the judgment of the circuit court, and ordered, as will hereafter more specifically appear, that court to enter a judgment for the plaintiffs. The case is here upon a writ of certiorari. It has been argued by the defendant apparently upon the theory that all questions of law which were raised by it or were remotely suggested in the record were open for consideration in the appellate court. But we ought not to encourage such looseness of practice. Some of the questions raised by the defendant were passed on adversely to it in the circuit court of appeals, and we do not intend to intimate any doubt of the correctness of the decision of that court. The writ of error sued out by the plaintiffs, and the assignment of errors which accompanied it, set forth all the *questions regard-[602]ing the action of the court below, of which the appellate court was bound to take notice. The Maria Martin (Martin v. Northern Transp. Co.) 12 Wall. 31, 40, 20 L. ed. 251, 252; Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 44 L. ed. 156, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94. Neither that court nor this ought to be expected to search through a confused record for the purpose of finding errors, where the party complaining has not taken the pains, at the time the alleged errors were committed, to save its rights in some form known to the law. It would be, of course, entirely unfair to enter final judgment in favor of the party appellant unless the court can see that the findings of the court below are full and adequate and protect every substantial right of the party in whose favor the judgment originally was entered. But we think that the findings did this. The first finding of the court was that the plaintiffs, at the date of the beginning of the suit, were "the bona fide holders for value of the bonds and coupons sued on, and fully entitled to sue the defendant thereon in this court." This is a finding which, among other things, supports the jurisdiction of the court, and could proceed only upon the theory that the plaintiffs were the joint owners and holders of the bonds and coupons sued on. If they were, the court had jurisdiction under the rule stated in Clay v. Field, 138 U. S. 464, 479, 34 L. ed. 1044, 1049, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419.

The defendant owes the amount of these bonds, and, at the beginning of this action, owed it to the plaintiffs. It has no interest or concern in the proper division of the amount due on the bonds among those who are entitled to share the proceeds of the verdict. We are not disposed to open the way to the defendant to raise technical questions to embarrass the progress and delay the final ending of this action. The defendant is entitled to a decision upon the questions which it has properly brought to this court, and no others.

The judgment of the court of appeals was "that the judgment of the said circuit court in this cause be, and the same is hereby, reversed with costs and cause remanded with directions to the said circuit court that, upon the suggestion on the record of the deaths of such of the original plaintiffs as 603] have *died pending the suit, and striking out the names of their personal representatives, it enter judgment for the plaintiffs as they then appear of record, for the amount of the principal of the bonds in suit, with interest thereon from the date when their latest coupons severally become due, and for the coupons in suit, with interest on each from the time when they severally fell due." We have no doubt of the correctness of this judgment or that it will protect every substantial right which the defendant has, and it is, therefore, affirmed.

For dissenting opinion, see ante, 343.

SOUTHERN REALTY INVESTMENT COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
NANCY WALKER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 603-608.)

Federal courts — jurisdiction — diverse citizenship — collusive incorporation.

An action brought by a South Dakota corporation against a citizen of Georgia, in a Federal circuit court sitting in the latter state, will be dismissed under the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, 472, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 508, 511), § 5, as collusive, where such corporation is merely the agent of Georgia attorneys, who brought it into existence as a corporation that individual citizens of Georgia having controversies with other individual citizens of that state might, in their discretion, have the use of its corporate name in order to create cases apparently within the jurisdiction of the Federal court.

[For other cases, see Courts, 697, 698, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 43.]

Argued December 7, 8, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

NOTE—As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247; Mason v. Dullaghan, 27 C. C. A. 296; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L.R.A. 216; Emory v. Greenough, 1 L. ed. U. S. 640; Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 2 L. ed. U. S. 435; M'Donald v. Smalley, 7 L. ed. U. S. 287; and Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

On the citizenship of corporations with reference to jurisdiction—see notes to National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 27 L. ed. U. S. 87, and Hope Ins. Co. v. Boardman, 3 L. ed. U. S. 36.

346

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia to review a judgment dismissing, as collusive, a suit brought by a South Dakota corporation against a citizen of Georgia. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Alex. C. King argued the cause, and, with Messrs. King, Spalding, & Little, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A corporation is, for the purposes of jurisdiction in the United States courts, conclusively presumed to be composed of citizens of the state of its creation.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 554, 557, 40 L. ed. 802, 805, 806, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Southern R. Co. v. Allison, 190 U. S. 326, 332, 47 L. ed. 1078, 1081, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; Louisville, C. & C. R. Co. v. Letson, 2 How. 497, 555, 11 L. ed. 353, 377; National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 27 L. ed. 87, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Cowles v. Mercer County, 7 Wall. 118, 19 L. ed. 86; Marshall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 16 How. 314, 14 L. ed. 953; Germania F. Ins. Co. v. Francis, 11 Wall. 210, 20 L. ed. 77; Ex parte Schollenberger, 96 U. S. 377, 24 L. ed. 854; Shaw v. Quincy Min. Co. (Ex parte Shaw) 145 U. S. 444, 446, 36 L. ed. 768, 770, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.

Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 327, 40 L. ed. 444, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307, is not controlling.

Maxfield v. Levy, 4 Dall. 330, 1 L. ed. 854, Fed. Cas. No. 9,321; M'Donald v. Smalley, 1 Pet. 620, 7 L. ed. 287; Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L. ed. 825; Irvine Co. v. Bond, 74 Fed. 854; Slaughter v. Mallet Land & Cattle Co. 72 C. C. A. 430, 141 Fed. 287.

Where a corporation is organized for bona fide and valid reasons, and title to property is bona fide vested in it, without any trust, expressed or secret, in favor of any other person, the fact that knowledge that such corporation could sue in the Federal court was also a reason for forming the same, and for vesting in it the title to the property, and converting the interest into an ownership of stock in lieu of an ownership of land, does not render the transaction other than bona fide, or in any way affect the jurisdiction of the United States court.

M'Donald v. Smalley, 1 Pet. 620, 624, 7 L. ed. 287, 289; Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 283, 18 L. ed. 825, 826; Crawford v. Neal, 144 U. S. 593, 36 L. ed. 556, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; DeLaveaga v. Williams, 6 Sawy. 573, Fed. Cas. No. 3,759; Neal v. Foster, 36 Fed. 41; Foote v. Hancock, 15 Blatchf. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 4,911; Dickerman v. Northern Trust Co. 176 U. S. 181,

211 U. S.

191, 44 L. ed. 423, 430, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; South Dakota v. North Carolina, 192 U. S. 286, 310, 311, 48 L. ed. 448, 457, 458, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269.

Mr. Olin J. Wimberly argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

A fraud upon the jurisdiction of the court derives no sanctity from the fact that the real parties may garb themselves in the attire of a foreign corporation.

Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 327, 40 L. ed. 444, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 596, 30 L. ed. 269, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32; Kreider v. Cole, 79 C. C. A. 339, 149 Fed. 647.

604] *Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This action of ejectment was brought in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of Georgia to recover a tract of land in that state. The plaintiff, the Southern Realty Investment Company, sued as a corporation of South Dakota, while the defendant is a citizen of Georgia.

The articles of incorporation filed by the company in South Dakota stated that the purpose for which the corporation was formed was to buy, sell, or lease real estate; open up farm lands and operate farms; carry on any business which may be deemed advantageous in connection with farming operations; borrow and lend money on such security as may be deemed advisable; make and furnish abstracts of title to lands; guarantee titles of lands; buy, sell, or discount notes, accounts, mortgages, bonds, judgments, executions, and commercial paper of any kind; issue bonds and secure the same by mortgage or conveyance of property, real or personal, and sell, pledge, or hypothecate such bonds; derive compensation and profit from such transactions; and generally to do any and everything needful to the carrying on of such business transactions.

The case was tried on a plea to the jurisdiction of the circuit court of the United States.

In that plea it was averred that although the petition alleged diversity of citizenship, the suit was not, in fact, one of that character, but one in which the parties have been improperly made for the purpose only of creating a case of which the circuit court of the United States could take cognizance; that the Southern Realty Investment Company was incorporated and organized, under the laws of South Dakota, at the instance of two named Georgia lawyers, in order that it might, under their direction, prosecute suits in the United States court that did not really and substantially involve disputes or controversies within its jurisdiction, but controversies really and substantially between citizens of Georgia; that the only business the company has is to prosecute suits in the United States courts, *in its[605 name, for those attorneys and other citizens of Georgia, to recover lands and mesne profits, of which suits those courts cannot properly take cognizance; and that the present suit against citizens of Georgia has been brought, in the name of the South Dakota corporation, for the use and benefit of certain other citizens of Georgia (the real and substantial plaintiffs in interest), for the purpose of conferring an apparent jurisdiction on the circuit court of the United States. The defendant's prayer was that the court should take no further cognizance of the action, but should dismiss it as one not really and substantially involving a dispute or controversy properly within the jurisdiction of the court, and one in which the parties to the suit had been improperly and collusively made for the purpose of creating a case cognizable in said court.

The plea to the jurisdiction was based on the act of Congress of March 3d, 1875, chap. 137, determining the jurisdiction of the circuit court of the United States, and regulating the removal of causes from state courts. By that act (§5) it was provided, among other things, that if, at any time after a suit is commenced in a circuit court of the United States, it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court "that such suit does not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy properly within the jurisdiction of said circuit court, or that the parties to said suit have been improperly or collusively made or joined, either as plaintiffs or defendants, for the purpose of creating a case cognizable or removable under this act, the said circuit court shall proceed no further therein, but shall dismiss the suit or remand it to the court from which it was removed, as justice may require," etc. 18 Stat. at L. 470, 472, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 508, 511.

At the trial of the plea to the jurisdiction, the plaintiff submitted various requests for instructions to the jury, but each of those requests was denied, the plaintiff duly excepting to the action of the court. One of the requests in effect called for a peremptory finding for the plaintiff; for the court was asked to say to the jury that no fact was disclosed that authorized the jury to find that the suit was not one of which the circuit court *of the United States could[606 take cognizance. The court charged the jury, and to one part of the charge the defendant took an exception.

The verdict of the jury sustained the plea, and thereupon the court dismissed the suit as one that did not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy within the jurisdiction of the court, and as one that was collusive within the meaning of the act of Congress.

A bill of exceptions was taken which embodied all the evidence introduced by each side at the trial.

We will not extend this opinion by setting out the evidence at large. Except in its special facts and circumstances this case does not differ from cases heretofore determined under the judiciary act of 1875. There was evidence leading to the conclusion that the Southern Realty Investment Company was brought into existence as a corporation only that its name might be used in having controversies that were really between citizens of Georgia determined in the Federal, rather than in the state, court. It did not have, nor was it expected to have, as a corporation, any will of its own or any real interest in the property that stood or was placed in its name. It was completely dominated by the two Georgia attorneys who secured its incorporation under the laws of South Dakota through the agency of a South Dakota lawyer, who, in a letter to one of the Georgia attorneys, claimed that his office had, within three years, secured nine hundred and eighty-five (985) charters under the laws of that state for nonresidents, and part of whose business was to "furnish" South Dakota incorporators, when necessary. In short, the plaintiff company was and is merely the agent of the Georgia attorneys, who brought it into existence as a corporation that individual citizens of Georgia, having controversies with other individual citizens of that state, might, in their discretion, have the use of its corporate name in order to create cases apparently within the jurisdiction of the Federal court. It had, it is true, a president and a board of directors,—all of whom were citizens of Georgia, two 607] of the five directors being *the Georgia attorneys, and one being the female stenographer of such attorneys,—but the president and a majority of the directors were the holders each of only one share of donated stock, and recognized it to be their duty to represent the Georgia attorneys and to obey, as they did obey, their will implicitly. The company, in respect of all its business, was the agent of those attorneys to do their bidding. Its president testified that he did not know for what purpose the company was really organized, or that it had ever done any business except "as to the bringing of these suits," or that it had any money. Its place of business in Georgia was in the office of the Georgia attorneys. Its pretended place of business in South Dakota was in what is called a domiciliary office, maintained by the attorney in that state who procured its charter. In the latter office there could have been found, no doubt, a desk and a chair or two, but no business. The company's president never knew of its doing any business in South Dakota. As a corporation the Southern Realty Investment Company must be deemed a mere sham. It has, in fact, no property or money really its own, and it was not intended by those who organized it that it should become the real owner of any property of its own in South Dakota or elsewhere. It is, as already stated, simply a corporation whose name may be used by individuals when they desire, for their personal benefit, to create a case technically cognizable in the Federal court. Those individuals, using the name of a corporation for the benefit of themselves and their clients, citizens of Georgia, seem to be the real parties in interest in every transaction carried on in the name of the corporation.

The present case is controlled by the decisions of this court in Williams v. Nottawa 104 U. S. 209, 211, 26 L. ed. 719, 720; Morris v. Gilmer, 129 U. S. 315, 328, 32 L. ed. 690, 694, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 329, 336, 40 L. ed. 445, 447, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307, et seq., and Miller & Lux v. East Side Canal & Irrig. Co. 211 U. S. 293, ante, 189, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111. The case is one in which it was the duty of the court, under the act of 1875, not to proceed. No error of law was committed at the trial to the substantial prejudice of the plaintiff. The charge to the jury fairly covered the issue *made by [608 the plea, and was not liable to any valid objection. The judgment must be affirmed.

It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Brewer dissents.

EL PASO & SOUTHWESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

H. D. VIZARD.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 608-612.)

Master and servant — contributory negligence.

1. Mounting a moving open water car by placing one foot on the journal box and catching hold of an iron hand rail running through standards on the side of NOTE.—Liability of railway company for injury to servant while using as handhold an appliance not designed for that purpose.

Very similar in its facts to EL PASO & S. W. R. Co. v. VIZARD is Quirouet v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 111 Ga. 315, 36 S. E. 599, where a railroad brakeman attempted to mount a moving car by placing one foot the car and within easy reach is not, as a matter of law, contributory negligence which will defeat a recovery by a brakeman for the injury sustained by the giving way of such rail under his weight.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, II. c. 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — review of facts.

2. A verdict of the jury in an action for personal injuries, approved by the trial court and by the circuit court of appeals, settles the disputed questions of fact.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4931-4959, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 31.]

Argued November 30, December 1, 1908.
Decided January 4, 1909.

on the journal box and grasping a standard furnished for the sole purpose of holding freight on the car, and was injured by the turning of the standard, which did not fit the socket. There was no hand-hold on the car, and no evidence that the company knew of or assented to a custom of employees to board cars in this way, and the brakeman's object could as well have been attained by boarding the caboose. On this state of facts a verdict directed in favor of defendant was sustained.

So, in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Murray, 85 Ark. 600, 16 L.R.A. (N.S.) 984, 109 S. W. 549, it was held that a verdict should have been directed in favor of a railway company sued for injuries received by a brakeman who attempted to use as a grab iron, while giving a signal, the standard of a freight car, which did not fit the socket, there being no evidence sufficient to show that such use of the standard was so continuous and so notorious that the company must have known of and sanctioned it.

To the same effect is Elgin, J. & E. R. Co. v. Docherty, 66 Ill. App. 17, where a switchman was held, as a matter of law, guilty of contributory negligence precluding any recovery from the railway company for injuries sustained by the giving way of the fastenings of the brake staff, which, in connection with the swinging brake beam, he was using in boarding a moving car, such car being supplied with hand-holds and stirrups, and his act being in direct violation of a rule of the company forbidding an employee to stand on the track and board an approaching engine or car.

So, in Timmons v. Central Ohio R. Co. 6 Ohio St. 106, a demurrer was sustained to a petition filed by a brakeman against a railway company to recover for injuries received in attempting to board a rapidly moving gravel ear by using the rim of the car box as a ladder.

An extreme application of the principle involved in these cases is found in Dawson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 52 C. C. A. 286, 114 Fed. 870, denying any right to recover for the death of a brakeman who

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Texas in favor of plaintiff in an action for personal injuries, which was removed to the Circuit Court from the District Court of El Paso County in the state of Texas. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

Defendant in error, plaintiff below, was a brakeman in the employ of the railroad company, plaintiff in error, and on February 22, 1904, was injured while in the performance of his duties as brakeman. He brought suit for $25,000 in the district court of El Paso county, Texas, charging was killed by reason of the giving way of a grip iron on the end of a flat car, which he had seized for the purpose of boarding the car, on the ground that, while such grip irons were proper hand-holds to be used in coupling or uncoupling, they were not intended or designed to be used for boarding the car.

The failure to have securely fastened the end gates of a gondola car, which are hinged, and can be laid inward on the car floor, so as to allow the car to be used as a flat car, is not negligence which will render the railway company liable to a brakeman who was injured while using the gate as a hand-hold in alighting from the car while in motion, although there was no hand-hold on the car. Graham v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 62 Fed. 896.

In McCauley v. Southern R. Co. 10 App. D. C. 560, it was held that where the fireman on a locomotive provided with footboards and hand rails on either side, but having no rail in front, went out on the side of the locomotive while it was in motion, and walked to the front, and, while removing a flag on the other side, supported himself by grasping a number plate, placed on the locomotive as a means of identification, and not as a support, and was thrown to the ground by the slipping of the plate,—he could not recover from the railway company for injuries so received, in the absence of evidence showing that his use of the number plate as a support was with the acquiescence or within the knowledge of the company.

But where a railway company uses a road engine for switching, and provides no special hand-hold in front, it is charged with the duty of giving the number plate, which is the most convenient projection for a man of ordinary size to grasp, such an inspection as it would give to a hand-hold. Dunn v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 40 C. C. A. 546, 107 Fed. 666.

In Brimer v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 109 Mo. App. 493, 85 S. W. 653, in which it appeared that the plaintiff, a laborer on a gravel train, was injured by the giving way of a stake on the side of one of the negligence on the part of the company. Subsequently he amended his petition by adding the allegation that the car, in getting onto which he was injured, was used in interstate shipment, and that the cause of the injury was a lack of hand holds and grab irons required by the safety appliance statute of the United States. Thereupon the railroad company removed the case to the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Texas. A trial was held in April, 1906, which resulted in a judgment for $6,000. This judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals, and from that court brought here on error.

Mr. J. F. Woodson argued the cause, and Mr. Millard Patterson filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Where an employee contributes to his own injury by unnecessarily subjecting himself to a known danger, he is not relieved from the charge of contributory negligence nor from its effect by the fact that it was a common thing for other employees to take the same risk.

American Linseed Co. v. Heins, 72 C. C. A. 533, 141 Fed. 50; Gilbert v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 63 C. C. A. 27, 128 Fed. 529.

It is the duty of a railway employee to use the appliances provided for his use, and particularly the appliances required by the safety appliance act; and where he fails to use such appliances, and exposes himself to an unnecessary danger, he assumes the risk of injury.

Gilbert v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. supra; Morris v. Duluth, S. S. & A. R. Co. 47 C. C. A. 661, 108 Fed. 749; Dawson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 52 C. C. A. 286, 114 Fed. 871; Weed v. Chicago, St. P.

M. & O. R. Co. 5 Neb. (Unof.) 623, 99 N. W. 828; Montgomery v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 109 Mo. App. 88, 83 S. W. 67; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 439-443, 24 L. ed. 506-508; Suttle v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. 75 C. C. A. 470, 144 Fed. 669; Crookston Lumber Co. v. Boutin, 79 C. C. A. 368, 149 Fed. 686; Quirouet v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 111 Ga. 315, 36 S. E. 599; Tuttle v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 122 U. S. 189, 30 L. ed. 1114, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1166; Powell v. Wisconsin C. R. Co. 159 Fed. 864; St. Louis, K. C. & C. R. Co. v. Conway, 86 C. C. A. 1, 156 Fed. 234; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Davis, 3 C. C. A. 429, 10 U. S. App. 422, 53 Fed. 61; Cunningham v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 5 McCrary, 465, 17 Fed. 882; New York, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Hamlin (Ind.) 10 L.R.A. (N.S.) 881, 79 N. E. 1040; Carrier v. Union P. R. Co. 61 Kan. 447, 59 Pac. 1075; Ferguson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 100 Iowa, 733, 69 N. W. 1026; Perry v. Michigan Alkali Co. 150 Mich. 537, 114 N. W. 315; State use of Miller v. Western Maryland R. Co. 105 Md. 30, 65 Atl. 635; Warden v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 94 Ala. 277, 14 L.R.A. 552, 10 So. 276; Bailey, Personal Injuries Relating to Master & Servant, § 1121; Doerr v. St. Louis Brewing Asso. 176 Mo. 547, 75 S. W. 600; Central R. Co. v. Mosely, 112 Ga. 914, 38 S. E. 350; Jayne v. Sebevaing Coal Co. 108 Mich. 242, 65 N. W. 971.

The evidence showing that Vizard attempted to use the hand rail for a purpose for which it was not intended, he assumed the risk of being injured.

Wood, Mast. & S. § 402; Bailey, Master's Liability for Injuries to Servant, p. 22; 1 Shearm. & Redf. Negl. p. 346.

cars, placed there for the purpose of holding boards to retain the gravel, and which the plaintiff was using to steady himself while the train was moving, which was a common practice of the employees engaged in this work, it was held that, inasmuch as such use was habitual, and one which should have been anticipated by the defendant, not only as a customary, but as a natural, use, it was liable for negligence in not using reasonable care to keep such stake safe for that purpose.

So, in Wallace v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. 141 N. C. 646, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 384, 54 S. E. 399, a railroad company which permitted a custom to become established by which its employees, to assist themselves in climbing over cars, in the performance of their duties, used the crosspieces nailed to the standards of loaded lumber cars, which were put on the cars for the sole purpose of holding the lumber in place, was held to be bound to exercise due care that they should be safe for such use. Accordingly recovery was allowed for the death of an employee, resulting from the pulling off of such crosspiece when he had hold of it as a support to sustain him in climbing over the end of the lumber on the car.

A street railway case involving this question is Carroll v. Union R. Co. 52 Misc. 163, 101 N. Y. Supp. 745, where the jury was held to be unwarranted in inferring actionable negligence on the part of the street railway company towards a conductor who was injured by the giving way under his weight of the band of a sign frame in which he was endeavoring, while standing on the dashboard of the car, to insert a slat bearing the name of a street.

For a discussion generally of the liability of a master for injury to servant in using appliance for purpose other than that for which it was primarily intended, see case note to Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Murray, 16 L.R.A. (N.S.) 984.

Mr. W. H. Robeson argued the cause, and Mr. George E. Wallace filed a brief for defendant in error:

Where the plaintiff's injury was caused by an act on his part which the law regards as negligence per se, he cannot excuse his contributory negligence by proof of the custom on the part of others to do the same act in the same way. But where an act is not negligence per se, the plaintiff, to rebut a charge of contributory negligence, may introduce evidence of a general custom among persons experienced in the performance of the same act, under similar circumstances, to perform it as he did.

29 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 418; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Tennessee, 191 U. S. 328, 48 L. ed. 202, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 99; San Antonio & A. Pass. R. Co. v. Waller, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 44, 65 S. W. 212; San Antonio & A. Pass. R. Co. v. Beam (Tex. Civ. App.) 50 S. W. 411; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Puente, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 246, 70 S. W. 362; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Clark, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1549, 55 S. W. 699; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Zink, 126 Pa. 288, 17 Atl. 614; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Milliken, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 489, 51 S. W. 796; Martin v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 95 Ky. 612, 26 S. W. 801; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Hobbs, 3 Ind. App. 445, 29 N. E. 934; Whitney v. Queen City Ice Co. 49 App. Div. 485, 63 N. Y. Supp. 535; Curtis v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 95 Wis. 460, 70 N. W. 665; Rifley v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 72 Minn. 469, 75 N. W. 704; San Antonio & A. Pass. R. Co. v. Engelhorn, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 324, 62 S. W. 561, 65 S. W. 68; Flanders v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 51 Minn. 193, 53 N. W. 544; Jeffrey v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co. 56 Iowa, 546, 9 N. W. 884; Whitsett v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 67 Iowa, 150, 25 N. W. 104; Waters v. Moss, 12 Cal. 535, 73 Am. Dec. 561; Prosser v. Montana C. R. Co. 17 Mont. 372, 30 L.R.A. 814, 43 Pac. 81; Keating v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 673; Nelson v. Southern P. Co. 18 Utah, 244, 55 Pac. 364; Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Tennessee, supra; Miller v. Illinois C. R. Co. 89 Iowa, 567, 57 N. W. 418.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The circumstances of the injury, generally speaking, were these: The freight train on which plaintiff was acting as brakeman was directed to stop at Osborne and pick up a water car. This water car was a flat car with a tank on it,—a temporary water car. It had an iron hand rail on each side and upright posts, or standards, through which, near the top, the rail extended, one each end of which was supposed to be a nut to hold the rail in position. After the water car and another car on the siding had been coupled to the train, the conductor gave the signal to pull out, and, as it drew near the switch, the water car passed the plaintiff, then standing on the ground. He put his foot on the journal box, reached up, and caught hold of the rail near the rear end of the car. It slipped out of the standard, and he fell and was injured. It appears that there was no nut at that end of the hand rail, and the weight of the plaintiff pulled the rail out from the standard. One witness, who examined the car just before as well as after the injury, said that the end of *the hand rail, where the nut ought to [611 have been, was rusty, as though none had been there for some time. Another witness supported him as to the rusty condition of the end of the rail immediately after the accident. There was testimony that plaintiff followed a common way of getting onto such a water car. Indeed, on an open, moving car, a hand rail running through standards on the side, and within easy reach, would naturally suggest doing just what the plaintiff did. It certainly could not be declared, as a matter of law, negligence. On the part of the defendant there was testimony that this car had a hand hold on the standard at the front end of the car, such as is required by the statute of the United States, that the company had an experienced inspector, who stated that he had inspected the car the day before the injury, found one nut gone, and replaced it, and that the car otherwise was in good condition.

This outline of the testimony is all that is sufficient, although there was quite a volume on both sides of the matters referred to. The court charged the jury as to the law governing the case, both in respect to the duty of the master to furnish a safe place, machinery, and tools, and the duty resting upon the employee of taking reasonable care of himself, following in the instructions the rules so often stated by this court. Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213, 25 L. ed. 612; Northern P. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 755, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 386, 37 L. ed. 772, 780, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Union P. R. Co. v. Daniels (Union P. R. Co. v. Snyder) 152 U. S. 684, 38 L. ed. 597, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Northern P. R. Co. v. Babcock, 154 U. S. 190, 38 L. ed. 958, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 978. Without reviewing the various instructions in detail, it is enough to say that they clearly presented the matters in dispute and stated the law applicable thereto correctly. The verdict of the jury, approved as it was by the trial and appellate courts, settles the disputed questions of fact.

Under these circumstances it does not seem necessary to notice in detail the several objections pointed out in the very elaborate argument of counsel for the railroad company. A careful examination discloses 612]no error in the proceedings. *The plaintiff was injured, and the questions of his care and the company's negligence were fully and fairly submitted to the jury.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals is affirmed.

shippers alike by resuming the transfer and return of cars loaded and unloaded between the line of a connecting carrier and the flour mill and elevator of a particular shipper, upon the latter's request and demand and payment of the theretofore customary charges, is not beyond the power of the state court,—at least, until Congress or the Interstate Commerce Commission takes specific action,—although both carriers are engaged in interstate commerce, and three fifths of the output of the mill are shipped out of the state.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 68-80, 334-336, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 16.]

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

LARABEE FLOUR MILLS COMPANY, a Partnership composed of F. D. and F. S.
Larabee.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 612-627.)

Mandamus — to carrier — discrimination.

1. A common carrier is bound to treat all shippers alike, and can be compelled to do so by mandamus or other proper writ, irrespective of legislative action or special mandate from any commission or other administrative board.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, II. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — congressional inaction.

2. The mere delegation by Congress to the Interstate Commerce Commission of certain national powers over interstate commerce is not the equivalent of the specific action by Congress in respect to the particular matters involved, which prevents a state from making regulations conducive to the welfare and the convenience of its citizens that may indirectly affect commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 68-80, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — state regulation — inaction of Congress or Interstate Commerce Commission.

3. Compelling a carrier by mandamus to discharge its common-law duty to treat all

Argued November 11, 12, 1908. Decided January 11, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment compelling a carrier by mandamus to resume the transfer and return of cars loaded and unloaded from the line of a connecting carrier to the flour mill and elevator of a particular shipper, upon request and demand of such shipper and upon payment of the customary charges. Affirmed.

See same case below, 74 Kan. 808, 88 Pac. 72.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On September 15, 1906, the Larabee Flour Mills Company (hereinafter called the mill company) filed its application in the supreme court of Kansas for an alternative writ of mandamus, compelling the Missouri Pacific Railway Company (hereinafter called the Missouri Pacific) to restore, resume, and make transfer of cars between the lines of the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railway Company (hereinafter called the Santa Fe) and the mill and elevators of the plaintiff, situated in the town of Stafford. The following diagram shows the location of the mill and railroad tracks:

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L.R.A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; and Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158.

On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas, & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L.

ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

On the duties and liability of carriers as to furnishing facilities for transportation—see note to Harp v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. 61 C. C. A. 414.

As to the right of a carrier at common law to discriminate between passengers or shippers—see note to Louisville, E. & St. L. Consol. R. Co. v. Wilson, 18 L.R.A. 105.

On mandamus to compel operation of railroad—see note to State ex rel. Little v. Dodge City, M. & T. R. Co. 24 L.R.A. 564.

613]*

614] *Line "A" represents the main line of the Santa Fe Railway Company; line "B," the main line of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company; line "C," the transfer track owned by the Santa Fe Company; "D," the mill of the Larabee Company; "E," the spur track running from the main line of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company. The distance from "F" to "G" on the main line of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company is about 1 mile.

Upon the filing of this application and the answer and return of the Missouri Pacific the matter was referred to a commissioner who reported his findings of fact, which, so far as are material to the questions presented, are as follows: Stafford is a flourishing town of 1,600 people, situated in the midst of a wheat-growing district of the state. The mill company has, for more than four years, been operating a flouring mill of 1,000 barrels daily capacity. About three fifths of its product is shipped out of the state of Kansas into other states, and the remaining two fifths to points within the state. It receives a large portion of its grain in car-load lots over the two roads.

The Missouri Valley Car Service & Storage

Association (hereinafter called the car service association) is an unincorporated voluntary association of a number of railroad companies, having a manager and other employees. The object and the duty of this association is to represent and protect the interests and enforce the rights of the members thereof in the interchange of freight cars, the prompt loading, unloading, and return of cars interchanged or delivered to shippers for traffic purposes. It had been in operation for many years, commencing prior to any of the transactions mentioned in this litigation. Its objects, operations, and methods were generally understood by commercial shippers, and acquiesced in as appropriate for securing to the shipping public the greatest amount of service over the roads composing it.

No express contract existed between the two railroad companies requiring either to use or to permit the other to use the transfer track, or requiring either to place empty or loaded cars thereon, to be taken away or returned by the other. Whenever the Santa Fe placed its empty cars for the mill company on the transfer track, the Missouri Pacific, upon notice thereof, hauled and delivered them at the mill on the siding connecting it with the Missouri Pacific. The Santa Fe and the Missouri Pacific both held themselves out as ready to do such and like transferring, and continued to do so after the controversy arose in this case for all industries located on the Missouri Pacific at Stafford, making car-load shipments in or out over the Santa Fe, except the mill company. A controversy arose between the Missouri Pacific and the mill company as to two charges for demurrage; one for demurrage between December 12, 1905, and April 26, 1906, and the other between July 24 and August 14, 1906. Payment of both was demanded by the car service association. One of them, the mill company offered to pay; the other it refused, on the ground that the delay and detention were not caused by its fault, but by the defective, insufficient, and inadequate service of the Missouri Pacific in placing the cars for unloading and reloading. For a failure to pay both these charges the Missouri Pacific, by the direction of the car service association, ceased and refused to make further delivery to the mill company of empty cars placed on the transfer track for the use of the mill company by the Santa Fe, in consequence of which the mill company, when desiring to ship any of its products from Stafford by the Santa Fe, was compelled to haul the same in wagons from its mill to the station of the Santa Fe and there load into cars. This entailed upon the mill company great inconvenience and additional expense in the management of its business. The refusal of the Missouri Pacific was based solely upon the ground above stated, and not upon a claim that the compensation paid for the service was unsatisfactory, or that the service constituted a part of interstate commerce, or that the Missouri Pacific did not undertake to perform services of such character.

The commissioner also found that the detention of the cars on account of which the demurrage charge was refused payment 616]*by the mill company was caused as much by the defective motive power and insufficient train service of the Missouri Pacific as from any fault or omission on the part of the mill company.

The case coming on for hearing before the supreme court of the state, a peremptory writ of mandamus was ordered, commanding the Missouri Pacific to immediately resume the transfer and return of cars loaded and unloaded from the line of the Santa Fe to and from the mill and elevator at the station and city of Stafford, upon the request and demand of the mill company, and upon payment of the theretofore customary charges.

Mr. Baillie P. Waggener argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The office of a mandamus is to compel the performance of a plain and positive duty.

Taxing Dist. v. Loague, 129 U. S. 500, 32 L. ed. 780, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Ex parte Cutting, 94 U. S. 20, 24 L. ed. 50; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington Territory, 142 U. S. 498, 509, 35 L. ed. 1094, 1098, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 283.

Congress, by and through the interstate commerce acts, has not only impliedly, but expressly, excluded every state from any interference with or control over any part of the instrumentalities of an interstate carrier, including its rails, equipment, and instrumentalities used in the discharge of its duties to the public,—except, perhaps, only the power of police regulation.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 271, 23 L. ed. 548.

It is said, however, that under the decisions of this court, there is a kind of neutral ground, especially in that covered by the regulation of commerce, which may be occupied by the state, and its legislation be valid so long as it interferes with no act of Congress or treaty of the United States. Such a proposition is supported by the opinion of several of the judges in the Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 12 L. ed. 702, by the decisions of this court in Cooley v. Port Wardens, supra, and by the cases of Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. ed. 745. But this doctrine has always been controverted in this court, and has seldom, if ever, been stated without dissent. These decisions, however, all agree that under the commerce clause of the Constitution, or within its compass, there are powers which, from their nature, are exclusive in Congress, and in the case of Cooley v. Port Wardens it was said that whatever subjects of this power are in their nature national, or admit of one uniform system or plan of regulation, may justly be said to be of such a nature as to require exclusive legislation by Congress.

See also South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 10, 12, 23 L. ed. 783, 784; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 103, 23 L. ed. 820; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 529; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 489, 24 L. ed. 548.

It was the intention of Congress to place every officer, employee, servant, and agent, as well as the business of every interstate carrier, including the tracks, cars, equipments, and instrumentalities of every kind, nature, and description, under the exclusive control and supervision of the Interstate Commerce Commission. No joint or divided jurisdiction and power were conferred or attempted to be delegated. To permit a state, now that Congress has acted, to exercise any control over the interstate carrier or any of the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, will necessarily result in that confusion and conflict which this court has so uniformly condemned.

Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 702, 26 L. ed. 241; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 204, 29 L. ed. 162, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 632, 29 L. ed. 260, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 455, 29 L. ed. 694, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 117 U. S. 49, 29 L. ed. 790, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 569-577, 30 L. ed. 248-251, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 494, 30 L. ed. 696, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 245-247, 30 L. ed. 894, 895, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 490, 31 L. ed. 708, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 148, 32 L. ed. 639, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 108, 34 L. ed. 132, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 300, 303, 38 L. ed. 722, 723, 4 Inters. Com. Rep.

658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 209, 223, 38 L. ed. 965, 970, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 470, 38 L. ed. 1054, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 11, 12, 39 L. ed. 328, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 104, 39 L. ed. 913, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412-426, 42 L. ed. 1088-1096, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 160, 45 L. ed. 136, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 38-43, 46 L. ed. 421-423, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Kelley v. Rhoads, 188 U. S. 5-10, 47 L. ed. 361-363, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 196 U. S. 203-206, 49 L. ed. 448, 449, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 514; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 327-331, 50 L. ed. 774-776, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 558, 50 L. ed. 1147, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722.

In view of this most comprehensive legislation upon the subject, what jurisdiction, control, or authority has the state over the interstate carrier, or any instrumentality "used" by it? Has not this question been firmly settled by this court?

Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 56-62, 35 L. ed. 652-654, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. ed. 935, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; and Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 652, 653, 39 L. ed. 298-300, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 610, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

The court erred in assuming jurisdiction of the controversy in so far as it involved the instrumentalities in use by an interstate carrier, and the subject-matter of interstate commerce.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

At common law a carrier is not bound to carry except on his own line; and, if he contracts to go beyond, he may, in the absence of statutory regulations to the contrary, determine for himself what agencies he will employ. He may certainly select his own agencies, and his own associates for doing his own work.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 680, 28 L. ed. 296, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

53 L. ed.

The courts have no authority to dictate a contract to the defendant, or to require it to make one.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 571, 48 L. ed. 569, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339.

If it is unlawful for a state to impose any tax upon commerce between the states, as has been so often decided by this court (Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. ed. 303; Almy v. California, 24 How. 169, 16 L. ed. 644; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. ed. 785, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; New York v. Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59, 27 L. ed. 383, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 550; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; State Tonnage Tax Cases (Cox v. Lott) 12 Wall. 204, 20 L. ed. 370; Cannon v. New Orleans, 20 Wall. 577, 22 L. ed. 417), would it not be equally unlawful for any state, by rule or regulation, to attempt to control or superintend any instrumentality of interstate commerce, especially in view of the fact that Congress, by its affirmative legislation, has covered the whole field of operation?

Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 16 L. ed. 243; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 229, 6 L. ed. 78; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 1, 5 L. ed. 19; Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 617, 10 L. ed. 1089; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306; 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 515, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 196 U. S. 194, 49 L. ed. 444, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 514; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 327, 50 L. ed. 774, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491.

Is it due process of law to require the Missouri Pacific Railway Company to leave its own rails with its engines, and go onto the right of way, tracks, and terminals of the Sante Fe Railway Company,—a competing carrier,—and perform a service for it, or for its patrons?

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. supra; Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113, 192 U. S. 568, 572, 48 L. ed. 565, 570, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 558-563, 50 L. ed. 1147-1149, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722.

The referee finds that the mill company ships from its mill over these two roads substantially its entire product, three fifths of which is so shipped out of the state of Kansas and into other states, etc. The same was interstate commerce, and beyond, and not within, the regulatory power of the state or the state court.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 21, 22, 49 L. ed. 370, 371, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 562, 50 L. ed. 1148, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; United States v. Northern Pacific Terminal Co. 144 Fed. 863; United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 323.

The railroad tracks, spurs, switches, terminals, depots, and yards of the Sante Fe and Missouri Pacific companies at Stafford were instrumentalities of interstate commerce, and, as such, the regulation and control thereof vested exclusively in the Interstate Commerce Commission. The judgment of the state court is necessarily a regulation not only of interstate commerce, but of the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, within the meaning of the Federal Constitution.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 211, 40 L. ed. 944, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 489, 24 L. ed. 548; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 346-375, 47 L. ed. 497-508, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Seranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 160, 45 L. ed. 136, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 153 U. S. 104, 39 L. ed. 912, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Welton v. State, 91 U. S. 280, 23 L. ed. 349; Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 9, 24 L. ed. 710; Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 561, 35 L. ed. 576, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. 568, 21 L. ed. 714; Wisconsin v. Duluth, 96 U. S. 387, 24 L. ed. 671; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 564, 19 L. ed. 1002; United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 333; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 196 U. S. 1, 49 L. ed. 363, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 158; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 685, 24 L. ed. 559; Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 34, 23 L. ed. 199; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 490, 31 L. ed. 708, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 148, 32 L. ed. 639, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep.

256; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 108, 34 L. ed. 108, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 108, 34 L. ed. 392, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 204, 29 L. ed. 162, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 78, 52 L. ed. 693, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428.

The delegation of power to the United States to regulate commerce among the states is certainly more specific and definite and comprehensive than the implied delegation of power to authorize the creation of national banks, and yet this court has many times held that the states could exercise no control over, or regulation of, national banks not expressly authorized by Congress.

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, supra; Davis v. Elmira Sav. Bank, 161 U. S. 283, 40 L. ed. 701, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502.

In the express delegation of power "to regulate commerce" among the states, there is no express or implied reservation "to the states respectively, or to the people," and it follows that Congress having acted, the states are without authority.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission; Gibbons v. Ogden; and Brown v. Maryland,—supra; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 103, 23 L. ed. 820; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 271, 23 L. ed. 548; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 489, 24 L. ed. 548; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 702, 26 L. ed. 241; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, supra; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 632, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 455, 29 L. ed. 964, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Robbins v. Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 494, 30 L. ed. 696, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

The power of Congress is supreme over the whole subject (of interstate commerce), unimpeded and unembarrassed by state lines or state laws; in this matter the country is one, and the work to be accomplished is national, and state interests, state jealousies, and state prejudices do not require to be consulted; in matters of foreign and interstate commerce there are no states.

Stockton v. Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 411, 32 Fed. 17; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, supra.

Railroads are the private property of their owners; while, from the public character of the work in which they are engaged, the public has the power to prescribe rules for securing faithful and efficient service and equality between shippers and communities, yet, in no proper sense, is the public a general manager.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 123, 52 L. ed. 705, 714, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

Mr. Charles Blood Smith argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John C. Waters, Joseph G. Waters, and W. H. Rossington, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The service affected by the state court's judgment is purely local and intrastate.

New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 84, 47 L. ed. 395, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 167 U. S. 633, 42 L. ed. 306, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 51 L. ed. 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360.

The judgment of the state court is not a regulation of interstate commerce within the meaning of the Federal Constitution.

Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115, 71 Minn. 519, 40 L.R.A. 389, 70 Am. St. Rep. 358, 74 N. W. 893; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

If the Hepburn act, in its purpose or necessary effect, confers upon the Federal authorities the exclusive regulation and control of instrumentalities used for the doing of interstate business, irrespective of their being also employed in doing an intrastate or domestic business, then that act is, to that extent, unconstitutional and void.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 194, 195, 6 L. ed. 69, 70; Passenger Cases, 7 How. 400, 12 L. ed. 751; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 243, 16 L. ed. 247; Trade Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, 25 L. ed. 550; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 565, 30 L. ed. 247, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 209, 38 L. ed. 965, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 564, 19 L. ed. 1001; Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 532, 40 L. ed. 798, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 247, 44 L. ed. 150, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.

An argument in favor of the theory of the exclusive Federal control cannot be predicated upon the theory of inferred powers under the Constitution, and outside of the express and enumerated powers of the Constitution. This is a government of enumerated powers. It is true, as a general proposition, that all means necessary to the carrying out of these enumerated powers exist in Congress, within the fair implication of the powers granted, but such implications may not be used, however apparently needful and expedient they may seem to be, to annul a plain reservation from, or limitation upon the exercise of, such enumerated powers.

Kansas v. Colorado, 206 U. S. 80-93, 51 L. ed. 967-973, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648.

Mr. Joseph G. Waters also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles Blood Smith, John F. Switzer, and John C. Waters, filed a brief for defendant in error:

If, as the railway company has asserted, this was an interstate service, the burden was on it to show it by proof; and, in the absence of such proof, the service having been commenced and ended in a city of Kansas, far interior, this court has not only said that the presumption would be that it was an internal service, but that there is no presumption that a transportation, when commenced, is to be continued beyond the state limits.

New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 27, 48 L. ed. 327, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 414, 51 L. ed. 546, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360.

Railroads, from the public nature of the business by them carried on, and the interest which the public have in their operation, are subject, as to their state business, to state regulation, which may be exerted either directly by the legislative authority, or by administrative bodies endowed with power to that end.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 19, 51 L. ed. 941, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 398; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa (Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cutts) 94 U. S. 155, 24 L. ed. 94; Peik v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. ed. 97; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ackley, 94 U. S. 179, 24 L. ed. 99; Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Blake, 94 U. S. 180, 24 L. ed. 99; Stone v. Wisconsin, 94 U. S. 181, 24 L. ed. 102; Ruggles v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 536, 27 L. ed. 816, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 832; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 541, 27 L. ed. 818, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 839; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Stone v. Illinois C. R. Co. 116 U. S. 347, 29 L. ed.

650, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Stone v. New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. 116 U. S. 352, 29 L. ed. 651, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349, 391; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. ed. 1051, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 665, 40 L. ed. 838, 844, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677-695, 40 L. ed. 849-857, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 193 U. S. 53, 48 L. ed. 614, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 584, 50 L. ed. 596, 605, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Florida, 203 U. S. 256, 51 L. ed. 174, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Florida, 203 U. S. 261, 51 L. ed. 175, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 457, 38 L. ed. 1050, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 191, 40 L. ed. 935, 937, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82, 92, 47 L. ed. 394, 398, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 342, 48 L. ed. 702, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

Messrs. Clad Hamilton, Joseph G. Waters, John F. Switzer, and John C. Waters also filed a brief for defendant in error.

There is no interstate commerce in this case.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. ed. 291, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 193, 40 L. ed. 938, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Ex parte Koehler, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 28, 30 Fed. 869; Iowa v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 425, 33 Fed. 397; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N.

R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 567; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 249, 51 Fed. 465; Little Rock & M. R. Co. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 537, 59 Fed. 403; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 763, 41 Fed. 559; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 52 Fed. 915; Express Cases, 117 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 791, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 542, 628; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 488, 48 L. ed. 272, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 614, 42 L. ed. 879, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

Neither by the common law nor by the interstate commerce law have the national courts been vested with jurisdiction to compel interstate carriers to enter into arrangements or agreements with each other for the through billing of freight or for joint through rates. Agreements of this nature under existing laws depend upon the voluntary action of the parties, and cannot be enforced by judicial proceedings without additional legislation.

Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 26 L.R.A. 192, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 854, 11 C. C. A. 421, 27 U. S. App. 380, 63 Fed. 775; Southern R. Co. v. Rhodes, 30 C. C. A. 157, 58 U. S. App. 349, 86 Fed. 422; St. Louis Drayage Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 137, 65 Fed. 39; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 763, 41 Fed. 559; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 454, 3 I. C. C. Rep. 1; Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 173.

In the absence of statutory provision, the interchange of traffic between two connecting railroads is a matter for contract between them, and the courts have no power to compel such interchange, or to fix the terms on which it shall be made. Nor is such power conferred by the interstate commerce act.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. supra; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 249, 51 Fed. 465, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 718, 9 C. C. A. 409, 15 U. S. App. 479, 61 Fed. 162.

It is within the power of a state to require connecting tracks between two railroad companies at an intersection, for the transfer of cars used in local business of such lines of railroad. This may have been necessary for state commerce.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. supra.

Carriers are free to make arrangements of this sort by contract among themselves for local service, and there was nothing in the act which authorized either the Commission or the courts to compel one railroad company to deliver its cars to another.

Railroad Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 10 Inters. Com. Rep. 188.

Whenever a separation in fact exists between transportation service wholly within the state and that between the states, a like separation may be recognized between the control of the state and that of the nation.

New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 27, 48 L. ed. 327, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Pullman Co. v. Adams, 189 U. S. 420, 47 L. ed. 877, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82, 47 L. ed. 394, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

The intention or the purpose of the owners of an interstate shipment of a car load of grain or other provisions, to forward such car from the original terminal point to another point in the same state, does not make the shipment between such two points, when performed by a connecting carrier, to which the car was delivered by the original terminal carrier in obedience to the instructions of the owner, an interstate one, and, as such, exempt from the regulations of the state railroad commission.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 414, 51 L. ed. 546, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

All questions arising under the Constitution and laws of the state of Kansas are settled adversely to the plaintiff in error by the decision of the supreme court of the state. Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829, and cases cited in the opinion. This brings within a narrow range the controversy which this court is called upon to decide.

Coming directly to that, counsel for plaintiff in error contend that no duty was imposed on the railroad company by act of the legislature or mandate of commission or other administrative board. Conceding this, it is also true that the Missouri Pacific was a common carrier, and, as such, was engaged in the work of transferring cars from the Santa Fe track to the mill company, and, after this controversy arose, continued like transfer for all industries located on the Missouri Pacific at Stafford, except the mill company. While no one can be compelled to engage in the business of a common carrier, yet, when he does so, certain duties are imposed which can be enforced by mandamus or other suitable remedy. The Missouri Pacific engaged in the business of transferring cars from the Santa Fe track to industries located at Stafford, and continued to do so for all parties except the mill company. So long as it engaged in such transfer it was bound to treat all industries at Stafford alike, and could not refuse to do for one that which it was doing for others. No legislative enactment, no special mandate from any commission or other administrative board, was necessary, for the duty arose from the fact that it was a common carrier. This lies at the foundation of the law of common carriers. Whenever one engages in that business, the obligation of equal service to all arises; and that obligation, irrespective of legislative action or special mandate, can be enforced by the courts. Neither is [620 there any significance in the absence of a special contract between the Missouri Pacific and the mill company. It appears that the practice theretofore had been for the Missouri Pacific to charge the Santa Fe for the transfer,—that the latter collected the total freight and paid the Missouri Pacific its switching charges. There is no suggestion that the amount of this charge was changed in favor of any other shipper; and, so long as that was so, it was the charge which the Missouri Pacific was entitled to make for cars transferred at the instance of the mill company. If, in the future, a change is made in behalf of shippers generally, undoubtedly that change can be made operative in respect to the mill company. Indeed, all these questions are disposed of by one well-established proposition, and that is that a party engaging in the business of a common carrier is bound to treat all shippers alike, and can be compelled to do so by mandamus or other proper writ.

But the main contention on the part of the Missouri Pacific runs along an entirely different line. It is that the Missouri Pacific and the Santa Fe are common carriers, engaged in interstate commerce, and, as such, are subject to the control of Congress, and, therefore, in these respects not amenable to the power of the state. It appears from the findings that about three fifths of the flour of the mill company is shipped out of the state, while the other two fifths is shipped to points within the state. In addition, the hauling of the empty cars from the Santa Fe track to the mill was, if commerce at all, commerce within the state.

The roads are, therefore, engaged in both interstate commerce and that within the state. In the former, they are subject to the regulation of Congress; in the latter, to that of the state; and, to enforce the proper relation between Congress and the state, the full control of each over the commerce subject to its dominion must be preserved. Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648. How the separateness of control is to be accomplished, it is unnecessary to determine. 621] Its existence is recognized in the *1st section of the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), as well as in that of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 893), for each provides:

"That the provisions of this act shall not apply to the transportation of passengers or property, or to the receiving, delivering, storage, or handling of property, wholly within one state, and not shipped to or from a foreign country, from or to any state or territory, as aforesaid."

This case does not rest upon any distinction between interstate commerce and that wholly within the state. It is the contention of counsel for the mill company that it comes within the oft-repeated rule that the state, in the absence of express action by Congress, may regulate many matters which indirectly affect interstate commerce, but which are for the comfort and convenience of its citizens. Of the existence of such a rule there can be no question. It is settled and illustrated by many cases.

Thus, in Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996, it was held that a regulation of pilots and pilotage was a regulation of commerce within the grant of the power of Congress; but further that (p. 319):

"The mere grant of such a power to Congress did not imply a prohibition on the states to exercise the same power; that it is not the mere existence of such a power, but its exercise by Congress, which may be incompatible with the exercise of the same power by the states, and that the states may legislate in the absence of congressional regulations. Sturges v. Crownshield, 4 Wheat. 193, 4 L. ed. 548; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 1, 5 L. ed. 19; Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 251, 7 L. ed. 414."

In Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722, is a collection by Mr. Justice Brown, speaking for this court, of a number of these cases. We quote from the opinion (pp. 516, 517):

"Few classes of cases have become more common of recent years than those wherein the police power of the state over the vehicles of interstate commerce has been drawn in question. That such power exists and will be enforced, notwithstanding *the[622 constitutional authority of Congress to regulate such commerce, is evident from the large number of cases in which we have sustained the validity of local laws designed to secure the safety and comfort of passengers, employees, persons crossing railway tracks, and adjacent property owners, as well as other regulations intended for the public good.

"We have recently applied this doctrine to state laws requiring locomotive engineers to be examined and licensed by the state authorities. (Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564); requiring such engineers to be examined from time to time with respect to their ability to distinguish colors (Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28); requiring telegraph companies to receive dispatches and to transmit and deliver them with due diligence, as applied to messages from outside the state (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934); forbidding the running of freight trains on Sunday (Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086); requiring railway companies to fix their rates annually for the transportation of passengers and freight, and also requiring them to post a printed copy of such rates at all their stations (Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. 560, 21 L. ed. 710); forbidding the consolidation of parallel or competing lines of railway (Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714); regulating the heating of passenger cars, and directing guards and guard posts to be placed on railroad bridges and trestles and the approaches thereto (New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418); providing that no contract shall exempt any railroad corporation from the liability of a common carrier or a carrier of passengers, which would have existed if no contract had been made (Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289); and declaring that when a common carrier accepts for transportation anything directed to a point of destination beyond the terminus of his own line or route, he shall be deemed thereby to assume an obligation for its safe carriage to such point of destination, unless, at the time of such acceptance, such carrier be released or exempted from such liability by contract in writing, signed by the owner or his agent 623] (Richmond & A. *R. Co. v. R. A. Patterson Tobacco Co. 169 U. S. 311, 42 L. ed. 759, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335). In none of these cases was it thought that the regulations were unreasonable, or operated in any just sense as a restriction upon interstate commerce."

See also Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613-626, 42 L. ed. 878-882, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, 47 L. ed. 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

On the other hand, it is said that Congress has already acted,—has created the Interstate Commerce Commission, and given to it a large measure of control over interstate commerce. But the fact that Congress has intrusted power to that Commission does not, in the absence of action by it, change the rule which existed prior to the creation of the Commission. Congress could always regulate interstate commerce, and could make specific provisions in reference thereto, and yet this has not been held to interfere with the power of the state in these incidental matters. A mere delegation by Congress to the Commission of a like power has no greater effect, and does not of itself disturb the authority of the state. It is not contended that the Commission has taken any action in respect to the particular matters involved. It may never do so, and no one can, in advance, anticipate what it will do when it acts. Until then the authority of the state in merely incidental matters remains undisturbed. In other words, the mere grant by Congress to the Commission of certain national powers in respect to interstate commerce does not of itself, and in the absence of action by the Commission, interfere with the authority of the state to make those regulations conducive to the welfare and convenience of its citizens. Running through the entire argument of counsel for the Missouri Pacific is the thought that the control of Congress over interstate commerce, and a delegation of that control to a commission, necessarily withdraws from the state all power in respect to regulations of a local character. This proposition cannot be sustained. Until specific action by Congress or the Commission, the control of the state over these incidental matters remains undisturbed. But it is further contended that this 624] is *not a mere incidental matter, indirectly affecting interstate commerce, but directly a part of such commerce, and therefore beyond the power of the state to control; and, in support of that, McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722, is referred to. There are many points of resemblance between that case and this, but there is this substantial distinction: In that was presented and determined solely the power of a state commission to make orders respecting the delivery of cars engaged in interstate commerce beyond the right of way of the carrier and to a private siding,—an order which affected the movement of the cars prior to the completion of the transportation; while here is presented, as heretofore indicated, the question of the power of the state to prevent discrimination between shippers, and the common-law duty resting upon a carrier was enforced. This common-law duty the state, in a case like the present; may—at least, in the absence of congressional action,—compel a carrier to discharge.

We see no error in the ruling of the Supreme Court of Kansas, and its judgment is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Holmes:

I concur in the judgment on the ground that the cars had not yet been appropriated to interstate commerce, and so were subject to state control. For this reason I have not found it necessary to make up my mind on the considerations that will be urged by Mr. Justice Moody, although I am inclined to agree with his views.

Mr. Justice Moody, dissenting:

I find myself unable to agree in the reasoning by which the judgment of the state court is affirmed. Upon the peculiar facts of this case, it is possible to say that the cars whose transfer was directed did not become the subjects of interstate commerce until they had been selected as such after their delivery upon the tracks of the Santa Fe Railroad. If the decision were put upon that ground, I should be silent.

*But it is assumed that three-fifths[625 of them were interstate shipments, and, with respect to such shipments, I am constrained to believe that the judgment of the court below exceeded the power of the state. The division of the governmental power over commerce, made by the Constitution, by which the control of interstate commerce is vested in the nation and the control of intrastate commerce is vested in the states, together with the fact that both kinds of commerce are often conducted by the same persons and corporations, through the same agencies, gives rise to highly perplexing questions in practice. The regulation of carriers and other instrumentalities of commerce is constantly undertaken, both by the nation and the states; and the extent and limit of the respective powers vested in each government, as far as possible, ought to be accurately ascertained and declared. This is demanded imperatively for the orderly conduct of the vast transportation agencies which are engaged in both kinds of commerce. They ought not to be left uncertain as to the power to which they are responsible.

I venture to think that the weight of authority establishes the following principles: The commerce clause of the Constitution vests the power to regulate interstate commerce exclusively in the Congress, and leaves the power to regulate intrastate commerce exclusively in the states. Both powers being exclusive, neither can be directly exercised except by the government in which it is vested. Though the state may not directly control interstate commerce, it may often indirectly affect that commerce by the exercise of other governmental powers with which it is undoubtedly clothed. And this indirect effect may be allowed to operate until the Congress enacts legislation conflicting with it, to which it must yield as the paramount power. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 204, 6 L. ed. 23, 72; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Wharton, 207 U. S. 328, 334, 52 L. ed. 230, 234, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Asbell v. Kansas, 209 U. S. 251, 52 L. ed. 778, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

In the case at bar, upon the facts as they are assumed to exist, it seems to me that the 626 judgment of the court below *directly regulated interstate commerce. If this is so, it is unimportant that the Congress has been silent. A power clearly withdrawn from the state, and vested in the nation, can no longer be exercised by the states, even though the Congress is silent. Where the Congress fails to act, the subject enjoys freedom from direct control.

The principles which I have stated have been recently applied by this court in the case of McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 50 L. ed. 1142, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722. I cannot escape from the conviction that that case requires a reversal of the judgment of the court below, so far as it assumes to direct the conduct of interstate commerce. In that case the place of business of a private corporation was reached by a spur track connecting with the main track of the railroad. It had been the custom of the railroad to deliver cars consigned to this corporation from the main track to the spur track. In consequence of a dispute concerning demurrage, the railroad refused to continue thus to deliver cars. The state commission made an order requiring the railroad to deliver certain cars engaged in interstate commerce upon the spur track on payment of freight charges. The order was held to be a regulation of such commerce, and repugnant to the commerce clause of the Constitution. In that case the regulation affected the last stages of the interstate journey. In this case it affects the first stages of the interstate journey. But, in each case, the commerce which was regulated was interstate. In that case the order was issued by a commission, and in this case by a court. But nothing turns upon that distinction, for, by whatever state agency the power is exercised, it is void, because it exceeds the authority which may rightfully be conferred by the state upon any agency.

I am not ready to assent to the proposition that, although the Congress has vested in the Interstate Commerce Commission the authority to deal with the exact situation presented to us, that fact is immaterial, because the Commission has taken no action. If the Commission has the authority to deal with a question of this kind, those who have grievances ought to *resort to that 627 body for relief. It is a very great hardship to subject the carriers to possibly conflicting regulations, and leave them uncertain which government may rightfully assert its controlling authority. So it was said in the McNeill Case, that the order there "asserted a power concerning a subject directly covered by the act of Congress to regulate commerce, and the amendments to that act, which forbid, and provide remedies to prevent, unjust discriminations and the subjecting to undue disadvantages by carriers engaged in interstate commerce." This statement was made as an additional reason for holding the state action invalid, and seems in conflict with the holding in this case.

I am authorized to state that Mr. Justice White joins in this opinion.

DECATUR MORGAN and Jennie G. Morgan, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES H. ADAMS, Frank W. Adams, and Carrie M. Adams.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 627-630.)

Appeal — amount in dispute.

The jurisdictional amount necessary to sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, to review a decree denying probate to a will of personalty, is not involved where the total amount of the legacies to those interested in having the will admitted to probate is less than $5,000.

NOTE.—As to amount necessary to give United States Supreme Court jurisdiction—see notes to Schunk v. Moline, M. & S. Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 256; and Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 12 L. ed. U. S. 169.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 550-554, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 50.]

Argued December 9, 10, 1908. Decided January 11, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, refusing probate to a will of personalty. Dismissed for lack of jurisdictional amount in dispute.

See same case below, 29 App. D. C. 198.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. E. Hilton Jackson argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. J. J. Darlington and S. Herbert Giesy argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error.

628] *Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error brings up for review the judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, confirming the judgment of the probate court, entered upon a verdict of a jury upon issues framed under a caveat filed against a paper writing alleged to be the last will and testament of Julia M. Adams. The will was presented for probate by Decatur Morgan, who was named therein as executor, and who, with his wife, Jennie G. Morgan, were the principal legatees therein. Defendants in error, who were respectively nephews and nieces of the deceased, filed a caveat against the probate of the will, alleging the incapacity of the deceased to make a will, and also alleging undue influence and fraud and coercion exercised upon her by the Morgans and other persons. An answer was filed denying the allegations of the caveat, and the following issues were framed for submission to the jury: (1) Was the written paper propounded as the last will and testament of the deceased executed in due form of law? (2) Was the testatrix, at the time of executing the will, of sound and disposing mind? (3) Was it procured by the undue influence of Decatur Morgan or Jennie G. Morgan, or other person or persons? (4) Was it procured by fraud or coercion of either of the Morgans, or other person or persons.

A jury was impaneled to try the issues, and the questions in the case turn upon certain instructions given by the court upon the second or third issues. The other two, 53 L. ed.

that is, the first and fourth issues, were withdrawn by defendants in error. The verdict of the jury was adverse to the plaintiffs in error on the two issues submitted. Judgment was in due course entered, denying the probate of the will, which judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals. 29 App. D. C. 198.

A question is presented as to the right of plaintiffs in error to bring the case to this court. Defendants in error contend the amount in dispute is less than the necessary amount to confer jurisdiction. The total value of the estate is $7,394.50, only $4,144.50 of which are bequeathed to [629 the Morgans; the balance of the estate goes to defendants in error, except $250, bequeathed to the Epiphany church. The matter in dispute, it is hence contended, is nearly $1,000 less than the jurisdictional amount.

A similar question came up in Overby v. Gordon, 177 U. S. 214, 44 L. ed. 741, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603. The case was a contest of a will. The plaintiffs in error in this court offered its probate on the ground that the testator was a resident of Georgia when he made the will, not of the District of Columbia, and that his personal estate passed under the laws of Georgia to plaintiffs in error, who were next of kin of the testator. They were unsuccessful in the court below and then brought the case here, and a motion was made to dismiss, because the interests of plaintiffs in error were several, and each interest less than $5,000, and that, therefore, the matter in dispute was less than that sum, and this court had no jurisdiction. The motion was denied, this court answering that the value of the estate was the matter in dispute. This, however, was put upon the ground that the question in the case was whether an estate valued at $9,000 should pass, as provided in the alleged will, which, in effect, excluded the next of kin, or in the mode provided by the law of the domicile of the decedent for the transmission of an intestate estate. The purpose of the case therefore was, it was said, not to seek an allotment to them of their interests, but an adjudication that the alleged will was invalid, and that that contention was advanced by virtue of a claim of common title in the next of kin of the decedent in the corpus of the estate, derived from the alleged law of the domicile of the deceased.

In other words, it was held in such case that where parties seek a recovery under the same title and for a common and undivided interest, the sum sought to be recovered, not the share of each individual claimant, constitutes the matter in dispute. And for this see Shields v. Thomas, 17 How. 3, 15 L. ed. 93, and New Orleans & P. R.

Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 51, 52, 36 L. ed. 68, 69, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364.

The case at bar is distinctly different. 630] The legacies to the *plaintiffs in error, of course, depend upon the validity of the will. That constituted their common title, but the sum of their interest is only $4,144.50, which is less than the amount necessary to give jurisdiction to this court; nor would the necessary amount be reached if the legacy to the Epiphany church be added.

Writ of error dismissed.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

“

OCTOBER TERM, 1908.

Vol. 212.

REFERENCE TABLE
OF SUCH CASES
DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
OCTOBER TERM, 1908,
AND REPORTED HEREIN,
VOLUME 212,
AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 212 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 212 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1	Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co.	371	109-112	Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas	430
6-7	" "	377	112	" "	431
7-10	" "	378	113	Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas	431
10-12	" "	379	113-116	" "	432
12-15	" "	380	116-118	" "	433
15-17	" "	381	118	Palmer v. Texas	434
17-19	" "	382	123-124	" "	435
19	Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co.		124-126	" "	437
	New York v. Consolidated Gas Co.		126-129	" "	438
	Jackson v. Consolidated Gas Co.		129-131	" "	439
			131-132	" "	440
23-24	" "	382	132	Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co.	441
39-40	" "	384	138	" "	441
40-42	" "	394	138-141	" "	443
42-45	" "	395	141-143	" "	444
45-47	" "	396	143-146	" "	445
47-50	" "	397	146-148	" "	446
50-52	" "	398	148-150	" "	447
52-55	" "	399	150-152	" "	448
55-57	Rakes v. United States.	400	152	Ontario Land Co. v. Yordy	449
57-58	" "	401	153-154	" "	449
58	Presidio County v. Noel-Young Bond & Stock Co.	402	156-158	" "	450
63-64	" "	402	158-159	" "	452
64-66	" "	404	159	Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. De-	453
66-68	" "	405		selms
68-71	" "	406	165-167	" "	453
71-73	" "	407	167-170	" "	458
73-76	" "	408	170-172	" "	459
76-78	" "	409	172-174	" "	460
78	Moyer v. Peabody	410	174-177	" "	461
82-83	" "	410	177-179	" "	462
83-85	" "	415	179-182	" "	463
85-86	" "	416	182	" "	464
86	Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas	417	183	Crawford v. United States	465
96-97	" "	417	184-186	" "	466
97-100	" "	424	188	" "	467
100-102	" "	425	188-191	" "	468
102-105	" "	426	191-193	" "	469
105-107	" "	427	193-196	" "	470
107-109	" "	428	196-198	" "	471
53 L. ed.		429	198-200	" "	472
			200-203	" "	473

REFERENCE TABLE.

212 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 212 U. S.	Title.	Here in
203-205	Crawford v. United States	474	334-337	Hammond Packing Co. v. Ar-
205-208	" "	475		kansas	530
208	Spreckels v. Brown	476	337-338	" "	530
209-210	" "	478	338-341	" "	540
210-213	" "	479	341-343	" "	541
213-215	" "	480	343-345	" "	542
215	Standard Oil Co. v. Anderson	480	345-348	" "	543
218-219	" "	485	348-350	" "	544
219-221	" "	483	350-353	" "	545
221-224	" "	484	353-354	" "	546
224-226	" "	485	354	The Folmina (Jahn v. The
226-227	" "	486		Folmina)	546
227	Continental Wall Paper Co. v.		359-360	" "	549
	Louis Voight & Sons Co.	486	360-362	" "	550
233	" "	487	362-363	" "	551
233-234	" "	488	364	Fritzlen v. Boatmen's Bank	551
234-236	" "	489	364-366	" "	554
236-241	" "	490	366-369	" "	555
241-242	" "	491	369-371	" "	556
242-243	" "	492	371-373	" "	557
243-246	" "	493	373-374	" "	558
246-248	" "	494	374-375	Re Dunn	558
248-251	" "	495	375-377	" "	560
251-253	" "	496	377-379	" "	560
253-254	" "	497	383-385	" "	562
254-255	" "	502	385-387	" "	563
255-258	" "	503	387-389	" "	564
258-260	" "	504	389	Bradford v. Morrison	564
260-263	" "	505	390-392	" "	565
263-265	" "	506	393-395	" "	567
265-268	" "	507	395-397	" "	568
268-270	" "	508	397	Harten v. Löffler	568
270-273	" "	509	397-398	" "	569
273-274	" "	510	398-401	" "	570
275	United States v. Marvin	510	401-403	" "	571
275-277	" "	511	403-405	" "	573
278-279	Thomas v. Texas	512	405	" "	574
280-282	" "	513	406-407	North Shore Boom & Driving
282-283	" "	514		Co. v. Nicomen Boom Co.	574
283	Johnson v. Mueser	514	410-412	" "	576
284	" "	515	412-413	" "	577
285-286	E. C. Atkins & Co. v. Moore	515	414	Railroad Commission v. Cum-
286-287	" "	516		berland Teleph. & Teleg. Co.	577
289-290	" "	516	414-417	" "	578
290-291	" "	517	417-418	" "	579
291	Laurel Oil & Gas Co. v. Mor-		418-420	" "	580
	rison	517	420-423	" "	581
292-294	" "	518	423-425	" "	582
294-296	" "	519	425-428	" "	583
297	Juragua Iron Co. v. United		428	" "	584
	States	520	428	McDaniel v. Traylor	584
300-302	" "	521	430-432	" "	585
302-305	" "	522	432-434	" "	586
305-307	" "	523	434	" "	587
307-309	" "	524	434-436	Greenmeyer v. Coate	587
309-311	" "	525	436-438	" "	588
311	American Exp. Co. v. Mul-		438	" "	589
	lins	525	441-444	" "	590
312-313	" "	526	444-445	" "	591
313-314	" "	527	445	Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v.
315	" "	528		W. M. Laird Co.	591
315-317	Nielsen v. Oregon	528	446-448	" "	593
317	" "	529	448-449	" "	594
319-320	" "	529	449	Carifio v. Insular Government	594
320-321	" "	530	455-456	" "	595
322	Hammond Packing Co. v. Ar-		456-458	" "	596
	kansas	530	458-460	" "	597
330-331	" "	536	460-463	" "	598
331-334	" "	537	463	" "	599

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 212 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 212 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
463-465	Santos v. Holy Roman Catho- lic & Apostolic Church	599	508-509	New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. United States	629
465	"	600	509	United States v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co.	629
466	{ The Eugene F. Moran (The Eugene F. Moran v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co.		512	"	630
			512-515	"	631
			515-516	"	632
	Henry Dubois Sons Co. v. The Charles E. Matthews)	600	516	Mullan v. United States	632
472-474	"	603	517	"	633
474-476	"	604	517-520	"	634
476-477	"	605	520-521	"	635
477	Bagley v. General Fire Ex- tinguisher Co.	605	522	{ American Exp. Co. v. United States
478	"	610		National Exp. Co. v. United States
478-479	"	611		United Exp. Co. v. United States
479	"	612		Wells, F. & Co. v. United States
479-480	"	613		Adams Exp. Co. v. United States	635
481	New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. United States	613	528-529	"	638
489	"	619	529-531	"	639
489-491	"	620	531-534	"	640
491-494	"	621	534-535	"	641
494-496	"	622	536	Texas & P. R. Co. v. Bourman	641
496-499	"	623	538-540	"	643
499	"	624	540-542	"	644
500	New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v. United States	624	542	Toy Toy v. Hopkins	644
500-501	"	625	546-548	"	646
501-503	"	626	548-549	"	647
503-506	"	627	551-590	Memorandum Cases	649-663
506-508	"	628			669
53 L. ed.

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1908.

1]*MAYOR AND ALDERMEN OF THE CITY OF KNOXVILLE, Appt.,
v.
KNOXVILLE WATER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-19.)

Appeal — review of facts — findings by master.

1. The general rule respecting the conclusiveness of a master's findings of fact when confirmed by the court will not be applied by the Federal Supreme Court on an appeal from a decree enjoining the enforcement of a municipal ordinance fixing maximum water rates, on the ground that the ordinance is invalid under U. S. Const., 14th Amendment, as confiscatory.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4920-4930, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Water rates — reasonableness — valuation of tangible property.

2. A deduction for depreciation from age and use must be made from the estimated cost of reproducing a waterworks plant when determining the present value of the tangible property for the purpose of testing the reasonableness of the rates fixed by a municipal ordinance.

[For other cases, see Waters, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE. — On legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

Reasonableness of governmental regulation of water rates.

Water rents are reasonable and just which provide for a fair return to the persons who furnished the capital for the construction of the plant, in addition to an allowance annually of a sum sufficient to keep the plant in good repair, and to pay any fixed charges and operating expenses. Brymer v. Butler Water Co. 179 Pa. 231, 36 L.R.A. 260, 36 Atl. 249.

An ordinance fixing water rates so palpably unreasonable and unjust as to amount to a taking of the property of a water com-

Water rates — reasonableness — valuation of tangible property.

3. Capitalization affords no guide to the present value of the tangible property of a waterworks company which is objecting to the rates fixed by municipal ordinance as confiscatory, where substantially all the common and preferred stock was issued under construction contracts entered into with persons who controlled the corporate action, and was greatly in excess of the true value of the property furnished under the contracts.

[For other cases, see Waters, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Water rates — reasonableness — income.

4. The absence of any requirement in a municipal ordinance fixing water rates, that the waterworks company shall continue to give a discount for prompt payment, must be taken into consideration when determining, for the purpose of testing the reasonableness of such rates, the reduction in the company's income which will be produced by the enforcement of such ordinance.

[For other cases, see Waters, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Water rates — reasonableness — valuation.

5. Depreciation represented by the destruction or obsolescence of parts of the pany without just compensation is not justified by a constitutional provision for the establishment of such rates. San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633.

Statutory authority to fix a reasonable minimum irrigation rate does not permit a board of county commissioners to fix a rate which is insufficient to pay the expense of the maintenance and operation of the irrigation system and pay the taxes thereon. Montezuma County v. Montezuma Water & Land Co. 39 Colo. 166, 89 Pac. 794.

A city claiming the right to fix the rates to be charged by a water company may not fix unreasonable rates. Des Moines v. Des Moines Waterworks Co. 95 Iowa, 348, 64 N. W. 269.

original plant and by impairment in value of those parts which remain in existence and continue in use cannot be added to the present value of the surviving parts when determining the value of the tangible property of a waterworks company for the purpose of testing the reasonableness of the rates fixed by municipal ordinance.

[For other cases, see Waters, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Water rates — reasonableness — income.

6. The net income of a waterworks company during the years succeeding the passage of a municipal ordinance fixing maximum water rates, which has never been enforced, should be considered by the courts in determining the reasonableness of such rates.

[For other cases, see Waters, III. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Water rates which will produce some reward to the owner of the water plant may be, nevertheless, so grossly and palpably insufficient to afford just compensation to the owner as to give the court power to relieve against an ordinance establishing such rates. San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, supra.

A municipal ordinance requiring a private company operating in annexed territory to furnish water at rates uniform with those charged by the municipality for water supplied from its own waterworks, the effect of which is to require such company to furnish water free for charitable, religious, and educational purposes, and for sanitary fixtures in private dwellings, in flats and apartments, for all of which the company has heretofore lawfully derived a revenue, is void as taking private property for public and private use without just compensation. Chicago v. Rogers Park Water Co. 214 Ill. 212, 73 N. E. 375.

An irrigation company which supplies some of its customers free or at a rate lower than the maximum prescribed by a board of water commissioners cannot successfully attack such maximum rate on the ground that such rate from the balance of the land supplied by the irrigation system will not yield a fair return on the actual value of the entire property. Boisé City Irrig. & Land Co. v. Clark, 65 C. C. A. 399, 131 Fed. 415.

Water rates fixed by a city for water furnished it and its inhabitants need not be so adjusted as to compensate the water company for loss sustained by it in the distribution of water to consumers outside the city and under the same general system. Nor should the fact that a company, in the construction of its plant and the carrying on of its work, borrowed a large sum of money, on which it pays interest, be considered in fixing the rates. San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 74 Fed. 79, affirmed in 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

Whether an ordinance of a board of supervisors fixing water rates deprives the waterworks company of its property with-

Courts — enjoining water rates — doubt.

7. The courts should not enjoin the enforcement of a municipal ordinance fixing maximum water rates on the ground that such ordinance is invalid under U. S. Const., 14th Amendment, as confiscatory, unless the confiscation is clearly apparent.

[For other cases, see Courts, 205-219, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 17.]

Argued April 28, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Tennessee to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of a municipal ordinance fixing out due process of law, or denies it the equal protection of the laws, or abridges its privileges and immunities, is to be determined by the court, when properly presented, upon an original, independent investigation, and not by an examination of the proceedings of the board to ascertain what evidence it received and acted upon, and whether that evidence was sufficient to justify the conclusion reached. Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574.

A provision in an ordinance fixing the rates to be charged by a water company at the average price paid therefor in other cities having efficient waterworks operated by private companies, and providing for arbitration of any dispute as to what such rates shall be, will be disregarded by the court in a suit by which the city seeks to enjoin the waterworks company from demanding or receiving from the city a greater sum for furnishing water to the city and its inhabitants than the rate established by an ordinance; and the rate will be fixed by judicial inquiry on the basis of what will be a reasonable rate. Des Moines v. Des Moines Waterworks Co. supra.

See note to State ex rel. Hallauer v. Gosnell, 61 L.R.A. 33, on establishment and regulation of municipal water supply.

Valuation of tangible property.

The reasonable value of the property of a waterworks company at the time it is being used for the public service is the basis for determining whether rates fixed by the board of supervisors take the property of the company without just compensation. Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, supra.

The reasonable value of property rather than its original cost is to be taken as the basis of valuation in determining whether water rates fixed under legislative authority constitute a fair compensation for the use of the property, so that the owners are not deprived of their property without due process of law. San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804, affirming 74 Fed. 79.

ing maximum water rates. Reversed and remanded with directions to dismiss the bill without prejudice.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. G. W. Pickle argued the cause, and, with Messrs. W. R. Turner, W. T. Kennerly, and J. Pike Powers, Jr., filed a brief for appellant:

In three cases, and three cases only, so far as we have discovered, has this court sustained the exercise of its power and jurisdiction to interfere with rates for public utility companies fixed by a legislative body. In these three cases the facts were either admitted or not seriously controverted in the evidence.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U.

The reasonable value of the property of an irrigation company at the time it is being used for the public is a more satisfactory basis for estimating valuation on which the company is entitled to a fair return than the actual cost of the plant, annual depreciation, etc. San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

Actual investment must be considered, but need not control the decision as to the value of the property of an irrigation company when testing the reasonableness of rates fixed by a board of supervisors. Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

The investment on which a water company is entitled to base its compensation in determining the sufficiency of rates cannot include property not at present actually employed in collecting or distributing the water, however useful it may have been in the past, or may yet be in the future. San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633.

Irrigation rates fixed by a board of water commissioners are not invalid because they do not yield a fair return on the value of the irrigation company's property, where the plant was intended for a larger area than it is asked to supply, and for a larger number of customers than it has been able to obtain. Boisé City Irrig. & Land Co. v. Clark, supra.

Bonds and stock.

The fair value of the property of a water company furnishing water to the inhabitants of a city is the proper basis on which to calculate whether a reasonable compensation for its services is received from the rates fixed by municipal trustees to be charged for such services; and the amount of the capital stock paid in by the stockholders, as well as the amount of bonded or floating indebtedness, and the interest payable thereon, are immaterial factors. Redlands, L. & C. Domestic Water Co. v. Redlands, 121 Cal. 365, 53 Pac. 843.

53 L. ed.

S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The same rules have been applied by the inferior courts in granting injunctions of this character in Cleveland Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Cleveland, 71 Fed. 610; New Memphis Gas & Light Co. v. Memphis, 72 Fed. 952. In these two latter cases the facts were admitted to be as stated in the bill, and the rates temporarily enjoined were, upon those facts, clearly confiscatory.

See also San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 62 Am. St. Rep. 302, note.

The value placed upon the property of a waterworks company by the public in dealing with its bonds and stock should be considered when valuing such property for the purpose of testing the reasonableness of water rates fixed by a board of supervisors. Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, supra.

Bonded indebtedness and the amount and value of the capital stock issued may be considered in determining the present value of the property of a waterworks company for the purpose of testing the reasonableness of rates fixed by a board of supervisors, when such stock and bonds represent the present actual value in property of the corporation, which otherwise cannot well be established. Ibid.

Franchise and good will.

The franchise of a waterworks company, which is declared by the state Constitution to be property, and is taxed as such, is an element of value as property in use for the public service, which must be considered when testing the reasonableness of rates fixed by a board of supervisors. Ibid.

The enhanced value of the property of a waterworks company arising from the facts that the company has an established business and is a going concern should be considered when fixing the value of the property of such company for the purpose of testing the reasonableness of rates fixed by a board of supervisors. Ibid.

In determining whether water rates fixed by a city ordinance are so low as to be virtually a confiscation of a water company's property, and therefore a proper object for the court's interference, the "going value" of the waterworks company's business is not an element to be considered, neither should the apparent profits for a rebuilding fund. Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa 234, 91 N.W. 1081.

What property included in current or operating expenses.

The current expenses which may be allowed in determining the sufficiency of the

The cases are numerous in which relief in cases of this character has been denied by this court and by other courts.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Atty. Gen. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 35 Wis. 583; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Florida, 203 U. S. 256, 51 L. ed. 174, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Florida, 203 U. S. 270, 51 L. ed. 178, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109; Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Mississippi R. Commission, 203 U. S. 496, 51 L. ed. 289, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

Rates will not be interfered with by courts if there is room for difference of intelligent opinion as to their reasonableness, and they income provided by water rates consist of the money which is reasonably and properly expended in each year in collecting and distributing the water. Redlands, L. & C. Domestic Water Co. v. Redlands, 121 Cal. 312, 53 Pac. 791.

Expenses of litigation in contesting an ordinance fixing water rates cannot be considered as part of the expenses to be allowed, in determining the sufficiency of the income produced by the rates. San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, supra.

Interest on the indebtedness of a water company, and annual depreciation of its plant, are not proper items of expenditure to be provided for by the trustees of a city in fixing the rates to be charged and collected for furnishing water to its inhabitants for domestic purposes. Redlands, L. & C. Domestic Water Co. v. Redlands, supra.

KNOXVILLE v. KNOXVILLE WATER Co. lays down a different rule as to depreciation, the court saying: "Before coming to the question of profit at all, the company is entitled to earn a sufficient sum annually to provide not only for current repairs, but for making good the depreciation and replacing the parts of the property when they come to the end of their life."

And where a deduction for deterioration is made in estimating the present value of the plant of an irrigation company on which it is entitled, under Cal. Acts March 15, 1885, to a net profit of not less than 6 per cent, an allowance should be made for such deduction and added to the annual will, in such case, be left to the test of actual experiment.

Pensacola & A. R. Co. v. State, 25 Fla. 310, 3 L.R.A. 661, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 522, 5 So. 833; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Dey, 38 Fed. 657; Tilley v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. 4 Woods, 427, 5 Fed. 662.

This court has refused to sustain the action of inferior courts restraining rates as unreasonable and confiscatory where the investigation reaching that result has been made in the lower courts along improper lines.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 90, 46 L. ed. 101, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

The fact that the company is, or is not, indebted, is wholly immaterial upon the question of a "fair return."

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 74 Fed. 87; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 272, 50 Pac. 633.

The burden of proof upon all material questions and issues in the case undoubtedly rests upon the water company.

income to enable the company to renew and reconstruct so as to preserve the integrity of the plant. Otherwise, if the deterioration continues from year to year, and the rates are correspondingly reduced, both will eventually decline to a vanishing point. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. v. Stanislaus County, 163 Fed. 567.

Loss from seepage and evaporation should be considered by the supervisors of the different counties supplied by an irrigation company when fixing irrigation rates under Cal. Acts March 12, 1885, which entitles the irrigation company to a net profit of at least 6 per cent upon the value of the entire plant, and if the rates fixed by the counties nearest to the head works are reasonable, such rates ought not to be lower for a more distant county. Ibid.

See also supra,—Brymer v. Butler Water Co. 179 Pa. 231, 36 L.R.A. 260, 36 Atl. 249, and Montezuma County v. Montezuma Water & Land Co. 39 Colo. 166, 89 Pac. 794; infra,—Wilkes Barre v. Spring Brook Water Supply Co. 4 Lack. Leg. News, 367.

What is reasonable return.

A water rent is not unreasonable which yields enough to maintain the plant in a reasonable manner, provide a sinking fund for the payment of debts, and pay the legal rate of interest on capital judiciously expended in the construction of the plant.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, supra.

The courts will not and should not review the action of a legislative body, as upon an appeal.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper and San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, supra.

Must it be declared as a matter of law that a reduction of rates necessarily diminishes income? May it not be possible—indeed, does not all experience suggest the probability—that a reduction of rates will increase the amount of business and therefore the earnings? At any rate, must the court assume that it has no such effect, and ignore all other considerations, and hold, as a matter of law, that a reduction of rates necessarily diminishes the earnings?

Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, supra.

The rules of law applicable to operating expenses are well settled. It is held to be the duty of the courts to allow no item of expenditure which is not satisfactorily shown to be an actual and proper charge in the actual conduct of the business of supplying water; and, when legal or other general expenses are claimed, they must be shown to have had a proper relation to that business.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, supra.

Wilkes Barre v. Spring Brook Water Supply Co. supra.

Five per cent per annum on the present value of the property of a waterworks company used in supplying water to the city and county of San Francisco is the smallest return from rates fixed by the board of supervisors which may be considered reasonable or just. Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574.

Water rates which will produce but little more than $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent upon the actual cost of the waterworks after deducting current expenses do not constitute just compensation to the water company, where it is compelled to pay a much higher rate upon money which it appears to have fairly borrowed, when the rate paid does not appear to be above the lowest market rate, and the prudence and economy of the management are not successfully impeached. San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633.

Water rates fixed by a board of supervisors for a waterworks company in San Francisco, which, resolving all doubts against the company, will yield an annual return of not to exceed $4\frac{4}{100}$ per cent on the value of the property actually used in the public service, or $3\frac{3}{100}$ per cent on its stock after deducting operating expenses, taxes, and fixed charges, must be deemed unreasonable and unjust, and as taking private property for public use without just compensation, where the usual annual net in-

Again it is said by this court: "While the protection of vested rights of property is a supreme duty of the courts, it has not come to this, that the legislative power rests subservient to the discretion of any railroad corporation which may, by unreasonable and exorbitant salaries, or in some other improper way, transfer its earnings into what it is pleased to call 'operating expenses.'"

Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, supra.

Again it is said: "It would seem as if expenditures for additions to construction and equipment, as expenditures for original construction and equipment, should be reimbursed by all of the traffic they accommodate during the period of their operations; and that improvement that will last many years should not be charged wholly against the revenue of a single year."

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. ed. 1128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700.

A public utility company must confine its expenditures to such as are legitimate for carrying on its business. It may not, as between itself and the public, take the same liberties as a corporation may assume as between itself and stockholders. Even between the company and its stockholders, subscriptions to charitable objects, though calculated come from capital invested in similar large enterprises on the Pacific coast is not less than 6 per cent, and that per cent is fixed as a minimum in certain California rate legislation. Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, supra.

Irrigation rates fixed by county supervisors which will yield a return on the present value of the irrigation company's plant of between $3\frac{8}{100}$ per cent and $4\frac{4}{100}$ per cent are unreasonable, even disregarding the provisions of Cal. Acts March 12, 1885, which entitles the company to a net profit of not less than 6 per cent. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. v. Stanislaus County, supra.

The reduction of water rates by a board of supervisors acting under the authority of Cal. Stat. 1885, p. 95, § 5, so as to give an annual income of 6 per cent upon the then value of the property of the water company actually used in supplying water to the public, does not necessarily amount to a taking of property without due process of law, or a denial of the equal protection of the laws. Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

Water rates fixed by a municipality which will yield an annual net income of but $2,200 from a plant worth at least $100,000 are so unreasonable as to destroy the value of the property of a waterworks company. Palatka Waterworks v. Palatka, 127 Fed. 161.

to advance the interest of a corporation, are not permissible.

McCrory v. Chambers, 48 Ill. App. 445; Holt v. Winfield Bank, 25 Fed. 812; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 258, 41 Am. Rep. 221.

Of course, the items of expenses in the present action should be disallowed.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, supra.

The water company, having fixed its own rates with a free hand, must be held to sustain the loss if it fails to make them sufficient to earn an adequate revenue. The loss must be borne by itself, and not laid upon the public in such case.

Ibid; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 754, 43 L. ed. 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

Both the court and special master erred in refusing to compel witness William Wheeler to produce on his cross-examination the Wheeler & Parks books which were in his possession, showing actual prices and quantities of material used in a large portion of the construction of the plant.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, supra.

The court and special master erred in attaching too great weight and importance to the opinions of the water company's experts, hastily made up on scant information and slight investigation, without information as to local prices or conditions, and by adopting without material change the statements of the water company's officials as to quantities and prices. In doing this they set up the opinions of two experts, contradicted by two others, to overrule the opinion of the eleven aldermen and the mayor, deliberately expressed, after full investigation. Ibid.

All doubts as to facts should be resolved in favor of the defendant.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 599; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, supra.

Messrs. Joshua W. Caldwell and R. E. L. Mountcastle argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles T. Cates, Jr., and Samuel G. Shields, filed a brief for appellee:

What the company is entitled to demand in order that it may have just compensation is a fair return upon the reasonable value of the property at the time it is being used for the public.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 757, 43 L. ed. 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578-598, 41 L. ed. 560-567, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 442, 47 L. ed. 894, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78

Fed. 261; New Memphis Gas & Light Co. v. Memphis, 72 Fed. 952.

The fair value of the property of complainant should be ascertained at the date when it was in fact ascertained in this case.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

In ascertaining what are just rates the court should take into consideration the cost of the plant; the cost per annum of operating the plant, including interest paid on money borrowed and reasonably necessary to be used in constructing the same; the annual depreciation of the plant from natural causes resulting from its use; and the fair profit to the company over and above fixed charges for its services in supplying the water to consumers, either by way of interest on the money it has expended for the public use, or upon some other fair and equitable basis.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

It cannot be said that the amount of the bonds should, in every case, control the question of rates, although it may be an element in the inquiry as to what is, all the circumstances considered, just both to the company and to the public.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 757, 758, 43 L. ed. 1161, 1162, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

Property acquired by gift or otherwise by a corporation cannot be taken away either by way of reduction of rates or condemnation, except after the payment of just compensation.

Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574.

"Going concern" has a value, and to this extent enhances the fair value of the plant as a whole.

National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, 27 L.R.A. 827, 10 C. C. A. 653. 27 U. S. App. 165, 62 Fed. 853; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, supra; Kennebec Water Dist. v. Waterville, 96 Me. 185, 60 L.R.A. 856, 54 Atl. 6; Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 168 Mass. 541, 47 N. E. 533; Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. 99 Me. 371, 59 Atl. 537; Gloucester Water Supply Co. v. Gloucester, 179 Mass. 365, 60 N. E. 977.

The going concern must be calculated with respect to the plant as it was at the date of the inquiry.

National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, supra.

The value of this plant must be determined under conditions existent on March 30, 1901, when the ordinance was passed.

If consideration be given to the fair, original cost of any part, it should be in toto, or for the whole property as well.

Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. supra.

The proper method of determining the effect of a given rate regulation upon income is to take the effect of such regulation for a term preceding the date of its enactment, and not for a time subsequent thereto.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 881; Smyth v. Ames, supra.

The only fair judicial test is to apply the rates to the business that has been done in the past, and see whether, upon that basis, such rates will be remunerative, or will compel the transaction of business at a loss.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 534, 42 L. ed. 844, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, supra; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 599.

One of the things to be taken into consideration when rates are being fixed which, under all the circumstances, shall be just to the company and to the public, is the annual depreciation of the plant from natural causes resulting from its use.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 757, 43 L. ed. 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, supra.

It might be true that 6 per cent for simply the loan of money, where no further trouble or risk is had, or on a judgment, might be entirely adequate, and yet that 6 per cent would not be the fair measure of return upon an uncertain, hazardous business venture, such as that of the water company.

New Memphis Gas & Light Co. v. Memphis, 72 Fed. 955; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 272, 50 Pac. 633.

Rates ought to be adjusted to the value of the service rendered; and this means that the water companies should be allowed to collect annually a gross income sufficient to pay current expenses, maintain the necessary plant in a state of efficiency, and declare a dividend to stockholders equal to at least the lowest current rates of interest, not on the par or market value of the stock, but on the actual value of the property necessarily used in providing and distributing water to consumers.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego and Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, supra.

Mr. Justice Moody delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal by the city of Knoxville from a decree of the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Tennessee. The appellee is a public service corporation, chartered for, and engaged in, the business of supplying that city and its inhabitants with water for domestic and other uses. The cause in which the decree was rendered is a suit in equity which was brought by the company on December 7, 1901, against the city to restrain the enforcement of a city ordinance fixing in detail the maximum rates to be charged by the company. This ordinance was enacted on March 30, 1901. The bill contained many allegations, which have become immaterial by the decision of this court in Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 189 U. S. 434, 47 L. ed. 887, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531, in which the validity of the ordinance was sustained, except so far as it might confiscate the property of the company by fixing rates so low as to have that effect. The latter contention alone was left open to the company, and to it the remainder of the bill is mainly directed. The allegations in that regard are, that the rates fixed by the ordinance were so low that they denied to the company a reasonable return upon the property employed in the business, and thereby took it for public use without compensation, in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. [7] After answer by the respondent and replication by the complainant the cause was referred to a special master, whose report was confirmed by the court. The master found and reported that the value of the plant and property employed in the business at the date of the passage of the ordinance was $608,427.95; that the gross income from the company's business was $88,481.39, and that the operating expenses were $34,750.91. The figures of income and expense are those of the fiscal year ending March 31, 1901, and the valuation was made as of that date. The master found and reported that the diminution of income which would have resulted from the enforcement of the ordinance during that fiscal year was $17,623.64, and that the gross income would have been reduced thereby to $70,857.75, leaving a net income of $36,106.84. This net income was less than 6 per cent on the valuation. In the opinion of the master 8 per cent, which included 2 per cent to provide for depreciation, was the minimum net return which the company was entitled to earn. The judge of the circuit court, in his opinion confirming the master's report, adopted the master's valuation of the whole plant and property at $608,427.95 (although he held that it ought to be increased by about $3,000), and the master's finding that the gross income was $88,481.39; that the expenses were $34,750.91; that the effect of the reduction made by the ordinance would be to lessen the gross income by $17,623.64, and that therefore the net income under the ordinance would be $36,106.84, or about $400 less than 6 per cent on the valuation. Upon these assumptions of fact as to its effect the judge regarded the ordinance as confiscatory and issued a permanent injunction against its enforcement.

At the threshold of the consideration of the case the attitude of this court to the facts found below should be defined. Here are findings of fact by a master, confirmed by the court. The company contends that, under these circumstances, the findings are conclusive in this court, unless they are without support in the evidence, or were made 8]under the influence of erroneous *views of law. We need not stop to consider what the effect of such findings would be in an ordinary suit in equity. The purpose of this suit is to arrest the operation of a law on the ground that it is void and of no effect. It happens that in this particular case it is not an act of the legislature that is attacked, but an ordinance of a municipality. Nevertheless the function of rate-making is purely legislative in its character, and this is true, whether it is exercised directly by the legislature itself or by some subordinate or administrative body, to whom the power of fixing rates in detail has been delegated. The completed act derives its authority from the legislature and must be regarded as an exercise of the legislative power. Prentiss v. Southern R. Co. 211 U. S. 210, ante, 67, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Co. v. Hawaii, 211 U. S. 282, ante, 55, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55. There can be at this day no doubt, on the one hand, that the courts, on constitutional grounds, may exercise the power of refusing to enforce legislation, nor, on the other hand, that that power ought to be exercised only in the clearest cases. The constitutional invalidity should be manifest, and where that invalidity rests upon disputed questions of fact, the invalidating facts must be proved to the satisfaction of the court. In view of the character of the judicial power invoked in such cases it is not tolerable that its exercise should rest securely upon the findings of a master, even though they be confirmed by the trial court. The power is best safeguarded against abuse by preserving to this court complete freedom in dealing with the facts of each case. Nothing less than this is demanded by the respect due from the judicial to the legislative authority. It must not be understood that the findings of a master, confirmed by the trial court, are without weight, or that they will not, as a practical question, sometimes be regarded as conclusive. All that is intended to be said is, that in cases of this character this court will not fetter its discretion or judgment by any artificial rules as to the weight of the master's findings, however useful and well settled these rules may be in ordinary litigation. We approach the discussion of the facts in this spirit.

*The first fact essential to the conclu-9 sion of the court below is the valuation of the property devoted to the public uses, upon which the company is entitled to earn a return. That valuation ($608,000) must now be considered. It was made up by adding to the appraisement, in minute detail of all the tangible property, the sum of $10,000 for "organization, promotion, etc.," and $60,000 for "going concern." The latter sum we understand to be an expression of the added value of the plant as a whole over the sum of the values of its component parts, which is attached to it because it is in active and successful operation and earning a return. We express no opinion as to the propriety of including these two items in the valuation of the plant, for the purpose for which it is valued in this case, but leave that question to be considered when it necessarily arises. We assume, without deciding, that these items were properly added in this case. The value of the tangible property found by the master is, of course, $608,000 lessened by $70,000, the value attributed to the intangible property, making $538,000. This valuation was determined by the master by ascertaining what it would cost, at the date of the ordinance, to reproduce the existing plant as a new plant. The cost of reproduction is one way of ascertaining the present value of a plant like that of a water company, but that test would lead to obviously incorrect results if the cost of reproduction is not diminished by the depreciation which has come from age and use. The company contends that the master, in fixing upon the valuation of the tangible property, did make an allowance for depreciation, but we are unable to agree to this. The master nowhere says that he made allowance for depreciation, and the language of his report is inconsistent with such a reduction. The figures which he adopts are those of a "fair contractor's price." The basis of his calculation was the testimony of an opinion witness called by the company. That witness submitted a table which avowedly showed the cost of reproduction, without allowance for depreciation. The values testified to by him were adopted by the master in the *great majority of cases. The[10 witness's valuation of the tangible property was somewhat reduced by the master, but the reductions were not based upon the theory of depreciation, but upon a difference of opinion as to the reproduction cost.

The cost of reproduction is not always a fair measure of the present value of a plant which has been in use for many years. The items composing the plant depreciate in value from year to year in a varying degree. Some pieces of property, like real estate for instance, depreciate not at all, and sometimes, on the other hand, appreciate in value. But the reservoirs, the mains, the service pipes, structures upon real estate, standpipes, pumps, boilers, meters, tools and appliances of every kind begin to depreciate with more or less rapidity from the moment of their first use. It is not easy to fix at any given time the amount of depreciation of a plant whose component parts are of different ages, with different expectations of life. But it is clear that some substantial allowance for depreciation ought to have been made in this case. The officers of the company, alio intuitu, estimated what they called "incomplete depreciation" of this plant (which we understand to be the depreciation of the surviving parts of it still in use) at $77,000, which is 14 per cent of the master's appraisement of the tangible property. A witness called by the city placed the reproduction value of the tangible property at $363,000, and estimated the allowance that should be made for depreciation at $118,000, or 32 per cent. In the view we take of the case it is not necessary that we should undertake the difficult task of determining exactly how much the master's valuation of the tangible property ought to have been diminished by the depreciation which that property had undergone. It is enough to say that there should have been a considerable diminution, sufficient, at least, to raise the net income found by the court above 6 per cent upon the whole valuation thus diminished. If, for instance, the master's valuation should be diminished by $50,000, allowed for depreciation, the net earnings found by him would show a return of substantially 6.5 per cent!

11] *Counsel for the company urge, rather faintly that the capitalization of the company ought to have some influence in the case in determining the valuation of the property. It is a sufficient answer to this contention that the capitalization is shown to be considerably in excess of any valuation testified to by any witness, or which can be arrived at by any process of reasoning. The cause for the large variation between the real value of the property and the capitalization in bonds and preferred and common stock is apparent from the testimony. All, or substantially all, the preferred and common stock was issued to contractors for the construction of the plant, and the nominal amount of the stock issued was greatly in excess of the true value of the property furnished by the contracts. A single instance taken from the testimony will illustrate this. At the very start of the enterprise a contract was entered into for the construction of a part of the plant, which was of a value slightly, if at all, exceeding $125,000. The price paid the contractor was $125,000 in bonds and $200,000 in common stock. Other contracts for construction showed a like disproportion between value furnished and nominal capitalization received for that value. It perhaps is unnecessary to say that such contracts were made by the company with persons who, at the time, by stock ownership, controlled its action. Bonds and preferred and common stock issued under such conditions afford neither measure of, nor guide to, the value of the property.

We think that the master and the court erred in another respect, which might affect in an important way the amount which could have been realized under the operation of the ordinance. This error consisted in the manner of deducting the reductions necessarily made by the ordinance. The evidence in the record is not entirely clear, though, after careful consideration, we think it shows the following state of facts: The company's schedule prescribed certain rates, which we may call the book rates, but upon a large part of them a discount of 5 per cent was made if they were promptly paid. The *consumers very generally^[12] availed themselves of this discount. The discount rates constituted the actual collections and may be called the actual rates. For the fiscal year which was examined the book rates amounted, in round numbers, to $93,000, while the actual rates amounted, as the master found, to $88,000. The percentage of reduction made by the ordinance was computed to be 22.88. This percentage was ascertained either by comparing the book rates with the ordinance rates, or by comparing the actual rates with the ordinance rates, still further reduced by a 5 per cent discount for prompt payment, which comes to substantially the same result. The fallacy in the process employed by the master consisted in substance in assuming that the ordinance rates would be subject to a discount for prompt payment. The company, it is true, might, if it chose, allow such a discount from the ordinance rates, but the ordinance required no discount from the rates established by it, and the company, therefore, was bound to offer none. If it stood upon the letter of the ordinance, as it had the right to do, and exacted from the consumers the full charges prescribed by the ordinance, the amount which would have been realized would have been over $4,000 more than that found by the master, or a net income of not less than $40,000. Doubtless, the abandonment of the common method of discount for prompt payment would deprive the company of an efficient aid to the quick collection of its bills, but, in the case of a prime necessity like water, there are other methods of enforcing prompt payment, though it is not unlikely that the elimination of the discount rate would add somewhat to the cost of collection, and thereby to the operating expenses.

A brief recently filed by the city, to which no reply has been made, seems to show conclusively that there was still another error in ascertaining the amount of reduction effected by the ordinance. What was actually done was to deduct the 22.88 reduction from the actual water rates (excluding hydrant rentals, which were not changed); but, of these actual water rates, $10,000 came from territory outside of the 13]corporate *limits, which was not affected by the ordinance. From this $10,000 no percentage should have been deducted. The reduction, therefore, was too large by over $2,000. If this correction should be made, it would amount to nearly four tenths of one per cent on the capitalization.

We are also of opinion that the master and the court erroneously excluded evidence which had an important bearing upon the true earning capacity of the company under the ordinance. A clear appreciation of this error can be best obtained by a comprehensive review of the hearing. The company's original case was based upon an elaborate analysis of the cost of construction. To arrive at the present value of the plant large deductions were made on account of the depreciation. This depreciation was divided into complete depreciation and incomplete depreciation. The complete depreciation represented that part of the original plant which, through destruction or obsolescence, had actually perished as useful property. The incomplete depreciation represented the impairment in value of the parts of the plant which remained in existence and were continued in use. It was urgently contended that, in fixing upon the value of the plant upon which the company was entitled to earn a reasonable return, the amounts of complete and incomplete depreciation should be added to the present value of the surviving parts. The court refused to approve this method, and we think properly refused. A water plant, with all its additions, begins to depreciate in value from the moment of its use. Before coming to the question of profit at all the company is entitled to earn a sufficient sum annually to provide not only for current repairs, but for making good the depreciation and replacing the parts of the property when they come to the end of their life. The company is not bound to see its property gradually waste, without making provision out of earnings for its replacement. It is entitled to see that from earnings the value of the property invested is kept unimpaired, so that, at the end of any given term of years, the original investment remains as it was at the *beginning. It is not only the right[14 of the company to make such a provision, but it is its duty to its bond and stockholders, and, in the case of a public service corporation, at least, its plain duty to the public. If a different course were pursued the only method of providing for replacement of property which has ceased to be useful would be the investment of new capital and the issue of new bonds or stocks. This course would lead to a constantly increasing variance between present value and bond and stock capitalization,—a tendency which would inevitably lead to disaster either to the stockholders or to the public, or both. If, however, a company fails to perform this plain duty and to exact sufficient returns to keep the investment unimpaired, whether this is the result of unwarranted dividends upon over issues of securities, or of omission to exact proper prices for the output, the fault is its own. When, therefore, a public regulation of its prices comes under question, the true value of the property then employed for the purpose of earning a return cannot be enhanced by a consideration of the errors in management which have been committed in the past.

After the company had closed its case the city undertook to determine the present value of the company's property by the plain method of ascertaining the cost of reproduction, diminished by depreciation. In its case in rebuttal the company followed the same method, though the results differed largely, and, as we have seen, no proper allowance for depreciation was made. In the course of presenting its case the city offered evidence of the net income of some years subsequent to the passage of the ordinance. The case is peculiar. The company has never observed the ordinance. The suit was begun nine months after its enactment and tried considerably later. In the meantime the company's gross income had largely increased. But the decision in the court below was based solely on the operations of the fiscal year ending March 31, 1901; and the amount of net income ascertained, namely, $36,000, was obtained by applying the reductions made by the *ordi-[15 nance to the operations of that fiscal year.

We think it was error to confine the investigation to, and base the judgment upon, that year alone. The precise subject of inquiry was, what would be the effect of the ordinance in the future. The operations of the preceding fiscal year, or of any other past fiscal year, were valueless if the year was abnormal, and were only of significance so far as they foretold the future. If, as in this case, sufficient time has passed, so that certainty instead of prophecy can be obtained, the certainty would be preferable to the prophecy. In this case there could be no absolute certainty, because the ordinance had never been put in operation. But evidence of the operations of the years succeeding to the ordinance is relevant and of great importance, and by a consideration of such evidence a much greater degree of certainty could be obtained. Suppose, by way of illustration, that before bringing suit the company had put the ordinance into effect and had observed it for a number of years, and the result showed that a sufficient net income had been realized,—is it possible that a suit then could be brought and the evidence confined to a period prior to the ordinance, and, by a process of speculation, the conclusion reached that the ordinance would be confiscatory? Some evidence regarding the income of the company after the passage of the ordinance is in the record, but it subsequently was excluded from consideration. It showed an increase of gross and net earnings, but also an increase in the property devoted to the public use. We are unable to say what the effect of the evidence excluded would be; all we can say is, that the inquiry was unduly limited by the exclusion of the evidence of the operation of subsequent years.

It follows from what has been said that the judgment of the court below cannot stand. There was error in the appraisalment of the present value of the plant, in the deduction of the reductions made by the ordinance, and in the exclusion of evidence relating to the operations of the company after the enactment of the ordinance.

16] *In ordinary cases full justice would be done by reversing the decree and remanding the cause for further proceedings in the court below, there to undergo a new and doubtless prolonged investigation. It is more than seven years since the enactment of the ordinance, and it has never been observed in any respect. This litigation ought now to be ended, if it is possible to end it with due regard to the rights of the contending parties. Disregarding for the moment all the errors which were committed in the court below, the decision of this cause may be rested upon a broader ground, which is clearly indicated by the previous judgments of this court. The jurisdiction which is invoked here ought, as has been said, to be exercised only in the clearest cases. If a company of this kind chooses to decline to observe an ordinance of this nature, and prefers rather to go into court with the claim that the ordinance is unconstitutional, it must be prepared to show to the satisfaction of the court that the ordinance would necessarily be so confiscatory in its effect as to violate the Constitution of the United States. In Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, the last word of caution by this court was said (p. 166): "Finally, it is objected that the necessary result of upholding this suit in the circuit court will be to draw to the lower Federal courts a great flood of litigation of this character, where one Federal judge would have it in his power to enjoin proceedings by state officials to enforce the legislative acts of the state, either by criminal or civil actions. To this it may be answered, in the first place, that no injunction ought to be granted unless in a case reasonably free from doubt. We think such rule is, and will be, followed by all the judges of the Federal courts." The same thought, in effect, was expressed in San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 754, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804, 810: "Judicial interference should never occur unless the case presents, clearly and beyond all doubt, such a flagrant attack upon the rights of property under the guise of regulations as to compel the court to say that the rates prescribed will necessarily have the effect to deny just compensation for private property *taken for the public use." And in San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571, after repeating with approval this language, it was said (p. 441): "In a case like this we do not feel bound to re-examine and weigh all the evidence, although we have done so, or to proceed according to our independent opinion as to what were proper rates. It is enough if we cannot say that it was impossible for a fair-minded board to come to the result which was reached."

It cannot be doubted that, in a clear case of confiscation, it is the right and duty of the court to annul the law. Thus, in Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047, where the property was worth more than its capitalization, and, upon the admitted facts, the rates prescribed would not pay one half the interest on the bonded debt; in Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198, where the rates prescribed would not even pay operating expenses; in Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418, where the rates prescribed left substantially nothing over operating expenses and cost of service; and in Ex parte Young, supra, where, on the aspect of the case which was before the court, it was not disputed that the rates prescribed were in fact confiscatory, injunctions were severally sustained. But the case before us is not a case of this kind. Upon any aspect of the evidence the company is certain to obtain a substantial net revenue under the operation of the ordinance. The net income, in any event, would be substantially 6 per cent, or 4 per cent after an allowance of 2 per cent for depreciation. See Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241. We cannot know clearly that the revenue would not much exceed that return. We do not feel called upon to determine whether a demonstrated reduction of income to that point would or would not amount to confiscation. Where the case rests, as it does here, not upon observation of the actual operation under the ordinance, but upon speculations as to its effect, based upon the operations of a prior fiscal year, we will not guess whether the substantial return certain to be earned would lack some- 18]thing of the return which would *save the effect of the ordinance from confiscation. It is enough that the whole case leaves us in grave doubt. The valuation of the property was an estimate and is greatly disputed. The expense account was not agreed upon. The ordinance had not actually been put into operation; the inferences were based upon the operations of the preceding year; and the conclusion of the court below rested upon that most unsatisfactory evidence, the testimony of expert witnesses employed by the parties. The city authorities acted in good faith, and they tried, without success, to obtain from the company a statement of its property, capitalization, and earnings.

The courts, in clear cases, ought not to hesitate to arrest the operation of a confiscatory law, but they ought to refrain from interfering in cases of any other kind. Regulation of public service corporations, which perform their duties under conditions of necessary monopoly, will occur with greater and greater frequency as time goes on. It is a delicate and dangerous function, and ought to be exercised with a keen sense of justice on the part of the regulating body, met by a frank disclosure on the part of the company to be regulated. The courts ought not to bear the whole burden of saving property from confiscation, though they will not be found wanting where the proof is clear. The legislatures and subordinate bodies, to whom the legislative power has been delegated, ought to do their part. Our social system rests largely upon the sanctity of private property; and that state or community which seeks to invade it will soon discover the error in the disaster which follows. The slight gain to the consumer, which he would obtain from a reduction in the rates charged by public service corporations, is as nothing compared with his share in the ruin which would be brought about by denying to private property its just reward, thus unsettling values and destroying confidence. On the other hand, the companies to be regulated will find it to their lasting interest to furnish freely the information upon which a just regulation can be based.

If hereafter it shall appear under the actual operation of the *ordinance, that the[19 returns allowed by it operate as a confiscation of property, nothing in this judgment will prevent another application to the courts of the United States or to the courts of the state of Tennessee. But, as the case now stands, there is no such certainty that the rates prescribed will necessarily have the effect of denying to the company such a return as would avoid confiscation. For these reasons—

The decree is reversed and the case remanded to the court below with directions to dismiss the bill without prejudice.

WILLIAM R. WILLCOX et al., Constituting the Public Service Commission, etc., of New York, Appts.,

v.

CONSOLIDATED GAS COMPANY OF NEW YORK. (No. 396.)

CITY OF NEW YORK, Appt.,

v.

CONSOLIDATED GAS COMPANY OF NEW YORK. (No. 397.)

WILLIAM S. JACKSON, as Attorney General of the State of New York, Appt.,

v.

CONSOLIDATED GAS COMPANY OF NEW YORK. (No. 398.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 19-55.)

Federal courts — jurisdiction — enjoining enforcement of gas rates.

1. A Federal circuit court, if properly appealed to, cannot decline, on the ground of discretion or comity, to take jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the enforcement of state statutes fixing gas rates which are asserted to violate the Federal Constitution. [For other cases, see Courts, 1369-1372, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

Gas rates — legislative regulation — reasonableness.

2. Legislative regulation of gas rates is invalid, where such rates are plainly unreasonable to the extent that their enforcement will be equivalent to the taking of property for public use without such compensation as, under the circumstances, is just, both to the owner and the public. There must be a fair return upon the reasonable value of the property at the time it is being used for the public.

Courts — enjoining enforcement of gas rates.

3. The case must be a clear one before the courts should be asked to interfere by injunction with state legislation regulating gas rates, in advance of any actual experience of the practical result of such rates.

[For other cases, see Courts, 205-219, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Gas rates — legislative regulation — reasonableness — franchise valuation.

4. The valuation of the franchises of the constituent gas companies as fixed by them when organizing a consolidated corporation pursuant to N. Y. Laws 1884, chap. 367, which valuation was included in the total sum for which the consolidated corporation issued its stock, must be accepted by the courts in testing the reasonableness of legislative regulation of gas rates as conclusive of such value at the time of consolidation, where the validity of the agreement fixing the valuation has always been recognized, and the stock has earned large dividends and has been largely dealt in for many years on the basis of the validity of the valuation and of the stock.

Gas rates — legislative regulation — reasonableness — increase in franchise valuation.

5. Increase since consolidation of the tangible assets of a consolidated gas company and in the amount of gas supplied by it does not justify the court, when testing the reasonableness of the rates fixed by statute, in attributing a proportional increase to the value of the franchises as fixed by the constituent companies at the time of consolidation.

Rates — legislative regulation — reasonableness — income.

6. There is no particular rate of compensation which any corporation subject to legislative control respecting rates has the right to obtain without legislative interference.

On unconstitutional inequality or discrimination in regulation of tolls or rates—see note to Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. U. S. 92.

As to right to question the reasonableness of statutory rate for gas—see note to 53 L. ed.

Gas rates — legislative regulation — reasonableness — income.

7. Gas rates which will yield to a corporation having a monopoly of the gas service in New York city a return of 6 per cent upon the fair value of the property actually used by such company in its business are not confiscatory.

Courts — enjoining enforcement of gas rates.

8. A court of equity ought not to interfere by injunction with state legislation fixing gas rates before a fair trial has been made of continuing the business under such rates, where the rates complained of show a very narrow line of division between possible confiscation and proper regulation, as based upon the findings as to the value of the property, and the division depends upon variant opinions as to value and upon the results in the future of operating under such rates.

[For other cases, see Courts, 205-219, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Gas rates — legislative regulation — reasonableness — franchise valuation.

9. The assessed value for taxation of the franchises of a gas company furnishes no criterion by which to ascertain their value, when testing the reasonableness of gas rates as fixed by statute, where the taxes are treated by the company as part of its operating expenses, to be paid out of its earnings before the net amount applicable to dividends can be ascertained.

Gas rates — legislative regulation — reasonableness — value of good will.

10. No allowance for the value of the good will should be made in estimating the value of the property of a gas company upon which it is entitled to earn a fair return, for the purpose of testing the reasonableness of the rates fixed by statute, where such company is secure from possible competition.

Gas rates — legislative regulation — reasonableness — valuation.

11. The valuation of the property of a gas company, upon which it is entitled to a fair return, must, as a general rule, be determined as of the time when the inquiry is made regarding the reasonableness of rates fixed by statute, giving the company the benefit of any increase in the value of the property since it was acquired.

Gas — legislative regulation of pressure — effect on reasonableness of rates.

12. The requirements as to gas pressure made by N. Y. Laws 1905, chap. 736, and Laws 1906, chap. 125, fixing gas rates in New York city, are confiscatory, where, to put this pressure upon the mains and other service pipes, in their present condition, is to run a great risk of explosion and consequent disaster, and to eliminate such danger requires an expenditure of many millions of dollars, from which no return can be had at the rates established by those acts.

Brooklyn Union Gas Co. v. New York, 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 763.

On statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363, and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

Statutes — invalid in part.

13. The invalidity of the provisions as to gas pressure and penalties contained in N. Y. Laws 1905, chap. 736, and Laws 1906, chap. 125, regulating gas rates in New York city, does not invalidate the provisions of those acts respecting rates, from which the invalid provisions are clearly separable. [For other cases, see Statutes, I. d. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Gas rates — legislative regulation — reasonableness — discrimination.

14. A discrimination between the individual consumer and the city in the provisions of N. Y. Laws 1905, chap. 736, and Laws 1906, chap. 125, fixing gas rates in New York city, is not material to the inquiry as to the reasonableness of such rates if the total profits from the gas supplied to all consumers is sufficient to insure the requisite return upon the property used by the gas company in its business.

Judgment — dismissal without prejudice.

15. The dismissal of a bill which seeks to enjoin the enforcement of legislative regulation of gas rates as confiscatory in advance of any actual experience of the practical result of such rates should be without prejudice, where such practical experience may prevent the complainant from obtaining a fair return upon the property used by it in its business.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 70-74, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 396, 397, 398.]

Argued November 4, 5, 6, 1908. Decided January 4, 1909.

APPPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of legislative regulation of gas rates. Reversed with directions to dismiss the bill without prejudice.

See same case below, 157 Fed. 849.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The appellee, complainant below, filed its bill May 1, 1906, in the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, against the city of New York, the attorney general of the state, the district attorney of New York county, and the gas commission of the state, to enjoin the enforcement of certain acts of the legislature of the state, as well as of an order made by the gas commission, February 23, 1906, to take effect May 1, 1906, relative to rates for gas in New York city.

Since the commencement of the suit, the gas commission has been abolished and the public service commission has been created by the legislature in its stead. The official term of Attorney General Meyer has also expired, and Attorney General Jackson, his successor, has been substituted in his place.

*The ground for the relief asked for in [24] the bill was the alleged unconstitutionality of the acts and the order, because the rates fixed were so low as to be confiscatory. Upon filing the bill a preliminary injunction was granted (146 Fed. 150), and, after issue was joined, the case was referred to one of the standing masters of the court to take testimony, in conformity to the practice indicated in Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 179, 44 L. ed. 417, 422, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

A hearing was had before the master, who reported in favor of the complainant. The case then came before the circuit court, and, after argument, a final decree was entered, restraining defendants from enforcing the provisions of the acts and the order relating to rates or penalties. 157 Fed. 849. These various defendants, except the district attorney, have taken separate appeals directly to this court from the decree so entered. The acts which are declared void as unconstitutional are chapter 736 of the Laws of 1905, which limits the price of gas sold to the city of New York to a sum not to exceed 75 cents per thousand cubic feet. The act also requires that the gas sold shall have a specified illuminating power, and a certain pressure at all distances from the place of manufacture. Penalties are attached to a violation of the act. The other act is chapter 125 of the Laws of 1906, limiting the prices of gas in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, to other consumers than the city of New York, to 80 cents per thousand cubic feet, with like penalties as in the act of 1905, and with the same provisions as to illuminating power and the pressure in the service mains. The order which was declared invalid was one made by the gas commission created under and by virtue of chapter 737 of the Laws of 1905, the order providing that the price of gas in the city should be not more than 80 cents to consumers other than the city of New York. The order had the same provisions as to illuminating power and pressure as the acts above mentioned. The master and the court below found that the 80-cent rate was so low as to amount to confiscation, and hence the acts and the order were invalid as in violation of the Federal Constitution.

Mr. Edward B. Whitney argued the cause, and, with Mr. George S. Coleman, filed a brief for the Public Service Commission:

A simple allegation that a statute is unconstitutional is not sufficient to give jurisdiction to equity, even if the allegation be true. This is no exception to the rule that equity can only be resorted to when there is no adequate remedy at law.

Cruikshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73, 44 L. ed. 377, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Indiana Mfg. Co. v. Koehne, 188 U. S. 681, 684, 47 L. ed. 651, 654, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452.

A statute should never, if possible, be construed so as to be unconstitutional or so as to be absurd.

Oates v. First National Bank, 100 U. S. 244, 25 L. ed. 582; Grenada County v. Brogden, 112 U. S. 268, 269, 28 L. ed. 706, 707, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

Only one penalty at a time could be sued for by the attorney general or the district attorney for failure to observe the requirements of the statute of 1906 as to candle power, or as to pressure, or for overcharging the consumer.

Cox v. Paul, 175 N. Y. 328, 67 N. E. 586; Topham v. Interurban Street R. Co. 96 App. Div. 325, 89 N. Y. Supp. 298; Griffin v. Interurban Street R. Co. 179 N. Y. 448, 72 N. E. 513; Re Snow, 120 U. S. 286, 30 L. ed. 663, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556; United States Condensed Milk Co. v. Smith, 116 App. Div. 15, 101 N. Y. Supp. 129, 191 N. Y. 536, 84 N. E. 1114; United States v. Patty, 2 Fed. 664; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 77, 52 L. ed. 681, 693, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; United States v. Eagan, 30 Fed. 498; Taft v. Stevens Lithographing & Engraving Co. 38 Fed. 28; Central R. Co. v. Green, 86 Pa. 425; Gimbel v. Hogg, 38 C. C. A. 419, 97 Fed. 791; United States v. Central Vermont R. Co. 157 Fed. 293; Parks v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 13 Lea, 1, 49 Am. Rep. 655.

No principle of statutory construction is more familiar than the strictness of construction of a penalty law.

France v. United States, 164 U. S. 676, 682, 683, 41 L. ed. 595, 597, 598, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; Bolles v. Outing Co. 175 U. S. 262, 265, 44 L. ed. 156, 157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; United States v. One Bay Horse & One Buggy, 128 Fed. 207.

A succession of actions for penalties when only one penalty can be recovered in each action is not sufficient multiplicity of litigation to give jurisdiction to equity.

Wallack v. Society for the Reformation, 67 N. Y. 29.

Assuming equity to have had jurisdiction, it should not have been exercised, but jurisdiction should have been declined, and the controversy remitted to the state courts.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 166, 167, 52 L. ed. 731, 732, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441.

A state may require of a public service corporation a certain service to be performed at a rate which, though affording a large margin over expenses of operation, does not pay its full share toward profit on capital, and may even require certain services to be rendered at a loss, provided the company is left, on the whole, with a fair profit.

Ruggles v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 526, 538, 27 L. ed. 812, 817, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 832; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 665, 666, 39 L. ed. 567, 573, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 541, 42 L. ed. 819, 847, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 760, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1162, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 398.

The burden of proof is upon the complainant, and is so strong that it must show that the state authorities could not, fairly-mindedly, have come to the result which was reached.

United States v. Gettysburg Electric R. Co. 160 U. S. 668, 680, 40 L. ed. 576, 580, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 40 L. ed. 188, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Talbot v. Hudson, 16 Gray, 417; Re Wellington, 16 Pick. 96, 26 Am. Dec. 631; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 454, 51 L. ed. 1128, 1133, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 754, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 173, 44 L. ed. 417, 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 441, 442, 47 L. ed. 892, 894, 895, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

The present case is the first in which this court has been called upon to deal with a case of appreciation,—with the case of a corporation which can win only by proving a capitalization vastly greater than its investment,—which can win only upon unearned increments. All of its discussions of rate questions have been in cases where the company has fought for the standard of actual cost, and where the state has fought for the standard of actual value,—where the case was one of depreciation.

While the language of the court in these discussions has been general in form, we understand it to have been particularly directed to the facts in each case respectively, and that it should be read in the light of those facts.

Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 399, 5 L. ed. 257, 290; Carroll v. Carroll, 16 How. 275, 286, 14 L. ed. 936, 941; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 138, 19 L. ed. 382, 386; Barney v. Rickard, 157 U. S. 352, 364, 39 L. ed. 730, 734, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 642; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 574, 575, 39 L. ed. 759, 816, 817, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

In all these discussions it has been recognized that the subject cannot be treated from the standpoint of the company alone, any more than from the standpoint of the consumer alone; but it has not been necessary to analyze this out further than to hold that the company can rely neither upon its nominal stock and bond capitalization nor upon its original cost of construction, if these standards would result in a rate unreasonably high from the consumer's point of view.

Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 596, 597, 41 L. ed. 560, 566, 567, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 544, 547, 42 L. ed. 819, 848, 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 570, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633.

The land and improvements are to be valued as a unit, and not each independent of the other; so that, if the building does not enhance the value of the land, it is to be disregarded altogether.

Re New York, 118 App. Div. 272, 103 N. Y. Supp. 441; Re New York, 56 Misc. 318, 106 N. Y. Supp. 1003.

A simple franchise is the right to operate as a profitable going concern what would otherwise be a job lot of second-hand material.

People ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Tax Comrs. 174 N. Y. 417, 63 L.R.A. 884, 105 Am. St. Rep. 674, 67 N. E. 69; Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. 99 Me. 375, 59 Atl. 537; Beale & W. Railroads, § 362.

That a simple franchise cannot be given a separate and independent value for the purpose of increasing the price of gas against the consumer is obvious.

A franchise valuation must be small, if at all allowable. The state can at any time authorize or direct the city to build its own lighting plant.

Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 161 N. Y. 154, 46 L.R.A. 687, 55 N. E. 562, 184 U. S. 354, 46 L. ed. 585, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 168 Mass. 541, 47 N. E. 533, 386

103 Fed. 584, 193 U. S. 561, 48 L. ed. 795, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

It is only the annual value which is taxed under the special franchise tax, and the actual net profits are the basis of the valuation.

People ex rel. Jamaica Water Supply Co. v. Tax Comrs. 128 App. Div. 13, 112 N. Y. Supp. 392; Chicago Union Traction Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization, 114 Fed. 561.

Risk of depreciation over and above the past experience of the company should not be considered as a separate item of operating expense.

Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa, 234, 91 N. W. 1081; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 583, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; 1 Mill, Political Economy, chap. 15, § 1; Laughlin, Elements of Political Economy, 1902, ed. p. 202.

This court is as yet uncommitted on the subject of the rate of return, except that 6 per cent is high enough for a California water supply or irrigation company. The circuit courts disagree about it.

Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 690, 31 L. ed. 841, 844, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 657, 39 L. ed. 570, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 397, 38 L. ed. 1023, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 515, 547, 42 L. ed. 838, 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 757, 43 L. ed. 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 442, 445, 446, 47 L. ed. 894-896, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 91, 46 L. ed. 101, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 213, 216, 48 L. ed. 406, 413, 414, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, 87 Fed. 577; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574; Central R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 Fed. 992.

Too short a period was selected as the test.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Covington & L. 212 U. S.

Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 595, 41 L. ed. 560, 566, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198.

The Constitution does not guarantee a profit at every moment of time any more than it guarantees a profit at every mile of route or from every class of traffic.

Ruggles v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 526, 27 L. ed. 812, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 832; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 412, 38 L. ed. 1028, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

The experience of the other companies as well as of this complainant should have been shown.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 657, 39 L. ed. 570, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Tenement House Department v. Moeschén, 89 App. Div. 538, 85 N. Y. Supp. 704, 179 N. Y. 330, 70 L.R.A. 704, 103 Am. St. Rep. 910, 72 N. E. 231, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 439.

The provision as to pressure is separable from the rest of the statute, and therefore does not affect the foregoing argument.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 395, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 501, 52 L. ed. 297, 310, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

The pressure clause is constitutional.

Tenement House Department v. Moeschén, 179 N. Y. 326, 70 L.R.A. 704, 103 Am. St. Rep. 910, 72 N. E. 231, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 439; Gardner v. Michigan, 199 U. S. 325, 50 L. ed. 212, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Com. v. Roberts, 155 Mass. 281, 16 L.R.A. 400, 29 N. E. 522; Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32, 27 L.R.A. 710, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833.

The power to enjoin being discretionary, the court has the right to place any proper condition upon its exercise. What condition can be more proper than to say to the complainant—"It is discretionary with us to remit you to the state tribunal. It is discretionary with us to remit you to a trial at law. As a condition of coming into equity and having your case tried by the Federal procedure, you must do equity by charging no higher a sum than is found by that procedure to be constitutional?"

1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 385, 386, 389-393; DeWalsh v. Braman, 160 Ill. 415, 43 N. E. 597; Veazie v. Williams, 8 How. 134, 161, 12 L. ed. 1018, 1029; Willard v. Tayloe, 8 Wall. 557, 567, 569, 19 L. ed. 501, 504; People's Nat. Bank v. Marye, 191 U. S. 272, 281, 282, 285, 48 L. ed. 180, 185, 187, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; Parmley v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 3 Dill. 34, Fed. Cas. No. 10,768; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Denver L. & G. R. Co. 60 C. C. A. 588, 126 Fed. 46; Thomas 53 L. ed.

v. Evans, 105 N. Y. 615, 59 Am. Rep. 519, 12 N. E. 571; Fanning v. Dunham, 5 Johns. Ch. 142, 9 Am. Dec. 283; Stanley v. Gadsby, 10 Pet. 521, 9 L. ed. 518; Tiffany v. Boatman's Sav. Inst. 18 Wall. 375, 385, 21 L. ed. 868, 870; Knoth v. Manhattan R. Co. 109 App. Div. 807, 96 N. Y. Supp. 844, affirmed in 187 N. Y. 243, 79 N. E. 1015.

Mr. Alton B. Parker argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Francis K. Pendleton and William P. Burr, filed a brief for the city of New York:

There can be no such thing as a capitalization of the franchise by the appellee so as to enable it to exact a return thereon from its customers.

Beale & W. Railroads, § 362.

The company is entitled to a fair return upon all the money expended by it for the means employed in the service of the public (outside of what is included in operating expenses) and obligations incurred for such means, unless it plainly appears that such expenditures and obligations are in excess of what they should have been under all the circumstances, in which case they should be reduced.

Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 344, 29 L. ed. 636, 648, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400.

It cannot be said that a corporation is entitled as of right, and without reference to the interest of the public, to realize a given per cent upon its capital stock.

Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 597, 41 L. ed. 560, 566, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198.

The question in each case is, as said the court in that case, whether the legislature, under the guise of regulating rates, exceeded its constitutional authority, and practically deprived the owner of property without due process of law.

Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 597, 41 L. ed. 566, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198.

We suppose that this court judicially knows that a return of 4 to 5 per cent on investments not better secured than is the return to appellee is regarded as eminently satisfactory by the investing public. It certainly would seem to be a fair return for "the most favorably situated gas business in America."

Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 216, 48 L. ed. 414, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

All differences are not discriminatory.

Western U. Telc. Co. v. Call Pub. Co. 181 U. S. 92, 45 L. ed. 765, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561.

All that is required is that rates must not discriminate without a just and reasonable ground for discrimination.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 276, 283, 284, 36 L. ed. 699, 703, 706, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Beale & W. Railroads, §§ 735, 736.

Against proceedings by mandamus to enforce any of the provisions in either of the acts of the legislature of New York which are under consideration, the defense available in such proceedings affords appellee adequate protection; and, as to the penalties imposed, the provisions in regard thereto being separable, it has an adequate remedy by injunction.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 395, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

Mr. William S. Jackson, in propria persona, argued the cause and filed a brief for the Attorney General:

A corporation engaged in a public service is entitled to a return only upon property necessarily devoted by it to that service by the operation of a reasonably efficient plant, conducted with reasonable economy and ability.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 543, 42 L. ed. 848, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 275, 50 Pac. 633; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198.

Only property necessary for the particular use may be valued.

Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford and Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. supra; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, supra.

The question of the reasonableness of a rate involves the element of reasonableness, both as regards the company and as regards the public.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 450, 33 L. ed. 977, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, supra.

The rate must be just to the public.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 757, 43 L. ed. 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 442, 47 L. ed. 894, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, supra; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 546, 42 L. ed. 849, 18 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

The public has the right to the benefit of progress in the art.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 657, 39 L. ed. 570, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484.

The 80-cent rate will be held to yield complainant a fair return unless it is plainly and palpably confiscatory.

Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 444, 36 L. ed. 176, 179, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 391, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1021, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 529, 42 L. ed. 819, 843, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Henderson, 173 U. S. 592, 614, 615, 43 L. ed. 823, 831, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Ball v. Rutland R. Co. 93 Fed. 513; Palatka Waterworks v. Palatka, 127 Fed. 161; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 754, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

The provisions as to candle power, pressure, and penalties do not invalidate the acts and they are separable.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 394-396, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 1023, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Consolidated Gas Co. v. Mayer, 146 Fed. 155; Griffin v. Interurban Street R. Co. 179 N. Y. 438, 72 N. E. 513, 180 N. Y. 538, 72 N. E. 1142; Jones v. Rochester Gas & Electric Co. 168 N. Y. 68, 60 N. E. 1044; Cox v. Paul, 175 N. Y. 328, 67 N. E. 586; Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962.

The right to impose burdens for the public good and in favor of the municipality upon public service corporations has been repeatedly held constitutional.

Rochester v. Rochester R. Co. 182 N. Y. 99, 70 L.R.A. 773, 74 N. E. 953, affirmed in 205 U. S. 236, 51 L. ed. 784, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

The failure to limit price in localities other than the city of New York does not invalidate N. Y. Laws 1906, chap. 125.

Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L.

ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 126-135, 24 L. ed. 84-87.

Mr. James M. Beck argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Shearman & Sterling, filed a brief for appellee:

The complainant was without adequate remedy at law, and a court of equity had jurisdiction.

Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 531, 48 L. ed. 1106, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 163, 52 L. ed. 714, 730, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441.

The 11th Amendment does not apply to a suit against a state official who is seeking to enforce an unconstitutional statute.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 41 L. ed. 632, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 47 L. ed. 584, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 203 U. S. 335, 51 L. ed. 209, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Scully v. Bird, 209 U. S. 481, 52 L. ed. 899, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597; Smyth v. Ames, supra; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

Where a state voluntarily becomes a party to a cause, and submits its rights for judicial determination, it will be bound thereby, and cannot escape the results of its own voluntary act by invoking the prohibitions of the 11th Amendment.

Gunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 200 U. S. 273, 50 L. ed. 477, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436, 447, 27 L. ed. 780, 784, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 878.

The pressure provision is not severable from the body of the statute.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 158 U. S. 601, 39 L. ed. 1108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 501, 52 L. ed. 297, 310, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Allen v. Louisiana, 103 U. S. 80, 26 L. ed. 318; People ex rel. Townsend v. Porter, 90 N. Y. 68; Saratoga Springs v. Saratoga Gas, Electric Light & P. Co. 191 N. Y. 123, 83 N. E. 393.

The provision of said acts as to penalties are unconstitutional on their face and invalidate both statutes.

Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. and Ex parte Young, supra.

In previous cases the court had already held that where maximum rates were provided, and no opportunity was granted for judicial review of the reasonableness of those rates, the law as a whole was unconstitutional.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702.

There is no sound distinction between a statute which in terms denies any opportunity for a judicial review and makes a legislative law conclusive, and one which seeks to accomplish the same purpose by obstructing access to the courts, and thus compelling the corporation, by oppressive penalties, to accept the legislative rate rather than incur the hazard of litigating its rights.

In determining the severability of the penalty provisions, the decisions of the New York courts will be controlling upon this court; and these decisions leave no doubt that the New York courts would hold that the penalty provisions were not separable from the maximum-rate provisions.

People ex rel. Townsend v. Porter and Saratoga Springs v. Saratoga Gas, Electric Light, & P. Co.

Both statutes are unduly discriminatory and therefore unconstitutional upon their face.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Beardsley v. New York L. E. & W. R. Co. 162 N. Y. 230, 56 N. E. 488; Wilson v. United Traction Co. 72 App. Div. 233, 76 N. Y. Supp. 203.

A city, in contracting for a supply of gas for corporate purposes, acts as a private corporation.

Smith v. Brooklyn, 160 N. Y. 357, 45 L.R.A. 664, 54 N. E. 787; People ex rel. Treat v. Coler, 166 N. Y. 144, 59 N. E. 776; Western Sav. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 31 Pa. 175, 72 Am. Dec. 730; Bailey v. New York, 3 Hill, 531, 38 Am. Dec. 669; Byrnes v. Cohoes, 67 N. Y. 204; Lynch v. Springfield, 174 Mass. 430, 54 N. E. 871.

It has been broadly held that where powers are given to a municipal corporation for merely corporate purposes, and not for strictly governmental purposes, the city acts as a private corporation.

Missano v. New York, 160 N. Y. 123, 54 N. E. 744; Walsh v. New York, 41 Hun, 299; Scott v. New York, 27 App. Div. 240, 50 N. Y. Supp. 191.

The rate-fixing power is one of prohibition. In strictness it does not fix rates, but simply provides that any sum beyond a given maximum is unreasonable. In so doing, it, in effect, declares that the maximum is a reasonable price.

Brooklyn Union Gas Co. v. New York, 188 N. Y. 334, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 763, 117 Am. St. Rep. 868, 81 N. E. 141; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 695, 43 L. ed. 858, 863, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

When, therefore, the state provides that, as to all other consumers, 80 cents per thousand feet is a reasonable charge, and provides that, as to one consumer, no greater charge than 75 cents shall be made, it in effect declares that, to the favored consumer, gas must be sold at less than a reasonable rate. This the state cannot do.

The finding of the circuit court that the rates prescribed would yield the complainant less than a just and reasonable rate of return is a finding of fact, and not a conclusion of law, and this court should therefore give to such finding the controlling weight of a special verdict of a jury, and not reverse such finding except for clear and indubitable error.

Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 596, 41 L. ed. 560, 566, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 180, 44 L. ed. 417, 423, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 631, 636, 39 L. ed. 289, 291, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; 1 Foster, Fed. Pr. p. 690, § 315; Greene v. Bishop, 1 Cliff. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 5,763; Mason v. Crosby, 3 Woodb. & M. 258, Fed. Cas. No. 9,236; Donnell v. Columbian Ins. Co. 2 Sumn. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 3,987; Welling v. La Bau, 34 Fed. 40; Moline Plow Co. v. Carson, 18 C. C. A. 606, 36 U. S. App. 449, 72 Fed. 388; Fidelity & C. Co. v. St. Matthews Sav. Bank, 44 C. C. A. 225, 104 Fed. 860; Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co. 104 Mass. 531; Richards v. Todd, 127 Mass. 172; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 446, 47 L. ed. 892, 896, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Philadelphia County, 220 Pa. 114, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 108, 68 Atl. 676.

Where the rate is prescribed by the legislature, and not by an administrative body, it is equally subject to judicial review as to its confiscatory character.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 397, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1023, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 598, 41 L. ed. 560, 567, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 753, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1159, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 234, 41 L. ed. 979, 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581;

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 173, 44 L. ed. 417, 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 91, 46 L. ed. 92, 101, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

Legislative rates, to be constitutional, must yield a "compensation" that "full," "fair," "just," "reasonable," and "adequate," and one that is not less than the "market value" of such use.

Allnutt v. Inglis, 12 East, 527; Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 326, 37 L. ed. 463, 470, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 141, 24 L. ed. 89; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 458, 33 L. ed. 970, 981, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co., Smyth v. Ames, and Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford,—supra; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 757, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, supra; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 24, 51 L. ed. 933, 944, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 398; Central R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 Fed. 995; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 261.

The rule that the fair return must not be less than the legal rate of interest is justified on reason and authority.

Brymer v. Butler Water Co. 179 Pa. 251, 36 L.R.A. 260, 36 Atl. 249; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Philadelphia County, 220 Pa. 115, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 108, 68 Atl. 676; Chicago Union Traction Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization, 114 Fed. 561; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brown, 123 Fed. 951; Central R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 Fed. 925; Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, 87 Fed. 585; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. supra; People ex rel. Jamaica Water Supply Co. v. Tax Comrs. 128 App. Div. 13, 112 N. Y. Supp. 392; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 598; International Bridge Co. v. Canada Southern R. Co. 7 Ont. App. Rep. 226, affirmed in L. R. 8 App. Cas. 723.

The basis of calculation is the present value of the property, and not its original cost.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 757, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804, affirming 74 Fed. 83; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 91, 46

L. ed. 92, 101, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30, reversing 82 Fed. 854; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 547, 42 L. ed. 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 442, 47 L. ed. 892, 894, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571, affirming 110 Fed. 714; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 215, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241.

Mr. John A. Garver also argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Shearman & Sterling, filed a brief for appellee:

The term "special franchises" signifies the right to occupy with its mains the streets of its municipality where it carries on its business, as distinguished from the corporate franchise and the general franchise to engage in the business of manufacturing and supplying gas.

People ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Tax Comrs. 174 N. Y. 417, 63 L.R.A. 884, 105 Am. St. Rep. 674, 67 N. E. 69.

The law of New York controls as to the nature of special franchises.

Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190, 205, 207, 44 L. ed. 729, 737, 738, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Muhlker v. New York & H. R. Co. 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. ed. 872, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 206 U. S. 496, 509, 51 L. ed. 1155, 1160, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

In New York special franchises are property in every respect.

Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Kerr, 72 N. Y. 330; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 40, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Suburban Rapid Transit Co. v. New York, 128 N. Y. 520, 28 N. E. 525; People ex rel. Woodhaven Gaslight Co. v. Deehan, 153 N. Y. 528, 532, 47 N. E. 787; Parker v. Elmira, C. & N. R. Co. 165 N. Y. 274, 59 N. E. 81; People ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Tax Comrs. supra; Re Long Acre Electric Light & P. Co. 188 N. Y. 361, 80 N. E. 1101; Water Comrs. v. Westchester County Waterworks Co. 176 N. Y. 239, 68 N. E. 348; Hatfield v. Straus, 189 N. Y. 219, 82 N. E. 172; Coney Island, Ft. H. & B. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 15 App. Div. 592, 44 N. Y. Supp. 825; Rochester & C. Turnp. Road Co. v. Joel, 41 App. Div. 45, 58 N. Y. Supp. 346; Wakefield v. Theresa, 125 App. Div. 38, 109 N. Y. Supp. 414.

That a special franchise, such as those under consideration in this case, is property, with all the attributes of property, is the law of nearly every state in the Union, and has repeatedly been recognized in this court.

West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 534, 543, 12 L. ed. 535, 546, 549; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Reid, 13 Wall. 264, 20 L. ed. 568; Morgan v. Louisiana, 93 U. S.

217, 223, 23 L. ed. 860, 861; New Orleans, S. F. & L. R. Co. v. Delamore, 114 U. S. 501, 29 L. ed. 244, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1009; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 394, 46 L. ed. 592, 610, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. 199 U. S. 1, 39, 50 L. ed. 65, 76, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 381.

A large portion of the wealth of the community consists of intangible property.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 218, 219, 41 L. ed. 965, 976, 977, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; New York ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. New York State Tax Comrs. supra.

Even the value of the tangible property of public service corporations depends largely upon the special franchises owned by such corporations. Without such franchises, the right of way or tracks of a railway company would possess only a nominal value, and the pipes and mains of a gas company would be mere junk for the scrap heap.

People ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Tax Comrs. 174 N. Y. 437, 63 L.R.A. 884, 105 Am. St. Rep. 674, 67 N. E. 69; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 606, 23 L. ed. 663, 670.

In New York, special franchises cannot be repealed or impaired under the reserved power.

People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 36, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692.

When authority is given by the state to a corporation to use the streets of a municipality, and the franchise has been accepted and acted upon by the corporation, a contract has been made which, during its continuance, cannot subsequently be impaired by the legislature.

People ex rel. Davis v. Sturtevant, 9 N. Y. 273, 59 Am. Dec. 536; Milhau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 620, 84 Am. Dec. 314; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 660, 29 L. ed. 516, 520, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 681, 29 L. ed. 525, 527, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

But the contract thus entered into for the use of the streets is something more than a mere personal right. It is a grant of an incorporeal hereditament; it is an easement or right of way in the streets, and hence is real property.

Milhau v. Sharp, supra; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 40, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Ghee v. Northern Union Gas Co. 158 N. Y. 510, 53 N. E. 692; People ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Tax Comrs. 174 N. Y. 435, 63 L.R.A.

884, 105 Am. St. Rep. 674, 67 N. E. 69; Water Comrs. v. Westchester County Waterworks Co. supra; Kronsbein v. Rochester, 76 App. Div. 494, 78 N. Y. Supp. 813; Re East River Gas Co. 122 App. Div. 890, 106 N. Y. Supp. 1125; Bowman v. Wathen, 2 McLean, 376, Fed. Cas. No. 1,740; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L.R.A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 365, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 643; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 534, 12 L. ed. 535, 546; Gue v. Tide Water Canal Co. 24 How. 257, 16 L. ed. 635; East Alabama R. Co. v. Doe, 114 U. S. 340, 353, 29 L. ed. 136, 141, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869.

The same conclusion has been reached in other states where the question has arisen.

Chicago v. Baer, 41 Ill. 306; Stockton Gas & Electric Co. v. San Joaquin County, 148 Cal. 313, 5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 174, 83 Pac. 54, 7 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 511.

That a franchise of this kind is real property was decided in England in the early days of gas lighting.

R. v. Brighton Gaslight & Coke Co. 5 Barn. & C. 466.

A corporation cannot be deprived of its special franchises except under the power of eminent domain and upon payment of their full value.

Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Kerr and Water Comrs. v. Westchester County Waterworks Co. supra; Coney Island, Ft. H. & B. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 15 App. Div. 588, 44 N. Y. Supp. 825; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, supra.

Even the unlimited power to regulate commerce would not authorize the Federal government to destroy a franchise of this kind without making just compensation for it.

United States v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co. 176 U. S. 211, 216, 44 L. ed. 437, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, supra.

Half a century ago this court refused to make a distinction in condemnation proceedings between tangible and intangible property.

West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535.

If special franchises are entitled to the same protection from invasion as any other species of property (Parker v. Elmira, C. & N. R. Co. 165 N. Y. 274, 59 N. E. 81), and if a corporation cannot be deprived of its special franchises except under the exercise of the power of eminent domain and upon payment of their full value, it necessarily follows that a corporation cannot be deprived of its special franchises indirectly, through the exercise of the legislative power regulating rates; for, as this court observed in the Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 331, 29 L. ed. 636, 644, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191, the power to regulate rates amounts to a taking of private property for public use.

While the point has not been directly passed upon by this court, yet, wherever it has been referred to in the general discussion on the subject of rate regulation, it has been stated or assumed that, in fixing a rate, the value of the special franchises must be included in valuing the property of a public service corporation.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 173, 44 L. ed. 417, 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

There is a marked difference between the exercise of the police power in the regulation of rates, and its exercise where the public health, safety, or morals are concerned. The regulation of rates is an exercise of the police power.

People v. Budd, 117 N. Y. 1, 5 L.R.A. 559, 15 Am. St. Rep. 460, 22 N. E. 670, 143 U. S. 517, 544, 545, 36 L. ed. 247, 255, 256, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468.

In all cases involving the public health, safety, or morals, the exercise of the police power is paramount to property or contract rights. All property is held subject to the exercise of that power; and the owner has no remedy if, as a result, his contract rights are changed or the value of his property is impaired.

Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 750, 751, 28 L. ed. 585-587, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 668-673, 29 L. ed. 516, 523-525, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Drainage Commission, 197 U. S. 453, 49 L. ed. 831, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175; Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 596, 52 L. ed. 630, 636, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

But that principle is not recognized in the regulation of rates; and contract and property rights cannot be ignored in such cases. A contract for a specific rate will be protected.

Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. supra; Cleveland v. Cleveland City R. Co. 194 U. S. 517, 536, 48 L. ed. 1102, 1108, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 206 U. S. 496, 508-516, 51

L. ed. 1155, 1160, 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762.

All the decisions of this court in the rate regulation cases are based upon the proposition that the legislature cannot ignore property or contract rights in establishing a rate. A rate must be allowed which will permit a reasonable return upon the fair value of the property devoted to the public use.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 753, 756, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1159, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

In the lower Federal courts and in the state courts, wherever the point has been suggested, the conclusion has also been reached or intimated that special franchises cannot be ignored in fixing rates.

Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 176; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, supra; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633.

Rate regulation is merely the enforcement of a principle which has long been recognized at common law, and which has been the subject of legislation from the earliest days of parliamentary history. This principle is, that a business which, as Lord Hale long ago expressed it, is "affected with a public interest," by reason of the fact that the public are compelled to patronize it, must make a reasonable charge for its services or product. Legislation became necessary when the persons engaged in the business exceeded their legitimate rights, and made unreasonable charges. The legislature did not interfere so long as the charges were reasonable. It merely prohibited unreasonable charges by fixing a limit of reasonableness. It did not in any way attempt to interfere with property rights, but merely sought to prevent imposition and extortion.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 698, 43 L. ed. 858, 864, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

At common law, however, the reasonableness of a rate had very little to do with the amount of return received by the owner of property upon the capital invested in the business. Whether or not a rate was reasonable depended principally upon the nature of the service rendered and the charges that were usual in that class of business. The value of the property employed or the return realized upon the property was so slight a factor that it was virtually ignored.

Canada Southern R. Co. v. International Bridge Co. L. R. 8 App. Cas. 731; Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691, 699, 27 L. ed. 584, 587, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 53 L. ed.

12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 95-97, 46 L. ed. 92, 103, 104, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

Good will, or the added value derived from an established business, is property which, in the case of a partnership, constitutes a partnership asset, and does not pass to the surviving partner.

Slater v. Slater, 175 N. Y. 143, 61 L.R.A. 796, 96 Am. St. Rep. 605, 67 N. E. 224.

Even in the case of a waterworks company (a public service corporation), its good will must be paid for in condemnation proceedings.

Water Comrs. v. Westchester County Waterworks Co. 176 N. Y. 239, 68 N. E. 348.

In New York, under the system of taxation which exists, corporations are required to pay a state franchise tax, under which good will is taxable.

People ex rel. Wiebusch & H. Co. v. Roberts, 154 N. Y. 101, 47 N. E. 980.

The valuation placed upon the real estate and plant of the company was merely the market or reproductive value. Nothing was allowed for the fact that all of this property has a largely enhanced value by reason of the fact that it is operated as a single entity, although the parts are physically separated. It is the great value of this business as an organic whole, and not the nominal value of its dismembered and lifeless parts, upon which its owners are entitled to a return; and that principle is universally recognized in assessing property for taxation.

Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 38 L. ed. 1041, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 677, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1122; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 171, 185, 41 L. ed. 960, 965, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Missouri, 190 U. S. 412, 47 L. ed. 1116, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. ed. 761, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; San Francisco Bank v. Dodge, 197 U. S. 70, 49 L. ed. 669, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384.

A similar conclusion has been reached by the Federal courts in rate regulation and other cases.

National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, 27 L.R.A. 827, 10 C. C. A. 653, 27 U. S. App. 165, 62 Fed. 865; Metropolitan Trust Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 90 Fed. 687; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 595.

The universal practice to assess property for purposes of taxation at less than its actual value is a matter of general knowledge which has been recognized and rebuked by the courts.

People ex rel. Equitable Gaslight Co. v. Barker, 144 N. Y. 100, 39 N. E. 13; People ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v. Barker, 146 N. Y. 304, 40 N. E. 996; Railroad & Teleph. Cos. v. Board of Equalizers, 85 Fed. 308; Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. ed. 903; New York v. Barker, 179 U. S. 279, 286, 45 L. ed. 190, 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121.

For the year 1906, the special franchises of the company were assessed at about $24,000,000, exclusive of the mains and connections. The tax law requires the state board to fix the value of these franchises, and to hear all complaints in regard to values so fixed before making them final. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, that valuation should be accepted by this court as conclusive.

Railroad & Teleph. Cos. v. Board of Equalizers, 85 Fed. 302; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 41 L. ed. 965, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604.

While true or full value is not a constitutional requirement in New York, it is a statutory requirement which has been enforced by the courts.

People ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v. Barker, 146 N. Y. 312, 40 N. E. 996.

Even had exceptional and peculiar conditions not existed in New York, the continuous growth of the city and the occupation of all the available space in the streets would have rendered an existing occupation of the streets of constantly increasing value.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Electric Light & P. Co. 178 N. Y. 325, 70 N. E. 866; Ghee v. Northern Union Gas Co. 158 N. Y. 510, 53 N. E. 692; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Drainage Commission, 197 U. S. 453, 49 L. ed. 831, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 471.

There is no doubt that the combined property of the company has a value which is largely in excess of the separate values of the properties of its constituent companies.

Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 439, 444, 38 L. ed. 1041, 1045, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 677, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1122.

Mr. Charles F. Mathewson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Shearman & Sterling, filed a brief for appellee on the facts.

Mr. W. Bourke Cockran filed a brief as amicus curiæ:

The courts are concerned solely in maintaining the security of property, not with guaranteeing a profitable use of it.

Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 331, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 754, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

Wherever the legislature is given authority to deal with any subject, it is the fullest authority, including authority to decide for itself all matters of fact incident to the exercise of its functions.

Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Chicago, P. & S. R. Co. 39 Fed. 143; Angle v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 39 Fed. 912; Rankin v. Colgan, 92 Cal. 605, 28 Pac. 673; 2 Story, Const. § 1342.

This court, in all its decisions affecting legislative regulation of public service corporations, has always recognized the right of a legislature to ascertain for itself facts necessary to the effective discharge of this function.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 286, 6 L.R.A. 756, 16 Am. St. Rep. 116, 22 Pac. 910, 1046; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 750, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1158, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

Where certain features of a law transcend the Constitution, yet others are within the power of the legislature to enact, those features that are constitutional will be upheld.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 247.

Mr. Nathan Matthews also filed a brief as amicus curiæ.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:†

At the outset it seems to us proper to notice the views regarding the action of the court below, which have been stated by [40] counsel for the appellants, the public service commission, in their brief in this court. They assume to criticize the court for taking jurisdiction of this case, as precipitate, as if it were a question of discretion or comity, whether or not that court should have heard the case. On the contrary, there was no discretion or comity about it. When a Federal court is properly appealed to in a case over which it has by law jurisdiction, it is its duty to take such jurisdiction (Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 404, 5 L. ed. 257, 291), and, in taking it, that court cannot be truthfully spoken of as precipitate in its conduct. That the case may be one of local interest only is entirely immaterial, so long as the parties are citizens of different states or a question is involved which, by law, brings the case within the jurisdiction of a Federal court. The right of a party plaintiff to choose a Federal court where there is a choice cannot be properly denied. Re Metropolitan R. Receivership, 208 U. S. 90-110, 52 L. ed. 403-412, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219; Prentiss v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 211 U. S. 210, ante, 150, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67. In the latter case it was said that a plaintiff could not be forbidden to try the facts upon which his right to relief is based before a court of his own choice, if otherwise competent. It is true an application for an injunction was denied in that case because the plaintiff should, in our opinion, have taken the appeal allowed him by the law of Virginia while the rate of fare in litigation was still at the legislative stage, so as to make it absolutely certain that the officials of the state would try to establish and enforce an unconstitutional rule,

†In announcing the decision on January 4, 1909, Mr. Justice Peckham read a memorandum giving the gist of the opinion now published, which was not filed until some days later.

The case before us is not like that. It involves the constitutionality, with reference to the Federal Constitution, of two acts of the legislature of New York, and it is one over which the circuit court undoubtedly had jurisdiction under the act of Congress, and its action in taking and hearing the case cannot be the subject of proper criticism.

An examination of the record herein, with reference to the questions involved in the merits, shows that the act under which the gas commission was appointed was, subsequently to the commencement and trial of 41] this suit, declared, on grounds *not here material, to be unconstitutional by the court of appeals of New York. Saratoga Springs v. Saratoga Gas, Electric Light, & P. Co. 191 N. Y. 123, 83 N. E. 693, February 18, 1908. The order made by the commission must therefore be regarded as invalid. It is not important in his case, because the act of the legislature of 1906 makes the same provision as to the price of gas to consumers other than the city that the order does. We have, as remaining to be considered, the above mentioned two acts of the legislature.

The question arising is as to the validity of the acts limiting the rates for gas to the prices therein stated. The rule by which to determine the question, is pretty well established in this court. The rates must be plainly unreasonable to the extent that their enforcement would be equivalent to the taking of property for public use without such compensation as, under the circumstances, is just both to the owner and the public. There must be a fair return upon the reasonable value of the property at the time it is being used for the public. San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 757, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 442, 47 L. ed. 892, 894, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

Many of the cases are cited in Knoxville 53 L. ed.

v. Knoxville Water Co. just decided. [212 U. S. 1, ante, 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.] The case must be a clear one before the courts ought to be asked to interfere with state legislation upon the subject of rates, especially before there has been any actual experience of the practical result of such rates. In this case the rates have not been enforced as yet, because the bill herein was filed and an injunction obtained restraining their enforcement, before they came into actual operation.

In order to determine the rate of return upon the reasonable value of the property at the time it is being used for the public, it, of course, becomes necessary to ascertain what that value is. A very great amount of evidence was taken before the master upon that subject, which is included in five large volumes of the record. Valuations by expert witnesses were given as to the value of the real estate owned by the complainant, and as to the value of the mains, service pipes, plants, meters, and miscellaneous personal property.

*The value of real estate and plant is, [42 to a considerable extent, matter of opinion; and the same may be said of personal estate when not based upon the actual cost of material and construction. Deterioration of the value of the plant, mains, and pipes is also, to some extent, based upon opinion. All these matters make questions of value somewhat uncertain; while added to this is an alleged prospective loss of income from a reduced rate,—a matter also of much uncertainty, depending upon the extent of the reduction and the probable increased consumption,—and we have a problem as to the character of a rate which is difficult to answer without a practical test from actual operation of the rate. Of course, there may be cases where the rate is so low, upon any reasonable basis of valuation, that there can be no just doubt as to its confiscatory nature; and, in that event, there should be no hesitation in so deciding and in enjoining its enforcement without waiting for the damage which must inevitably accompany the operation of the business under the objectionable rate. But, where the rate complained of shows, in any event, a very narrow line of division between possible confiscation and proper regulation, as based upon the value of the property found by the court below, and the division depends upon opinions as to value, which differ considerably among the witnesses, and also upon the results in the future of operating, under the rate objected to, so that the material fact of value is left in much doubt, a court of equity ought not to interfere by injunction before a fair trial has been made of continuing the business under that rate, and thus eliminating, as far as is possible, the doubt arising from opinions as opposed to facts.

A short history of the complainant, as to its incorporation and its capital, and the method by which the value of its franchises was arrived at, will render the further examination of the case more intelligible.

Prior to 1884 there were seven gaslight companies in New York city, each operated under separate charters, granted at different times between the years 1823 and 1865 or 43]1871. They *each had the right to use the streets of certain portions of the city for the purpose of laying their mains and service pipes in order to furnish gas to the city and the citizens. Not one of the companies had ever been called upon to pay a penny for such right, but the grant to each was, in the aspect, a gratuity. It was not, at the time of granting franchises such as these, the custom to pay for them.

In 1884, by chapter 367 of the laws of that year, authority to consolidate manufacturing corporations was granted upon conditions mentioned in the act. The directors of the corporations proposing to consolidate were to make an agreement for consolidation, embracing, among other things, the amount of capital and the number of shares of stock into which it should be divided, the capital not to be in amount more "than the fair aggregate value of the property, franchises, and rights of the several companies to be consolidated." The agreement was not to be valid until submitted to the stockholders of each of the companies and approved by two-thirds of each. The constituent companies, which were afterwards consolidated under their agreement, and pursuant to the act mentioned, were six in number, the seventh, the Mutual Company, withdrawing. The companies agreed upon the valuation of their property, which was to be paid for in the stock of the consolidated company, and the original stock held by the stockholders of each company was surrendered to the consolidated company. The value of the franchise of all the companies was set at the figure of $7,781,000. The court below said that the master reported there was little direct evidence before him as to the value of the franchises, to which the court added that if the master, by direct evidence, meant testimony of the same kind regarding their value as had been offered regarding every item of tangible property, there was none at all.

The court further stated that it does not appear in the evidence how the valuation of the franchises was measured, or why the figures selected were chosen, but that it was true that, when complainant was organized, 44]in 1884, under the consolidation *statute which, in terms, permitted it to acquire the property and franchises of the other companies, it issued stock of the par value of $7,781,000, representing the franchises it then acquired and nothing else, and that the stock was held by purchasers who, I am compelled to think, had a right to rely upon legal protection for legally issued stock. It is not, of course, contended there was special stock issued for this particular item, but it was included in the total sum for which the consolidated company issued its stock, and, upon its receipt, the stockholders in the various companies surrendered their stock in those companies. The result was that the amount of the stock issued by the consolidated company was increased by $7,781,000, representing a value of franchises which was agreed upon by the stockholders in the companies, and which had never cost any of them a single penny.

It cannot be disputed that franchises of this nature are property and cannot be taken or used by others without compensation. Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692, and cases cited. The important question is always one of value. Taking their value in this case as arrived at by agreement of their owners, at the time of the consolidation, that value has been increased by the finding of the court below to the sum of $12,000,000 at the time of the commencement of this suit. The trial court said: "If, however, complainant's franchises were worth $7,781,000 in 1884, and its tangible property, at the same time, was appraised (as appears in evidence) at $30,000,000 (in round figures), then since complainant's business (in sales volume) has, in twenty-three years, almost quadrupled, and its tangible assets grown to $47,000,000, it appears to me that a fair method of fixing value of the franchises in 1905 is to assume the same growth in value for the franchise as is demonstrated by the evidence in the case of tangible property. If, therefore, the franchise valuation of 1884 was proportioned to personalty and realty of $30,000,000, a franchise valuation proportioned to $47,000,000 in 1905 would be over $12,000,000. This, I think, a logical result *from the assumption I am compelled to[45 start with, i. e., that franchises have a separable and independent value. But there is, however, no method of valuing franchises, except by a consideration of earnings. Earnings must be proportioned to assets; and both kinds of assets, tangible and intangible, must stand upon the same plane of valuation. Having, therefore, a measure of growth of tangible assets from 1884 to 1905, the franchise assets must be assumed to have grown in the same proportion. I find that the value of complainant's franchises at the date of inquiry was not less than $12,000,000, making a total valuation of $59,000,000, upon which the probable return is $3,030,000, or very considerably less than 8 per cent." The judge stated his own views as opposed to including these franchises in the property upon the value of which a return is to be calculated in fixing the amount of rates, but held that he was bound by decided cases to hold against his personal views.

We are not prepared to hold with the court below as to the increased value which it attributes to the franchises. It is not only too much a matter of pure speculation, but we think it is also opposed to the principle upon which such valuation should be made. This corporation is one of that class which is subject to regulation by the legislature in the matter of rates, provided they are not made so low as to be confiscatory. The franchises granted the various companies and held by complainant consisted in the right to open the streets of the city and lay down mains and use them to supply gas, subject to the legislative right to so regulate the price for the gas as to permit not more than a fair return (regard being had to the risk of the business) upon the reasonable value of the property at the time it is being used for the public.

The evidence shows that from their creation, down to the consolidation in 1884, these companies had been free from legislative regulation upon the amount of the rates to be charged for gas. They had been most prosperous and had divided very large earnings in the shape of dividends to their stockholders,—dividends which are characterized 46] by the Senate committee, *appointed in 1885 to investigate the fact surrounding the consolidation, as enormous. The report of that committee shows that several of the companies had averaged, from their creation, dividends over 16 per cent., and the six companies in the year 1884 paid a dividend upon capital which had been increased by earnings, as in the case of the Manhattan and the New York, of 18 per cent; and, had it been upon the money actually paid in, it would have been nearly 25 per cent.

The committee also said in the same report that these "franchises were in force November 10, 1884, the time of the consolidation, and the money invested in them was earning the same enormous dividends. So far as the evidence shows, there was nothing in the condition of affairs on the 10th of November to indicate that these franchises would not be as valuable for the next twenty years as they had been in the past. There were gas companies enough in the city with a capacity capable of supplying the demands 53 L. ed.

for the next twenty years. A law was on our statute books that virtually prohibited the laying of any more gas pipes in the streets. The gas companies had an agreement among themselves, fixing the price of gas at a figure that paid these dividends. The people were paying this price, as they had in the past, without objection or protest. This price may have been too high, and the dividends were excessive, but they were not illegal, and the valuation of the franchises computed upon these dividends and that state of facts cannot be called a violation of a law that expressly authorized it to be done, unless such valuation was too high."

The committee, upon these facts, were of opinion that the valuation of $7,781,000 for the franchises was not more than their fair aggregate value.

Assuming, as the committee did, that the company would be permitted to charge the same prices in the future which in the past had resulted in these "enormous" or "excessive" dividends, it need not be matter of surprise that a franchise by *means of 47 which such dividends had been possible was not regarded as overvalued at the sum stated in 1884.

We think that, under the above facts, the courts ought to accept the valuation of the franchises fixed and agreed upon under the act of 1884 as conclusive at that time. The valuation was provided for in the act, which was followed by the companies, and the agreement regarding it has been always recognized as valid, and the stock has been largely dealt in for more than twenty years past on the basis of the validity of the valuation and of the stock issued by the company.

But, although the state ought, for these reasons, to be bound to recognize the value agreed upon in 1884 as part of the property upon which a reasonable return can be demanded, we do not think an increase in that valuation ought to be allowed upon the theory suggested by the court below. Because the amount of gas supplied has increased to the extent stated, and the other and tangible property of the corporations has increased so largely in value, is not, as it seems to us, any reason for attributing a like proportional increase in the value of the franchise. Real estate may have increased in value very largely, as also the personal property, without any necessary increase in the value of the franchise. Its past value was founded upon the opportunity of obtaining these enormous and excessive returns upon the property of the company, without legislative interference with the price for the supply of gas; but that immunity for the future was, of course, uncertain; and the moment it ceased, and the legislature reduced the earnings to a reasonable sum, the great value of the franchise would be at once and unfavorably affected, but how much so it is not possible for us now to see. The value would most certainly not increase. The question of the regulation of rates did, from time to time thereafter, arise in the legislature, and finally culminated in these acts which were in existence when the court below found this increased value of the franchises. We cannot, in any view of the case, concur in that finding.

48] *This increase in value did, however, form part of the sum upon which the court below held the complainant was entitled to a return. That court found the value of the tangible assets actually employed at the time of the commencement of this suit in the business of supplying gas by the complainant to be \$47,831,435, to which it added the \$12,000,000 as the value of the franchises as found by it, making the total of \$59,831,435, upon which it held that the company was entitled to a return of 6 per cent, being \$3,589,886.10. It also found its total net income for the year 1905 amounted to \$5,881,192.45, almost 10 per cent upon the sum above named. Altering the finding of the court so far only as to place the value of the franchises at the time agreed upon in 1884, \$7,781,000, the total value upon that basis of the property employed by the company would be \$55,612,435, upon which 6 per cent would be \$3,336,746.10, while the sum estimated as the return on 80-cent gas would have been \$3,024,592.14, which is nearly $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on the above total of \$55,612,435.

What has been said herein regarding the value of the franchises in this case has been necessarily founded upon its own peculiar facts, and the decision thereon can form no precedent in regard to the valuation of franchises generally, where the facts are not similar to those in the case before us. We simply accept the sum named as the value under the circumstances stated.

There is no particular rate of compensation which must, in all cases and in all parts of the country, be regarded as sufficient for capital invested in business enterprises. Such compensation must depend greatly upon circumstances and locality; among other things, the amount of risk in the business is a most important factor, as well as the locality where the business is conducted, and the rate expected and usually realized there upon investments of a somewhat similar nature with regard to the risk attending them. There may be other matters which, in some cases, might also be properly taken into account in determining the rate which an investor might properly expect *or hope to receive and which he[49 would be entitled to without legislative interference. The less risk, the less right to any unusual returns upon the investments. One who invests his money in a business of a somewhat hazardous character is very properly held to have the right to a larger return, without legislative interference, than can be obtained from an investment in government bonds or other perfectly safe security. The man that invested in gas stock in 1823 had a right to look for and obtain, if possible, a much greater rate upon his investment than he who invested in such property in the city of New York years after the risk and danger involved had been almost entirely eliminated.

In an investment in a gas company, such as complainant's, the risk is reduced almost to a minimum. It is a corporation which, in fact, as the court below remarks, monopolizes the gas service of the largest city in America, and is secure against competition under the circumstances in which it is placed, because it is a proposition almost unthinkable that the city of New York would, for purposes of making competition, permit the streets of the city to be again torn up in order to allow the mains of another company to be laid all through them to supply gas which the present company can adequately supply. And, so far as it is given us to look into the future, it seems as certain as anything of such a nature can be, that the demand for gas will increase, and, at the reduced price, increase to a considerable extent. An interest in such a business is as near a safe and secure investment as can be imagined with regard to any private manufacturing business, although it is recognized at the same time that there is a possible element of risk, even in such a business. The court below regarded it as the most favorably situated gas business in America, and added that all gas business is inherently subject to many of the vicissitudes of manufacturing. Under the circumstances, the court held that a rate which would permit a return of 6 per cent would be enough to avoid the charge of confiscation, and for the reason that a return of such an amount was the return ordinarily *sought and obtained on investments of[50 that degree of safety in the city of New York.

Taking all facts into consideration, we concur with the court below on this question, and think complainant is entitled to 6 per cent on the fair value of its property devoted to the public use. But, assuming that the company is entitled to 6 per cent upon the value of its property actually used for the public, the total fixed by the court below is, as we have seen, much too large. We must first strike out the increased value of the franchises asserted by the court over the amount agreed upon in 1884, when the company was consolidated. We also find that the total value of the tangible property is made up of several items, two of which are—

Real Estate	$11,985,435
Plants	15,000,000

Both depend largely upon the opinions of expert witnesses as to the value of that kind of property. Where a large amount of the total value of a mass of different properties consists in the value of real estate, which is only ascertained by the varying opinions of expert witnesses, and where the opinions of the plaintiffs' witnesses differ quite radically from those of the defendants, it is apparent that the total value must necessarily be more or less in doubt. It, in other words, becomes matter of speculation or conjecture to a great extent. It may be, as already suggested, that, in many cases, the rates objected to might be so low that there could be no reasonable doubt of their inadequacy upon any fair estimate of the value of the property. In such event the enforcement of the rates should be enjoined even in a case where the value of the property depends upon the value to be assigned to real estate by the evidence of experts. But there may be other cases where the evidence as to the probable result of the rates in controversy would show they were so nearly adequate that nothing but a practical test could satisfy the doubt as to their sufficiency.

In this case a slight reduction in the estimated value of the real estate, plants, and mains, as given by the witnesses for 51]*complainant, would give a 6 per cent return upon the total value of the property, as above stated. And again, increased consumption at the lower rate might result in increased earnings, as the cost of furnishing the gas would not increase in proportion to the increased amount of gas furnished.

The elevated railroads in New York, when first built, charged 10 cents for each passenger; but, when the rate was reduced to 5 cents, it is common knowledge that their receipts were not cut in two, but that, from increased patronage, the earnings increased from year to year, and soon surpassed the highest sum ever received upon the 10-cent rate.

Of course, there is always a point below which a rate could not be reduced, and, at the same time, permit the proper return on the value of the property; but it is equally true that a reduction in rates will not always reduce the net earnings, but, on the contrary, may increase them. The question of how much an increased consumption under a less rate will increase the earnings of complainant, if at all, at a cost not proportioned to the former cost, can be answered only by a practical test. In such a case as this, where the other data upon which the computation of the rate of return must be based, are, from the evidence, so uncertain, and where the margin between possible confiscation and valid regulation is so narrow, we cannot say there is no fair or just doubt about the truth of the allegation that the rates are insufficient.

The complainant also contends that the state, having taxed it upon its franchises, cannot be heard to deny their existence or their value as taxed.

The fact that the state has taxed the company upon its franchises at a greater value than is awarded them here is not material. Those taxes, even if founded upon an erroneous valuation, were properly treated by the company as part of its operating expenses, to be paid out of its earnings before the net amount could be arrived at applicable to dividends, and, if such latter sums were not sufficient to permit the proper return on the property used by the company for the public, *then the rate would[52 be inadequate. The future assessment of the value of the franchises, it is presumed, will be much lessened if it is seen that the great profits upon which that value was based are largely reduced by legislative action. In that way the consumer will be benefited by paying a reduced sum (although indirectly) for taxes.

We are also of opinion that it is not a case for a valuation of "good will." The master combined the franchise value with that of good will, and estimated the total value at $20,000,000.

The complainant has a monopoly in fact, and a consumer must take gas from it or go without. He will resort to the "old stand," because he cannot get gas anywhere else. The court below excluded that item, and we concur in that action.

And we concur with the court below in holding that the value of the property is to be determined as of the time when the inquiry is made regarding the rates. If the property which legally enters into the consideration of the question of rates has increased in value since it was acquired; the company is entitled to the benefit of such increase. This is, at any rate, the general rule. We do not say there may not possibly be an exception to it where the property may have increased so enormously in value as to render a rate permitting a reasonable return upon such increased value unjust to the public. How such facts should be treated is not a question now before us, as this case does not present it. We refer to the matter only for the purpose of stating that the decision herein does not prevent an inquiry into the question when, if ever, it should be necessarily presented.

The matter of the increased cost of the gas, resulting from the provisions of the acts as to making the gas equal to 22 candle power, is also alleged as a reason for inadequacy of rate.

It appears that the average candle power actually produced in the first six months of the year 1905 was 22, while but 20 candle power was exacted by law, and, for the last six months of that year, while 22 candle power was enacted, the average amount was 24.19. This expense was included in the operating expense of that year, which resulted in the net earnings above mentioned, while the company was complying with the requirements of the act in this particular.

It is unnecessary, therefore, to further inquire as to the additional expense caused by this requirement.

Again, it has been asserted that the laws are unconstitutional because of the provision as to pressure, and also by reason of the penalties which a violation of the acts may render a corporation liable to.

The acts provide that the pressure of the gas in the service mains at any distance from the place of manufacture shall not be less than 1 inch nor more than 2½ inches.

The evidence shows that, to put a pressure such as is demanded by the acts upon the mains and other service pipes in their present condition would be to run a great risk of explosion, and consequent disaster. Before compliance with this provision would be safe, the mains and other pipes would have to be strengthened throughout their whole extent, and at an expenditure of many millions of dollars, from which no return could be obtained at the rates provided in the acts. This would take from the complainant the ability to secure the return to which it is entitled upon its property, used for supplying gas, and the provision as to the amount of pressure is therefore void. This particular duty imposed by the acts is, however, clearly separable from the enactments as to rates, and we have no doubt that the remainder of the statute would have been enacted, even with that provision omitted.

The obligation would remain upon the company to have a pressure sufficient to insure a light of 22 candle power, as provided in the acts.

We are of the same opinion as to the penalties provided for a violation of the acts. They are not a necessary or inseparable part of the acts, without which they would not have been passed. If these provisions as to penalties have been properly construed by the court below, they are undoubtedly void, *within the principle decided in Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123. 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, and the cases there cited, because so enormous and overwhelming in their amount.

When the objectionable part of a statute is eliminated, if the balance is valid and capable of being carried out, and if the court can conclude it would have been enacted if that portion which is illegal had been omitted, the remainder of the statute thus treated is good. Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 395, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U. S. 45-54, ante, 81, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33. This is a familiar principle.

Lastly, it is objected that there is an illegal discrimination as between the city and the consumers individually. We see no discrimination which is illegal or for which good reasons could not be given. But neither the city nor the consumers are finding any fault with it, and the only interest of the complainant in the question is to find out whether, by the reduced price to the city, the complainant is, upon the whole, unable to realize a return sufficient to comply with what it has the right to demand. What we have already said applies to the facts now in question.

We cannot see, from the whole evidence, that the price fixed for gas supplied to the city by wholesale, so to speak, would so reduce the profits from the total of the gas supplied as to thereby render such total profits insufficient as a return upon the property used by the complainant. So long as the total is enough to furnish such return, it is not important that, with relation to some customers, the price is not enough. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

Upon a careful consideration of the case before us we are of opinion that the complainant has failed to sustain the burden cast upon it of showing beyond any just or fair doubt that the acts of the legislature of the state of New York are in fact confiscatory.

It may possibly be, however, that a practical experience of the effect of the acts by actual operation under them might prevent the complainant from obtaining a fair return, as already described, and, in that event, complainant ought to have the opportunity of again presenting its case to the court. To that end we reverse the decree with directions to dismiss the bill without prejudice; and it is so ordered.

W. E. RAKES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 55-58.)

Error to district court — capital cases.

1. A conviction in a Federal district court of murder in the second degree, punishable only by imprisonment, is not reviewable in the Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517), § 5, as amended by the act of January 20, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 492, chap. 68, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), as a case of "conviction of capital crime," although the accused could have been convicted, under the indictment, of a capital offense.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 962-966, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to district court — frivolousness of constitutional question.

2. The constitutionality of the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5509, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712, for such punishment of persons committing any other felony or misdemeanor, when conspiring contrary to the preceding section, as is attached to such felony or misdemeanor by the laws of the state in which the offense is committed,—is too well settled to permit the question as to such constitutionality to serve as the basis of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a district court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to district court — construction of Federal statute.

3. Assertions of errors of construction of Federal statutes furnish no basis for jurisdiction on constitutional grounds, under the act of March 3, 1891, § 5, of a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a district court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 938-989, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 257.]

Argued January 4, 1909. Decided January 18, 1909.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Virginia to review a conviction of conspiracy and of murder in the second degree. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Waller R. Staples argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Assistant Attorney General Fowler argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of judgments of district or circuit courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.
53 L. ed.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error issued directly from this court to the *district court of [56 the United States for the western district of Virginia under § 5 of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517), as amended by the act of January 20, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 492, chap. 68, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), and cannot be maintained unless this was a case of "conviction of a capital crime," or a case involving "the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States," or a case in which "the constitutionality of any law of the United States is drawn in question."

Plaintiff in error was indicted under §§ 5508 and 5509 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712), for conspiracy, and for killing one Ann Hall in carrying out said conspiracy, and was found guilty of the conspiracy and of murder in the second degree, the jury fixing the punishment "for said last-mentioned offense at imprisonment in the penitentiary for fifteen (15) years." Judgment was rendered against him of imprisonment in the United States penitentiary at Atlanta, Georgia, for a period of fifteen years and one day, commencing on the day of his committal to the penitentiary, and fined $100.

By § 5508 of the Revised Statutes it is made an offense against the United States for two or more persons to conspire to injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate any citizen in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States, the punishment prescribed being a fine of not more than $5,000, imprisonment not more than ten years, and ineligibility to any office or place of honor, profit, or trust created by the Constitution or laws of the United States. And by § 5509 it is provided that if, in committing the above offense, any other felony or misdemeanor be committed, the offender shall suffer such punishment as is attached to such felony or misdemeanor by the laws of the state in which the offense is committed.

Section 3664 of the Code of Virginia enacts that "murder of the second degree shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than five nor more than eighteen years."

Clause 3 of § 5 gives the writ directly in "cases of conviction of a capital crime," and this case does not fall within it, because, *under the verdict, capital punish-[57 ment could not be inflicted. The jurisdiction of this court, in this regard, does not depend upon the crime charged in the indictment, and it is clear that, as the accused was found guilty of murder in the second degree, for which the sentence of death could not be imposed, he was not convicted of a capital offense.

In Fitzpatrick v. United States, 178 U. S. 304, 44 L. ed. 1078, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944, Fitzpatrick was indicted for murder in the first degree, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty "without capital punishment," as permitted by the statute. The United States insisted that this was not "conviction of a capital crime," but Mr. Justice Brown, speaking for the court, said that the qualification "does not make the crime of murder anything less than a capital offense or a conviction for murder anything less than a conviction for a capital crime, by reason of the fact that the punishment actually imposed is imprisonment for life. The test is not the punishment which is imposed, but that which may be imposed under the statute." And see Good Shot v. United States, 179 U. S. 87, 45 L. ed. 101, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33. But in the present case the accused was found guilty of murder in the second degree, for which the sentence of death could not be imposed, and it was not a case where the penalty of death was escaped by qualification of the verdict.

In Davis v. United States, 46 C. C. A. 619, 107 Fed. 753, the defendant could have been convicted under the indictment for a capital offense, but was in fact found guilty only of a conspiracy, and the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit correctly held that that court had jurisdiction. And, speaking through Severens, J., said: "Only the conspiracy is of Federal cognizance, and it is that offense which is made punishable. If, in the prosecution of it, a thing is done which is a crime by the laws of the state, the conspiracy is punishable by a measure of punishment equal to that prescribed by the law of the state for such other crime. But it is an aggravation merely of the substantive offense of conspiracy. If the latter is not proven there can be no conviction for the offense which constitutes the aggravating circumstance, and the proceedings falls to 58] the ground. It is *plainly indicated in Motes v. United States, 178 U. S. 458, 44 L. ed. 1150, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 993, that this is the view taken of these sections by the Supreme Court. It cannot be doubted that it was within the power of Congress to deal with such a conspiracy and impose such punishment therefor as it should deem proper; and, having such authority, it was competent to take notice of such incidents of violence and wrong as were likely to happen in the prosecution of such combinations, and to measure the punishment by that which is prescribed by the local law for such acts when made, of themselves, the subject of punishment. Though measured by those laws, the penalty is imposed by the law of the United States."

Nor can we see that the case involved the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States, or drew in question the constitutionality of a law of the United States, because no definite issue was raised in regard thereto; and while in the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error it was suggested that § 5509 was unconstitutional, that contention, however presented, was long since put at rest. Motes v. United States, supra; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 429, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Re Quarles, 158 U. S. 532, 39 L. ed. 1080, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 959. And assertion of errors of construction furnishes no basis for jurisdiction on constitutional grounds under § 5 of the act of March 3, 1891.

Writ of error dismissed.

COUNTY OF PRESIDIO, Texas, Petitioner,
v.
NOEL-YOUNG BOND & STOCK COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 58-78.)

Bonds — bona fide holder — notice of infirmities.

1. A purchaser of county bonds, even if bound to examine the order of the county commissioners' court referred to therein as authorizing the issue, is not charged with the knowledge that such court exceeded its power in issuing the bonds purchased by him because the numbers which such bonds bear show that the amount authorized by the court's order had already been issued, where the statutes recited in the bonds do not name any specific amount beyond which the court cannot go, but merely forbid an issue of a larger number than a specified annual tax will liquidate in ten years, and there is nothing in the court's order which

NOTE.—On the rights of holders of municipal bonds—see notes to Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Perry County, 39 L. ed. U. S. 585; Sutliff v. Lake County, 37 L. ed. U. S. 145; Rich v. Mentz, 33 L. ed. U. S. 1075; and Chelsea Sav. Bank v. Ironwood, 66 C. C. A. 235.

On estoppel by recitals in negotiable bonds—see notes to Mercer County v. Hackett, 17 L. ed. U. S. 548, and Daviess County v. Dickinson, 29 L. ed. U. S. 1026.

As to bona fide purchasers of municipal bonds—see note to Pickens Twp. v. Post, 41 C. C. A. 6.

On the doctrine of lis pendens—see notes to Green v. Rick, 2 L.R.A. 48; Houston v. Timmerman, 4 L.R.A. 716; and Benton v. Shafer, 7 L.R.A. 812.

requires the bonds to be numbered consecutively from one upward.

[For other cases, see Bonds, 491-508, in Digest Sup. Ct. Rep. 1908.]

Bonds — estoppel by recitals.

2. Recitals in county bonds which fairly import a compliance in all respects with the statutes specified therein as empowering the county commissioners' court to issue bonds for courthouse and jail purposes relieve a purchaser from the necessity of examining the order of such court referred to in the bonds as authorizing the issue, and estop the county to assert, as against a bona fide holder, that his bonds were issued in excess of the authorized amount, or were not issued for the purposes contemplated by the statutes.

[For other cases, see Bonds, 388-440, in Digest Sup. Ct. Rep. 1908.]

Evidence — presumption as to bona fides — holders of county bonds.

3. The holder of negotiable county bonds is presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, to have obtained them underdue or before maturity, in good faith, for a valuable consideration, and without notice of any circumstances impeaching their validity.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 655-663, in Digest Sup. Ct. Rep. 1908.]

Lis pendens — purchasing bonds pending suit on coupons.

4. One who purchases negotiable county bonds in good faith and for value after a suit on the interest coupons attached to such bonds has been brought, not being himself a party or having notice of that suit, will not be concluded by the judgment invalidating the coupons, although the issue in that suit as to the validity of the coupons may have incidentally involved an inquiry as to the validity of the bonds to which they were attached.

[For other cases, see Lis Pendens, 25-36, in Digest Sup. Ct. Rep. 1908.]

[No. 41.]

Argued and submitted December 4, 1908.

Decided January 18, 1909.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Texas in favor of plaintiff in an action on county bonds. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. T. J. Bcall argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

The judgment of the state court in which the bonds sued on in the instant case were held void was, under the pleadings and evidence, a bar to plaintiff's action.

Louis v. Brown Twp. 109 U. S. 162-168, 27 L. ed. 892-894, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Ball v. Presidio County, 88 Tex. 60, 29 S. W. 1042.

53 L. ed.

A judgment is conclusive not only upon those who are actual parties to the litigation, but also upon all persons who are in privity with them, in law or estate; and a person is bound by a judgment as a privy to one of the parties when he has succeeded to some right, title, or interest of that party in the subject-matter of the litigation.

2 Black, Judgm. § 549; Calderwood v. Brooks, 28 Cal. 151; Thompson v. Clark, 4 Hun, 164.

The bonds sued on were issued without lawful authority, not being supported or authorized by any order of the commissioners' court.

Ball v. Presidio County, supra; Caruthers v. State, 67 Tex. 132, 2 S. W. 91; Francis v. Howard County, 50 Fed. 62.

The bonds were issued and delivered for the illegal purpose of furnishing a courthouse which had already been constructed; and were issued without any lawful authority, the power of the county to issue bonds to erect a courthouse and jail having been exhausted, as appears from the order of the commissioners' court, which is recited on the face of the bonds; and the contracts mentioned in the order of the court, and the registry of the bonds affected with notice the purchasers of the bonds in this suit that the bonds were issued without authority of law.

Caruthers v. State, supra; Nolan County v. State, 83 Tex. 183, 17 S. W. 823; Francis v. Howard County, 50 Fed. 62, 4 C. C. A. 460, 13 U. S. App. 126, 54 Fed. 487; Daviess County v. Dickinson, 117 U. S. 657, 29 L. ed. 1026, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; Brenham v. German-American Bank, 144 U. S. 173, 36 L. ed. 390, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Nesbit v. Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610, 36 L. ed. 562, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Ogden v. Daviess County, 102 U. S. 634, 26 L. ed. 263; Sutliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230, 37 L. ed. 145, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Knox County v. Aspinwall, 21 How. 539, 16 L. ed. 208; Lake County v. Graham, 130 U. S. 675, 32 L. ed. 1065, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Claiborne County v. Brooks, 111 U. S. 400, 28 L. ed. 470, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Lewis v. Shreveport, 180 U. S. 283, 27 L. ed. 729, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; Dill. Mun. Corp. § 546.

There is no authority of law under the Constitution and laws of Texas to issue bonds for the purpose of furnishing courthouses, and payment thereof for the purpose of furnishing courthouses, and payment therefor could only have been legally made out of the general fund.

Polly v. Hopkins, 74 Tex. 147, 11 S. W. 1084; Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 1527; Brown v.

Reese, 67 Tex. 318, 3 S. W. 292; Barnett v. Denison, 145 U. S. 141, 36 L. ed. 654, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819; Anthony v. Jasper County, 101 U. S. 693, 25 L. ed. 1005; Independent School Dist. v. Stone, 106 U. S. 183, 27 L. ed. 90, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Harshman v. Bates County, 92 U. S. 569, 23 L. ed. 747; Bates County v. Winters, 97 U. S. 85, 24 L. ed. 933; Coler v. Clcburne, 131 U. S. 162, 33 L. ed. 146, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; East Oakland Twp. v. Skinner, 94 U. S. 255, 24 L. ed. 125; Martin v. Neblett, 86 Tenn. 383, 7 S. W. 123; Lewis v. Bourbon County, 12 Kan. 186; Wells v. Pontotoc County, 102 U. S. 625, 26 L. ed. 122.

The recitals of the laws under which the bonds purport to be issued are not the recitals of any facts, but only conclusions of law.

Daviess County v. Dickinson, supra, and Francis v. Howard County, 4 C. C. A. 460, 13 U. S. App. 126, 54 Fed. 487.

Mr. Millard Patterson submitted the cause for respondent:

The Texas judgment is not a bar to this suit.

Nesbit v. Independent Dist. 144 U. S. 610-621, 36 L. ed. 562-566, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 371, 24 L. ed. 195, 204; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Alsbrook, 146 U. S. 279, 302, 36 L. ed. 972, 981, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 314, 315, 38 L. ed. 456, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

The holder of a negotiable instrument is presumed to have taken it before maturity, for a valuable consideration, and without notice of any objection to which it is liable; and this presumption stands until overcome by sufficient proof.

Pickens Twp. v. Post, 41 C. C. A. 1, 99 Fed. 659; Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 1, 10 L. ed. 865; Chambers County v. Clews, 21 Wall. 317, 22 L. ed. 517; San Antonio v. Mehaffy, 96 U. S. 312, 24 L. ed. 816.

The bonds sued upon recite that they were issued for a lawful purpose, to wit: to build a courthouse; and the county is estopped by the full recitals about their purpose.

Chaffee County v. Potter, 142 U. S. 355, 366, 35 L. ed. 1040, 1041, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Nolan County v. State, 83 Tex. 201, 17 S. W. 823; Waite v. Santa Cruz, 184 U. S. 302, 329, 46 L. ed. 522, 568, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Marshall County v. Schenck, 5 Wall. 772, 18 L. ed. 556; Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434-446, 40 L. ed. 760-764, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Stanley County v. Coler, 190 U. S. 442-444, 47 L. ed. 1130, 1131, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Venice v. Murdock, 92 U. S. 494-502, 23 L. ed. 583-585; Pine Grove Twp. v. Talcott, 19 404

Wall. 666-679, 22 L. ed. 227-234; Scotland County v. Hill, 132 U. S. 107-117, 33 L. ed. 261-265, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 404; Haskell County v. National L. Ins. Co. 32 C. C. A. 591, 61 U. S. App. 53, 90 Fed. 231; Kent v. Dana, 40 C. C. A. 281, 100 Fed. 60; Risley v. Howell, 12 C. C. A. 218, 22 U. S. App. 635, 64 Fed. 453.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

By an act of the legislature of Texas approved February 11th, 1881, the county commissioners' court of every county that had no courthouse was authorized and empowered to issue county bonds, with interest coupons attached, in such amount as might be necessary to erect a suitable building for a courthouse,—such bonds to run not exceeding fifteen years, redeemable at the pleasure of the county, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 8 per cent per annum. The act provided that the bonds should be signed by the county judge, countersigned by the county clerk, and registered by the county treasurer before being delivered. It also provided that the county should not issue a larger number of bonds than a tax of $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 per cent annually would liquidate in ten years, and that the bonds should be sold only at par value. Gen. Laws (Tex.) 1881, p. 5.

This act was amended in 1884, at a called session of the eighteenth legislature of Texas, so as to authorize the commissioners' court to issue county bonds (running not exceeding fifteen years) with interest coupons attached in such amount as might be necessary to erect a suitable courthouse building or jail, or both. Gen. Laws (Tex.) 1884, p. 28.

By another act passed March 27th, 1885, the power given by the act of 1884 to issue bonds for courthouse and jail purposes, or both, in such amount as might be necessary, was recognized, and, in addition, county bonds theretofore issued for jail purposes under the act of 1881, as amended by the act of 1884, were validated. Gen. Laws (Tex.) 1885, p. 56.

The present action was brought July 26th, 1904, by the Noel-Young Bond & Stock Company, a Missouri corporation, as *hold-[64 er, owner, and bearer, to recover the amount of certain bonds—numbered 90, 91, 92, 94, 95, and 96, respectively—with interest coupons attached.

Each of the bonds sued on is in the name of the county, is for $1,000, and payable to bearer fifteen years after date, at 8 per cent per annum interest, on the 10th of April at the state treasury. It recites that it was "issued by virtue of an act of the legislature of the state of Texas, entitled 'An Act to Authorize the County Commissioners' Court of the Several Counties of the State to Issue Bonds for the Erection of a Courthouse and to Levy a Tax to Pay for the Same,' approved February 11, 1881, and by virtue of the provisions of chapter 17, laws of called session of the eighteenth legislature, which said chapter has since been validated by the act of March 27, 1885, authorizing the county commissioners' court of the several counties of the state to issue bonds for the erection of a county jail, and by order of the county commissioners' court of said county of Presidio, on the 9th day of February, 1886, and is redeemable before maturity at the pleasure of the county."

To each bond was affixed the seal of the county commissioners' court and was signed by the county judge, countersigned by the clerk of the county court and by the county treasurer, the latter certifying that it had been registered.

At the trial the court instructed the jury that the suit on the coupons was barred by the Texas statute of limitations, but it directed a verdict for the amount of the bonds, with interest, from December 6th, 1900. That judgment was affirmed in the circuit court of appeals, but without any opinion.

The county insists that although the bonds purport to have been issued by order of the county commissioners' court in virtue of certain legislative enactments referred to on the face of the bonds, and which authorizes that court to issue bonds for the erection of a courthouse or jail, or both, and although each bond is attested by the seal of the commissioners' court and the signatures of the officers who alone could attest and sign bonds issued for courthouse and jail purposes, the court *exceeded its powers in issuing the present bonds in that, by its order of February 9th, 1886, bonds to the extent of only $86,000 were authorized,—$60,000 for a courthouse and $26,000 for a jail; whereas, that amount of bonds for such purposes had in fact been issued before the bonds in suit. This contention means that the bonds in suit are to be deemed void if they were in fact in excess of the amount authorized by the order of February 9th, 1886. But that view cannot be maintained consistently with a long line of decisions.

Whether the commissioners' court, which had statutory authority to issue such bonds as were necessary for courthouse and jail purposes, had previously made the requisite order therefor, was a matter peculiarly within the knowledge of its officers. They knew whether they had or had not directed bonds to be issued for such purposes. They knew, or ought to have known, whether the bonds ordered to be issued were in excess of the amount authorized by the legislature.

They had authority to determine whether the precedent conditions had been fully performed. When, therefore, the county, acting by the commissioners' court, did issue bonds, attested by the seal of the court and the signatures of its officers, and reciting that they were issued under the order of the court, in virtue of the statute named, and were registered,—such recitals fairly importing a compliance, in all substantial respects, with the statute giving authority to issue bonds,—a bona fide purchaser was entitled to accept the recitals as stating the truth, and the county cannot, as against such purchaser, allege the contrary. It will not be heard to say that the bonds were in excess of the amount authorized, or that they were not issued for the purposes contemplated by the statutes referred to. These principles have become firmly established, as will be seen by an examination of the adjudged cases, some of which are cited in the margin.†

*The county, however, insists that an[66 examination of the order of the commissioners' court of February 9th, 1886, referred to in the bonds, would have informed any purchaser (1) that that court on that day ordered only $86,000 in bonds to be issued,—$60,000 for a courthouse and $26,000 for a jail; (2) that the particular bonds now in suit, dated December 6th, 1886, and numbered 91 to 96 inclusive, were not covered by that order and therefore were in excess of the amount so ordered for courthouse and jail buildings. Assuming for the moment, but only for the moment, that the purchaser was bound to ascertain what the order of †Coloma v. Eaves, 92 U. S. 484, 23 L. ed. 579; Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Independent School Dist. v. Stone, 106 U. S. 183, 27 L. ed. 90, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Douglas County v. Bolles, 94 U. S. 104, 24 L. ed. 46; Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 238, 239, 28 L. ed. 966, 970, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Chaffee County v. Potter, 142 U. S. 355, 364, 35 L. ed. 1040, 1043, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, 173 U. S. 255, 270, 43 L. ed. 689, 696, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Mercer County v. Hackett, 1 Wall. 83, 17 L. ed. 548; Cairo v. Zane, 149 U. S. 122, 37 L. ed. 673, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803; Venice v. Murdock, 92 U. S. 494, 23 L. ed. 583; Marcy v. Oswego Twp. 92 U. S. 637, 23 L. ed. 748; Wilson v. Salamanca Twp. 99 U. S. 499, 25 L. ed. 330; Sherman County v. Simons, 109 U. S. 735, 737, 27 L. ed. 1093, 1094, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502; Hackett v. Ottumwa, 99 U. S. 86, 95, 25 L. ed. 363, 365; Ottaway v. First Nat. Bank, 105 U. S. 342, 26 L. ed. 1127, and authorities cited in each of the above cases.

February 9th, 1886, contained, we observe that the statutes recited in the bonds did not name a specific amount beyond which the commissioners' court could not go in issuing bonds for courthouse and jail purposes. They were authorized to issue for those purposes such an amount in bonds as was necessary up to the point that no more be issued than could be liquidated in ten years by a tax of $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 per cent for any one year. It was for the commissioners' court in the first instance to determine what amount of bonds on that basis was required. We observe, also, as did the civil court of appeals of Texas in a case to be presently referred to (27 S. W. 702, 707), that the order of February 9th, 1886, did not require that the bonds issued for courthouse and jail purposes should be numbered consecutively from 1 to 86; that the bonds in suit bore numbers above 86 was immaterial in face of the recital in them that they were issued by order of the commissioners' court and in virtue of the statutes conferring the power to issue bonds for courthouse and jail purposes; and that that order gave no [68] information that the bonds *here in suit were in excess of the \$86,000 in bonds directed by that order to be issued.

Apart from this view, it is pertinent to inquire whether the purchaser was bound to examine the order of February 9th, 1886, and, at his peril, to know what that order contained? Was he not entitled, without special or further inquiry, to accept as true what the recitals in the bonds plainly imported, namely, that the bonds were issued for courthouse or jail purposes by order of the county commissioners' court, in conformity with specified acts of the legislature? Was he not entitled to act on the belief that the bonds issued under date of December 6th, 1886, were within the limit authorized by the legislature?

These questions find an answer in Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 441, 443, 446, 40 L. ed. 760, 764, 765, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613, 616-618. That was an action involving the validity of two series of bonds, issued by the city of Evansville, Indiana, for subscription to certain railroads. Each bond of the two series contained recitals to the effect that the bonds were issued in pursuance of certain legislative enactments, and by virtue of certain resolutions and ordinances passed by the city council. What was the effect of these recitals? This court said: "It is true that the city charter provided that 'no stock shall be subscribed or taken by the common council in such company, unless it be on the petition of two thirds of the residents of said city, who are freeholders of the city, distinctly setting forth the company in which stock is to be taken, and the number and amount of shares to be subscribed.' But these were only conditions which the statute required to be performed or met before the power given was exercised. That there was legislative authority to subscribe to the stock of these companies cannot be questioned, although the statute declared that the power should not be exercised except under the circumstances stated in the statute. Was a bona fide purchaser of bonds issued in payment of a subscription of stock—the power to subscribe being clearly given—bound to know that the conditions precedent to the exercise of the power were *not performed? If the [68] bonds had not contained any recitals importing a performance of such conditions before the power to subscribe was exercised, then it would have been open to the city to show, even as against a bona fide purchaser, that the bonds were issued in disregard of the statute, and, therefore, did not impose any legal obligation upon it. Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Independent School Dist. v. Stone, 106 U. S. 183, 187, 27 L. ed. 90, 91, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84. But the bonds issued on account of subscription to the stock of the Evansville, Henderson, & Nashville Railroad Company recite that the subscription was 'made in pursuance of an act of the legislature and ordinances of the city council passed in pursuance thereof.' This imports not only compliance with the act of the legislature, but that the ordinances of the city council were in conformity with the statute. It is as if the city had declared, in terms, that all had been done that was required to be done in order that the power given might be exercised. . . . As therefore the recitals in the bonds import compliance with the city's charter, purchasers for value having no notice of the nonperformance of the conditions precedent were not bound to go behind the statute conferring the power to subscribe, and to ascertain, by an examination of the ordinances and records of the city council, whether those conditions had, in fact, been performed. With such recitals before them they had the right to assume that the circumstances existed which authorized the city to exercise the authority given by the legislature. . . . The city having authority, under some circumstances, to put these bonds upon the market, and having issued them under the corporate seal of the city, and under the attestation of its highest officer, certifying that they were issued in payment of a subscription of stock made in pursuance of the city's charter the principles of justice demand that the bonds, in the hands of bona fide holders for value, should be met according to their terms, unless some clear, well-settled rule of law stands in the way. No such obstacle exists.

In the same case the court expressed its approval of the decision *in Van Hostrup v. Madison, 1 Wall. 291, 297, 17 L. ed. 538, 539,—a suit on municipal bonds, in which Mr. Justice Nelson, speaking for the court, said: "Another objection taken is, that the proviso requiring a petition of two thirds of the citizens, who were freeholders of the city, was not complied with. As we have seen, the bonds signed by the mayor and clerk of the city recite on the face of them that they were issued by virtue of an ordinance of the common council of the city, passed September 2, 1852. This concludes the city as to any irregularities that may have existed in carrying into execution the power granted to subscribe the stock and issue the bonds, as has been repeatedly held by this court."

In Waite v. Santa Cruz, 184 U. S. 302, 320, 46 L. ed. 552, 565, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327, 333, which was also a suit on municipal bonds and involved the effect of recitals importing compliance with law, the court referred to and followed Evansville v. Dennett. It said: "The city of Santa Cruz had power, under the Constitution and laws of California, to refund its outstanding indebtedness, evidenced by bonds and warrants. The nature and extent of such indebtedness were matters peculiarly within the knowledge of its constituted authorities. When, therefore, the refunding bonds in suit were issued with the recitals therein contained, the city thereby represented that it issued them under and in pursuance of and in conformity with the act of 1893 and the Constitution of the state. As nothing on the face of the bonds suggested that such representations were false, purchasers had the right to assume that they were true, especially in view of the broad recital that everything required by law to be done and performed before executing the bonds had been done and performed by the city. As there was power in the city to issue refunding bonds to be used in discharging its outstanding indebtedness of a specified kind, purchasers were entitled to rely upon the truth of the recitals in the bonds that they were of the class which the act of 1893 authorized to be refunded. They were under no duty to go further and examine the ordinances of the city to ascertain whether the recitals were false. On the contrary, *purchasers could assume that the ordinances would disclose nothing in conflict with the recitals in the bonds."

In the more recent case of Stanley County v. Coler, 190 U. S. 437, 47 L. ed. 1126, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811, the court reviewed many of the adjudged cases, and, in support of the conclusion there reached, cited, among others cases, that of Evansville v. Dennett. See also the recent case of Quinlan v. Green County, 205 U. S. 410, 51 L. ed. 860, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505.

Our conclusion on this branch of the case is that the county of Presidio is estopped by the recitals in its bonds to deny, as against a legal holder of the bonds, that they were issued conformably, in all respects, with the acts of legislation referred to.

It is, however, contended that this principle only affords protection to bona fide purchasers for value. But clearly the plaintiff is to be taken, upon the present record, as belonging to that class; for, there was no evidence that it had knowledge or notice of any facts impeaching the validity of the bonds, or that were inconsistent with their recitals, nor was there any evidence showing that the plaintiff was not a bona fide purchaser for value of these bonds. In the absence of such proof the presumption was that the plaintiff obtained the bonds under due, or before maturity, in good faith, for a valuable consideration, without notice of any circumstances impeaching their validity. The production of a negotiable instrument sued on, with proof of its genuineness, if its genuineness be not denied, makes a prima facie case for the holder. In other words, the possession of the bonds in this case, their genuineness not being disputed, made a prima facie case for the plaintiff. These views are in accordance with accepted doctrines of the law relating to negotiable securities.

Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 1, 16, 10 L. ed. 865, 870; Murray v. Lardner, 2 Wall. 110, 121, 17 L. ed. 857, 859; Chambers County v. Clews, 21 Wall. 317, 323, 22 L. ed. 517, 519; San Antonio v. Mehaffy, 96 U. S. 312, 314, 24 L. ed. 816, 817; Montclair Twp. v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147, 158, 27 L. ed. 431, 434, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; 2 Parsons, Bills & Notes, 9; Pinkerton v. Bailey, 8 Wend. 600; Story, Promissory Notes, § 196; 1 Dan. Neg. Inst. 5th ed. § 812, and the authorities there cited; Chitty, Bills, 11th *Am. ed. [71 69; Arbouin v. Anderson, 1 Q. B. 498, 504.

But there is another defense by the county which must be noticed. It is, that the validity of these bonds has been adjudicated by the courts of Texas, and that that adjudication concludes the plaintiff in the present action. The facts upon which that defense is based are these: On the 28th of March, 1893, Ball, Hutchins, & Company sued Presidio county on certain coupons of bonds, numbered from 90 to 96, inclusive, and dated December 6th, 1886,—the same bonds here sued on, except bond numbered 93, which is not involved in this suit. The county, among other defenses, alleged that the bonds were issued and delivered to contractors for the purpose of obtaining furniture for the courthouse; that the contractors therefore had notice of the purpose for which the bonds were issued; that their issue for the purpose of supplying the courthouse with furniture was illegal, fraudulent, and void; and, therefore, no judgment could be rendered for the amount of the coupons sued on. The state court rendered a judgment for the county. From that judgment an appeal was prosecuted to the civil court of appeals of Texas, which reversed the judgment and ordered one against the county. 27 S. W. 702-707. That court, among other things, held that there was nothing in the order of February 9th, 1886, indicating that the bonds numbered 90 to 96 were not of the bonds therein ordered to be issued for courthouse and jail purposes; that no question was made that the amount of all the bonds issued for building a courthouse and jail and for furniture and waterworks was not within the county's statutory limit for the issuing of bonds for the building of a courthouse and jail; and that it was not inconsistent with their being part of the bonds ordered for courthouse and jail purposes that they were numbered from 90 to 96. That court further said: "These bonds purport on their face to have been issued by virtue of the acts authorizing bonds for the erection of a courthouse and jail, and by virtue of a certain order of the proper court, which 72] was, upon its face, authority *for the issuance of a bonded debt for said purpose, in the sum of $86,000; and there is nothing in the order to indicate to the mind that there had been an overissue, or that these particular bonds were not a part of the $86,000. . . . In fact, these bonds would seem to have been prepared and issued in a manner that concealed their true character, and to mislead investors in that class of securities; and we are of opinion, on the whole case, that the county is estopped to deny its liability to the purchasers."

This last observation of the Texas civil court of appeals had, no doubt, reference to the fact (which evidence in this suit tended to establish) that, although the particular bonds in suit were issued pursuant to an order of the commissioners' court made December 4th, 1886, to pay for courthouse furniture, they contained recitals fairly implying that they were issued under the order of February 9th, 1886, and the statutes, for the purpose of building a courthouse and jail.

That case was taken to the supreme court of Texas, which reversed the judgment of the civil court of appeals and affirmed the judgment of the court of original jurisdiction. 88 Tex. 60-66, 29 S. W. 1042. The supreme court of Texas assumed, for the purposes of its opinion, that the county commissioners' court had the power, under the acts of the legislature, to issue bonds of the county for courthouse and jail purposes to the full amount of $96,000. Yet, it said, the order of February 9th, 1886, referred to in the bonds, showed that only $86,000 of bonds were authorized by that order to be issued for such purposes, and, therefore, that the bonds in suit were issued without any order to support them; that "the law requires" a dealer in county bonds to know the provisions of the act of the legislature and the order of the county commissioners' court, under and by virtue of which such bonds were issued, whether referred to on the face of the bonds or not; that the facts made known by the order of February 9th, 1886, were sufficient to put a purchaser on inquiry as to whether the coupons of the bonds now in suit were in *excess of the amount authorized [73 by that order; that the burden of proof being upon Ball, Hutchins, & Company to show that they were bona fide holders, it was incumbent on them, as plaintiffs, to prove that proper diligence had been used to ascertain the facts; and that, having made no such proof, they were not entitled to judgment.

It is apparent that the supreme court of Texas proceeded in part upon grounds inconsistent with the decisions of this court in cases involving the rights of the holders of commercial paper. We allude here particularly to that part of its opinion holding that, whatever the import of the recitals in the bonds, a purchaser was bound to ascertain what were the provisions of the order of February 9th, 1886, under and by virtue of which the bonds purport to have been issued. In that view we do not concur, as what has been said in this opinion sufficiently indicates. Since the decision in Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 1, 19, 10 L. ed. 865, 871, it has been the accepted doctrine of this court that, in respect of the doctrines of commercial law and general jurisprudence, the courts of the United States will exercise their own independent judgment, and, in respect to such doctrines, will not be controlled by decisions based upon local statutes or local usage, although, if the question is balanced with doubt, the courts of the United States, for the sake of harmony, "will lean to an agreement of views with the state courts." To that effect are Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 33, 34, 27 L. ed. 359, 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 529, 27 L. ed. 424, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704; and Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239, 246, 25 L. ed. 580, 583, and authorities cited in each case. But in the present suit and upon the particular question now under consideration it is, perhaps, immaterial that the learned supreme court of Texas did not proceed on grounds consistent with the settled doctrines of this court on questions of commercial law; for that court having jurisdiction of the case before it, the question to be met is whether the judgment actually rendered by that court in Ball v. Presidio County, as matter of law, concludes the plaintiff in this suit.

In determining that question certain facts [74] may be taken as *established by the proof introduced by the county and which it deemed material, namely: 1. That the suit in the state court was upon interest coupons, and not upon the bonds to which they were attached. 2. That on December 10th, 1886, after the bonds were issued, F. M. Ball purchased those here in suit from the contractor to whom they were delivered on account of furniture supplied for the courthouse, and, on the same day, one League purchased from Ball four of the bonds. 3. Both Ball and League purchased in good faith, at par and interest, without notice of any facts impeaching the validity of the bonds. 4. That their purchases were before the action in the state court, which was not commenced until August 15th, 1902. 5. That when that suit was begun, the bonds, so far as appears from the record, belonged to Ball and League, and remained under their control during the pendency of that suit, and were not produced in court. 6. Ball, Hutchins, & Company, the plaintiffs in that suit, were only the agents for the collection of the interest coupons. 7. It does not appear from the present record when the Noel-Young Bond & Stock Company, the present plaintiff, became the holder and owner of the bonds, whether during the pendency of the suit in the state court or after the final judgment on March 4th, 1895, in the supreme court of Texas.

The argument in support of the conclusiveness of the judgment necessarily rests on the ground that the suit on the coupons created a lis pendens that prevented anyone from purchasing the bonds except subject to such judgment as might be rendered on that suit. But, clearly, the negotiability of the bonds was not destroyed by the mere bringing or pendency of the suit on the coupons, although the issue in that suit as to the validity of the coupons may have incidentally involved an inquiry as to the validity of the bonds to which they were attached. It may be that the holder of negotiable coupons sued on, being also, at the time, the holder and owner of the bonds, may be concluded, as between him and the county, in a subsequent suit on the bonds, by a previous judgment on the coupons in the suit, in which the coupons were held invalid because [75] *attached to invalid bonds. But one who became a bona fide purchaser for value of the bonds, after the institution of the suit on the coupons, not being himself a party to or having notice of that suit, will not be concluded by the judgment as to the coupons. A suit on coupons and a suit on the bonds are based on different causes of action. The coupons and bonds were capable of separate ownership and of separate suits. Judgment might be rendered on coupons without producing the bonds to which they were originally attached. In Nesbit v. Independent District, 144 U. S. 611, 618, 36 L. ed. 562, 565, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746, which was an action on county bonds, and in which it was a question whether a judgment in a former suit on coupons of certain bonds of the same issue barred an action on the bonds, this court said: "Now, the present suit is on causes of action different from those presented in the suit at Des Moines. Bonds 16, 17 and 18 were not presented or known in that suit; and while bonds 14 and 15 were presented, alleged to be the property of plaintiff, and judgment asked upon six coupons attached thereto, yet the cause of action on the six coupons is distinct and separate from that upon the bonds or the other coupons. Each matured coupon is a separable promise, and gives rise to a separate cause of action. It may be detached from the bond and sold by itself. Indeed, the title to several matured coupons of the same bond may be in as many different persons, and upon each a distinct and separate action be maintained. So, while the promises of the bond and of the coupons in the first instance are upon the same paper, and the coupons are for interest due upon the bond, yet the promise to pay the coupon is as distinct from that to pay the bond as though the two promises were placed in different instruments, upon different paper." To the same effect is Edwards v. Bates County, 163 U. S. 269, 271, 41 L. ed. 155, 156, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 967. A purchaser, when buying the bonds, was not bound at his peril to know of the pendency of the suit on the coupons. He could buy without being concluded by a judgment rendered on coupons involved in a suit to which he was not a party, and of the pendency of which he had no notice.

*An instructive case on this subject is [76] Warren County v. Marcy, 97 U. S. 96, 24 L. ed. 977. That was an action on coupons attached to negotiable bonds issued by a county. The facts on which the defense was based were these: A taxpayer brought a suit against a county on behalf of himself and all other taxpayers for an injunction to prevent the county from making a subscription to the stock of a certain railroad company. A temporary injunction was granted, which was afterwards dissolved, and the bill was dismissed. The plaintiff appealed to the supreme court of the state, which reversed the judgment and a decree was ordered to be entered, and was entered, enjoining the county from making the proposed subscription. Pending the suit and after the dissolution of the temporary injunction, and while the case was pending on appeal, the county made the subscription sought to be enjoined, and issued and delivered to the railroad company the bonds to which the coupons there in suit were attached. Marcy purchased some of the bonds for value before maturity, and without any actual notice of their alleged invalidity, or of any suit in relation thereto. The question in the case was whether the pendency of the equity suit to prevent the subscription and an issue of bonds was constructive notice to all persons of the invalidity of the bonds issued in payment for the subscription.

This court, speaking by Mr. Justice Bradley, held the bonds to be valid in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value upon these grounds, saying: "That if a municipal body has lawful power to issue bonds or other negotiable securities, dependent only upon the adoption of certain preliminary proceedings, such as a popular election of the constituent body, the holder in good faith has a right to assume that such preliminary proceedings have taken place, if the fact be certified on the face of the bonds themselves, by the authorities whose primary duty it is to ascertain it." On the question of lis pendens the court said: "It is a general rule that all persons dealing with property are bound to take notice of a suit pending with regard to the title thereto, and will, on their 77] peril, *purchase the same from any of the parties to the suit. But this rule is not of universal application. It does not apply to negotiable securities purchased before maturity, nor to articles of ordinary commerce sold in the usual way. This exception was suggested by Chancellor Kent, in one of the leading cases on the subject in this country, and has been confirmed by many subsequent decisions,"—citing Murray v. Ballou, 1 Johns. Ch. 566; Murray v. Lylburn, 2 Johns. Ch. 441; Kieffer v. Ehler, 18 Pa. 388; Winston v. Westfeldt, 22 Ala. 760, 58 Am. Dec. 278; Stone v. Elliott, 11 Ohio St. 252; Mims v. West, 38 Ga. 18, 95 Am. Dec. 379; Leitch v. Wells, 48 N. Y. 585; Durant v. Iowa County, 1 Woolw. 69, Fed. Cas. No. 4,189. The court also referred to Lexington v. Butler, 14 Wall. 283, 20 L. ed. 809, saying: "In that case irregularities had occurred in the preliminary proceedings, and the city authorities refused to issue the bonds. A mandamus was applied for by the railroad company, for whose use the bonds were intended; and judgment of mandamus was rendered to compel the city to issue them, and it issued them accordingly. Subsequently, this judgment was reversed by the court of appeals of Kentucky, and an injunction was obtained to prevent the railroad company from parting with the bonds. The injunction was not obeyed; the bonds were negotiated whilst proceedings were still pending, and were purchased by the plaintiff for value before maturity, without any knowledge of these circumstances. This court held that the bonds were valid in his hands. . . . Whilst the doctrine of constructive notice arising from lis pendens, though often severe in its application, is, on the whole, a wholesome and necessary one, and founded on principles affecting the authoritative administration of justice, the exception to its application is demanded by other considerations equally important, as affecting the free operations of commerce and that confidence in the instruments by which it is carried on which is so necessary in a business community." In Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 676, 682, 25 L. ed. 404, 405, the court said: "The doctrine of lis pendens has no application to commercial securities." See also Cass County v. Gillett, 100 U. S. 585, 593, 25 L. ed. 585, 586; and Carroll County v. Smith*, 111 U. S. 556, 562, 28 L. ed. 517, 519, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, to the same effect.

We hold that, upon the present record, the plaintiff company is to be taken as having purchased the bonds here in suit before maturity and for value, without notice of any circumstances indicating that their validity was or could be impeached; consequently, the judgment in favor of the county in the suit brought in the state court by Ball, Hutchins, & Company on some of the coupons of the bonds now in suit—in which suit the present plaintiff company was not a party and of which it is not shown to have had notice—does not preclude a judgment in its favor against the county on the bonds.

For the reasons stated, the judgment of the Circuit Court of the United States must be affirmed.

It is so ordered.

The CHIEF JUSTICE dissents.

CHARLES H. MOYER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JAMES H. PEABODY, Sherman M. Bell, and Bulkeley Wells.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 78-86.)

Pleading — complaint — incorporating record of other proceeding.

1. Averments of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus are not made averments of a complaint by an agreement making the record of habeas corpus proceedings part of the complaint.
212 U. S.

Constitutional law — liberty — due process of law.

2. Imprisonment for two and one-half months under the order of the governor of a state, without sufficient reason, but in good faith, in the exercise of his power under the state Constitution and laws to call upon the military arm of the state government to suppress an insurrection, does not deprive the person imprisoned of his liberty without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 436-440, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — jurisdiction — suit for deprivation of Federal rights.

3. A suit against the governor and certain officers of the national guard of a state, founded on imprisonment for two and one-half months under the order of the governor, without sufficient reason, but in good faith in the exercise of his power under the state Constitution and laws to call upon the military arm of the government to suppress an insurrection, is not within the original jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 629, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 506, as a suit authorized by law to be brought to redress the deprivation of any right secured by the Constitution of the United States.

[For other cases, see Courts, 529-532, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 55.]

Argued January 5, 6, 1909. Decided January 18, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment dismissing the complaint in an action founded on an imprisonment under the order of the governor of that state in the course of suppressing an insurrection. Affirmed.

See same case below, 148 Fed. 870.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to Federal question as conferring jurisdiction on United States courts—see notes to Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 7, and Bailey v. Mosher, 11 C. C. A. 308.

53 L. ed.

Mr. Edmund F. Richardson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Horace N. Hawkins, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

An allegation in the complaint showing that one has been deprived of the constitutional guaranty of liberty without due process of law, setting up and defining in his complaint what constitutes due process of law in the state courts, coupled with an averment that those state courts were in the untrammelled exercise of their jurisdiction, except in so far as they were interfered with by the defendants themselves, gives to the Federal courts jurisdiction to determine whether or not the statement of facts contained in the complaint is true, and, if it is true, a right and duty devolves upon those courts to remedy that deprivation.

Hemsley v. Myers, 45 Fed. 283; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676; Ames v. Kansas, 111 U. S. 449, 470, 28 L. ed. 482, 490, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437.

The action is one which is sought to be maintained against those who purported, as officers of the state, to act for the state, and under its sanction and authority; but that is no reason why the suit should not be maintained.

Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 285, 29 L. ed. 185, 191, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

If it shall be argued that no Federal question is involved because the act complained of is one which has been taken by officers of the state in respect to a matter in which they were authorized to act under the Constitution and laws of the state, then the following authorities are in point:

Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. ed. 281; Re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 506, 31 L. ed. 216, 230, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 10, 35 L. ed. 365, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 390, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1021, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 41 L. ed. 632, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 204, 42 L. ed. 137, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Tuchman v. Welch, 42 Fed. 548; Milligan v. Hovey, 3 Biss. 13, Fed. Cas. No. 9,605.

The complaint states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.

Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 14, 12 L. ed. 581, 587; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52, 29 L. ed. 805, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608; Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 68, 44 L. ed. 374, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Giles v. Harris, 189 U. S. 475, 47 L. ed. 909, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Tuchman v. Welch and Hemsley v.

Myers, supra; Aultman & T. Co. v. Brumfield, 102 Fed. 15; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 288, 29 L. ed. 185, 192, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 506, 507, 31 L. ed. 216, 230, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Re Tiburcio Parrott, 6 Sawy. 349, 1 Fed. 520; Ex parte Milligan, supra.

No officer can escape liability for causing the arrest and imprisonment of a civilian who is not amenable to military law. The utmost that he can do in a state of war is to arrest such civilian and turn him over to the civil authorities if the civil authorities are in operation. If not, he must be turned over to the civil authorities the minute that such authorities are in operation, and the first duty of the military is to see that the civil authorities are placed in operation.

McCall v. McDowell, Deady, 233, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 212, Fed. Cas. No. 8,673; Ex parte Merryman, Taney, 246, Fed. Cas. No. 9,487; Cochran v. Tucker, 3 Coldw. 186, 91 Am. Dec. 276; Caperton v. Martin, 4 W. Va. 138, 6 Am. Rep. 270.

An unlawful act can never be justified by the assertion of an unlawful authority, or by the command of such an unlawful authority; and an authority is just as unlawful after it has received the sanction of the supreme court of the state as it was before, if it is inhibited by the Constitution of the United States, and the statutes made pursuant thereto.

Little v. Barreme, 2 Cranch, 170, 2 L. ed. 243; Christian County Ct. v. Rankin, 2 Duv. 502, 87 Am. Dec. 505; Raymond v. Thomas, 91 U. S. 712, 716, 23 L. ed. 434, 435; Beckwith v. Bean, 98 U. S. 266, 25 L. ed. 124; Jones v. Com. 1 Bush, 34, 89 Am. Dec. 605; Wilson v. Mackenzie, 7 Hill, 95, 42 Am. Dec. 51; Witherspoon v. Farmers' Bank, 2 Duv. 496, 87 Am. Dec. 503; Taylor v. Jenkins, 24 Ark. 337, 88 Am. Dec. 773; Farmer v. Lewis, 89 Am. Dec. 610, and note, 1 Bush, 66; Ela v. Smith, 5 Gray, 121, 66 Am. Dec. 356; Riggs v. State, 3 Coldw. 85, 91 Am. Dec. 272; Eifort v. Bevins, 1 Bush, 460; Mitchell v. Harmony, 13 How. 115, 14 L. ed. 75.

The executive can never, by determining a so-called political question, conclude the rights of either persons or property.

Little v. Barreme, supra; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 418, 30 L. ed. 425, 428, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

The rights guaranteed by the Constitution are paramount. "Color" as used in this connection, must mean any device which is in contravention of the right so guaranteed.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Allfree, 64 Iowa, 500, 20 N. W. 779; Berks County v.

Reading City Pass. R. Co. 167 Pa. 102, 31 Atl. 474, 663; Broughton v. Haywood, 61 N. C. (Phill. L.) 380; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 936, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

Counsel are attempting to have this court substitute for the issue of an interference with the liberty of the plaintiff in error without due process of law, a question which is not in the case; to wit, whether or not the Federal government is authorized to interfere with the determination of a question which is political in its nature. Because this court is not authorized to interfere with a question which is political in its nature, it does not follow that it is not authorized to interfere with the effects claimed to flow from the determination of such a question, when they interfere with an immunity given by the Constitution of the United States.

Compagnie Française de Navigation à Vapeur v. State Bd. of Health, 186 U. S. 380, 46 L. ed. 1209, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 210, 6 L. ed. 23, 73; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 272, 23 L. ed. 543, 549; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650-661, 29 L. ed. 516-520, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252.

Process of some kind is required in order to deprive a person of his liberty.

Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

It is essential in every judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding that a hearing should be provided for.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333, 18 L. ed. 366.

The object of a construction applied to a constitution is to give effect to the intent of its framers and of the people in adopting it. This intent is to be found in the instrument itself; and when the text of a constitutional provision is not ambiguous, courts, in giving construction thereto, are not at liberty to search for its meaning beyond the instrument.

Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670, 32 L. ed. 1060, 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

It devolves upon the governor to assert, and to justify the assertion, that the civil magistrates were disloyal and insurrectionary.

Re Kemp, 16 Wis. 362.

Under the Milligan Case it rests upon the governor to show that the civil courts were wholly incompetent to punish with adequate promptitude and certainty the guilty conspirators. It devolves upon the governor to show that the judges and marshals of the court are in active sympathy with the insurgents. This can only be done under an answer. Certainly not by demurring to a complaint which states that none of these conditions exist, and which are only claimed to exist as a "legal sequence," as counsel has elsewhere termed it.

The President or the executive officer may order a man into imprisonment, provided the necessity of the case warrants such action, but, in all these cases, they are bound to be careful to exercise their power within the law.

Miller, Constitution.

The true test of whether a military power exists in contradistinction to the civil power is found in the fact of whether the courts are in the exercise of their functions. Wherever a court is ready to do business under the law which creates it, and where it has jurisdiction of the subject-matter, that court, both in times of war and in times of peace, is the superior of the military, and the military must act in strict subordination to it.

Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. ed. 281; Johnson v. Jones, 44 Ill. 142, 92 Am. Dec. 159; 1 Bl. Com. 135.

The executive cannot suspend the writ of habeas corpus.

Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch, 75, 2 L. ed. 554; Johnson v. Duncan, 3 Mart. (La.) 530, 6 Am. Dec. 675; Wright v. Johnson, 5 Ark. 687; Ex parte Merryman, Taney, 246, Fed. Cas. No. 9,487; United States ex rel. Murphy v. Porter, 2 Hayw. & H. 394, Fed. Cas. No. 16,074a; Ex parte Benedict, Fed. Cas. No. 1,292; Ex parte Field, 5 Blatchf. 63, Fed. Cas. No. 4,761; Re Kemp, supra; Griffin v. Wilcox, 21 Ind. 370; McCall v. McDowell, Deady, 233, Fed. Cas. No. 8,673; Ex parte Moore, 64 N. C. 802; Cooley, Const. Law, p. 316; Andrews, Am. Law, p. 412; Davis, Treatise Military Law, p. 321; Ordranax, Constitutional Legislation, p. 220; Winthrop, Military Law, p. 1294; Bishop, Crim. Law, 7th ed. § 64; Church, Habeas Corpus, §§ 51, 56; Wharton, Crim. Pl. & Pr. § 979; Rapalje, Crim. Process, § 477; Story, Const. p. 214; 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 217.

Mr. Horace Phelps argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William H. Dickson and John M. Waldron, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The real cause of complaint here is that the defendants were trespassers,—no more, no less. When the defendants acted beyond authority of law,—beyond all color of law (assuming, for the purpose of argument, that they did),—they acted and could have acted only as individuals, and their action was not the action of the state. They are here sought to be held for their acts upon that theory, and none other. The most that can be claimed is that they acted by virtue of office, and a sound distinction exists between acts done by virtue of office and acts done under color of law.

Virginia v. Rives (Ex parte Virginia) 100 U. S. 313, 334, 25 L. ed. 667, 675; Barney v. New York, 193 U. S. 430, 437, 48 L. ed. 737, 739, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Davis, 132 Fed. 639; Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. ed. 713, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420.

The Federal judicial power does not extend to a case of this kind; this is not a case arising under the Constitution; there is no statute of the United States which covers the case; if the statutes relied upon by plaintiff in error were to be given the effect which must be claimed for them, they would be invalid.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 553-555, 23 L. ed. 588, 591, 592; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 637-639, 644, 27 L. ed. 290, 293-295, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 10-15, 27 L. ed. 835, 839-841, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 293, 36 L. ed. 429, 439, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Hodges v. United States, 203 U. S. 1, 14-16, 51 L. ed. 65, 68, 69, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Carter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 317, 29 L. ed. 202, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 928, 962; New Orleans v. Benjamin, 153 U. S. 411, 424, 38 L. ed. 764, 769, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905.

The states possess the inalienable right of protection and self-preservation from the acts of lawless, disorderly persons who may be banded together for the purpose of opposing its civil or political authority or the execution of its laws, when the local civil authorities are inadequate to put them down.

Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 45, 46, 12 L. ed. 581, 600, 601; 2 Hare, Am. Const. Law, p. 969; Griffin v. Wilcox, 21 Ind. 380; Com. ex rel. Wadsworth v. Shortall, 206 Pa. 171, 65 L.R.A. 193, 98 Am. St. 759, 55 Atl. 952; Re Boyle, 6 Idaho, 609, 45 L.R.A. 832, 96 Am. St. Rep. 286, 57 Pac. 706; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 1, 54, 5 L. ed. 19, 32; Sutherland, Const. pp. 202, 458; Ordranax, Constitutional Legislation, p. 332.

Nor was this power surrendered or abridged by the adoption of the 14th Amendment.

Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 33 L. ed. 918, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Re Rahrer (Wilkinson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 664, 31 L. ed. 205, 211, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 29, 32 L. ed. 585, 586, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

The necessary powers of the state are not to be destroyed nor their efficient exercise prevented.

Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787.

The questions sought to be litigated in this case are purely political,—Federal courts are not clothed by the Constitution or laws of the United States with any jurisdiction over such questions.

Black, Const. Law, pp. 64, 85, 86; 1 Bryce, American Constitution, pp. 262, 397; Phillips v. Hatch, 1 Dill. 571, Fed. Cas. No. 11,094; United States v. 129 Packages, Fed. Cas. No. 15,941; County Ct. v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 205; Keely v. Sanders, 99 U. S. 441, 446, 25 L. ed. 327, 329; Re Moyer, 35 Colo. 159, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 979, 117 Am. St. Rep. 189, 85 Pac. 190; Hawkins v. The Governor, 1 Ark. 586, 33 Am. Dec. 346; Louisiana v. Texas, 176 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 347, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251.

The interference, under state executive authority, either with persons or with property, in the due course of enforcing quarantine regulations or suppressing insurrection, does not constitute a deprivation of liberty or property without due process of law, within the meaning of the Constitution.

Compagnie Française de Navigation à Vapeur v. State Bd. of Health, 186 U. S. 380, 46 L. ed. 1209, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811.

If the Constitution of Colorado vests the executive department of the state with duties which, in strictness, may be said to be legislative in their character, or if the Constitution of the state casts upon the executive department the discharge of duties judicial in their nature, this delegation of legislative or of judicial power to the executive department does not present nor involve a Federal question, either statutory or constitutional.

Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71, 47 L. ed. 79, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Satterlee v. Matthewson, 2 Pet. 380, 413, 7 L. ed. 458, 469; Murray v. Louisiana, 163 U. S. 101, 41 L. ed. 87, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990; Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 469, 546, 8 L. ed. 751, 779; Baltimore & S. R. Co. v. Nesbit, 10 How. 395, 13 L. ed. 469; Carfer v. Caldwell, 200 U. S. 293, 297, 50 L. ed. 488, 489, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264.

We are not, however, to be taken as conceding that the construction placed upon the Constitution of Colorado by the supreme court of that state was erroneous. On the contrary, it was correct.

Story, Const. § 1491. 1 Kent, Com. p. 283.

The term "insurrection" is one in a large measure incapable of exact legal definition, more or less elastic in its meaning, and the constitutional officer vested with the power of ascertaining its existence and exercising the necessary military power and constraint to suppress it is vested with a broad discretion, to be exercised under the exigencies of each particular occasion as the same may present itself to his judgment and determination.

11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 356; Soule's Dict. Eng. Synonyms, 226; Anderson's Law Dict.; Re Charge, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 781, 62 Fed. 828; Hickman v. Jones, 9 Wall. 197, 200, 19 L. ed. 551, 553; Prize Cases, 2 Black, 635, 666, 17 L. ed. 459, 476; McCargo v. New Orleans Ins. Co; 10 Rob. (La.) 202, 43 Am. Dec. 180; Re Kemp, 16 Wis. 360.

During the continuance of a state of insurrection in a given county in a state, the inhabitants of such county are, for the time being, to be treated and regarded as insurgents; and as such, until the insurrection is suppressed and the ordinary civil authorities resume their customary functions, the courts of justice of the state can be lawfully closed against the inhabitants residing within such insurgent territory.

Ford v. Surget, 97 U. S. 594, 304, 24 L. ed. 1018, 1021; 11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 363.

The mere fact, if such be the fact, that the state district judge of the district including the county of San Miguel may have gone through the form of opening and adjourning court, and the transaction of some judicial business therein, is entirely compatible with the existence of a state of insurrection in such county, requiring the military arm of the government for its suppression.

Re Kemp, 16 Wis. 392; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 140, 18 L. ed. 302; 1 Bishop, Crim. Law, § 52.

The allegation in the amended complaint that, during all the time of the arrest, detention, and imprisonment, the courts of the state were open and in the free and undisturbed administration of justice, except in so far as the defendants prevented such courts from administering judicially the laws of the state, is without force, and it will be disregarded upon demurrer.

Jones v. United States, 137 U. S. 214, 215, 34 L. ed. 696, 697, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

The same rule which forbids the taking of testimony to show the invalidity of an enactment of the legislature forbids judicial inquiry into the finding of the state's executive touching a matter within the exercise of his discretionary power.

Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 258.

The possibility that power may be abused furnishes no argument against the existence of the power.

Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. 204-226, 5 L. ed. 242-247; 1 Bailey, Jurisdiction, pp. 303, 309, 312; 1 Bishop, Crim. Law, §§ 62, 68; 1 Story, Const. § 425; Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat. 32, 6 L. ed. 541.

Strictly speaking, no right is absolute. All rights are relative. There is no such thing, either in law or in fact, as unrestrained liberty. Liberty is always held and enjoyed subject to the rights of others, and, in the final analysis, "the safety of the people is the supreme law."

Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 26, 27, 49 L. ed. 643, 650, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 765; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 173, 52 L. ed. 436, 442, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Miller, Const. p. 349.

Due process of law does not invariably require judicial proceedings.

United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 263, 49 L. ed. 1040, 1044, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Public Clearing House v. Coyne, 194 U. S. 497, 48 L. ed. 1092, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 789; Donahue v. Will County, 100 Ill. 94; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 660, 35 L. ed. 1146, 1149, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

The courts recognize that there exists a well-defined distinction between the power to try, convict, and punish for violation of a penal statute, and the power to arrest and hold as preliminary to further proceedings. The exercise of the one power in times of peace is judicial in its nature, while the exercise of the power to arrest and commit may be lawfully delegated to nonjudicial officers without transgressing constitutional provisions.

State v. LeClair, 86 Me. 522, 30 Atl. 7; Allor v. Wayne County, 43 Mich. 100, 4 N. W. 492; Daniels v. People, 6 Mich. 390.

In the case at bar it is not alleged that the defendants assumed to try, convict, or punish the plaintiff. They but held him in military custody for a reasonable period as a measure which, in their final judgment, and in the exercise of political and executive discretion was essential for the public safety and the success of the efforts of the military forces of the state to restore public tranquility. What was done constituted a lawful exercise of power, invaded no constitutional right, and gives no right of action.

Re Bergen, 2 Hughes, 517, Fed. Cas. No. 1,338.

Motives of the governor of Colorado in 53 L. ed.

the discharge of his constitutional and political duty of suppressing an insurrection are not reviewable in any judicial tribunal.

Louisiana v. Texas, 176 U. S. 1, 18, 44 L. ed. 347, 354, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Spalding v. Vilas, 161 U. S. 483, 40 L. ed. 780, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 439, 440, 6 L. ed. 678, 685, 686; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 43, 12 L. ed. 581, 599; Druecker v. Salomon, 21 Wis. 628, 94 Am. Dec. 571.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought by the plaintiff in error against the former governor of the state of Colorado, the former adjutant general of the national guard of the same state, and a captain of a company of the national guard, for an imprisonment of the plaintiff by them while in office. The complaint was dismissed on demurrer, and the case comes here on a certificate that the demurrer was sustained solely on the ground that there was no jurisdiction in the circuit court. 148 Fed. 870.

The complaint alleges that the imprisonment was continued from the morning of March 30, 1904, to the afternoon of June 15, and that the defendants justified under the Constitution of Colorado, making the governor commander in chief of the state forces, and giving him power to call them out to execute laws, suppress insurrection, and repel invasion. It alleges that his imprisonment was without probable cause, that no complaint was filed against the plaintiff, and that (in that sense) he was prevented from having access to the courts of the state, although they were open during the whole time; but it sets out proceedings on habeas corpus, instituted by him before the supreme court of the state, in which that court refused to admit him to bail and ultimately discharged the writ. 35 Colo. 154, 91 Pac. 738, and 35 Colo. 159, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 979, 117 Am. St. Rep. 189, 85 Pac. 190. In those proceedings it appeared that the governor had declared a county to be in a state of insurrection, had called out troops to put down the trouble, and *had ordered that the plaintiff[83 should be arrested as a leader of the outbreak, and should be detained until he could be discharged with safety, and that then he should be delivered to the civil authorities, to be dealt with according to law.

The jurisdiction of the circuit court, if it exists, is under Rev. Stat. § 629, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 506, Sixteenth. That clause gives original jurisdiction "of all suits authorized by law to be brought by any person to redress the deprivation, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any state, of any right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution of the United States, or of any right secured by any law providing for equal rights of citizens of the United States, or of all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States." The complaint purports to be founded upon the Constitution and on Rev. Stat. § 1979, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1262, which authorizes suit to be brought for such deprivation as above described. Therefore the question whether the complaint states a case upon the merits under § 1979 in this instance is another aspect of the question whether it states a case within the jurisdiction of the court under § 629, cl. 16. Taken either way, the question is whether this is a suit authorized by law,—that is, by § 1979, or the Constitution, or both.

The plaintiff's position, stated in a few words, is that the action of the governor, sanctioned to the extent that it was by the decision of the supreme court, was the action of the state and therefore within the 14th Amendment; but that, if that action was unconstitutional, the governor got no protection from personal liability for his unconstitutional interference with the plaintiff's rights. It is admitted, as it must be, that the governor's declaration that a state of insurrection existed is conclusive of that fact. It seems to be admitted also that the arrest alone would not necessarily have given a right to bring this suit. Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 45, 46, 12 L. ed. 581, 600, 601. But it is said that a detention for so many days, alleged to be without probable cause, at a time when the courts were open, without an attempt to bring the plaintiff before them, makes a case on which he has a right to have a jury pass.

84] *We shall not consider all of the questions that the facts suggest, but shall confine ourselves to stating what we regard as a sufficient answer to the complaint, without implying that there are not others equally good. Of course, the plaintiff's position is that he has been deprived of his liberty without due process of law. But it is familiar that what is due process of law depends on circumstances. It varies with the subject-matter and the necessities of the situation. Thus, summary proceedings suffice for taxes, and executive decisions for exclusion from the country. Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 263, 49 L. ed. 1040, 1044, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644. What, then, are the circumstances of this case? By agreement the record of the proceedings upon habeas corpus was made part of the complaint, but that did not make the averments of the petition for the writ averments of the complaint. The facts that we are to assume are that a state of insurrection existed and that the governor, without sufficient reason, but in good faith, in the course of putting the insurrection down, held the plaintiff until he thought that he safely could release him.

It would seem to be admitted by the plaintiff that he was president of the Western Federation of Miners, and that, whoever was to blame, trouble was apprehended with the members of that organization. We mention these facts not as material, but simply to put in more definite form the nature of the occasion on which the governor felt called upon to act. In such a situation we must assume that he had a right, under the state Constitution and laws, to call out troops, as was held by the supreme court of the state. The Constitution is supplemented by an act providing that "when an invasion of or insurrection in the state is made or threatened, the governor shall order the national guard to repel or suppress the same." Laws of 1897, chap. 63, art. 7, § 2, p. 204. That means that he shall make the ordinary use of the soldiers to that end; that he may kill persons who resist, and, of course, that he may use the milder measure of seizing the bodies of those whom he considers to stand in the way of restoring peace. Such arrests are not necessarily *for punishment, but are by way of precaution, to prevent the exercise of hostile power. So long as such arrests are made in good faith and in the honest belief that they are needed in order to head the insurrection off, the governor is the final judge and cannot be subjected to an action after he is out of office, on the ground that he had not reasonable ground for his belief. If we suppose a governor with a very long term of office, it may be that a case could be imagined in which the length of the imprisonment would raise a different question. But there is nothing in the duration of the plaintiff's detention or in the allegations of the complaint that would warrant submitting the judgment of the governor to revision by a jury. It is not alleged that his judgment was not honest, if that be material, or that the plaintiff was detained after fears of the insurrection were at an end.

No doubt there are cases where the expert on the spot may be called upon to justify his conduct later in court, notwithstanding the fact that he had sole command at the time and acted to the best of his knowledge. That is the position of the captain of a ship. But, even in that case, great weight is given to his determination, and the matter is to be judged on the facts as they appeared then, and not merely in the light of the event. Lawrence v. Minturn, 17 How. 100, 110, 15 L. ed. 58, 62; The Star of Hope, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. ed. 638; The Germanic (Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Aitken) 196 U. S. 589, 594, 595, 49 L. ed. 610, 613, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317. When it comes to a decision by the head of the state upon a matter involving its life, the ordinary rights of individuals must yield to what he deems the necessities of the moment. Public danger warrants the substitution of executive process for judicial process. See Keely v. Sanders, 99 U. S. 441, 446, 25 L. ed. 327, 328. This was admitted with regard to killing men in the actual clash of arms; and we think it obvious, although it was disputed, that the same is true of temporary detention to prevent apprehended harm. As no one would deny that there was immunity for ordering a company to fire upon a mob in insurrection, and that a state law authorizing the governor to deprive citizens of life under such circumstances was consistent with the 86]14th Amendment, *we are of opinion that the same is true of a law authorizing by implication what was done in this case. As we have said already, it is unnecessary to consider whether there are other reasons why the circuit court was right in its conclusion. It is enough that, in our opinion, the declaration does not disclose a "suit authorized by law to be brought to redress the deprivation of any right secured by the Constitution of the United States." See Dow v. Johnson, 100 U. S. 158, 25 L. ed. 632.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Moody took no part in the decision of this case.

WATERS-PIERCE OIL COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF TEXAS. //

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 86-112.)

Error to state court — scope of review.

1. The Federal Supreme Court, on a writ of error to a state court, has not the jurisdiction of a general reviewing court in error, but is limited to a consideration of the specific instances of denials of Federal rights.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2072-2226, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — review of facts.

2. Findings of fact are accepted as conclusive by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2175-2208, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

53 L. ed.

Error to state court — Federal question — decision on non-Federal ground.

3. The judgment of a state court does not involve the decision of a Federal question, so as to sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court, if the record shows that the verdict and judgment of the state court can stand upon other grounds, free from objection so far as Federal rights are concerned.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1465-1528, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — police power of state — monopolies — procedure.

4. State legislatures, in the exercise of their power to deal with monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade, may provide their own methods of procedure and determine the methods and means by which their legislation may be made effective, subject only to the qualifications that such procedure must not work a denial of fundamental rights, or conflict with specific and applicable provisions of the Federal Constitution.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — ex post facto laws.

5. A retroactive effect, in violation of U. S. Const. art. 1, § 10, is not given to the Texas anti-trust laws of May 25, 1899, and March 31, 1903, by construing them to authorize a conviction of a foreign corpora-

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On illegal trusts under modern anti-trust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

On police power of states generally—see note to Barbier v. Connolly, 28 L. ed. U. S. 923.

As to what laws are ex post facto—see notes to State v. Cooler, 3 L.R.A. 181; Anderson v. O'Donnell, 1 L.R.A. 632; Calder v. Bull, 1 L. ed. U. S. 654; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 L. ed. U. S. 529; Re Medley, 33 L. ed. U. S. 835; Otoe County v. Baldwin, 28 L. ed. U. S. 331; Barnitz v. Beverly, 41 L. ed. U. S. 94.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

tion for carrying out, after the passage of those laws, an agreement for division of territory in suppression of competition, entered into before the enactment of those laws and before the creation of the defendant corporation, and at a time when such agreement was legal.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — indefiniteness of criminal statute.

6. Due process of law is not denied a corporation convicted of violating the Texas anti-trust laws of May 25, 1899, and March 31, 1903, because the legislation permits and the trial court charged that there may be a conviction not only for acts which accomplish the prohibited result, but also for those which "tend" or are "reasonably calculated" to bring about such result. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 779-830, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — police power of state — excessive fines.

7. Fixing the amount of fines for the violation of state legislation is within the police power of the state, subject only to the limitation that such fines must not be so grossly excessive as to amount to a deprivation of property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. c. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — excessive fines.

8. Penalties imposed by the jury and confirmed by the state courts at the rate of $1,500 and $50 per day for violating respectively, through a series of years, the Texas anti-trust laws of May 25, 1899, and March 31, 1903, are not so excessive as to deprive the defendant corporation of its property without due process of law, where such property amounts to more than $40,000,000, and its dividends have been as high as 700 per cent per annum.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 779-830, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 359.]

Argued October 30, November 2, 3, 1908.

Decided January 18, 1909.

IN ERROR to the court of Civil Appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Travis County, in that state, penalizing a foreign corporation for violations of the anti-trust act, and forfeiting its permit to do business in the state except as to its interstate business. Affirmed.

See same case below (Tex. Civ. App.) 106 S. W. 918.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Moorfield Storey argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. L. Thorndike, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The state courts, by imposing on the defendant a liability on account of an agreement made by the old Waters-Pierce Company, have undertaken to deprive the defendant of its property without due process of law.

Woodward v. Central Vermont R. Co. 180 Mass. 599, 62 N. E. 1051; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 102, 24 L. ed. 618.

In 1878 there was no law in Texas forbidding such an agreement as that by which the old Waters-Pierce Company agreed not to do business outside of Texas or other specified places, and the agreement was perfectly legal, whether it was one that the Standard Oil Company could have enforced or not.

Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor [1892] A. C. 39.

It was impossible for the state of Texas in 1899 to impose a penalty upon that company for having previously entered into such a contract, and any law enacted for that purpose would have been an ex post facto law and invalid.

Kring v. Missouri, 107 U. S. 228, 27 L. ed. 508, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443.

Although the words of the act refer to the future, yet the state courts have given it the effect of applying to an agreement made before its passage, and the defendant has thereby been deprived of its constitutional right.

General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211, 228, 52 L. ed. 754, 764, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

It was necessary first to carry the oil to Texas before it could be sold there, and this was interstate commerce.

General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 228, 229, 52 L. ed. 764, 765, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

As the agreement related only to interstate commerce so far as Texas was concerned, that state had no authority to interfere with it, or to impose penalties on account of it.

Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 119, 34 L. ed. 128, 136, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Rearick v. Pennsylvania, 203 U. S. 507, 51 L. ed. 295, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159.

According to the effect given to the statute by the state courts, the corporation whose shares are acquired by another is liable to the penalties and forfeiture of its right to do business. This is nothing less than taking the property of one corporation to pay the penalties for the acts of another. A statute that produces such an effect does not differ in principle from one that assumes to provide that the property of A shall be the property of B, which has been used as an example of a statute that would deprive a person of his property without due process of law.

Davidson v. New Orleans, supra.

The jury, under the directions in the judge's charge, and in accordance with the allegations of the petition, have convicted the defendant under the act of 1899 on account of a combination that was effected long before that act was passed, and the act has thus been given retroactive effect, and the defendant is deprived of its property without due process of law.

Kring v. Missouri, supra.

Whatever may be the proper construction of the statute, the effect that has been given to it is to make the defendant liable to penalties for what the Standard Oil Company has done.

General Oil Co. v. Crain, 209 U. S. 211, 228, 52 L. ed. 754, 764, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

This action is a proceeding by the government of Texas to recover penalties for an offense that the defendant is charged with having committed; and, although it is in the form of a civil action, the object is to inflict punishment for the offense, and the action is criminal in its nature.

Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 667-669, 36 L. ed. 1127, 1128, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Chaffee v. United States, 18 Wall. 516, 545, 21 L. ed. 908, 913; United States v. Shapleigh, 4 C. C. A. 237, 12 U. S. App. 26, 54 Fed. 134; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 1057.

A statute that makes it a criminal offense and imposes penalties if anyone enters into or becomes a party to an agreement that may be reasonably calculated to affect or increase the price of any article is so indefinite and uncertain that nobody can say in advance what might be found by a jury to constitute an offense.

Tozer v. United States, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 245, 52 Fed. 917; Ex parte Jackson, 45 Ark. 158; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 19 Fed. 679; Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 336, 29 L. ed. 646, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 190, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538.

The penalties imposed upon the defendant for the offense of which it has been convicted are so excessive as to constitute a deprivation of its property without due process of law.

Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 100, 46 L. ed. 105, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 144, 148, 52 L. ed. 722, 53 L. ed.

724, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; State v. Laredo Ice Co. 96 Tex. 468, 73 S. W. 951; State v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. 100 Tex. 175, 97 S. W. 71; State ex rel. Garvey v. Whitaker, 48 La. Ann. 527, 35 L.R.A. 561, 19 So. 457; Porter v. Dawson Bridge Co. 157 Pa. 379, 27 Atl. 730.

It is not contended that this court can revise the decisions of the state courts merely on the ground that those decisions are erroneous in law or fact. If the proceedings were conducted according to the regular course of judicial procedure, and not in reckless disregard of the defendant's rights, the decisions of the state courts are conclusive except upon questions arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, and do not deprive him of his property without due process of law.

Re Converse, 137 U. S. 631, 34 L. ed. 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; A. Backus Jr. & Sons v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 566, 42 L. ed. 858, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 453, 454, 49 L. ed. 550, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 234, 41 L. ed. 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Tracy v. Ginzberg, 205 U. S. 170, 178, 51 L. ed. 755, 760, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 415, 42 L. ed. 215, 220, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 367, 25 L. ed. 686.

But, in order that the decision may have this effect, it is necessary that there be, not only the form, but the substance, of a trial according to the regular course of procedure, and not in reckless disregard of defendant's rights.

A. Backus Jr. & Sons v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 565, 566, 42 L. ed. 857, 858, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Fayerweather v. Ritch, 195 U. S. 297, 299, 49 L. ed. 209, 210, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Patterson v. Colorado, 205 U. S. 461, 51 L. ed. 880, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556, 10 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 689.

The prohibitions of the 14th Amendment extend to all acts of the state, whether done through its legislative, executive, or judicial authorities; and whoever, by his public position, deprives another of any right protected by those provisions, violates the Constitution, and, as he represents the state, his act is that of the state.

Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 45, 38 L. ed. 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Owensboro Waterworks Co. v. Owensboro, 200 U. S. 45, 50 L. ed. 363, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Londoner v. Denver, 210 U. S. 386, 52 L. ed. 1112, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Vandalia R. Co. v. Indiana, 207 U. S. 359, 367, 52 L. ed. 246, 248, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 373, 30 L. ed. 227, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

It cannot be reasonably said that any of the doings or agreements of the old Waters-Pierce Company had any such fair relation to the question whether the defendant had violated the Texas anti-trust laws as to make it evidence upon that question. There was no such relation between them as might have justified the legislature in providing that they should be evidence against the defendant.

People v. Cannon, 139 N. Y. 45, 36 Am. St. Rep. 668, 34 N. E. 759; Com. v. Anselvich, 186 Mass. 379, 104 Am. St. Rep. 590, 71 N. E. 790.

The defendant did not succeed to the liabilities or obligations of the old Waters-Pierce Company (Armour v. E. Bement's Sons, 62 C. C. A. 142, 123 Fed. 56), and the legislature could not have imposed those liabilities or obligations upon the defendant (Woodward v. Central Vermont R. Co. 180 Mass. 599, 62 N. E. 1051).

The permit to do business in Texas, issued upon payment of the fees and taxes required by law, constituted a contract on the part of the state that the defendant should have a right to do business in Texas during the term specified in it, and the state was not at liberty to revoke the permission so given unless the defendant gave sufficient cause for its revocation.

American Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Colorado, 204 U. S. 103, 51 L. ed. 393, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 978; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 47, 44 L. ed. 665, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Cosmopolitan Club v. Virginia, 208 U. S. 378, 52 L. ed. 536, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394.

Mr. E. B. Perkins also argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. D. Johnson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The anti-trust laws of Texas are too vague and indefinite to be enforced.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. State, 100 Tex. 424, 100 S. W. 766; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 876; United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, 35 L. ed. 190, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 262, 22 L.R.A. 483, 24 S. W. 397; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Dwyer, 84 Tex. 194, 19 S. W. 470; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 19 Fed. 679; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129.

The anti-trust laws of 1899, 1903, and of 1907, as construed herein, are ex post facto laws.

Kring v. Missouri, 197 U. S. 221-228, 27 L. ed. 506-508, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 387, 1 L. ed. 648, 649; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 138, 3 L. ed. 178; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 18 L. ed. 356.

The law of 1907 violated the property rights of the defendant oil company which were vested by its contract in acquiring its property in Texas, and such deprivation and the fixing of the lien upon said property increased the punishment of the defendant oil company for acts done prior to the passage thereof.

Ex parte Mayer, 27 Tex. 723; United States v. Hall, 6 Cranch, 174, 3 L. ed. 190; Cummings v. Missouri, supra.

It may be that the anti-trust laws of the state of Texas of 1899 and 1903, as well as the act of 1907, are, in some of their provisions, constitutional so far as the wording of the acts is concerned; but the construction placed upon such laws by the trial court, which is approved by the higher courts of Texas, renders them unconstitutional.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Eubank, 184 U. S. 34, 46 L. ed. 419, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277.

The judgment against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, plaintiff in error, for $1,323,900 and for the cancelation of its permit to do business in Texas, and the judgment appointing a receiver, are void under the due process clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, for the reason that they assess such excessive penalties and punishments, when considered in connection with the character of the business done and the offense charged, as shocks the conscience of mankind.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. State, 100 Tex. 422, 100 S. W. 766; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441.

Mr. H. S. Priest also argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

In declaring it unlawful for the Standard Oil Company to own stock in the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, the latter is not only deprived of its property without due process of law, and denied the equal protection of the laws, but such directly impairs the obligation of a contract, in that it denies a stockholder in the Waters-Pierce Oil Company the right to transfer his stock to whom he pleases.

Trisconi v. Winship, 43 La. Ann. 45, 26 Am. St. Rep. 175, 9 So. 29; McNulta v. Corn Belt Bank, 164 Ill. 427, 56 Am. St. Rep. 203, 45 N. E. 954; Weston's Case, L. R. 4 Ch. 20; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Chicago, P. & S. R. Co. 163 U. S. 31, 41 L. ed. 60, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 917; Rice v. Rockefeller, 134 N. Y. 174, 17 L.R.A. 237, 30 Am. St. Rep. 658, 31 N. E. 907.

To punish the Waters-Pierce Oil Company because part of its stock was held by the Standard Oil Company, the same having been acquired long before the passage of the Texas anti-trust acts of 1903 and 1899, and when such acquisition was wholly lawful, is to subject the Waters-Pierce Oil Company to an ex post facto law, and deprive it of its property without due process of law.

Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 1 L. ed. 648; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. 88, 8 L. ed. 876; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507, 71 Am. Dec. 559; American Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Rainbolt, 48 Neb. 434, 67 N. W. 493; Stephens v. Southern P. Co. 109 Cal. 86, 29 L.R.A. 751, 50 Am. St. Rep. 17, 41 Pac. 783.

The ex post facto effect of a law cannot be evaded by giving a civil form to that which is essentially criminal.

Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 32 L. ed. 239, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1370; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 29 L. ed. 746, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Lees v. United States, 150 U. S. 476, 37 L. ed. 1150, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; United States v. Shapleigh, 4 C. C. A. 237, 12 U. S. App. 26, 54 Fed. 126; Burgess v. Salmon, 97 U. S. 381, 24 L. ed. 1104; United States v. Hughes, 8 Ben. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 15,416; Wilson v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 64 Ill. 542, 16 Am. Rep. 565; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 375.

The state of Texas cannot constitutionally enact a law which denounces as an offense an act committed in another state, and punish this plaintiff in error for an alleged offense committed wholly outside of the jurisdiction of the state of Texas.

The Apollon, 9 Wheat. 362, 6 L. ed. 111; State v. Knight, 1 N. C. pt. 2, p. 44 (Taylor, 65); Re Grice, 79 Fed. 627; State v. Cutshall, 110 N. C. 538, 16 L.R.A. 130, 15 S. E. 261; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; 1 Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 13; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 176; Story, Confl. L. 1834, § 620.

Admitting the ownership of a portion of the stock of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, this fact is not enough to establish the existence of a "combination" between the two corporations, within the meaning of that term as used in the Texas anti-trust acts of 1899 and 1903; and to hold the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, because of such ownership of stock by the Standard Oil Company, guilty of entering into a combination with the Standard Oil Company, and punishing it therefor, is to deprive the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of its property without due process of law, deny it the equal protection of the laws, and hold it liable under ex post facto and retrospective laws.

Com. v. Punxsutawney Water Co. 197 Pa. 569, 47 Atl. 843; Gates v. Hooper, 90 53 L. ed.

Tex. 563, 39 S. W. 1079; State ex rel. Crow v. Continental Tobacco Co. 177 Mo. 1, 75 S. W. 737.

In the admission of incompetent, frivolous, and immaterial evidence wholly foreign to any issues to the cause, arbitrarily admitted, and without regard for the rules of law and constitutional rights of plaintiff in error to a fair and impartial trial of the issues raised, such evidence being calculated to excite, inflame, and prejudice the minds of the jury against the plaintiff in error, the constitutional right of plaintiff in error to a fair and impartial trial was denied, and, by the judgment upon the verdict in the cause, plaintiff in error was deprived of its property without due process of law.

Robinson, American Jurisprudence, pp. 238-257, 259; Re Ziebold, 23 Fed. 791; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 346, 25 L. ed. 679; Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 4 Wheat. 235, 4 L. ed. 559; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 506; State v. Bates, 14 Utah, 293, 43 L.R.A. 33, 47 Pac. 78; San José Ranch Co. v. San José Land & Water Co. 126 Cal. 322, 58 Pac. 824; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565.

The fine imposed is so grossly excessive as to deprive plaintiff in error of its property without due process of law.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 471; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard), 183 U. S. 101, 46 L. ed. 105, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Gates v. Hooper, 90 Tex. 563, 39 S. W. 1079; State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co. 95 Tex. 603, 69 S. W. 58; Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. State, 99 Tex. 34, 70 L.R.A. 950, 87 S. W. 336; State v. Bates, supra.

The Texas anti-trust acts of 1890 and 1903 are so vague, indefinite, ambiguous, and uncertain in terms as to fail to designate any offense with such certainty as to inform the public in advance of the constituents of the offense sought to be defined and punished, and the punishment of this plaintiff in error under such statutes deprives it of its property without due process of law.

Augustine v. State, 41 Tex. Crim. Rep. 59, 96 Am. St. Rep. 765, 52 S. W. 77; Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 250, 22 L.R.A. 483, 24 S. W. 397; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. State, 100 Tex. 420, 100 S. W. 766; Tozer v. United States, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 245, 52 Fed. 917; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129; Hughes, Crim. Law & Proc. § 2429; Com. v. Bradford, 9 Met. 268; Cutter v. State, 36 N. J. L. 125; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup.

Ct. Rep. 663; Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Cornell, 110 Fed. 816.

The denial of any period of limitation in bar of a suit against plaintiff in error to recover fines or penalties or forfeit its permit is a denial of the equal protection of the laws, and deprives plaintiff in error of its property without due process of law.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cutting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 34 L. ed. 796, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191.

The appointment of a receiver and transfer to him of the property of plaintiff in error pending proceedings by way of appeal was wholly without authority and an arbitrary exercise of judicial power, and deprived plaintiff in error of its property without due process of law, and denied it the equal protection of the laws.

Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 62, 71, 118, 1330: Texas Trunk R. Co. v. Jackson Bros. 85 Tex. 605, 22 S. W. 1030; Havemeyer v. Superior Ct. 84 Cal. 327, 10 L.R.A. 627, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 134; Tex. Rev. Stat. arts. 1177, 1181, 1191, 1337; Hall v. Jackson, 3 Tex. 305; Nye v. Gribble, 70 Tex. 458, 8 S. W. 608; May v. Taylor, 22 Tex. 348; Mann v. Falcon, 25 Tex. 276; Bledsoe v. Wills, 22 Tex. 650.

The appointment of a receiver of plaintiff in error's property for the purpose of depriving it of the capacity for further or continued violation of the anti-trust laws of Texas, without evidence of any such intended violation, and without evidence that it could not use its property in compliance with law, constitutes a deprivation of such property of plaintiff in error without due process of law.

Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 23 L. ed. 914; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Bigelow v. Forrest, 9 Wall. 351, 19 L. ed. 700; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409, 42 L. ed. 215, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841.

The Texas act of April 11, 1907, is null and void—

(1) In so far as it attempts to create a lien upon the property of plaintiff in error for acts committed before such act took effect.

(2) In so far as, under it, the right to appoint a receiver is limited to suits against corporations only.

(3) In so far as it attempts to create a lien upon the property of plaintiff in error, in that the lien is not created by the terms of the act, based alone upon the commission of the offense, but is left to be created by the action of the prosecuting officer in filing suit to recover the prescribed penalties.

Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 388, 1 L. ed. 649; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 18 L. ed. 356; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 137, 3 L. ed. 178; Wilson v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 64 Ill. 542, 16 Am. Rep. 565; Havemeyer v. Superior Ct. 84 Cal. 347, 10 L.R.A. 627, 18 Am. St. Rep. 192, 24 Pac. 121; Texas Trunk R. Co. v. Jackson Bros. supra; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 239; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 366, 30 L. ed. 225, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

Messrs. G. W. Allen, R. L. Batts, and Robert Vance Davidson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Jewel P. Lightfoot, John W. Brady, T. W. Gregory, and Allen & Hart, filed a brief for defendant in error:

No substantial Federal question requiring the exercise of the jurisdiction of this court is involved in this case.

Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. German Nat. Bank, 207 U. S. 275, 52 L. ed. 203, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 98, 52 L. ed. 120, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Thomas v. Iowa, 209 U. S. 263, 52 L. ed. 783, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Bachtel v. Wilson, 204 U. S. 36, 52 L. ed. 357, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Stickney v. Kelsey, 209 U. S. 422, 52 L. ed. 865, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508.

Neither the act of 1899 nor the act of 1903 is an ex post facto law, nor is either retroactive, nor was either given a retroactive effect in this case.

Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co. 187 U. S. 611, 47 L. ed. 328, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646, 40 L. ed. 838, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co. 94 U. S. 535, 24 L. ed. 148; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 668, 31 L. ed. 212, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 1, 44 S. W. 941; Ford v. Chicago Milk Shippers' Asso. 155 Ill. 166, 27 L.R.A. 298, 39 N. E. 651; State v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 99 Tex. 516, 5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 783, 91 S. W. 214.

Neither the act of 1899 nor the act of 1903, as construed by the highest state courts of Texas, deny to plaintiff in error the equal protection of the laws.

National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 689, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed.

546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 665, 31 L. ed. 211, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 188, 44 L. ed. 728, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 1146, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Nutting v. Massachusetts, 183 U. S. 553, 46 L. ed. 327, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Wurts v. Hoagland, 114 U. S. 615, 29 L. ed. 232, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 382, 38 L. ed. 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Eldridge v. Trezevant, 160 U. S. 469, 40 L. ed. 499, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345; Lowe v. Kansas, 163 U. S. 88, 41 L. ed. 80, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1031; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 209, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 352, 35 L. ed. 1039, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 687, 32 L. ed. 257, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 95, 45 L. ed. 105, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 429, 46 L. ed. 626, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 246, 46 L. ed. 175, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120.

Neither the act of 1899 nor the act of 1903 deprived plaintiff in error of its property without due process of law.

Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Remington Paper Co. v. Watson, 173 U. S. 443, 43 L. ed. 762, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; St. Louis, G. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Misspuri, 156 U. S. 478, 39 L. ed. 502, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372; New Orleans Debenture Redemption Co. v. Louisiana, 180 U. S. 320, 45 L. ed. 550, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378; Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 46 L. ed. 573, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Consolidated Rendering Co. v. Vermont, 207 U. S. 541, 52 L. ed. 327, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Cosmopolitan Club v. Virginia, 208 U. S. 384, 52 L. ed. 539, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 697, 34 L. ed. 818, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 539, 38 L. ed. 813, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Minder v. Georgia, 183 U. S. 559, 46 L. ed. 328, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

If there was any error in the charge of the trial court upon the matter of stock ownership, the error is immaterial, and any Federal question that might have been predicated of it has been eliminated from the case by the action of the court of civil appeals in basing a judgment of affirmance upon other grounds.

53 L. ed.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Ferris, 179 U. S. 602, 45 L. ed. 337, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Hammond v. Johnston, 142 U. S. 73, 35 L. ed. 941, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38, 43 L. ed. 63, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635; Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480, 23 L. ed. 478; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co.; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso., and State v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co.,—supra; Baldwin v. Kansas, 129 U. S. 52, 32 L. ed. 640, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193.

The combination effected between the Standard Oil Company and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company by the acquisition of the stock of the latter by the former for the purposes for which the acquisition was made and with the effect intended violated the laws of Texas, and the infliction of penalties therefor would not have given the laws either an extraterritorial effect or a retroactive effect, or otherwise have violated the Constitution of the United States.

Ibid.

Neither the act of 1899 nor that of 1903 is vague, uncertain, or indefinite.

Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 325, 41 L. ed. 1022, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Harriman v. Northern Securities Co. 197 U. S. 244, 49 L. ed. 739, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 689, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 454, 49 L. ed. 550, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; State v. Laredo Ice Co. 96 Tex. 461, 73 S. W. 952; State v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. supra; San Antonio Gas Co. v. State, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 118, 54 S. W. 289; People v. Sheldon, 139 N. Y. 251, 23 L.R.A. 221, 36 Am. St. Rep. 690, 34 N. E. 785; Drake v. Siebold, 81 Hun, 178, 30 N. Y. Supp. 697; People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. 121 N. Y. 582, 9 L.R.A. 33, 18 Am. St. Rep. 843, 24 N. E. 834.

The jurisdiction of the legislature of Texas to pass laws prohibiting the making of agreements or the forming of combinations in restraint of trade in Texas, or the carrying out in Texas of such agreements or combinations, is absolute and complete.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 1, 44 S. W. 936; National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, supra; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed.

136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 665, 31 L. ed. 211, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 31, 28 L. ed. 924, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 410, 50 L. ed. 250, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Anheuser-Busch Brewing Asso. v. Houck (Tex. Civ. App.) 27 S. W. 692; State v. Laredo Ice Co. supra; Texas & P. Coal Co. v. Lawson, 89 Tex. 394, 32 S. W. 871, 34 S. W. 919; State v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. and People v. North River Sugar Ref. Co. supra; State ex rel. Watson v. Standard Oil Co. 49 Ohio St. 137, 15 L.R.A. 145, 34 Am. St. Rep. 541, 30 N. E. 279; Harding v. American Glucose Co. 182 Ill. 551, 64 L.R.A. 738, 74 Am. St. Rep. 189, 55 N. E. 577; Arnot v. Pittston & E. Coal Co. 68 N. Y. 558, 23 Am. Rep. 190; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 63, 21 L. ed. 404.

Having complete jurisdiction to pass laws prohibiting the making of agreements or the forming of combinations in restraint of trade in Texas, or the carrying out in Texas of such agreements or combinations, the legislature has the absolute right to prescribe the punishment for a violation of such laws; and the laws under consideration are open to no constitutional objections on account of the penalties.

National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, supra; Rippey v. Texas, 193 U. S. 504, 48 L. ed. 767, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Ohio ex rel. Lloyd v. Dollison, 194 U. S. 445, 48 L. ed. 1062, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 50 L. ed. 157, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 561; Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 322, 50 L. ed. 1049, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Indiana, 165 U. S. 304, 41 L. ed. 725, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345; Coffey v. Harlan County, 204 U. S. 659, 51 L. ed. 666, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Seegers, 207 U. S. 73, 52 L. ed. 108, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Northwestern Nat. L. Ins. Co. v. Riggs, 203 U. S. 251, 51 L. ed. 172, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126, 7 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1104; O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 36 L. ed. 450, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was begun in the state district court of Travis county, Texas, to forfeit the permit of the plaintiff in error, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, a corporation of the state of Missouri, to conduct business in the state of Texas, and to assess penalties against it for violation of the anti-trust laws of that state. The prosecution was under two laws of the state,—one of 1899 and one of March 31, 1903. The proceeding was brought by the attorney general of Texas and the county attorney of Travis county, to recover penalties, under the act of [May 25] 1899, from the 31st day of May, 1900, until the 31st day of March, 1903, at the rate of $5,000 per day, and under the act of 1903, from the 31st of March, 1903, till the 29th of April, 1907, at the rate of $50 per day, and to cancel the permit of the defendant to do business, other than interstate, in Texas.

The jury returned a verdict against the defendant, and assessed *penalties, under[97 the act of 1899, from May 31, 1900, to March 31, 1903,—1,033 days. Such penalties were assessed at the rate of $1,500 a day during that period, being the total sum of $1,549,500. The jury also found against the defendant under the act of 1903, and assessed the penalties for each day between April 1, 1903, and April 29, 1907,—1,480 days,—at the rate of $50 per day, making a total of $74,000. The jury further found that the permit of the defendant to do business in the state of Texas should be canceled. Thereupon the court rendered a judgment for the state of Texas for the sum of the penalties assessed, $1,623,500, and ordered a cancelation of the defendant's permit to do business in the state except as to its interstate commerce business. This judgment was affirmed upon appeal to the court of civil appeals of Texas (106 S. W. 918), and, upon application to the supreme court of Texas, that court refused to grant a writ of error, and the case was brought here.

The case was submitted upon oral arguments and elaborate briefs and a voluminous record. It was argued, in many aspects, as though this were a proceeding in error to review the weight of the evidence adduced in the state courts, to re-examine the rulings of the court upon the admissibility of testimony, and to determine the effect of the statute of limitations in the state.

The jurisdiction of this court to review the proceedings of the state courts, as we have had frequent occasion to declare, is not that of a general reviewing court in error, but is limited to the specific instances of denials of Federal rights, whether those pertaining to the constitutionality of Federal or state statutes, or to certain rights, immunities, and privileges of Federal origin, specially set up in the state court, and denied by the rulings and judgment of that court. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575. Nor does this court sit to review the finding of facts made in the state court, but accepts the findings of the court of the state upon matters of fact as conclusive, and is confined to a review of questions of Federal law within the jurisdiction conferred upon this court. Quinby v. Boyd, 128 U. S. 489, 32 L. ed. 503, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Downer v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Thayer v. Spratt, 98]189 *U. S. 346, 47 L. ed. 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576. We shall not, therefore, undertake to follow counsel in the consideration of all the questions argued, but shall limit our review to questions of a Federal nature which we deem to be properly made in this record and essential to the decision of the case.

Epitomizing the Texas anti-trust statutes for the purposes of his charge, the learned judge who presided in the district court, speaking first of the act of 1899, stated them as follows:

"For the purposes of this charge you are instructed that this act made it unlawful for any corporation transacting or conducting any kind of business in this state to enter into, or become a party to, any agreement or understanding with any other corporation or individual to fix or regulate the price in Texas of any article of manufacture or merchandise, or to control or limit in Texas the trade in any article of manufacture or merchandise.

"You are further instructed that said statute also made it unlawful for any corporation transacting or conducting any kind of business in this state to bring about or permit any union or combination of its capital, property, trade, or acts with the capital, property, trade, or acts of any other person or corporation, whereby the price in Texas of any article of manufacture or merchandise would be fixed or sought to be fixed, regulated or sought to be regulated; or whereby the price in Texas of any article of manufacture or merchandise would be reasonably calculated to be fixed, or regulated, or whereby the trade in such article of manufacture or merchandise in Texas would be sought to be controlled or limited, or would be reasonably calculated to be controlled or limited.

"The statute known as the anti-trust law of 1903 became effective on March 31, 1903, and has since continued in force. For the purposes of this charge you are instructed that this statute defines a trust to be a combination of capital, skill, or acts by two or more persons, firms, corporations, or associations of persons, or either two or more of them, for either, any, or all of the following purposes, viz.:

*"(1) To create or which may tend to create or carry out restrictions in trade or commerce in Texas, or to create or carry out restrictions in the free pursuit in Texas of any business authorized or permitted by the laws of this state.

"(2) To fix, maintain, or increase the price of merchandise in Texas.

"(3) To prevent or lessen competition in Texas in the sale of merchandise.

"(4) To abstain from engaging in business or in the sale of merchandise in Texas, or any portion thereof.

"Said statute of 1903 further defines a monopoly to be a combination or consolidation of two or more corporations when effected in any of the following methods, viz:

"(1) When the direction of the affairs of two or more corporations is in any manner brought under the same management or control for the purpose of producing, or where such common management or control tends to create, a trust, as above defined.

"(2) When any corporation acquires the shares or certificates of stock, franchise, or other rights, or the physical properties or any part thereof of any other corporation for the purpose of preventing or lessening, or where the effect of such acquisition tends to affect or lessen, competition, whether such acquisition is accomplished directly or through the instrumentality of trustees or otherwise.

"(3) Oil, all other products of petroleum, and goods, wares, or merchandise of any character which the defendant or its agents may have purchased or acquired in any manner outside of the state of Texas, and caused to be transported to its agents or others within the state, are the subjects of interstate commerce when they enter this state, and so remain until such commodities are removed from the original tanks, vessels, or other packages in which they are imported into the state and become mixed with the common mass of property of similar character in this state. The anti-trust laws of Texas have no reference to agreements or pools or arrangements of any character concerning subjects of interstate commerce, and no agreement, *pool, or other arrangement, if any, which the defendant may have entered into with reference to the sale of any subject of interstate commerce can be considered by you as violating any anti-trust law of Texas. But neither oil purchased by the defendant from the Corsicana Refinery or elsewhere in Texas, nor other merchandise purchased by defendant at points in Texas, nor such oil or other merchandise purchased by defendant at points outside of the state, and transported into the state, and removed from the original packages or vessels in which it was brought into the state, and mingled with other property of similar character in the state, is the subject of interstate commerce, but, on the contrary, is the subject of local commerce, and any agreement or pool or arrangement entered into by defendant with reference to such property or the sale thereof, if any such sale there were, would be unlawful, if in violation of the anti-trust laws of this state."

The penalties denounced by the act of 1899 were not less than $200 nor more than $5,000 for each day the defendant might be found to have violated the law; under the act of 1903 the penalty was fixed at $50 for each day, and a forfeiture of the right to do business within the state of Texas was declared.

The complaint in the case is voluminous, and its averments contain the history of the so-called conspiracy between the Waters-Pierce Oil Company and a number of persons composing the Standard Oil Company, beginning in January, 1870, for the purpose of monopolizing and controlling the business of refining and transporting and selling petroleum and similar products throughout the United States and in the state of Texas. It charges that the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, incorporated in 1878, and the predecessor of the defendant company, was a party to that conspiracy, and, for the purpose of carrying out the same, had entered into contracts with corporations and individuals engaged in the business of selling petroleum and similar products within the state, and suppressed competition therein. It charges that the Waters-Pierce Oil Company had entered into an agreement with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey 101]*for the purpose of monopolizing the trade in petroleum and for the purpose of carrying out certain contracts and conspiracies, entered into for the purposes aforesaid, and permitted the Standard Oil Company to acquire a majority of the shares of stock of the Waters-Pierce Company.

The original Waters-Pierce Oil Company, it states, had been dissolved, and the new company, the present defendant, organized on May 29, 1900, had assumed all the contracts and agreements of its predecessor, and it was averred that the dissolving of the old Waters-Pierce Company and the forming of the new company, the defendant in this case, was in further pursuance of the conspiracy for the purpose of continuing the monopoly and control which had been acquired by the old company, and for the purpose of rendering ineffective the judgments of the state court and of this court (177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep.

518), wherein the right of the Waters-Pierce Company to do business in Texas was forfeited.

It was further averred that the new corporation was of the same name as the old one, with the same amount of stock, which was distributed to the holders of stock in the new corporation in the same proportion among the shareholders as it was in the old corporation. It is charged that a major part of the capital stock, although in fact owned by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, stood for a time in the name of H. C. Pierce, but was in fact owned by the Standard Oil Company. That the conduct of the business in the new corporation was not changed, and that it was controlled by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey in the same manner as the old company had been; that the old contract, whereby there was a division of territory and the limitation of the operations of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company to the state of Texas and some other territory, was maintained and enforced. That other concerns had been acquired in the carrying out of the scheme charged; that said companies had been put out of business or were used in controlling and monopolizing the trade and business aforesaid; that the defendant, the new corporation, was a party to these arrangements, *participated in them, and[102 was engaged in carrying them out.

The things charged were alleged to have the effect to control the defendant and a large number of other companies by the same corporation and persons, with the acquiescence and consent of the defendant; that all competition in Texas between companies was destroyed; that certain sections and parts of the United States were assigned to the various companies; that the defendant was permitted to do business in Texas, and that, with its knowledge and consent, upon its instance and demands, all other companies had been excluded from doing business in the state of Texas; that, by the agreement, the defendant was obliged to secure all the oil sold by certain named refiners at prices determined by the Standard Oil Company and those interested in it, with the effect of monopolizing and controlling the business in oil and the production of petroleum in Texas by fixing the prices of such products in that state.

The plaintiff summarizes the unlawful results accomplished as follows:

"(1) The plaintiff in error is dominated and controlled by, and its business dictated by, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

"(2) A large number of individuals and corporations doing business in the sale of petroleum products are excluded from doing business in the state, and competition is lessened.

"(3) The price of oil had been maintained at an exorbitant figure, being from 10 to 25 per cent higher than that of oil sold in the territory not claimed by plaintiff in error.

"(4) Competition had been suppressed and business destroyed in the state by unconscionable and unfair means.

"(5) A substantially complete monopoly in petroleum products had been established, the plaintiff in error having sold, during the period of ten years past, at least 95 per cent of all petroleum products sold."

The defendant answered and filed a large number of special pleas and exceptions, taking issue upon the charges made in the 103]*petition, and alleging the unconstitutionality of the acts of 1899 and 1903, and alleging that, if the petition of the state of Texas be granted, it would be denied the equal protection of the laws, be subjected to ex post facto laws, deprived of its property without due process of law, and have the obligations of its contracts impaired, contrary to the provisions of the Constitution of the United States.

At the trial at the May term of the district court of Travis county a verdict was rendered in favor of the state, and penalties were assessed, and the judgment rendered, as herein before stated. In the court of civil appeals of the state of Texas that court found the facts to be as found by the verdict in the trial court, and, in concluding its opinion upon the question of fact, said:

"In appellant's motion for a new trial in the court below, and in its presentation of the case here, the verdict of the jury has been challenged, the contention being that the testimony fails to show that appellant has violated any of the anti-trust laws of this state. The evidence is very voluminous, and it is not necessary that it be set out or epitomized in this opinion. It is sufficient, we think, to show that from the date of its permit to do business in this state, May 31, 1900, appellant has been a party to an agreement or understanding with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, one object of which was to create a monopoly and control the price of petroleum oil and prevent competition in its sale in a large and specified territory, including the state of Texas; and that, to a large extent, such object has been accomplished. In so far as that agreement related to this state, appellant, acting by its agents, performed it within this state; and such performance within the limits of the state constitutes violations of Texas laws and renders appellant amenable to such laws, although the agreement between it and the Standard Oil Company may not have been made in this state. To a large extent the case rests upon circumstantial evidence; but we cannot say that the jury were not warranted in the conclusions drawn from it. Hence we hold that the verdict is supported *by testimony, and no error was[104 committed in overruling the motion for a new trial." [106 S. W. 930.]
53 L. ed.

The court left the case to the jury upon a charge which permitted them to find whether the defendant company, acting through its duly authorized agents, had entered into or had become a party to an agreement or understanding with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey on June 1, 1900, to fix or regulate the price of oil in Texas, and whether the company remained or continued to be a party to such agreement, and carried out the same in Texas on dates subsequent to June 1, 1900, and prior to March 31, 1903, and whether the oil, in reference to which such agreement was made and carried out was the subject of local, as distinguished from interstate, commerce.

And the court further charged that if, within the time above stated, the defendant had brought about or permitted any combination or union of its capital with that of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, whereby the price of such oil in Texas was found to be controlled or limited, fixed or regulated, or whereby such price would be reasonably calculated to be fixed or regulated, or whereby the trade in such oil in Texas was sought to be controlled or limited, they might return a verdict for the state.

And the court charged that if they should find that the defendant, through its duly authorized agents, had entered into a combination of its capital with the capital of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey for the purpose of creating in Texas, or which tended to create in Texas, or carry out in Texas, restrictions in the free pursuit of selling oil, or having the effect of increasing the price of such oil in Texas, or to prevent or lessen competition in selling the same in said state; and that the defendant remained or was a party to and acted under such combination, if such there was, on March 31, 1903, and thereafter prior to April 29, 1907, they might return a verdict of guilty.

The jury was further instructed that, if they found from the evidence that the direction of the affairs of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and those of the defendant company *were under the same[105 management or control after March 31, 1903, and prior to April 29, 1907, and that they were placed under such common management or control by their respectively authorized officers, and if such management or control created or tended to create or to carry out restrictions in the sale of oil in Texas, as above stated, or to fix, maintain, or increase the prices of such oil in said state, or to prevent or lessen competition in the sale of such oil, they might return a verdict for the state. The jury found each of the issues submitted against the defendant. The court of civil appeals affirmed this finding of fact, and we must accept the same as established for the purposes of this proceeding in error.

Numerous exceptions were taken to the charge at the trial and are the subjects of assignments of error in the state court and in this court. We are concerned with such as relate to the Federal questions involved in this proceeding.

In the eleventh paragraph of the charge the court instructed the jury as follows:

"(11) If you find from a preponderance of the evidence that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey had, on March 31, 1903, or on any date subsequent thereto and prior to April 29th, 1907, acquired a majority of the capital stock of the defendant corporation, and thereby effected a combination of said two corporations, and if you further find from a preponderance of the evidence that said stock was acquired and combination effected, if any, with the purpose and intention on the part of the managing officers and directors of said Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, of preventing or lessening the competition in the sale in Texas of the character and kind of oil above mentioned, or that the effect of said combination, if such there were, tended to affect or lessen the competition in the sale in Texas of said oil, you will return a verdict for the state, and say by your verdict: 'We, the jury, find for the state on the issues submitted for our consideration in paragraph eleven of the court's charge.' In this connection you are instructed that, if the defendant entered into a monopoly of the character mentioned in this paragraph 106]* of the charge, each day between March 30, 1903 and April 29th, 1907, that it remained a party to such monopoly, if there were any such days, constituted a separate violation of the anti-trust laws of Texas."

The judges of the court of civil appeals differed in their views as to the correctness of this charge, the learned justice who wrote the opinion holding the view that it was calculated to mislead the jury to the belief that they might convict upon this issue regardless of whether the defendant had any knowledge of, participated in, or aided the Standard Oil Company in acquiring the stock of the defendant for the purposes stated.

But the court agreed that, if wrong, this part of the charge afforded no ground for reversal, because the jury found that the appellant had violated other provisions of the act, and assessed but one penalty for each day's violation, and therefore the judgment would have been the same, and the error, if any, was harmless.

In thus deciding, the court of civil appeals did not determine a Federal question, nor necessarily decide one adversely to the plaintiff in error, controlling in character, if it appears upon this record that the verdict and judgment can stand upon other grounds free from objection, so far as Federal rights are concerned.

Much of the argument for plaintiff in error is predicated upon the contention that the acquiring of the stock of the Waters-Pierce Company by the Standard Oil Company and the making of the agreement charged were not shown to have been acts done in Texas. It is contended that such acquiring of stock, and agreement, if any, were acts beyond the jurisdiction of the state. But an inspection of the record discloses that the court charged that no agreement made by the defendant outside of the state of Texas could be made the basis of forfeiting its permit to do business in the state, unless such agreement was executed, or attempted to be executed, in the state, by the duly authorized agents of the defendant. And, in the findings which we have above quoted as to the evidence, the state court has *found that the defendant has[107 been, since May 31, 1900, a party to an agreement with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, to create a monopoly and to control prices and prevent competition in Texas, and that, to a large extent, the object has been accomplished. These findings of facts are conclusive upon us, and show that the conviction was had for acts and transactions committed and carried out within the state of Texas.

The argument to the effect that the rulings of the court as to the admission of testimony, and upon questions of general law, deprived the defendant of its property and rights without due process of law, requires us to notice the limitations upon the authority of this court when dealing with legislative acts and proceedings to enforce the same in the state courts. That state legislatures have the right to deal with the subject-matter and to prevent unlawful combinations to prevent competition and in restraint of trade, and to prohibit and punish monopolies, is not open to question. National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 689, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289. Having the power to pass laws of this character, of course the state may provide for proceedings to enforce the same. The state, keeping within constitutional limitations, may provide its own method of procedure and determine the methods and means by which such laws may be made effectual. "The limit of the full control which the state has in the proceedings of its courts, both in civil and criminal cases, is subject only to the qualification that such procedure must not work a denial of fundamental rights or conflict with specific and applicable provisions of the Federal Constitution." West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 263, 48 L. ed. 965, 969, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; and see Davis v. Texas, 139 U. S. 651, 35 L. ed. 300, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 675; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 175, 44 L. ed. 119, 120, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 140, 41 L. ed. 949, 950, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Re Converse, 137 U. S. 624, 632, 34 L. ed. 796, 799, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 191; and Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, ante, 97, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14, decided at this term of court, where the subject is fully discussed; and previous cases in this court cited.

It is contended that the acts in this case were given a retroactive effect, in violation of the Federal Constitution. Art. 1, § 10. This argument is predicated largely upon the 108] contention *that the conviction in this case was because of the old agreement of the former Waters-Pierce Oil Company, made long before the passage of the present statute, at a time when it was legal, and before the creation of the defendant company. But, in view of the facts found in the state court, to which we have already referred, there was ground for conviction, not because of the making of the old agreement for the division of the territory and the suppression of competition while the old company was in existence, but because the new company was found to have carried out the old agreement and made itself a party thereto, and, by continuing the old arrangement after the passage of the law, had brought itself within its terms. Of a similar contention this court said in United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Assn. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540:

"It is said that to grant the injunction prayed for in this case is to give the statute a retroactive effect; that the contract, at the time it was entered into, was not prohibited or declared illegal by the statute, as it had not then been passed; and to now enjoin the doing of an act which was legal at the time it was done would be improper. We give to the law no retroactive effect. The agreement in question is a continuing one. The parties to it adopt certain machinery, and agree to certain methods for the purpose of establishing and maintaining in the future reasonable rates for transportation. Assuming such action to have been legal at the time the agreement was first entered into, the continuation of the agreement, after it has been declared to be illegal, becomes a violation of the act. The statute prohibits the continuing or entering into such an agreement for the future, and, if the agreement be continued, it then becomes a violation of the act."

It is further insisted that the acts in question are so vague, indefinite, and uncertain as to deprive them of their constitutionality, in that they punish by forfeiture of the right to do business, and the imposition of penalties, under provisions of an act which do not advise a citizen or corporation prosecuted under them, of the nature and character of the acts constituting *a[109 violation of the law. These objections are found in the words of the act of 1899, denouncing contracts and arrangements "reasonably calculated" to fix and regulate the price of commodities, etc. And, in the act of 1903, acts are prohibited which "tend to accomplish the prohibited results. It is insisted that these laws are so indefinite that no one can tell what acts are embraced within their provisions. In support of this contention it is argued that laws of this nature ought to be so explicit that all persons subject to their penalties may know what they can do, and what it is their duty to avoid. And reference is made to decisions which have held that criminal statutes should be so definite as to enable those included in its terms to know in advance whether an act is criminal or not. Among others, Tozer v. United States, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 245, 52 Fed. 917, is cited, in which the opinion was by Mr. Justice Brewer, then judge of the circuit court, in which it was held that the criminality of an act cannot depend upon whether a jury may think it reasonable or unreasonable. To the same effect is Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L.R.A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866, also decided by Judge Brewer at circuit. And also the case of Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 99 Ky. 132, 33 L.R.A. 209, 59 Am. St. Rep. 457, 35 S. W. 129, is relied upon, in which a railroad was indicted for charging more than a just and reasonable rate, in which it was held that the law was unconstitutional, for, under such an act, it rests with the jury to say whether a rate is reasonable, and makes guilt depend not upon standards fixed by law, but upon what a jury might think as to the reasonableness of the rate in controversy. But the Texas statutes in question do not give the broad power to a court or jury to determine the criminal character of the act in accordance with their belief as to whether it is reasonable or unreasonable, as do the statutes condemned in the cases cited.

Take the act of 1903, which denounces acts which "tend" to bring about the prohibited results. It is not uncommon in criminal law to punish not only a completed act, but also acts which attempt to bring about the prohibited result. In United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249, this court said: "Again, 110]all the authorities *agree that, in order to vitiate a contract or combination, it is not essential that its result should be a complete monopoly; it is sufficient if it really tends to that end, and to deprive the public of the advantages which flow from free competition." This language was quoted with approval in Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 237, 44 L. ed. 146, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96. And in Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, while the Sherman act directly condemned conspiracies and combinations in restraint of trade or monopolizing or attempting to monopolize the same, this court said (page 332):

"That to vitiate a combination such as the act of Congress condemns it need not be shown that the combination in fact results, or will result, in a total suppression of trade, or in a complete monopoly, but it is only essential to show that, by its necessary operation, it tends to restrain interstate or international trade or commerce, or tends to create a monopoly in such trade or commerce, and to deprive the public of the advantages that flow from free competition."

As to the phrase, "reasonably calculated," what does it include less than acts which, when fairly considered, tend to accomplish the prohibited thing, or which make it highly probable that the given result will be accomplished? Again, speaking of the Sherman act, this court said in Swift & Co. v. United States, 196 U. S. 375, 49 L. ed. 518, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276.

"The statute gives this proceeding against combinations in restraint of commerce among the states and against attempts to monopolize the same. Intent is almost essential to such a combination and is essential to such an attempt. Where acts are not sufficient in themselves to produce a result which the law seeks to prevent,—for instance, the monopoly,—but require further acts in addition to the mere forces of nature to bring that result to pass, an intent to bring it to pass is necessary in order to produce a dangerous probability that it will happen. Com. v. Peaslee, 177 Mass. 267, 272, 59 N. E. 55. But, when that intent and the consequent dangerous probability exist, this statute, like many others, and like the common law *in some[111] cases, directs itself against that dangerous probability as well as against the completed result."

It is true that the decisions quoted are in civil cases involving contracts and arrangements held invalid when attacked in proceedings in equity, and did not involve penalties such as were imposed in the case now under consideration.

And it is to be remembered that we are dealing with an act of the legislature, sustained in courts of the state, with reference to its validity in view of the prohibitions of the Federal Constitution against deprivation by state action of liberty or property without due process of law. In this case the defendant has had a trial in a court of justice duly established under the laws of the state; the question of its liability has been submitted to a jury. The judgment has been reviewed in an appellate court, and the correctness of the findings of fact and rulings of law in the lower court affirmed. We are not prepared to say that there was a deprivation of due process of law because the statute permitted, and the court charged, that there might be a conviction not only for acts which accomplished the prohibited result, but also for those which tend or are reasonably calculated to bring about the things forbidden.

Again, it is contended that the fines imposed are so excessive as to constitute a taking of the defendant's property without due process of law. It is not contended in this connection that the prohibition of the 8th Amendment to the Federal Constitution against excessive fines operates to control the legislation of the states. The fixing of punishment for crime or penalties for unlawful acts against its laws is within the police power of the state. We can only interfere with such legislation and judicial action of the states enforcing it if the fines imposed are so grossly excessive as to amount to a deprivation of property without due process of law. Coffey v. Harlan County, 204 U. S. 659, 51 L. ed. 666, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

The business carried on by the defendant corporation in Texas was very extensive and highly profitable, as the record discloses. The property of the defendant amounted to more *than forty millions of dollars, as tes-[112]tified by its president. Its dividends had been as high as 700 per cent per annum. It was the theory of the state, sustained by the verdict and judgment, that the former course of business was continued, notwithstanding the judgment of ouster in the former case. Within the bounds of the statute the penalties were left to the discretion of the jury trying the case. While the penalties imposed are large, they are within the terms of the statute. Under the act of 1899 the jury imposed a penalty at the rate of $1,500 a day; under the act of 1903 at the rate of $50 per day. Assuming for this purpose that the defendant was guilty of a violation of the laws over a period of years, and in transacting business upon so large a scale, as shown in this case, we are not prepared to say, after confirmation of the verdict and judgment in courts of the state, that there was want of due process of law in the penalties assessed.

Remembering, as we have had frequent occasion to say, that our province in this case is limited to an examination of objections arising under the Federal Constitution, we are unable to find in this record any ground for reversing the judgment of the state court.

Affirmed.

WATERS-PIERCE OIL COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF TEXAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 112-118.)

Error to state court — questions reviewable.

1. The assignment of errors in the Federal Supreme Court cannot raise a Federal question reviewable on writ of error to a state court, but such review is confined to the assignments of error made and passed upon in the judgment brought up for review.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1311-1318, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — decision on non-Federal ground.

2. The Federal Supreme Court will not review a judgment of a state court where the latter has decided the case upon an independent ground not within the Federal objections taken, and that ground is sufficient to maintain the judgment.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1465-1528, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Doekery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

Error to state court — Federal question.

3. The contention that a state court, in appointing a receiver of a foreign corporation convicted of violating state anti-trust laws, upon the testimony already heard and the conviction already had, deprived the corporation of rights under U. S. Const., 14th Amend., does not present a substantial Federal question which will sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1123-1132, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question.

4. The time or manner in which a state court sees fit to approve the bond of a receiver of the property of a corporation convicted of violating the state anti-trust laws presents no substantial Federal question under U. S. Const., 14th Amend., which will sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1123-1132, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — Federal question — when raised in time.

5. An attempt to assign new errors in a petition for rehearing in a state court which is overruled without an opinion passing on Federal questions cannot avail to import such questions into the record, so as to sustain a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to the state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1292-1310, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 360.]

Argued October 30, November 2, 3, 1908.
Decided January 18, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to review a judgment which affirmed an order of the District Court of Travis County, in that state, appointing a receiver of the property and business of a foreign corporation convicted of violating the state anti-trust laws. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below (Tex. Civ. App.) 105 S. W. 851.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Moorfield Storey argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. L. Thorndike, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

preme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On the necessity of color of merit in Federal question to sustain writ of error to state court—see note to Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 51 L. ed. U. S. 231.

As to when the Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts—see note to Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 49 L. ed. U. S. 414.

Mr. H. S. Priest also argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. E. B. Perkins also argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. D. Johnson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

For their contentions see their briefs as reported in Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, ante, 417.

Messrs. G. W. Allen, R. L. Batts, and Robert Vance Davidson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Jewel P. Lightfoot, John W. Brady, T. W. Gregory, and Allen & Hart, filed a brief for defendant in error:

There being no substantial Federal question involved in this suit, this court is without jurisdiction to pass upon the merits of the controversy.

St. Louis, G. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 478, 39 L. ed. 502, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 281, 10 L. ed. 965; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch, 43, 3 L. ed. 650; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372; Hammond v. Johnston, 142 U. S. 73, 35 L. ed. 941, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Crowell v. Randell, 10 Pet. 368, 9 L. ed. 458; M'Kinney v. Carroll, 12 Pet. 66, 9 L. ed. 1002; Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 12 L. ed. 169; Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 133, 29 L. ed. 118, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811.

The alleged Federal question not having been called to the attention of the trial court or the appellate court until after final judgment was rendered in the latter court, this court has no jurisdiction over this controversy.

Hulbert v. Chicago, 202 U. S. 275, 50 L. ed. 1026, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Lawler v. Walker, 14 How. 149, 14 L. ed. 364; Chapin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 163, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Southern P. Co. 137 U. S. 48, 34 L. ed. 614, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Endowment Benev. Asso. v. Kansas, 120 U. S. 103, 30 L. ed. 593, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Weber v. Rogan, 188 U. S. 10, 47 L. ed. 363, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Pim v. St. Louis, 165 U. S. 273, 41 L. ed. 714, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire, 196 U. S. 128, 49 L. ed. 413, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v.

Ferris, 179 U. S. 602, 45 L. ed. 337, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Allen v. Southern P. R. Co. 173 U. S. 479, 43 L. ed. 775, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Hammond v. Johnston, supra; Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480, 23 L. ed. 478; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Simmerman v. Nebraska, 116 U. S. 54, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; Coons v. Gallaher, 15 Pet. 18, 10 L. ed. 645; Occan Ins. Co. v. Polleys, 13 Pet. 157, 10 L. ed. 105; Mills v. Brown, 16 Pet. 525, 10 L. ed. 1055; Moore v. Mississippi, 21 Wall. 638, 22 L. ed. 653; Poydras de la Lande v. Louisiana, 18 How. 192, 15 L. ed. 350.

The action taken and proceedings had in the state courts constituted due process of law.

Remington Paper Co. v. Watson, 173 U. S. 443, 43 L. ed. 762, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana and St. Louis, G. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Missouri, supra; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; New Orleans Debenture Redemption Co. v. Louisiana, 180 U. S. 320, 45 L. ed. 550, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. supra; Rothschild v. Knight, 184 U. S. 334, 46 L. ed. 573, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; Simon v. Craft, supra; Consolidated Rendering Co. v. Vermont, 207 U. S. 541, 52 L. ed. 327, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Cosmopolitan Club v. Virginia, 208 U. S. 378, 52 L. ed. 536, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394.

The act of April 11, 1907, is not repugnant to any provision of the Constitution of the United States, in that it undertakes to create a lien in favor of the state upon property of corporations that violate the anti-trust laws of Texas by acts committed prior to the passage thereof.

Bangor v. Goding, 35 Me. 73, 56 Am. Dec. 688; Bolton v. Johns, 5 Pa. 145, 47 Am. Dec. 404; Gordon v. South Fork Canal Co. 1 McAll. 513, Fed. Cas. No. 5,621; O'Neil v. St. Olaf's School, 26 Minn. 329, 4 N. W. 47; Colpetzer v. Trinity Church, 24 Neb. 113, 37 N. W. 931; Kellogg v. Howes, 81 Cal. 170, 6 L.R.A. 588, 22 Pac. 509; Davies Henderson Lumber Co. v. Gottschalk, 81 Cal. 641, 22 Pac. 860; Gurney v. Walsham, 16 R. I. 698, 19 Atl. 323; Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 546, 552, 8 L. ed. 779, 781; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 207, 26 L. ed. 133.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was argued and submitted with Waters-Pierce Oil Company, plaintiff in error, against the state of Texas, just decided, No. 359. [212 U. S. 86, ante, 417, 29 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 220.] It is brought here to review the action of the court of civil appeals of Texas, affirming an order of the district court of Travis county, appointing a receiver to take charge of the property and business of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company. In view of the statement made in No. 359 it is unnecessary to repeat the facts leading up to the judgment in this case. On the same day that the judgment was rendered in the former case the state of Texas, acting through its attorney general and the county attorney of Travis county, filed in the district court of Travis county an application for the appointment *of a receiver, reciting the judgment rendered in the earlier case, averring that a suit was pending in Missouri for the forfeiture of the charter of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company; that a master had been appointed in that case by the supreme court of the state wherein the action was pending; that he had reported in favor of dissolving the corporation, which recommendation had the force and effect of a judgment forfeiting the charter of said company, and it was alleged that the penalties recovered in that case could not be collected outside of the state of Texas; that the property of the defendant within the state of Texas was inadequate to pay the judgment; that the great bulk of the property situated in the state, subject to the payment of the judgment, consisted of accounts, cars, money on hand, and other property, easily movable, and that, if the same was carried beyond the limits of the state, the judgment could not be collected. It was averred that, under and by virtue of an act of the state of Texas, passed April 11, 1907, the state has a lien upon all said property to secure the payment of the above-mentioned judgment.

A receiver was asked for to take charge of the property and assets of every kind belonging to the defendant and situated in the state of Texas. And the state also asked for a writ of injunction, prohibiting the removal from the state of Texas of any of the property of the defendant. On the same day the court granted the temporary injunction as prayed for, and set the application for a receiver for hearing on June 8, 1907.

On the 7th of June, the defendant's motion for a new trial in the principal case having been overruled, the defendant gave notice of appeal to the court of civil appeals of Texas, and tendered a supersedeas bond in the sum of $3,275,000, which bond was not accepted. On June 10, 1907, the court reached the conclusion that a receiver should be appointed, and continued the temporary injunction in force, from which action the defendant gave notice of its intention to appeal to the civil court of appeals. At the time of the making of this order the judge of the court announced his determination to appoint *Robert J. Eckhardt receiver, and postponed the hearing until June 13, 1907, to hear objections to the appointment, and on that date the court made its order appointing Eckhardt receiver fixing the bond in the sum of $250,000. On June 19, 1907, Eckhardt filed his bond, which was approved, and he qualified as receiver, and, after the appointment of a receiver and the approval of his bond, as aforesaid, a supersedeas bond in the sum of $100,000, for appeal from the order appointing a receiver, was approved. On June 15, 1907, the motion for new trial being overruled in the main case, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company appealed and gave a bond, which was approved by the clerk.

On the appeal of the present case, involving the receivership, to the civil court of appeals of Texas, an application was made for an injunction restraining a receiver who had been appointed by the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Texas, upon which application the court declined to make any order interfering with the Federal receiver, but ordered its receiver to appear in conjunction with the attorneys of the state of Texas in the circuit court of the United States, and there urge and insist upon the right of the state courts to prior jurisdiction. 103 S. W. 836.

The right to the Federal receivership is involved in No. 224 of this term [212 U. S. 118, post, 435, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 230], heretofore argued and submitted to this court.

On October 23, 1907, the appeal of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company from the order appointing a receiver came on for hearing in the court of civil appeals. The judgment of the district court was affirmed. 105 S. W. 851. Subsequently the supreme court of Texas refused a writ of error to that judgment. The present proceeding in this court seeks a reversal of the judgment of the court of civil appeals of Texas, affirming the order in the district court, appointing the receiver.

It is well settled in this court that a review of the judgment of a state court is confined to the assignments of error made and passed upon in the judgment of the state court brought here for review. The assignment of errors in this court cannot bring into *the record any new matter[116 for our consideration. Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176.

Looking to the assignments of error in the court of civil appeals, we find that the first one to mention the Federal Constitution is No. 9, in which the constitutionality of the act of the state of Texas, approved April 11, 1907, is challenged, and that act is alleged to be void because in violation of § 10 of article 2 of the Constitution of the United States, which denies to any state the right to pass ex post facto laws.

The tenth assignment assails the same act, because in violation of § 1 of the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution. Assignment 12 is likewise based upon objections to the act of April 11, 1907. The amended assignments of error contain additional assignments; numbers 15 and 16, likewise, are also leveled at the act of April 11, 1907.

The act of April 11, 1907, undertakes, in § 1 thereof, to give a lien upon the property of any corporation within the state, or on any corporation created by the laws of the state, or any foreign corporation authorized to do business within the state, which shall violate the anti-trust laws of the state, for fines and penalties, with costs of suit recovered in such cases, and gives the like lien for the recovery of such fines and penalties where any such law had been theretofore violated, or should be violated before the taking effect of the act, and provides for the appointment of a receiver in such cases.

When we examine the opinion of the court of civil appeals we find that it sustained the proceeding for the appointment of a receiver, not only under the act of April 11, 1907, but, as well, by virtue of subdivision 3 of article 1465 of Sayles's Civil Statutes for Texas, passed originally in 1887, which subdivision provides that a receiver may be appointed where a corporation has been dissolved, or is insolvent, or in imminent danger of insolvency, or has forfeited its corporate rights.

It is well settled in this court that where a state court decides a case upon an independent ground not within the Federal objections taken, and that ground is sufficient [117] to maintain the *judgment, this court will not review the case. Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 48 L. ed. 655, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359.

The only other assignments of error which mention the Federal Constitution are numbers 13 and 14, which are as follows:

"13. The court erred in appointing the said receiver without any evidence being introduced before it, at the time said appointment was made, to show that defendant did not intend to change its status and methods of doing business so as to conform to the laws of the state of Texas, and without evidence affirmatively showing that defendant could not make use of its property and carry on its business in accordance with law, and in holding that the court was authorized to so appoint a receiver for defendant's property in the state of Texas, and deprive defendant of the instrumentalities by which it had been convicted of violating the laws of said state, based upon its past conduct and the said judgment of conviction rendered against it on June 1, 1907.

"Wherefore, defendant says that the said action of the court was unauthorized and in violation of § 1 of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and has the effect of depriving defendant of its property without due process of law and in denying to it the equal protection of the laws.

"14. The court erred in disregarding the supersedeas bond filed by the defendant in connection with its appeal from the main judgment recovered against it on June 1, 1907, and in requiring defendant to file the additional bond in the sum of $100,000 to supersede the order appointing the said receiver and to avoid having to surrender its property to said receiver by reason of said appointment, and this action on the part of the court was without lawful warrant and in violation of § 1 of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in that the effect of such action by the court was to deprive the defendant of its property without due *process of law and to deny to it the [118 equal protection of the law."

We are of opinion that neither of these assignments presents substantial questions of a Federal character. The practice of the state courts in acting upon matters within their jurisdiction is left for the states and their courts administering their laws to determine, and, if the court saw fit to act upon the testimony already heard and the conviction already had of the violation of the anti-trust laws of the state, there is nothing in the Federal Constitution which prevents it from so doing. Nor does the time or manner in which the state court saw fit to approve the receiver's bond present any question under the 14th Amendment. See the cases cited in No. 359, 212 U. S. 86, ante, 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220. The attempt to assign new errors in the petition for rehearing, which was overruled without an opinion passing on Federal questions, cannot avail. McCorquodale v. Texas [211 U. S. 432, ante, 269, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 146], decided at this term of this court, and previous cases therein cited. We are therefore of the opinion that no substantial Federal question is presented in this case, and the writ of error must be dismissed.

The writ of error is dismissed.

BRADLEY W. PALMER and H. Clay Pierce, Petitioners,
v.

STATE OF TEXAS and Robert J. Eckhardt, Receiver of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 118-132.)

Courts — conflict of jurisdiction — custody of the res.

1. Jurisdiction of a state court of the property of a foreign corporation attaches so as to prevent interference on the part of a Federal court when a receiver of the property of such corporation has been appointed, the judicial process served, and the receiver duly qualified, although such receiver has not taken actual possession of the property. [For other cases, see Courts, VI. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — conflict of jurisdiction — custody of the res.

2. The jurisdiction of a state court over the res, acquired by the appointment and qualification of a receiver of the property of a foreign corporation, is not lost, so as to permit interference on the part of a Federal court, because of an appeal with supersedeas from the order appointing the receiver, where the state courts hold that the effect of the appeal and supersedeas bond is merely to suspend the order appointing the receiver pending the determination of the appeal.

[For other cases, see Courts, VI. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — conflict of jurisdiction — re-ceivership.

3. The possible danger of prosecutions and interference pending an appeal with supersedeas from an order of a state court appointing a receiver of the property of a foreign corporation whose permit to do business in the state has been forfeited for violating the state anti-trust laws will not justify a Federal court in interfering with the state court's custody of the res, acquired by the appointment and qualification of the receiver.

[For other cases, see Courts, VI. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Receivers — for foreign corporation — interference with interstate business.

4. The appointment by a state court of a receiver of the property of a foreign corporation whose permit to do business in the state has been adjudged forfeited for violation of the state anti-trust laws is not invalid because the judgment of forfeiture expressly permits the corporation to continue its interstate business, where the state court rested its order appointing the receiver not solely upon Texas act of April 11, 1907, making special provisions for carrying out judgments under the anti-trust laws, but also upon a statute in force before the permit to do business within the state was granted, empowering the courts to appoint a receiver of the property of a corporation which is insolvent or has forfeited its corporate rights.

[Appointment of receiver for corporation, see Receivers, 9-14, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Receivers — costs — who liable.

5. Costs of the receivership should not be assessed against the complainant on reversing the order appointing the receiver, where the receivership has gone on pending the appeal, but such costs should be paid out of the fund realized in court.

[For other cases, see Costs, I. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 224.]

Argued April 8, 9, 1908. Decided January 18, 1909.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which reversed an order of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Texas, appointing a receiver of the property of a foreign corporation, and remanded the cause with directions to discharge the receiver and to tax the costs of the receivership against the complainant. Modified by directing the costs to be paid out of the fund realized in court, and, as modified, affirmed.

See same case below, 85 C. C. A. 603, 158 Fed. 705.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Moorfield Storey argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. L. Thorndike, filed a brief for petitioners:

The United States court of appeals was wrong in treating the property as in any way affected by the order appointing Eckhardt receiver, while that order was suspended by the appeal.

Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 169, 39 L. ed. 660, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; People's Cemetery Asso. v. Oakland Cemetery Co. 24 Tex. Civ. App. 668, 60 S. W. 679; Tornanses v. Melsing, 45 C. C. A. 615, 106 Fed. 788; Arnold v. Sabin, 4 Cush. 46.

A supersedeas "stops all sorts of proceedings."

Smith v. Nicholson, 2 Strange, 1186; Sampson v. Brown, 2 East, 439.

Possession of the officer of one court, whether he be a receiver, sheriff, marshal, or sequestrator, is the ground upon which the authority of other courts or any of their officers to meddle with possession of the same property has been excluded. There is no magic about a receiver, and the same

NOTE. — As to the time from which an order appointing a receiver becomes operative—see note to Squire v. Princeton Lighting Co. 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 657.

As to jurisdiction as affected by possession of the subject-matter—see notes to Adams v. Mercantile Trust Co. 15 C. C. A. 6; Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 356; and Tefft v. Sternberg, 5 L.R.A. 223.

On the exclusiveness of jurisdiction acquired by appointment of receiver—see note to Re Schuyler's Steam Tow-Boat Co. 20 L.R.A. 391.

rule is applied to him as to a sheriff or a marshal, and for the same reasons. This appears by all the cases.

Hagan v. Lucas, 10 Pet. 400, 9 L. ed. 470 (sheriff); Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 15 L. ed. 1028 (sheriff); Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749 (marshal); Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 28 L. ed. 390, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355 (marshal); Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 39 L. ed. 660, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570 (receiver); Payne v. Drewe, 4 East, 545 (sequestrator).

The court of appeals was wrong in directing that the costs of the receivership be taxed against the complainant.

Atlantic Trust Co. v. Chapman, 208 U. S. 360, 52 L. ed. 528, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406.

Mr. E. B. Perkins also argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. D. Johnson, filed a brief for petitioners:

The property was not in the possession, actual or constructive, of the receiver.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State (Tex.) 106 S. W. 326.

It was manifest error for the United States circuit court of appeals to hold that the property of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company ever passed to the receiver appointed by the state court, or remained within the jurisdiction and control of that court after the supersedeas bonds were given.

People's Cemetery Asso. v. Oakland Cemetery Co. 24 Tex. Civ. App. 668, 60 S. W. 679; Gruner v. Westin, 66 Tex. 214, 18 S. W. 512; Smithwick v. Kelly, 79 Tex. 576, 15 S. W. 486.

Where a court appoints a receiver in aid of the enforcement of a judgment, and an appeal is taken and supersedeas bond given before the receiver takes possession of the property, thereby permitting the defendant to continue in the possession of the property, the possession of such defendant is not substituted for the custody of the receiver.

Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 39 L. ed. 660, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.

The decisions of this court in discussing the amount of supersedeas appeal bonds show conclusively that an appeal bond is not taken in lieu of the property in controversy.

Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 6 Wall. 153, 18 L. ed. 762; Omaha Hotel Co. v. Kountze, 107 U. S. 378, 27 L. ed. 609, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 911.

The original bill of complaint showed a statement of facts which called for the appointment of a receiver for the purpose of promoting the ends of justice and protecting the rights of all the parties interested in the subject-matter, and showed that there was no other adequate remedy for the accomplishment of the desired objects of the proceedings.

Boatmen's Bank v. Fritzlen, 68 C. C. A. 288, 135 Fed. 666.

Messrs. T. W. Gregory, G. W. Allen, and Robert Vance Davidson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Jewel P. Lightfoot, John W. Brady, Gregory & Batts, Allen & Hart, and D. W. & D. H. Doom, filed a brief for respondents:

The state court acquired jurisdiction over the property in question before the complaint was filed in the Federal court.

Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 177 U. S. 51, 44 L. ed. 667, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Chittenden v. Brewster, 2 Wall. 191, 17 L. ed. 839; Gaylord v. Ft. Wayne, M. & C. R. Co. 6 Biss. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 5,284; Union Trust Co. v. Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co. 6 Biss. 198, Fed. Cas. No. 14,401; Illinois Steel Co. v. Putnam, 15 C. C. A. 556, 30 U. S. App. 358, 68 Fed. 515; Adams v. Mercantile Trust Co. 15 C. C. A. 1, 30 U. S. App. 204, 66 Fed. 617; Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572, 13 Sawy. 387, 36 Fed. 355; Riesner v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. 89 Tex. 656, 33 L.R.A. 171, 59 Am. St. Rep. 84, 36 S. W. 53; Texas Trunk R. Co. v. Lewis, 81 Tex. 1, 26 Am. St. Rep. 776; 16 S. W. 647; May v. Printup, 59 Ga. 128; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 103 S. W. 836.

The jurisdiction of the state courts having attached, it became exclusive; and their right to prosecute the suit to final determination and exhaust their jurisdiction could not be arrested, defeated, impaired, or interfered with by a Federal tribunal.

Wabash R. Co. v. Adelbert College, 208 U. S. 38, 52 L. ed. 379, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 183; Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 28 L. ed. 390, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Hagan v. Lucas, 10 Pet. 400, 9 L. ed. 470; Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. 370, 21 L. ed. 290; Heidritter v. Elizabeth Oil-Cloth Co. 112 U. S. 294, 28 L. ed. 729, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 135; People's Bank v. Calhoun (People's Bank v. Winslow) 102 U. S. 256, 26 L. ed. 101; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 15 L. ed. 1028; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. ed. 257; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 177 U. S. 51, 44 L. ed. 671, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572, 13 Sawy. 387, 36 Fed. 355; Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. v. Phelps, 190 U. S. 147, 47 L. ed. 987, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; Riesner v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. 89 Tex. 660, 33 L.R.A. 171, 59 Am. St. Rep. 84, 36 S. W. 53; Union Trust Co. v. Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co. 6 Biss. 197, Fed. Cas. No. 14,401; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, supra; Wait, Insolvent Corp. § 261; High, Receivers, 212 U. S.

§ 52; State ex rel. Sullivan v. Reynolds, 209 Mo. 161, 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 963, 123 Am. St. Rep. 468, 107 S. W. 487.

The giving of the supersedeas bond appealing from the order of the state court appointing its receiver still left the property in the custody of the state courts, though the right of the receiver to the possession thereof was suspended, and the right of the oil company to such possession was, for the time being, restored.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, supra; San Antonio Street R. Co. v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 38 S. W. 54; Hagan v. Lucas, 10 Pet. 400, 9 L. ed. 470; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ft. Worth & N. O. R. Co. 68 Tex. 103, 2 S. W. 199, 3 S. W. 564; Churchill v. Martin, 65 Tex. 368; Wells v. Littlefield, 62 Tex. 30; Deming v. New York Marble Co. 12 Abb. Pr. 66; Fowler v. Stonum, 6 Tex. 72; O'Brien v. Hilburn, 22 Tex. 622; Fleming v. Clark, 22 Mo. App. 222; Caldwell v. Gans, 1 Mont. 578; Coos Bay R. Co. v. Wieder, 26 Or. 457, 38 Pac. 338; Selleck v. Phelps, 11 Wis. 388; Pipher v. Fordyce, 88 Ind. 437; Bain v. Lyle, 68 Pa. 66; Slutter v. Kirkendall, 100 Pa. 313.

The decision of the court of civil appeals of the third supreme judicial district of the state of Texas, holding that the giving of the supersedeas bond appealing from the order of the state court appointing its receiver left the property in the custody of the state court, is binding on the Federal court.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, supra; Wade v. Travis County, 174 U. S. 499, 43 L. ed. 1060, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; United States v. Morrison, 4 Pet. 124, 7 L. ed. 804; Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 291, 8 L. ed. 402; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 25 L. ed. 544; Andrews v. National Foundry & Pipe Works, 36 L.R.A. 150, 22 C. C. A. 110, 46 U. S. App. 281, 76 Fed. 166; Sandford v. Poe, 60 L.R.A. 641, 16 C. C. A. 305, 37 U. S. App. 378, 69 Fed. 546; Bauserman v. Blunt, 147 U. S. 647, 37 L. ed. 316, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; Moore v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 104 U. S. 625, 26 L. ed. 870; Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S. 293, 35 L. ed. 1018, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Suydam v. Williamson, 24 How. 427, 16 L. ed. 742; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State (Tex.) 106 S. W. 326.

The complainant in the bill filed in the Federal court could have secured from the state courts which had acquired jurisdiction over the property all the relief he was entitled to, or that could have legally been granted by the Federal court, and he should have resorted to those tribunals.

Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Texas C. R. Co. 137 U. S. 171, 34 L. ed. 625, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 61; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 53 L. ed.

v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. and Wabash R. Co. v. Adelbert College, supra; East Line & R. River R. Co. v. State, 75 Tex. 451, 12 S. W. 690.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case grows out of the proceedings in the state of Texas to forfeit the permit of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company to do business in that state, and the subsequent proceedings for the appointment of a receiver of the property of the company in the state court, just decided, cases Nos. 359 and 360, 212 U. S. 86, 112, ante, 417, 431, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220, 227. It is unnecessary, in view of the recital of the facts contained in those cases, to repeat herein what is there said in this connection.

On the 19th day of June, 1907, after the appointment of a receiver in the state case and the acceptance and approval of his bond, an appeal was taken from the district court of Travis county to the court of civil appeals of Texas, and bond given to supersede the receivership. Immediately thereafter, and upon the same day, a bill was filed by Bradley W. Palmer, one of the petitioners herein, against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Texas, praying for the appointment of a receiver for the Waters-Pierce Company. Palmer filed the bill as a stockholder in the company. The bill is quite lengthy and recited the proceedings in the district court of Travis county, Texas, stated in cases Nos. 359 and 360, 212 U. S. 86, 112, ante, 417, 431, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220, 227, recites the appeal from the order appointing a receiver, to the court of civil appeals, also the appeal from the judgment terminating the right to do business in Texas, and for the recovery of penalties.

The prayer of the bill is for the appointment of a receiver to take possession of the property belonging to the company in Texas, that the business of the company might be wound up, *and its property [124 sold, that the receiver be authorized to operate and manage the property, etc.

On the same day the Waters-Pierce Oil Company waived the service of subpoena, confessed the averments of the bill, and the circuit court appointed Chester B. Dorchester receiver.

On the same day H. C. Pierce intervened, and, repeating the allegations of the original bill, prayed the same relief. On June 20, 1907, Dorchester qualified and gave bond as receiver, and was put in possession of the property.

The cases involved in Nos. 359 and 360, 212 U. S. 86, 112, ante, 417, 431, 29 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 220, 227, having been appealed to the court of civil appeals, Robert J. Eckhardt, the state receiver appointed in the district court of Travis county, applied in the court of civil appeals for an order to obtain possession of the property which had been placed in the hands of the Federal receiver.

The court of civil appeals on June 28, 1907, handed down an opinion (103 S. W. 836) in which it declined to make an order directing the receiver in the Federal court to surrender possession, but did direct its receiver, in conjunction with the law officers of the state of Texas, to appear before the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Texas, and to there urge the rights of the state and the prior jurisdiction of its courts over the property in question, and to ask for such orders, decrees, and judgments as might be proper and necessary to protect that jurisdiction.

Thereafter, on July 1, 1907, the state of Texas, through its officers and Eckhardt as receiver, applied to the circuit court of the United States, and prayed it to set aside and annul its order appointing a Federal receiver. On July 15 the circuit court refused to grant the prayer of the state of Texas and the state receiver. The state of Texas and Eckhardt as receiver took an appeal from the order of June 19, 1907, appointing the Federal receiver, and from the order of July 15, 1907, refusing to vacate the order appointing Dorchester receiver. Thereupon the matter came on for hearing in the circuit court of appeals, and that court, holding that the state court had first [125] acquired jurisdiction in the matter, reversed and vacated the order of the circuit court appointing a receiver, and remanded the case to the circuit court, with directions to discharge the receiver, and to tax all the costs of the receivership against the complainant. 158 Fed. 705.

If the state court had acquired jurisdiction over the property by the proceedings for the appointment of its receiver, and had not lost the same by the subsequent proceedings, then, upon well-settled principles, often recognized and enforced in this court, there should be no interference with the action of the state courts while thus exercising its authorized jurisdiction. The Federal and state courts exercise jurisdiction within the same territory, derived from and controlled by separate and distinct authority, and are therefore required, upon every principle of justice and propriety, to respect the jurisdiction once acquired over property by a court of the other sovereignty. If a court of competent jurisdiction, Federal or state, has taken possession of property, or by its procedure has obtained jurisdiction over the same, such property is withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the courts of the other authority as effectually as if the property had been entirely removed to the territory of another sovereignty. Wabash R. Co. v. Adelbert College, 208 U. S. 38, 52 L. ed. 379, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182, and previous cases in this court, cited therein at page 54.

The circuit court of the United States, in the appointment of a receiver in this case, seems to have proceeded upon the theory that the proceedings in the state court had left the property in such a situation that it was no longer in custodia legis, and was liable to seizure by adverse proceedings.

This situation had arisen, in the view of the circuit court, because the Waters-Pierce Oil Company had given a bond securing the amount of penalties awarded against it by the judgment, and had also given a bond in the sum of $100,000 in order to suspend the powers of the receiver to act pending the appeal; and, in the view of the learned circuit judge, the court of last resort of the state of Texas had established the rule that *an appeal from such order, and the [126] giving of the security required by the court, had the effect of returning the property to the owner, and to make the order appointing the receiver inoperative. "It appears to me," says the learned judge, "that they [the Texas cases] announce the doctrine that the powers of the receiver cease, and that the adverse party takes the security which the law furnishes, and the defendant takes his property, with the right to use, control, and dispose of the same." 158 Fed. 717.

The circuit court of appeals in this case, after reviewing the Texas cases, reached a different conclusion, and held that the rulings of the supreme court of Texas showed that the appeal and the giving of the bond had only the effect of suspending the order appointing the receiver, and that the court had not lost jurisdiction over the property by the bond given to supersede the order made.

If the courts of Texas had acquired jurisdiction over this property, and the subsequent procedure amounted to simply suspending the order appointing the receiver, then we are of opinion that the Federal court had no right to intervene. If it is established that the state court had acquired jurisdiction over this property before the application in the Federal court was made, the court of the state had the right to determine for itself, while continuing to lawfully exercise its prior jurisdiction, how far it would permit any other court to interfere with such possession and jurisdiction. People's Bank v. Calhoun (People's Bank v. Winslow) 102 U. S. 258, 261, 26 L. ed. 101, 102.

As already stated, after the case reached the court of civil appeals of Texas an application was made for relief against the receiver appointed by the United States circuit court, and to obtain possession of the property. That court maintained (103 S. W. 836) that the state court had acquired jurisdiction over the property; that the effect of the appeal was simply to suspend the order appointing the receiver; and that the appellate court still had jurisdiction over the res the same as the trial court had; 127] and the court cited the decisions *of the supreme court of Texas which seem to support that view.

The court of civil appeals subsequently affirmed the order appointing the receiver, holding that the proceeding was authorized under the act of April 11, 1907, and the general statutes of Texas, authorizing the appointment of a receiver where a corporation had forfeited its corporate rights. Sayles's Civ. Stat. (Tex.) art. 1465.

Upon application to the supreme court of Texas that court refused to allow a petition in error to be filed, and the case was brought here, being No. 360, 212 U. S. 112, ante, 431, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227, just disposed of, in which we held no Federal question was raised.

The case also came before the supreme court of Texas, and is reported in 106 S. W. 326. In that case application was made by the attorney general in the supreme court of the state for the appointment of a receiver, and the court, in deciding the motion, stated its reason for recalling the mandate issued by the court of civil appeals upon the motion of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, and also passed upon the application of the attorney general of the state of Texas for an order revoking the order recalling the mandate of the court of civil appeals, or a direction of the supreme court that the state receiver take actual and physical possession of the property and conduct the same under the order of the supreme court until the final disposition of the case.

The grounds stated for the former order, recalling the mandate of the court of civil appeals, were that, as the appellant, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, had the right to present an application for a writ of error to the supreme court, the clerk of the court of civil appeals had no authority to issue the mandate on the judgment of that court until the time had expired for an application for writ of error to the supreme court, and the mandate was therefore withdrawn to await the action of the supreme court upon the application for writ of error. As before stated, that application for writ of error has since been *denied. In stating its[128 decision on the motion to withdraw the mandate, the supreme court of Texas said:

"That decision in no wise interferes with any authority that the district court or the receiver could lawfully exercise over the property of the oil company during the pendency of that appeal."

In considering the effect of the appeal, the supreme court of Texas cited the previous cases in Texas, and used the following language (106 S. W. 330):

"This court has no power to direct or authorize Eckhardt to take charge of the property of the defendant company, when the statute expressly provides that the giving of the appeal bond shall suspend the action of the court in that regard. If the appeal did not have the effect to suspend the execution of the order, the judge had authority to limit the appointment, as he did by his order, in which it is thus expressed: 'And now, on this, the 15th day of June, 1907, in open court, it is ordered by the court in the above cause that $100,000 be and the same is hereby fixed as the amount of bond which the defendant shall be required to give in order to supersede the judgment of the court, placing defendant's property in the hands of a receiver; and it is further ordered that, upon the approval of the court and the filing with the clerk by defendant of a good and sufficient bond, conditioned as required by law for said amount, further proceedings herein be suspended pending appeal. But this order shall not affect or rescind the order heretofore entered prohibiting and enjoining the defendant, its servants, officers, agents, and attorneys, from removing any of its property or assets beyond the limits of the state of Texas; but said injunction shall remain in full force and effect pending the appeal from the order appointing a receiver herein.' We do not, however, intimate a doubt upon the proposition which we have asserted, that the appeal, by the filing of the bonds by the defendant in that court, suspended the operation of the order appointing the receiver until the final decision of the case."

The supreme court of Texas has therefore decided in this case, *as we think it[129 had held in its former decisions, cited in the opinion of Judge Shelby, speaking for the court of appeals in this case, that the effect of the appeal and bond was merely to suspend the order appointing the receiver pending the determination of the appeal.

In this attitude of affairs, had the circuit court of the United States authority to take possession of the property under the bill filed in that court for the appointment of a receiver?

We think the law of this court is well established to be that jurisdiction over the property was acquired by the state courts when the receiver was appointed, the judicial process served, and the receiver duly qualified, although the state receiver had not taken actual possession of the property. This principle was recognized in Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 177 U. S. 59, 44 L. ed. 670, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564, in which this court said:

"The possession of the res vests the court which has first acquired jurisdiction with the power to hear and determine all controversies relating thereto, and, for the time being, disables other courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction from exercising like power. This rule is essential to the orderly administration of justice, and to prevent unseemly conflicts between courts whose jurisdiction embraces the same subjects and persons. Nor is this rule restricted in its application to cases where property has been actually seized under judicial process before a second suit is instituted in another court, but it often applies as well where suits are brought to enforce liens against specific property, to marshal assets, administer trusts, or liquidate insolvent estates, and in suits of a similar nature where, in the progress of the litigation, the court may be compelled to assume the possession and control of the property to be affected. The rule has been declared to be of especial importance in its application to Federal and state courts. Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. ed. 841; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 38 L. ed. 981, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 43 L. ed. 399, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119."

If this rule is not applied, a court of competent jurisdiction, "which, by the law of its own procedure, has acquired jurisdiction of property, may find itself, as in this case, after final judgment, maintaining its right over the property, at the conclusion of the litigation deprived of the subject-matter of the suit. Indeed, this case would be an apt illustration of that situation. The courts of Texas have sustained the right to the receivership, and have held it was only suspended pending the appeal; but, when it comes to enforcing the right to administer the property, if the Federal receivership is maintained, the court of original jurisdiction finds itself stripped of the property, and the same being administered in another court which acquired its dominion over the property after it had become subject to the state jurisdiction.

It is further contended that this case is controlled by the principles laid down in Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 39 L. ed. 660, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570. But in that case, before there was an attempt to appoint a receiver and take possession of the property by the second proceedings, the first receiver had been discharged and the property restored to the owner, who had given a bond for the forthcoming of the property to answer the judgment. In this case the receivership had merely been suspended when the application was made to the Federal court, and the receiver's bond was conditioned to account for the rental value of the property pending the appeal.

A special ground for the appointment of a receiver by the Federal court is said to exist in the danger that the Waters-Pierce Oil Company might be made the subject of prosecutions and its officers interfered with or intimidated pending the appeal, and while the receivership was in abeyance because of the appeal from the order appointing him. When a similar contention was made in the supreme court of Texas in support of the application of the state for the appointment of a receiver in that court, the supreme court of Texas said:

"If, in the use of its property, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company should violate the laws of the state during the pendency of its appeal, it would be liable to prosecution and punishment in the same manner as for acts done before the trial of this case; and if *the safety of the persons in charge of [131 the property is endangered in any manner the courts are open to them to seek their protection where the jurisdiction has been lodged by the Constitution of this state for such purposes. The trial court has no less power now to prevent a violation of the laws of this state by the conducting of the business of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company than it had before the trial." 106 S. W. 331.

It is submitted by the counsel for the petitioners that the effect of the appointment of the receiver in the state court was to violate the right of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company to carry on its business of an interstate character. It is true that the original proceedings which resulted in forfeiting the permit of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company to do business in the state of Texas resulted in a judgment forfeiting the permission theretofore given by the state, except the interstate business of the company.

If the proceedings for the appointment of a receiver had been sustained as merely in aid of the original judgment, and for the purpose of carrying that into effect, there would have been cogency in this argument. It is to be remembered that the state courts of Texas have sustained the proceedings for the appointment of a receiver (No 360, 212 U. S. 112, ante, 431, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227) not only under the act of April 11, 1907, which makes special provision for carrying out judgments under the anti-trust laws of the state and for the appointment of a receiver in such cases, but have maintained as well the right of the courts of Texas to appoint the receiver under the general statutes of the state of Texas (Sayles's Civ. Stat. art. 1465, § 3), giving authority to apply in any court of competent jurisdiction in certain cases, among others, where a corporation has been dissolved, or is insolvent, or is in imminent danger of insolvency, or has forfeited its corporate rights.

The Texas courts have the right to construe their own statutes, and their judgment in such matters is conclusive upon the Federal courts. We have, therefore, a case where the appointment of a receiver has been sustained by the highest court of the state under a general statute giving the [132] right to appoint receivers *in such cases and to take possession of the property of the corporation in the state.

This statute was admittedly in force before the permit of the Waters-Pierce Company to do business within the state of Texas was granted. Under this statute, no less than the special act of April 11, 1907, the courts of the state have held that the receivership can be maintained under the procedure had in this case, and that the appeal merely suspended the receivership. In that view there is no unlawful interference with the rights of the company to transact interstate commerce business.

Upon the whole case, we are of opinion that the courts of Texas had not lost the jurisdiction which they had acquired by the appointment of the receiver, and that the Federal court ought not to have appointed a receiver to take possession of the property. We think the circuit court of appeals was right in reversing the order of the circuit court appointing the receiver. In that court the costs of the receivership were assessed against Palmer, the original complainant. The receivership has gone on pending the proceedings upon appeal, and we are of opinion that justice will be done if the costs of the receivership are paid out of the fund realized in the Federal court, and it is so ordered; otherwise the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CENTRAL STOCK YARDS COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 132-152.)

Judgment—conclusiveness as between state and Federal courts.

1. A state court cannot, by its decree, compel one of two connecting carriers which maintain live-stock depots at or near Louisville, Kentucky, as points of delivery for stock having that city as their general destination, to transfer and deliver at the point of physical intersection "any and all live stock or other freight coming over its lines in Kentucky," consigned to the other's depot or persons doing business there, and to change the destination to such depot upon request at any of its stations, and particularly at its "break-up yards" in South Louisville, where a Federal court has previously dismissed the bill in a similar suit between the same parties, dealing only with interstate shipments.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 1072-1078, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law—due process of law—compelling interchange of railway cars.

2. Requiring a railway company to deliver its own cars to another railway company when performing its duty under Ky. Const. § 213, to receive, deliver, and transport freight from and to any point where there is a physical connection between its tracks and those of any other railway company deprives the former company of its property without due process of law, because such provision, which alone is relied upon by the courts as authorizing such requirement, contains no adequate protection for the carrier from loss or undue detention of its cars, and for securing due compensation for their use.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 458-466, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law—due process of law—compelling carrier to share terminal facilities with rival.

3. The property of a railway company is taken without due process of law by Ky. Const. § 213, under which, as construed by the state courts, such company may be compelled, upon payment simply for the service of carriage, to accept cars offered to it at an arbitrary connecting point near its terminus, by a competing road, for the purpose of reaching and using the former's terminal facilities.

NOTE.—As to conclusiveness and effect of judgments as between Federal and state courts—see notes to Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Morgan, 21 C. C. A. 478, and Union & P. Bank v. Memphis, 49 C. C. A. 468.

On the duties and liabilities of carriers as to furnishing facilities for transportation—see note to Harp v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. 61 C. C. A. 414.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 458-466, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 51.]

Argued December 10, 11, 1908. Decided January 25, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Jefferson Circuit Court, in that state, compelling a carrier to interchange cars and share its terminal facilities with a rival carrier. Reversed.

See same case below, 30 Ky. L. Rep. 18, 97 S. W. 778.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Helm Bruce argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry L. Stone, James P. Helm, and Kennedy Helm, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The judgment of the Federal court in the case of Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339, is conclusive between those same parties in this action, so far as interstate shipments of stock are concerned.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 42 L. ed. 202, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 353, 24 L. ed. 198; Smith v. Auld, 31 Kan. 262, 1 Pac. 625.

The compulsory surrender of cars takes property without due process of law.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; McGehee, Due Process of Law, p. 291; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 41 L. ed. 489, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 240, 41 L. ed. 979, 986, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; State v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 36 Minn. 402, 31 N. W. 365.

What carriers may choose voluntarily to do furnishes no criterion for the measurement of the power of the legislature. Persons may voluntarily contract to do what no legislature would have the right to compel them to do. Nor does it furnish a standard by which to measure the reasonableness of the matter exacted by the legislature.

Taking the use of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company's terminals, and requiring it to act as a transfer company, denies due process of law.

Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 398; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Ja- cobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Martin v. District of Columbia, 205 U. S. 135, 51 L. ed. 743, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440.

Mr. Joseph C. Dodd argued the cause, and, with Mr. John L. Dodd, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The provisions of §§ 213 and 214 of the Constitution of Kentucky, and §§ 818 and 819 of the General Statutes of Kentucky, as construed and interpreted by the court of last resort of that state, do not deny to the plaintiff in error any right or privilege secured to it by the interstate commerce act or Federal Constitution.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 30 Ky. L. Rep. 39, 97 S. W. 778; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 697, 43 L. ed. 864, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 261, 46 L. ed. 1155, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Miller, 132 U. S. 75, 33 L. ed. 267, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 55, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 513, 46 L. ed. 304, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 489, 48 L. ed. 272, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Mayes, 201 U. S. 321, 50 L. ed. 772, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 137, 138, 42 L. ed. 692, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Becker, 32 Fed. 849; Iowa v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 425, 33 Fed. 395; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 299, 41 L. ed. 166, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1086; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 853, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The police power of the state cannot be bargained away or contracted against, and when, within such power, a duty of a common carrier is required by constitutional or statutory provision, the question of inconvenience or expense is immaterial.

Debates of Constitutional Convention of Ky. Vol. 4, pp. 5118-5162; Butchers' & D. Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 C. C. A. 290, 31 U. S. App. 252, 67 Fed. 36; Covington Stock Yards Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128, 35 L. ed. 73, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Com. 108 Ky. 628, 57 S. W. 508; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Pittsburg & K. Coal Co. 111 Ky. 960, 55

L.R.A. 601, 98 Am. St. Rep. 447, 64 S. W. 969; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Williams, 95 Ky. 199, 44 Am. St. Rep. 214, 24 S. W. 1; Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey, 82 Iowa, 336, 12 L.R.A. 436, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 584, 31 Am. St. Rep. 477, 48 N. W. 98; Peoria & P. Union R. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 109 Ill. 139, 50 Am. Rep. 605; Jacobson v. Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. 71 Minn. 532, 40 L.R.A. 392, 70 Am. St. Rep. 358, 74 N. W. 893; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Smithson, 45 Mich. 221, 7 N. W. 791; McCoy v. Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. 13 Fed. 3; Coe v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 3 Fed. 778; Interstate Stock-Yards Co. v. Indianapolis Union R. Co. 99 Fed. 472; Louisville, E. & St. L. Consol. R. Co. v. Wilson, 132 Ind. 517, 18 L.R.A. 105, 32 N. E. 311; Union P. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 680, 37 L. ed. 896, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 970; Inman v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 14 Tex. Civ. App. 39, 37 S. W. 37; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. ed. 291, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; State use of School Fund v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 83 Mo. 144; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Wichita Wholesale Grocery Co. 55 Kan. 525, 40 Pac. 899; 2 Elliott, Railroads, §§ 1432, 1440; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Jones, 155 U. S. 333, 39 L. ed. 176, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Dana v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 50 How. Pr. 428; Little Miami R. Co. v. Washburn, 22 Ohio St. 330; Palmer v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 56 Conn. 137, 13 Atl. 818; Bosworth v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 30 C. C. A. 541, 56 U. S. App. 274, 87 Fed. 72; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Mineral Springs Mfg. Co. 16 Wall. 318, 21 L. ed. 297; Vincent v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 49 Ill. 41; Petersen v. Case, 21 Fed. 885; North v. Merchants' & M. Transp. Co. 146 Mass. 315, 15 N. E. 779; Michigan, S. & N. I. R. Co. v. Day, 20 Ill. 375, 71 Am. Dec. 278; Beers v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 34 Fed. 244; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Odil, 96 Tenn. 61, 54 Am. St. Rep. 820, 33 S. W. 611; Season-good, S. K. Co. v. Tennessee & O. River Transp. Co. 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1144, 49 L.R.A. 270, 54 S. W. 193; McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 545, 50 L. ed. 1143, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 398.

By the opinion of the court of appeals of Kentucky there was no failure to give full faith and credit to the Federal court decree between the parties hereto, relied upon as res judicata.

Central Stock Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339, 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113; Smith v. Auld, 31 Kan. 262, 1 Pac. 626; Black, Judgm. 2d ed. § 733; 53 L. ed.

Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 25 L. ed. 544; Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 665; Nesmith v. Sheldon, 7 How. 812, 12 L. ed. 925; Walker v. State Harbor (Walker v. Marks) 17 Wall. 648, 21 L. ed. 744; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. 152, 6 L. ed. 289; Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 291, 8 L. ed. 402; Lessingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261; Sumner v. Hicks, 2 Black, 532, 17 L. ed. 355; Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. ed. 382; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663; Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 85; Suydam v. Williamson, 24 How. 427, 16 L. ed. 742; Re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449, 35 L. ed. 219, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi. 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Beauregard v. New Orleans, 18 How. 499, 15 L. ed. 470; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a proceeding in equity prosecuted in the courts of Kentucky, similar in the main to one in the United States courts between the same parties, that was decided by the circuit court of appeals in 63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113, and by this court in 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 565, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339. The latter was brought by the Central Stock Yards Company, a Delaware corporation, against the railroad company, a Kentucky corporation, to compel it to receive live stock tendered to it outside the state of Kentucky for the Central Stock Yards station, and to deliver the same at a point of physical connection between its road and the Southern Railway, for ultimate delivery to or at the Central Stock Yards. The Central Stock Yards station is at the Central Stock Yards, just outside the boundary line of Louisville, Kentucky, on the Southern Railway Company's line, and, by agreement between the two companies, the Central Stock Yards were the live-stock depot for the purpose of handling live stock to and from Louisville on the Southern Railway. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, by a similar arrangement, had made [139] the Bourbon Stock Yards its *live-stock depot for Louisville, and declined to receive live stock billed to the Central Stock Yards, or to deliver live stock destined to Louisville elsewhere than at the Bourbon Yards. There were physical connections between the Louisville & Nashville and the Southern tracks at a point between the two stock yards which was passed by the greater portion of the live stock carried by the Louisville & Nashville Company, and at another point that would be more convenient for delivery, a little further to the northward. In order to deliver as prayed the Louisville & Nashville would have been compelled either to build chutes or to hand over its cars to the Southern Railway. The right was claimed under the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887, chap. 104, § 3, 24 Stat. at L. 379, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154, and the Constitution of Kentucky, especially § 213. The circuit court of appeals and this court agreed that the right was not conferred by the former act. As to the Constitution of Kentucky, the circuit court of appeals held that if it could be given any such construction as to make it purport to give the plaintiff a right to the relief sought, it would be making a void attempt to regulate interstate commerce. This court, on the general principle that a construction was to be adopted, if possible, that would save the instrument from constitutional objections, followed the suggestion of the circuit court of appeals, read the section as not requiring the railroad to deliver its own cars, and affirmed a decree dismissing the bill.

The material sections of the Constitution of Kentucky are as follows:

"Sec. 213. All railroad, transfer, belt lines, and railway bridge companies, organized under the laws of Kentucky, or operating, maintaining, or controlling any railroad, transfer, belt lines, or bridges, or doing a railway business in this state, shall receive, transfer, deliver, and switch empty or loaded cars, and shall move, transport, receive, load, or unload all the freight in car loads or less quantities, coming to or going from any railroad, transfer, belt line, bridge, or siding thereon, with equal promptness and despatch, and without any discrimination as [140] to *charges, preference, drawback, or rebate in favor of any person, corporation, consignee, or consignor, in any matter as to payment, transportation, handling, or delivery; and shall so receive, deliver, transfer, and transport all freight as above set forth, from and to any point where there is a physical connection between the tracks of said companies. But this section shall not be construed as requiring any such common carrier to allow the use of its tracks for the trains of another engaged in like business.

"Sec. 214. No railway, transfer, belt line, or railway bridge company shall make any exclusive or preferential contract or arrangement with any individual, association, or corporation, for the receipt, transfer, delivery, transportation, handling, care, or custody of any freight, or for the conduct of any business as a common carrier."

The present case was begun by the defendant in error earlier than the one just stated, and sought similar relief without regard to the place where the stock was received. A preliminary injunction was issued, and soon led to proceedings for contempt on the charge that it had been disobeyed. The court of first instance held that the injunction applied to an interstate shipment when the owner had sought to bill it to the Southern Railway at Louisville for delivery to the Central Stock Yards and had been refused, and thereafter, at the break-up yards, so called, of the Louisville & Nashville road, by giving notice to change the destination, had attempted to bring about the desired result. This decision was reversed by the court of appeals (Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Miller, 112 Ky. 464, 66 S. W. 5), and thereupon the before-mentioned bill in the United States court was brought, to deal with interstate shipments, with a prayer, also, that the railroad be required to recognize changes of destination; while the present proceeding was kept on foot to cover all that it lawfully might. At a later date, the petition, as it is called, in this case, was amended so as to pray that the plaintiff in error might be required, upon tender by the Southern Railway, to receive, at a point of physical connection *with the South-[140] ern Railway, live stock from the Central Stock Yards, and to deliver the same to the consignee at the Bourbon Stock Yards or any depot on its line.

After the decision in the other case, the railroad company asked leave to plead the decree as a bar to so much of the relief in the present action as relates to stock shipped or desired to be shipped from points outside of Kentucky to points within Kentucky. The trial court, being of opinion that the decree would not be a bar, refused leave, but ordered the proposed amendment to be made part of the record for the purpose of appeal. After final hearing a judgment was entered for the plaintiff, the defendant in error, granting all the prayers of the bill. The railroad company was ordered (1) to receive at its stations in Kentucky, and "to bill, transport, transfer, switch, and deliver in the customary way," at some point of physical connection with the tracks of the Southern Railway, and particularly at one described, all live stock or other freight consigned to the Central Stock Yards or to persons doing business there. (2) It was ordered, further, to transfer, switch, and deliver to the Southern Railway at the said point of connection, "any and all live stock or other freight coming over its lines in Kentucky consigned" to the Central Stock Yards or persons doing business there. (3) It was ordered, further, to receive at the same point and to "transfer, switch, transport, and deliver all live stock" consigned to anyone at the Bourbon Stock Yards, "the shipment of which originates at the Central Stock Yards;" with proviso requiring pay or tender of proper charges for its services, whenever demanded, at the time such live stock or other freight is offered. (4) Finally, the railroad company was required, whenever requested by the consignor, consignee, or owner of the stock, "at any of the stations, and particularly at its break-up yards in South Louisville, Kentucky," to recognize their right to change the destination, and, upon payment of the full Louisville freight rate and proper presentation of the bill of lading, duly indorsed, the railroad was required to change the destination and deliver at a point of connection with the Southern Railway tracks for [142]*delivery by the latter to the Central Stock Yards. This judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals, whereupon this writ of error was brought. The points relied upon are that due credit was denied to the decree by the United States court; that, if the Constitution of Kentucky purports to authorize the requirement in the judgment as to delivery of shipments from outside the state, it attempts to regulate commerce among the states; that, if the same instrument authorizes the requirement in the judgment that the railroad company should give up possession of its cars to the Southern Railway Company, it attempts to deprive the railroad of its property without due process of law; and that the same constitutional objection applies to the attempt to make the railroad do switching work over its terminal property in Louisville between two points in the city when the shipment was neither coming into the city nor going out of the city over the lines of the plaintiff in error's road.

The court of appeals found itself unable to pass over the bridge laid by this court in its construction of the state Constitution, § 213. It held that that section did purport to require the plaintiff in error to deliver its own cars, under the circumstances of the case, to the extent of the judgment that it affirmed. It declined to follow the decision of this court that, for the purposes of the case before it, the two stock yards stood on the same footing as if they were the stations of two railroads placed side by side. It decided that the state Constitution, as construed by it, did not attempt to regulate commerce among the states, and, no doubt for that reason, disregarded the former decree between the same parties, thinking, we presume, that, as the former bill dealt only with interstate commerce, the decree could have no binding effect as against a judgment which it deemed to affect only matters within the control of the state.

We are surprised that the court of appeals should have decided that the judgment appealed from did not deal with commerce among the states. The portion that we have numbered (2) ordered a delivery to the Southern Railway of all live stock and freight coming over its lines consigned to the Central Stock Yards, and this includes, [143 of course, that coming from other states. The same is to be said of the requirement in (4) as to change of destination. When the live stock reached the point of connection or the break-up yards, the carriage was not at an end, as appears by the very intent of the judgment, and as was decided in McNeill v. Southern R. Co. 202 U. S. 543, 559, 50 L. ed. 1142, 1147, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722. Moreover, that decision cited and approved the language of the circuit court of appeals, to which we have referred already, in the case between these parties, to the effect that, if the Kentucky Constitution could be construed as the state court of appeals has construed it, it would be attempting what it could not do. Ibid. 562. We think discussion of this part of the case unnecessary, and we should have to hold the provision of the state Constitution void as applied, if we followed the construction given to it by the state court; but we are relieved of that necessity by the fact that those portions of the judgment of which we are speaking are invalid by reason of the previous adjudication of the United States court.

As we have indicated, the decree was pleaded as a bar only "to so much of the claim for relief as relates to stock shipped or transported, or desired to be shipped or transported, from points outside of Kentucky to points within Kentucky." It was not argued that a decision that certain words in a Constitution have a certain meaning, in a suit founded upon them, is conclusive as between the same parties in another suit upon the same words, for the same purpose, except that one is to enforce them with regard to matters outside the control of the state, and the other to enforce them with regard to matters within its control. Therefore we express no opinion upon the point. It was argued, however, that the requirement that the plaintiff in error should deliver its own cars to another road was void under the 14th Amendment as an unlawful taking of its property. In view of the well-known and necessary practice of connecting roads, we are far from saying that a valid law could not be passed to prevent the cost and loss of time entailed by needless transshipment or break-144]ing bulk, in case *of an unreasonable refusal by a carrier to interchange cars with another for through traffic. We do not pass upon the question. It is enough to observe that such a law perhaps ought to be so limited as to respect the paramount needs of the carrier concerned, and at least could be sustained only with full and adequate regulations for his protection from the loss or undue detention of cars, and for securing due compensation for their use. The Constitution of Kentucky is simply a universal, undiscriminating requirement, with no adequate provisions such as we have described. The want cannot be cured by inserting them in judgments under it. The law itself must save the parties' rights, and not leave them to the discretion of the courts as such. See Security Trust & S. V. Co. v. Lexington, 203 U. S. 323, 333, 51 L. ed. 204, 208, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 409, 44 L. ed. 520, 524, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Connecticut River R. Co. v. Franklin County, 127 Mass. 50, 53, 34 Am. Rep. 338; Ash v. Cummings, 50 N. H. 591; Moody v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 20 Fla. 597; Ex parte Martin, 13 Ark. 198, 58 Am. Dec. 321; St. Louis v. Hill, 116 Mo. 527, 21 L.R.A. 226, 22 S. W. 861. It follows that the requirement of the state Constitution cannot stand alone under the 14th Amendment, and that the judgment in this respect also, being based upon it, must fall. We do not mean, however, that the silence of the Constitution might not be remedied by an act of legislature or a regulation by a duly authorized subordinate body if such legislation should be held consistent with the state Constitution by the state court. We should add that the requirement in the first part of the judgment, which we have been discussing, is open to the objections mentioned in the former decision so far as it practically requires the Louisville & Nashville Railroad to deliver cars at Louisville elsewhere than at its own terminus. 192 U. S. 570, 571, 48 L. ed. 569, 570, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339.

There remains for consideration only the third division of the judgment, which requires the plaintiff in error to receive at the connecting point, and to switch, transport, and deliver, all live stock consigned from the Central Stock Yards to anyone at the Bourbon Stock Yards. This also is based upon the 145]sections *of the Constitution that have been quoted. If the principle is sound, every road into Louisville, by making a physical connection with the Louisville & Nashville, can get the use of its costly terminals and make it do the switching necessary to that end, upon simply paying for the service of carriage. The duty of a carrier to accept goods tendered at its station does not extend to the acceptance of cars offered to it at an arbitrary point near its terminus by a competing road, for the purpose of reaching and using its terminal station. To require such an acceptance from a railroad is to take its property in a very effective sense, and cannot be justified unless the railroad holds that property subject to greater liabilities than those incident to its calling alone. The court of appeals did not put its decision upon any supposed special liability, but upon the broad ground that the state Constitution requires it, and lawfully may require it, of a common carrier by rail. Therefore the judgment must be reversed.

Judgment reversed.

Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

I am unable to concur in the opinion of the court so far as it applies to the transportation of cattle wholly within Kentucky. The difference between that and interstate transportation is important, for it was conceded at the argument that at least 60 per cent of the business was of domestic cattle.

This is a second review of the controversy between the parties. It was originally started in one of the courts of Kentucky, and there, meeting obstacles arising from the want of jurisdiction over interstate commerce, the latter was made the subject of a suit in a United States circuit court, where the Central Stock Yards Company suffered defeat, its bill being dismissed for want of equity. This judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals (63 L.R.A. 213, 55 C. C. A. 63, 118 Fed. 113) and subsequently by this court. 192 U. S. 568, 48 L. ed. 568, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 339. This is pointed out in the opinion, but it may be well to see what was decided. In the circuit court *of[146] appeals these propositions were decided: (1) Independently of statute, the railway could not be required to deliver to the Southern Railway Company for transportation to the Central Stock Yards Company the live stock, though shipped to and ultimately destined to the stock yards company. The Louisville & Nashville Company, the court said, performed its duty under the common law when it provided a place for disembarkation of the stock at the Bourbon Stock Yards, though that place was fixed by contract with the latter company. (2) That the refusal of the Louisville & Nashville Company to make such transfer of stock to the Southern Railway Company was not a violation of § 3 of the interstate commerce act. (3) Considering the case more broadly and as involving the right to require one railroad to interchange traffic with another, the position of the Central Stock Yards Company would be untenable, because, as it was held at common law, a railroad is only bound to transport freight at its own terms. (4) If the Constitution of Kentucky could be construed to require such delivery of the live stock, it was invalid in so far as it affected interstate commerce. The case, therefore, left local commerce untouched. It declared no principle that precluded a state, by legislation, constitutional or statutory, to require such transfer of stock if it applied only to commerce within the state. The case came to this court, and here also it was considered only as it affected interstate commerce. It is true it was said that "if the cattle are to remain in the defendant's cars it cannot be required to hand those cars over to another railroad without a contract, and the courts have no authority to dictate a contract to the defendant, or to require it to make one." This expressed only a limit upon the power of the courts, not of a legislature or a constitution, for it was also said, "there is no act of Congress that attempts to give courts a power to require contracts to be made in a case like this." And the cases which were cited sustain the view that the impotency of the courts was not because of a right in the railroads, which were exempt from legislative regulation, but a right only exempt from control by the 147] courts in the *absence of legislation. None of the cases declare otherwise. They interpreted the then-existing legislation, and did not attempt to decide what legislation might be competent. Indeed, Judge Jackson (afterwards a justice of this court) in Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 567, 634, strongly intimated that Congress had the power to do what he, exercising the powers of the circuit court, could not do without legislative authority.

I will assume, therefore, the power of the state to require an exchange of cars between railroads, and consider only what are the limitations upon the exercise of the power; not broadly, for the case has been brought into the narrow requirements of provision for compensation and security. Must such provisions be explicit in the law? May not the principle or rule of regulation be prescribed by law, statutory or constitutional, and the conditions of its application be ascertained and enforced by the courts or an administrative body? To what extent a court may be made an instrumentality in the administration of the laws of a state I may refer to the Virginia Railroad Commission cases. Prentiss v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, ante, 150, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67. See also Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 23 L. ed. 449.

If the state may so distribute its power of regulation it is certainly not within the province of this court to say that it has not done so, against a contrary view, expressed or assumed, by the courts of the state. We can only deal with the result, that is, the ultimate action of the state, through any of its instrumentalities, as offending the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. The procedure is for the determination of the state. This principle is conspicuously illustrated in Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, ante, 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220, and is also illustrated by the decisions under the Massachusetts and New Hampshire mill acts, infra. What, then, is the effect of the judgment under review?

It will be observed that the Constitution puts an obligation upon railroad companies to "receive, transfer, deliver, and switch empty or loaded cars," and to "move, transport, receive, load, or unload all the freight in carloads or less quantities *coming to or[148 going from any railroad . . . with equal promptness and despatch, and without any discrimination as to charges, preference, drawback, or rebate in favor of any person . . . in any matter as to payment, transportation, handling, or delivering," and to "receive . . . and transport all freight, . . . from and to any point where there is a physical connection between the tracks of said companies." [§ 213.] The Constitution, therefore, imposes a duty, it is true, but not a duty to be uncompensated. The special emphasis of the prohibition of favor as to charges makes conspicuous and indisputable the right to make and enforce them if made and enforced without "favor to any person." There could be no discrimination "as to charges," if there were no charges, no drawback or rebate from them; and the right to require security for the return of the cars is left untouched. Nor have the constitutional provisions been limited by the decree under review.

It does not adjudge that the service required of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad should not be compensated. The right of the railroad company to charge for the use of its cars is declared. The court said that the transfer of the cars was a use of them in the interest of the public. "If this," the court further observed, "is, in a sense, the taking of its property for private purposes, appellant must [plaintiff in error], as a common carrier, submit to it, for it is only a temporary and necessary use of its property. Appellant cannot suffer loss by such use of its cars. If it delivers its cars to the Southern Railway to be taken to appellee's [Central] stockyards for the loading or unloading of stock, that company has no right to detain them longer than a reasonable time for that purpose, and must return them. Appellant may charge a reasonable amount for the use of its cars, and if they are not returned, or, if detained an unreasonable time, it may sue the delinquent road for damages, or apply to a court of equity for a mandatory injunction to compel the return of the cars. Indeed, it can suffer no loss which the law may not remedy." [30 Ky. L. Rep. 35, 97 S. W. 789.] And the court pointed out that, by regulations between railroads, cars were interchanged 149between them at a fixed charge. It is entirely consistent with the opinion that plaintiff in error may charge for the delivery of its cars, either when the cattle are shipped or when their destination is changed, or at the time of delivery to the Southern Railway Company. It is also entirely consistent with the opinion of the court that plaintiff in error can exact such stipulations from the Southern Railway Company as will protect it fully. The practice of connecting roads should be regarded, I think, when considering so simple a servitude as imposed in this case upon property devoted to a public use, and subject, because of such use, to regulation by the state. In this every right of plaintiff in error would be preserved. In this every power of the state would be preserved. I do not stop to make a comparison between such right and such power, but I submit this court should put no limit upon the latter that is not clearly necessary to preserve the other.

Plaintiff in error makes no question of precedent or ultimate payment for the use of its cars, or the absence of provisions for their return. It is contended that in some way (in what way is not pointed out) the state must exercise its right of eminent domain, and, unless the right be exercised through an impartial tribunal, there is not due process of law. It is also contended that there is an attempted transfer of terminals, and the duty of a local transfer company imposed on plaintiff in error, which, in some way, takes its property without due process of law. The question made, then, is of an inviolable right, impregnable in constitutional protection, against a legislative regulation such as in the case at bar; and to what contemplation does this bring us? If the right is impregnable in constitutional protection against regulation in the interest of intrastate commerce, it is also impregnable in such constitutional protection against regulation in the interest of interstate commerce. Are we prepared to announce that conclusion? The consequences of it are certainly quite serious.

The act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1907, p. 893), provided that "the term 'transportation' shall include . . . all [of the articles] instrumentalities *and facil-150 ities of shipment or carriage;" and further provides that every carrier subject to its provisions shall "provide and furnish such transportation upon reasonable request therefor, and to establish through routes and just and reasonable rates applicable thereto." (§ 1.)

The act also provides that such carriers, upon the application of any lateral branch line of railroad or of any shipper, shall construct and operate switch connections and shall furnish cars for the traffic thereover. And the Commission is given power to enforce such duty.

The Commission is also given the power to divide a joint rate and establish joint rates and through routes. The Commission further has the power to fix the compensation to be paid to the owner of property transported for any instrumentality furnished by him.

These are some of the regulations of interstate commerce,—regulations of great reach and consequence; and they are not more specific as to compensation or security for the use or loss of cars than the Constitution of Kentucky. And I submit that the power of a state over its domestic commerce is as great as the power of the nation over interstate commerce.

The exigencies of this case do not require me to distinguish between those sovereign powers of the state denominated the power of eminent domain and the police power. Both may be exercised over private property. By the exercise of the first power property is taken, and compensation for it is a necessary condition; by the exercise of the second power property is subjected to regulation, and a provision for compensation is not necessary. When regulation is transcended and becomes a taking of property may, at times, be a close question; but the power of regulation must not be overlooked or underestimated. It is, as I have said, an exercise of the police power, and that is the most absolute of the sovereign powers of the state. We said in Bacon v. Walker, 204 U. S. 311, 51 L. ed. 499, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289, that it "extends to so dealing with the conditions which exist in a state as to bring out of them the greatest welfare of its people." In Otis Co. v. Ludlow 151]Mfg. Co. 201 *U. S. 140, 50 L. ed. 696, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353, this court sustained the Massachusetts mill act, which gave the right of one owner of land on a stream to flow the land of another, against the charge that it was contrary to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, as taking property without due process of law, in that it made no adequate provision for the payment of damages caused by an exercise of the rights conferred by the act. The provision for payment was an action for damages. The use of property in that case was as complete and more enduring than in this, and we said of it: "The right of the lower owner only becomes complete when the land is flowed, and as, even then, it is not a right to maintain the water upon the plaintiff's land, but merely a right to maintain the dam subject to paying for the harm actually done, we see nothing to complain of in that regard." See Head v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 9, 28 L. ed. 889, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441. This court, therefore, has decided that a simple action of damages is sufficient security for compensation for that use of property which this court, and almost every court in the Union, has held to be a taking. Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 13 Wall. 166, 20 L. ed. 557.

It is true it is held by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts that the principle upon which the mill act is founded is not the right of eminent domain, but the resulting general good of all, or the public welfare. Murdock v. Stickney, 8 Cush. 113. And this court, yielding also to that purpose, has quite recently declared that a state might, in order to meet new conditions, elevate into a public use of property that which, under other conditions, had universally been held to be a private use. Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361, 49 L. ed. 1085, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1171; Strickley v. Highland Boy Gold Min. Co. 200 U. S. 527, 50 L. ed. 581, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1174. See also Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 203 U. S. 372, 51 L. ed. 231, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72.

Other cases may be adduced for illustration. I think, therefore, that it might easily be contended that the service required of plaintiff in error cannot be considered, in any legal or practical sense, a taking of property. Let us keep steadily in mind what it is that is required, and what the requirement involves of the use of plaintiff in error's cars. It is a use not different from 152]that *they served from the moment of starting, or would serve if the end of the transportation be the Bourbon Stock Yards. 53 L. ed.

If the end of the transportation be made the Central Stock Yards, there is the added element only that a limited and temporary possession of the cars is given to the Southern Railway Company,—a possession, it must be said, not required in the interest of that company, but in the interest of the commerce of which it and the plaintiff in error are but instrumentalities, and as aids to which they were organized and are permitted to exist.

But I do not have to take this position, strongly supported as it may be. It is enough for my purpose that the Constitution of the state provides for compensation for the duty it imposes on the railroads.

I am authorized to say that Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice Moody concur in this dissent.

ONTARIO LAND COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
JAY YORDY and Minnie E. Yordy, His Wife.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 152-159.)

Constitutional law — due process of law in tax proceedings — notice.

Tax proceedings resulting in a tax sale and deed under which property marked "reserved" on an official plat was described as certain numbered blocks, not designated on the plat, but which would have borne such numbers if the tract reserved had been divided into blocks and lots and numbered in harmony with the numbering of the rest of the tract, do not deprive the owner of his property without due process of law, where he not only has notice from the record, but notice in fact, that such property was listed and assessed for taxes under such description.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 725-744, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 59.]

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

On due process of law in revenue proceedings—see note to Read v. Dingess, 8 C. C. A. 398.

Argued January 7, 1909. Decided February 1, 1909.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Superior Court of Yakima County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in an action of ejectment and to quiet title, and ordered judgment in favor of defendants. Affirmed.

See same case below, 44 Wash. 239, 87 Pac. 257.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

153] *On May 16, 1889, plaintiff's grantors, Chester A. Congdon and Clara B. Congdon, his wife, then the owners of the west half (W. $\frac{1}{2}$) of the southeast quarter (S.E. $\frac{1}{4}$) and the east half (E. $\frac{1}{2}$) of the southwest quarter (S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$) of section twenty-four (24), in township thirteen (13) north, range eighteen (18) east, Willamette meridian, excepting 10 acres which belonged to Charles M. Holton, platted their land as "Capital Addition to North Yakima." According to the plat, in the central portion was a body of land marked "reserved" and not divided into lots and blocks. If it had been so divided the ground would have made four blocks, and, to be in harmony with the other numbering, would have been blocks 352, 353, 372, and 373. Nothing was shown on the plat to indicate the meaning of the term "reserved," nor the use to which the tract was to be applied. For the years 1892, 1893, 1894, and 1895 the proper assessor listed and assessed for taxation with other real estate that which he described as blocks 352 and 372 in "Capital Addition to North Yakima." All taxes on the property so listed for these years became delinquent. The county foreclosed the same in proceedings conforming to the statutes of Washington, and under the decree the property was sold and a tax deed executed to the defendant Jay Yordy, who paid all subsequent taxes levied thereon. After the platting by Congdon and wife, and in 1890, they deeded all the land to the plaintiff, describing it not by lots and blocks, but by the government descriptions, and with no allusion to the Capital Addition to North Yakima. In September, 1904, after the tax deed had been executed, delivered, and recorded, the plaintiff platted that portion of Capital Addition marked "reserved" as "Heerman's Addition to North Yakima," and subdivided said reserved tract into four blocks, numbered from 1 to 4, inclusive, each block being subdivided into 16 lots. The defendant Jay Yordy had already taken possession of the tract purchased by him, claiming it under his tax deed. On March 17, 1905, the plaintiff brought this action against the de-

